The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

JULY 5, 1913

Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879

MONEY RATES FIRM

Rates for money in Chicago are a little firmer than they have been, and show no sign of weakening. Prime commercial paper was discounted in some of the banks this week at $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on six months' maturities and at $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent for five months. The demand for funds is quite strong and merchants and manufacturers are liberal borrowers.

No apprehension is being felt by the banks on account of demands which will be made upon them for funds with which to move the crops. The New York reserves have been built up to a strong point, and the local banks are in a much better cash position than they have been for some time. Country banks as a rule have large amounts of commercial paper which will mature during the period when they will be most in need of funds, and consequently they will be in better shape than usual to meet the needs of their own immediate neighborhoods.

TO BE PRESIDENT OF BROOKLYN BANK

Crowell Hadden, for many years first vice-president and a member of the funding committee of the Brooklyn Savings, was nominated for the office of president of the bank at a special meeting of the board of trustees held recently. Prior to the nomination of Mr. Hadden the resignation of Edwin P. Maynard from the presidency was received and accepted with regret. Mr. Maynard, who recently was elected to the presidency of the Brooklyn Trust, will assume charge of his new duties on July 1st.

IRVING SHUMAN SLATED FOR CHICAGO SUBTREASURY

Irving Shuman of Sullivan, Ill., is slated to succeed Len Small, as United States subtreasurer at Chicago, according to a report from Washington. Mr. Shuman is an original supporter of President Wilson. Until recently he had been urged by Wilson leaders for controller of the currency.

L. L. BACCHUS ELECTED DIRECTOR

L. L. Bacchus, vice-president of the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings, formerly head of the banking department in the state auditor's office, has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Illinois State Bank of Illinois, located in the Thompson building on North Clark street. Louis Mayer is the president.

WOMAN BANKER RESIGNS

Miss Annie C. Smith has resigned as assistant cashier of the Hamilton County State of Webster City, Ia., after having been connected with that institution for twenty-five years. The directors elected Murray McMurray, son of President L. A. McMurray, to fill the vacancy.

East Hampton, Conn.—Articles of incorporation have been filed for the new East Hampton Trust Company to be located here in a short time.

Bank Presidents Celebrate Anniversaries

JAMES B. FORGAN
CHICAGO

DAVENPORT, IOWA

JAMES B. FORGAN of Chicago and A. F. Dawson of Davenport, Iowa, each president of the First National Bank of his city, have been kept busy receiving congratulations on the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their respective institutions. Both banks issued handsome booklets, giving a history of their growth.

The Chicago institution began business July 1, 1863. The bank has prospered under Mr. Forgan and now has deposits of $115,493,694. The capital stock has been increased several times since the organization. In 1911 it was made $10,000,000 and the surplus a similar amount, which are the figures to-day. The undivided profit account is nearly two millions. Loans have advanced from $150,000 in 1863 to $80,000,000 at the present time. Mr. Forgan is one of the most prominent financiers in the country and enjoys an international reputation.

The First National of Davenport, Iowa, enjoys the distinction of being the first national bank in the United States. Although fourteen national banks were chartered on the same day, the First of Davenport was the first to open for business and consequently to it belongs the honor of being the first First National Bank of the country. The present capital is $200,000, with a surplus fund of a like sum. Loans and discounts on April 4th were $1,793,876 and deposits $2,408,459. A. F. Dawson, the president, is one of the most brilliant members of the banking profession. He served several terms in congress, where he did much effective work.

The Chicago bank celebrated its anniversary on Tuesday of this week and the Davenport institution on Saturday last. The banking rooms were filled with floral decorations sent by admiring friends and thronged by visitors who called to pay their respects.

BANKS PAY INTEREST ON FEDERAL FUNDS

In accordance with the plan announced by Secretary McAdoo, national banks this week paid into the United States treasury $100,000 as interest on deposits of the government. The order became effective June 1st and the interest is payable July 1st and January 1st of each year.

MICHIGAN BANK PLANS NEW BUILDING

The construction of a new office building, fireproof and modern, which is also to furnish quarters for two banks, the First National and the Bay County Savings, Bay City, Mich., is being considered by the directors of the First National. The First National and the Bay County Savings, which are controlled by the same group of capitalists, will occupy the first floor of the new structure and the remainder will be equipped with suites of offices. It is the present intention of the directors to have the building completed and ready for occupancy by the end of 1914.

TO ERECT BRANCH BUILDING

German-American Savings of Detroit, Mich., is contemplating the erection of a branch bank building on the northeast corner of Mack and Mt. Elliott avenues.

OHIO BANK PRESIDENT DEAD

John Longenecker, aged 75 years, president of the Farmers Bank of Wilmot, Ohio, died at his home recently.

BANKER HEADS HARVESTER COMPANY

William D. Steward, president of the Plano (Ill.) State, has been elected president and general manager of the Independent Harvester Company, succeeding W. C. Thompson.

COL. MULHALL knows, of course, that it would be bad form for Jimmy McDermott to plead guilty. His isn't that kind of a district.

COL. FARNSWORTH says Illinois has only 31 more A. B. A. members to get to qualify an additional member of the Big Council.

IT is thought if W. C. White would dig up a few the boys would feel very grateful. Lampert and White, a fine team!

SENATOR OWEN says it would be as reasonable to put railroad men on the Interstate-Commerce Commission as to put bankers on the federal board of control.

PERHAPS when Col. Mulhall gets through we shall know how all the commission places are filled.

HE already has let in some light on the nasty tariff commission which was to give us scientific (but not downward) revision. We shall see.

THERE is to be an agricultural conference at Asheville, N. C., under the auspices of the bankers association. B. F. Harris stirred up the subject and now ten states are in it.

PRESIDENT CHARLES S. CALDWELL got the microbe from one of B. F.'s talks and the big Corn Ex. of Philadelphia is holding a four-state corn contest. There will be ears from New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

IT will come off December 6th and a big stand-up buffet lunch will be served by the bank to all comers.

STATE AUDITOR BRADY has announced that in the future he will make it his policy to investigate in a most rigid manner all applications for permission to organize state banks, before such permits are issued.

THEY tell us that E. L. Howe of Princeton can be comptroller or go on the federal reserve board, just as he likes. He's a lucky dog. Gets a corner room at all hotels.

SUPERINTENDENT EMORY W. LATTANNER of Ohio has planned a series of meetings to be held in the larger cities of the state for the purpose of explaining the provisions and requirements of the "Blue Sky" law, which becomes operative August 1st.

FOR the first time since its enactment, the Kansas "Blue Sky" law, which has been taken as a model for nearly all similar legislation in other States, became inoperative last week through a court injunction.

SEVERAL well developed cases of journalistic hydrophobia were developed in New York last week. It is feared that under "federal control" that center would not support the score or more of banking and financial papers.

PROBABLY not, but the bill and its proponents are entitled to fair treatment. Private interests in many cases must step aside.

THE esteemed American Banker refers to the distinguished Chicago banker-orator as "W. P. Edens." The "P" probably to stand for "Patrick." Little wonder, "for he's the blarney," as they say in the old song.

GOVERNOR DUNNE signed the utilities bill and vetoed the park consolidation bill. The governor has a mind of his own and figured that he represented the whole state and not Chicago alone. The papers will howl but probably the governor did right. "We" were opposed to the park consolidation bill to the finish.

THE esteemed A. B. had another twist in its last issue and called our good friend J. Francisco Sartori, "Joseph T."

"WHO gets up the E. Jackson Casse advertising, the full pages in the Chicago Banker? Best I ever saw," said the ad. man of a big Chicago bank.

ITS a secret but we don't mind telling in confidence that Mr. Casse does the trick himself. He's an ad-engineer as well as a distinguished bank engineer.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN got things started at the Pennsylvania convention when he told the bankers he had heard that Governor Tener very likely would veto the farm demonstration bill.

THE race was on between those who wanted to thank the able Minnesota banker and those who wanted to telegraph the governor a request from the P. B. A. to sign the farm demonstration bill. Both sides won.

WHEN Joseph told the Pennsylvanians that although Pennsylvania was a state long before Minnesota was a territory, that his own big state now contributes more money to practical education than any other six states combined, they cheered the speaker to an echo.

HE told them the bankers association did it and modestly claimed no personal credit. It was a star performance all the way through and a special rising vote of thanks was voted.

CHAIRMAN R. E. JAMES of the Pennsylvania committee on agriculture was present at the Pittsburgh convention but was not able to present the report and was obliged to leave for home in care of a physician.

WORD comes from Easton that his illness has continued in some severity and that he has not been able to appear at the bank.

THE English bankers are right about Sir Edmund Walker being a leading Canadian. He's a leading American in the broader sense. Would be a fine card at Boston. At Denver he and Woodrow Wilson fairly divided the honors.

"CIRCUMSTANCES over which, etc." will prevent Woodrow from repeating but we should like to hear Sir Edward again.

THE Boston committee is trying to find some talented college president who would like to follow the Wilson example. Perhaps they will.

THE Texas association decided in favor of pushing a "Blue Sky" bill in the next legislature. The bill is to be "reasonable."

SOME of the bond and paper houses are going to circulate Craig B. Hazlewood's West Virginia address as "good gospel" on the subject of "Commercial Paper."

WARE & LELAND say the completion of the half-yearly Continental settlements will relieve the selling pressure and that the lack of any trouble indicates sound conditions.

THERE are a number of First National banks but the honor of being the first First Commercial, Savings and Bond Departments

National belongs to the First at Davenport. Like its contemporary of this city it has gotten out a history, bound in blue and gold cloth and handsomely illustrated.

FOURTEEN First Nationals were chartered in a bunch on June 22d, 1863, but, as President Albert F. Dawson remarks, "a charter is not a bank."

THE First of Davenport opened its doors to the public ready to do the business of a bank in all departments on June 29, 1863. "Thus it enjoyed the distinction of being the one and only national bank in the Whole United States" for two whole days. In short, it fixed its status for all time as the First National.

SOUTH CAROLINA will convene at Lake Toxaway, which is in North Carolina, July 10th, 11th and 12th. Minnesota will meet at Duluth July 10th and 11th. Both states have fine programs and fine entertainment features.

A SOUTHERN Illinois bank failed the other day, and an examiner found the assets to consist of a sign and a small safe. Even the proprietors had hiked for the timber. —Moline Mail.

EDGAR F. OLSON is a champion golfer and is getting to be a champion banker. The Franklin Trust and Savings is only a little over a year old, in a new business district springing up around Michigan Avenue and 35th Street.

ON April 8, 1912, the bank opened with $212,000 in deposits. He had at the end of fourteen months (June 5th) $1,029,290.80, which is the record in Chicago for "four miles out."

FROM its organization to June 1, 1913, the Mississippi Valley Trust Company of St. Louis paid $6,883,125.30 to its depositors, as against $6,483,729.00 to its stockholders. For every dollar of profits which was paid to the owners of the company, a dollar and six cents went to its customers.

THE legislative committee of the Ohio Private Bankers Association held a meeting at the Bucyrus City Bank recently to discuss the new problems of supervision provided for in legislation just enacted.

WHILE the corn crop is making, John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston has employed his time getting up a new currency bill. Senator Sherman probably will introduce it. The author claims elasticity as one of its many virtues.

DRAKE (not Luther of Omaha) says married men live longer than single men. Billy Emerson used to deny this, claiming that it only seemed longer.

WE should like to have Col. Mulhall "C'mon over" and tell us why private bank legislation in Illinois always goes to a committee room where playing with loaded dice would be classed as legitimate sport.

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

W. F. KEYSER sends word that John Campbell, who has been flooding Missouri with bad checks on a Bowling Green bank, now is doing the same thing in and around Springfield, Ill. He now signs as Charles Curley.

THE Campbell-Curley plan is to put one good check through, looking for a profit on a second check, always bad.

THE Northwestern Banker names in its July issue three good men to succeed E. L. Johnson on the A. B. A. Council from Iowa.

IT names E. J. Curtin, J. A. S. Pollard and Leo Stevens. Only trouble is that John McHugh was named for the vacancy as far back as the Des Moines convention.

DAVID STARR JORDAN laughs at the talk of war with Japan. Says David, "No nation can go to war nowadays without coming to New York to borrow the money."

BUT suppose New York should lend it just to put a dent in Bryan's peace program and thus to even up for not being allowed to write the new currency bill?

HERE'S another item from the latest Northwestern Banker, on which we acknowledge having been scooped:

"George M. Reynolds, Chicago's biggest banker, has returned from an extended tour of Europe and says, etc."

J. H. INGVERSEN told the North Dakota bankers how the value of Iowa land has been doubling each ten years. One of the big insurance companies recently predicted that it will continue to double every ten years in the future also.

ONE of the ex-patriated Texas bankers tells us that all of the ex-Texans, from New York to Los Angeles, are working for "Fred" Hoopes and that he's gotten forty votes for treasurer at Boston.

FRRIENDS of A. D. Graham were quite enthusiastic at the Virginia convention and could see nothing but his success.

SOMETHING tells us Chapman's election was made certain the moment his opponents began to say "No western man can win at a convention held in an eastern city."

HAD the fellow who threw that boomerang taken but one glance at the map and another at the membership list—but then he didn't.

THE new building of the State Bank of Sleepy-Eye looks very wide-awake.

W. D. VINCENT says that, "One of the most important things done at the Oregon convention was the endorsing of the plan to capitalize the state's resources—in other words, approving the plan of putting the state lands on the market at from $10 to $25 an acre to encourage settlers of the right sort."

C. B. MILLS and a lot of Northwestern lumber kings were in Chicago this week and the dog-watch in the financial district was doubled on the plea that Chicago needs her own money just now.

AMONG other gems in the Mulhall collection is one quoting Watson of Indiana on Roosevelt:

"HE (Roosevelt) is moving heaven and earth to nominate Taft; he is willing to sacrifice the Sherman law and every other law to please the trusts and to please Wall Street, so that he can get their support for his candidate at Chicago."

COPIES of Senator Owen's "Federal Reserve Act" reached Chicago early this week and follow closely the act as printed in the Chicago Banker for June 21st.

THE reserve conditions are much more liberal than were expected.

HEREAFTER when a banker finds himself taken in and done for by a "Kid" it will be good form not to say anything about it to his grandmother.

AS a capitol style Muck-raking has been superseded by Mul-halling.

THE high cost of boat-riding has no terrors for Rock Island-Davenport families. For ten cents the patron may ride back and forth from 6:30 a. m. until 10 p. m. Thanks, Nelson, for the tip.

IF, as reported, the legislative committee of an important bankers association was handicapped in its work by the shuttlecock methods of the paid secretary, would it not be wise to name a new committee, or a new secretary, before the next emergency?

THE "C. B. Mills Company" and the "General Securities Company" have been incorporated in Minneapolis, with $100,000 capital each.

BOTH will deal in "contracts, mortgages, bonds, notes, etc." George F. Orde is interested.

THE Northwestern National June letter gives its opinion that the rains came in the grain country in ample time to make the crop.

FURTHERMORE the big Minneapolis bank expects interest rates to remain firm the rest of the year.

THE Security National, at the same center, after frankly discussing conditions decides that "business is much better than most people believe it to be."

THE "Soo Line," which will handle the bankers special from St. Paul and Minneapolis to the Duluth convention, got out an unique invitation.

IT is in the shape of a push and pull postal card, showing in one condition the idealized figure of a banker (looks like Pomeroy) who is a member and will attend. In the other position he is a safe-blowing yegg, not a member.

IN the Outlook, Colonel Roosevelt reproves the assailants of Senator Quay, and proves to his own satisfaction that the late senator was an ardent and misrepresented soul.

WHAT will Patriot Flynn and the Washington League think?

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S definition of an adequate navy is charmingly elastic. It is "a navy of sufficient size and strength to meet and defeat any probable enemy."

DON'T be surprised these warm days at any news from Kansas. One judge enjoined the "Blue Sky" law as unconstitutional and another found that a pretzel is not food and therefore not prohibited by the anti-free lunch act.

YOU didn't find the name of a single banker on the Mulhall list of undesirables.

THE "Outlook" finds that the non-banker board of control is the chief improvement of the Glass-Owen bill over the Aldrich plan.

THE president may appoint bankers to the board if he like, but like the treasury chief they must sever all connection with banks.

HOW would Edward S. Lacey of Chicago do? Can you think of a better name? Neither can we.

THAT MOST IMPORTANT DOCUMENT—YOUR WILL

Has it been properly drawn by an experienced attorney and safely filed away? Have you named in it a responsible, capable executor and a trustee who will serve without fail? No individual you could name has the resourcefulness and the experience of this company in handling estates; and still its service costs no more than that of a much less competent individual.

A conference with our officers might prove very helpful; do not delay seeing your attorney about drawing the will.

Pollard Hands the Carbolic to Iowa Bar Association

Mr. Toastmaster, regents of the woosack, and conservators of trouble: The honor of an invitation, extended through your president, a member of the supreme court to address the learned members of the Iowa State Bar Association, is highly appreciated; but back of that was the origin—a suggestion must have been made by some party or parties unknown to me, and what arouses my curiosity is, who had the nerve to play a joke of that kind upon the distinguished jurist?

Judge Deemer wrote that he was not sure whether I was a lawyer or not, although he had the impression that I had been admitted to the bar; but he added that however that might be you would be glad to have the views of a layman, an opinion from the outside.

I have gained no knowledge of law, gentlemen, through burning the midnight oil or delving into formidable volumes at any school of law. I have no license to shout the hidden wisdom in some statute passed by a legislature of politicians as being the essence of human knowledge. I am an ordinarily quiet, soft-spoken business man, still an undergraduate in the school of experience, which institution boasts no college yell. The only legal knowledge I have has cost me nothing but mere money, and the only gray hairs I carry were acquired coincident with the same experience.

The privilege of standing before a body of lawyers and of having them do the listening, instead of the talking, was to me so marvelous in its contrariety, so inconsistent with the ordinary plan of human civilization, that it was a bet I could not overlook, an experience to hand down to posterity, a proof of the wisdom of those old saws about its being a long lane which has no turning and "all things come to him who waits." I have joyfully embraced the opportunity, even after a quarter century's business experience which has proved another adage, that it is cheaper to keep one's own counsel than to tell your troubles to one's own lawyer.

To carry out this inversion I immediately selected an antithesis for a subject, "Progress and the Lawyer," for where can one find any correlation between the two, in the light of present day opinion and current monthly literature?

Between these two extremes what an opportunity for oratorical frenzy lasting about two hours and forty-five minutes; to bridge them, what a feat of forensic engineering! But I have been asked to talk 25 minutes and I could not give a better illustration of what the public is to-day clamoring for from your profession, nor teach your learned body a more profitable lesson than by accomplishing my task from opening statement to final argument promptly and within the time limit.

If you think I feel at ease in this crowd you

At Sioux City the brilliant banker-orator of Fort Madison delivers an address which is a full return for the many the lawyers have inflicted upon bankers conventions. His subject is "Progress and the Lawyer" because there is no relationship between the two are mistaken. You who are so familiar with court procedure and are so ready to argue a cause, whether you have studied it or not, probably would feel like I do if you were called upon to fill a pulpit, although I don't doubt that some of you in such a position immediately would begin preaching from the text: "The way of the transgressor is to hire a good lawyer," and ask the choir to sing that grand old legal anthem, "If you ain't got no money you needn't come around." I never have felt much embarrassed to find myself addressing a gathering of financiers whose aggregate wealth should make me feel like a plugged nickel that had gotten mixed up with the gold reserve, but to be placed here and expected to say something instructive or helpful to a bunch of lawyers makes me really feel like a Laura Jean Libbey novel which has been misplaced in a row of northwestern reporters. My salvation may lie in the fact that man usually feels better and more kindly disposed after a fine dinner such as we have partaken of this evening, and as I note the menu conforms strictly to the truly wonderful liquor laws of Iowa, and likewise to the standard set by the distinguished Presbyterian synod which rules our nation under the milk-white flag and conducts our diplomacy under the inspiration of grape juice. I presume that here the impressionistic recollections of the next morning are never experienced.

J. A. S. POLLARD

It is interesting to trace the development of the lawyer in the progress and evolution of society. As the light of civilization pierced the darkness of the ancient days, when differences of opinion and titles to property were settled by the war club of the savage—by force and bloodshed; as law and diplomacy between nations, the invention of gunpowder and the cultivation of the arts and sciences rendered battle axe and lance obsolete and made warfare costly, the peoples of the earth turned to win the greater victories of peace which bless and make them happy and prosperous. The conqueror who laid waste fruitful valley and hillside, the buccaneer who scourged the seas were relegated to history and light literature, they had gone out of fashion and the world held no place for the non-producer, the guerrilla or the pirate. But the spirit of the conqueror and the buccaneer survived in the breast of the harmless-looking lawyer, who evolved other and quieter methods of plucking the fruit from the growing tree of commercial progress, and by the gentle art of monopolizing the seats in halls of legislation and controlling political offices, he sits enthroned over the destiny of nations, his power the hopeless mazes of legal statute and multiplicity of decision, and his deadly weapon the bill for fee and retainer. Is it any wonder that progress falters and the millennium, like a scared comet, starts out upon a parabolic curve to the windy space behind the moon, never to return?

Like you gentlemen, I also belong to the parasitical class which does not endow humanity with potatoes or suspension bridges—the non-producers. My occupation is that of a banker, minus the personal burden of wealth. I do not call banking a profession, not in this association, for you would not stand for it, any more than the saw-bones or sky-pilots. The business of banking is now taught in all the great colleges like other professions, but one cannot obtain a degree which qualifies him as a banker by two or three years of study. I have been working at the trade over twenty-five years and the lawyers put a new one over on me every week, so I know I could not claim a diploma. The business of banking is making some progress, although in this country about fifty years behind the times. If Mr Wilson is able to put over a scientific currency and banking bill at this session of congress, the business of banking will jump that fifty years and catch up with world progress during the current warm weather.

We have got to the point where the counterfeits do not bother us with bad bills so much as the lawyers in the legislature. The banker does not care for a degree anyhow, what he wants is the deposits.

The public does not love the banker, but he would rather be trusted than loved—it is said to be a greater compliment. The public unburies its conditions and difficulties, commercial and domestic, to the barrister. It reveals its bodily ills and failings to the doctor of medicine. With full confession of its moral shortcomings it seeks salvation from the doctor of divinity, but it pays the banker a higher tribute, it consults him on points of law, morals, physical well-being and crop prospects and leaves with him upon an unsigned entry at the counter its hard-earned cash.

We frequently call upon lawyers to address our bankers' conventions and they are usually most complimentary in their references to the banking business, so it is only proper courtesy for me to reciprocate at this opportunity. A lawyer who failed to start his speech before a bankers' convention without some references to his difficulties in establishing credit with banks would not be proceeding in regular form. And really there are some strong contrasts between the advice offered by attorneys as to the wisdom of making loans to them personally, and making loans to other individuals, upon the same collateral.

You know there are some duties which the banker performs which infringe upon the lawyer's inalienable rights and privileges—such as making collections, answering inquiries, guessing at titles, etc., etc., but the quality of the service is quite different and the charge basis about 3,936 per cent in favor of the lawyer.

As a banker I always have been most particular never to attempt to give legal advice. You know a great many people expect their banker to give them legal advice. My invariable answer to any such inquiry is, "I am not a lawyer, the thing for you to do is to go consult an attorney on this subject and pay him for his advice." But do the lawyers appreciate this ethical delicacy? Not a bit of it. In a nearby town is another banker, who for forty years has handed out what he calls free legal advice. The lawyers tell me that banker is worth more to them than a dozen such ethical bankers as myself. Even when I refused and my competitor accepted a proposition to issue a little book entitled "Every man his own lawyer," written by a justice of the peace, the bar in my section had only the highest compliments and encouragement for this other banker, and informed me that he had made them more business through the little volume than I ever sent them in a long career. Such is the ingratitude of your profession, and how much more sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless bar.

When I sat down to look into this subject I thought I would commence with first principles and see what law really was. I took the first definition in the dictionary, as I suppose that is the accepted one, which is, "The will of God as the rule for the disposition and conduct of all responsible beings." That sounded just grand to me, and then I turned to the code to ascertain what were the duties of a lawyer. I expected to find that his duties were simply executing the will of the Omnipotent One, as all the lawyers I knew acted as if their business was nothing less than that. I knew the lawyer took a solemn oath to discharge certain duties outlined in the statute and I wanted to learn what those duties were. I did not find any direct mandate requiring him to act as proxy for the Almighty, but I did find by a perusal of those statutory duties that the lawyer is at least one of nature's legally made noblemen.

It is his duty to maintain or counsel no actions other than those which appear to him just, to employ only such means to win his case as are consistent with truth, never to seek to mislead the judges by any artifices or false statement of the fact or law, to abstain from all offensive personalities, and never to reject the cause of the defenseless or oppressed. Why, it sounds like the obligation of a fraternal society whose precepts and tenets are designed to protect innocent maidens, wealthy widows, and hopeless orphans.

I am doubly proud then to meet with gentlemen of this profession who abstain from offensive personalities, who advance no fact prejudicial to the honor or reputation of a party or witness unless required by justice, and who never, never quote decisions to the court which they are not firmly convinced are the law of the land, and above all things cling to the bright and shining truth. Gentlemen, it is a noble profession—again taking the first definition in the dictionary for the word "profession."

Naturally when it became known that a layman had been invited to enter the inner sanctum sanctorum, upon the invitation of the chief Jab Jab and have the privilege of speaking his mind to the faithful whose motto is "Nit legatum slithers ding bat al bug house," which being translated means, "If you're not a lawyer you don't understand the subject," I commenced to get advice from the down-trodden people and the ultimate consumers. The consensus of that advice was "Give 'em hell" and I confess that I quietly started out expecting to gather material which was to prove that the lawyer had been left way behind in the march of progress, that while we had made gigantic strides in all other professions, in commerce and in industry, our courts and our lawyers were drifting along some two hundred years in the rear of the procession. I believe in aiming high, so first I tackled the United States supreme court. Possibly some word of this reached that august body and hastened the Minnesota rate decision, which must be called progressive, but I hope not. There is a quite general impression that this high court has stood as a bar to progress, and through its decisions has checked much of the progressive legislation emanating from the various state governments. I have found in an article by Charles Warren of Boston answers to my questions without further research. He states that the twenty-four years between 1887 and 1911, inclusive, have constituted the period most productive of liberal, progressive and even radical social and economic legislation in the United States, and that the criticism, if just, must apply to cases during this period and in cases arising under the "due process of law" and "equal protection of the law" clauses in the 14th amendment.

He fills up many pages with citations, but I gather from this article the fact that out of 560 decisions based upon these clauses there are only two in which any state law involving a social or economic question has been held unconstitutional by the supreme court.

It has upheld every state labor statute but one, every statute abrogating the doctrine that an employee could not recover damages for injuries due to the negligences of a fellow employee; pure food laws; laws restricting conduct of mercantile business; gambling and bucket shop laws; laws limiting the individual's liberty of contract or of action, or of conduct of business for the general welfare; laws regulating cattle diseases; statutes regulating railroads, from rates to penalizing them for letting thistles go to seed, stopping freight trains on Sunday and double damages for killing a cow if the railway maintained a bum fence along the right of way (an Iowa law, of course); statutes for regulating rates of public service corporations, every state banking regulation brought before it, laws regulating insurance and telegraph companies, the public dam acts of Wisconsin and other dam acts and every kind of dam tax law that has been conceived in the bewildered brain of the long-whiskered populist and enacted through the legislatures.

I render a verdict of "not guilty" on the charge of non-progressiveness of the supreme court of the United States, and the relief felt, I doubt not, will be worldwide!

We all know that the supreme court of Iowa has been equally progressive; in fact, if this progress keeps up our wealthy farmers will all move to California, where they don't ask embarrassing questions about personal property, and we will have to rope and tie our manufacturing plants to keep them within our state boundaries.

So in the sense of opposing progressive state laws and "social justice" the public is "not talking" to our supreme courts. The public does not understand the facts, that is all, and of course it is beneath the dignity of the judge or lawyer to inform the public of the facts, and there you are. The prejudice remains and perhaps after this generation of judges and lawyers has passed away the truth will become known and you all will be vindicated. I would imagine it better to be vindicated here above, but stick to your ethics—whatever that is—and maintain your dignity even if it curtails your finite existence. The great "common peepul" are not lawyers, forsooth, so why try to explain to them?

I wonder if you realize how it feels for one of us, the "great unwashed laymen," to sit down in company with a couple of lawyers and express himself upon some topic of the day, and then to have one of the lawyers turn, raise his eyebrows and coldly inquire: "You're not a lawyer, are you?" and there's where we commence to weaken and answer faintly "No sir," and then the lawyer turns to his Phi Delta Phi colleague with a patient shrug, ignores us utterly and we sink quietly into the pool of oblivion so deep that no further bubbles arise from us in that conversation.

The bankers used to have that disease. The banker was, in fact, regarded as the haughtiest of business men, and there was some reason for this, because he does business on other people's money. But the banker has had to "can" his dignity and get out into the blessed sunlight and hustle for business, and he is enjoying it and feels more like a human being withal.

Let me remark in all seriousness that it is unwise and also expensive to ignore public opinion. It creates laws and judges and it can change and discard them. Public opinion is the predominating governing influence. Its expression is the voice of the people, its approval the charter of success, its support invaluable and the law is but its police power. The handmaiden of public opinion is publicity, which paves the way and makes effective our great governing force. Publicity is the great modern remedy for all ills that afflict the body politic. It will cure commercial colds and financial chilblains, and properly applied to the enlightenment of the general public about our courts, which simply enforce public opinion crystalized into statute, is the surest remedy for so-called unrest which finds expression in demand for the recall of judges and their decisions, changes in the method of their appointment and the assassination of all lawyers.

In my humble opinion the majority of our people are not carried away with new ideas about our judges and decisions to anything like the extent that some leaders who make that a specialty would have us believe. I have seen no indications of any popular uprising or insistent clamor showing that the people are ready to assume the tremendous responsibility of changing our time-tried and tested system of jurisprudence. I am inclined to think that the issue has acquired prominence by being incorporated with other progressive reforms—so-called—that are becoming vital issues. I meet personally say one man in one hundred who expresses any particular convictions about the recall of judicial decisions.

But there is another subject pertaining to law about which not one man in a hundred fails to express himself very forcibly. If you happen to observe some individual tearing his hair, foaming at the lips, wild-eyed and jumping up and down in conversation with some one, the chances are that the individual is expressing the marked general, I might say concrete, discontent with what has been called the "law's delay. And yet, gentlemen, that is a missionary, for it is not the law's delay that is driving so many of us to the nut factory; it's the lawyer's delay. Here again our judges are not lagging very far behind public opinion. They have been quick to recognize that the progress of this age demands prompt administration of law, and I believe are very generally and honestly trying to apply modern methods and system to the machinery of the courts. Our courts should not through lack of system or diligence cause a condition whereby the ordinary citizen will suffer great injustice rather than endure the tedious process of law and the

Edward S. Lacey

Edward S. Lacey, chairman of the advisory committee at the Continental and Commercial National, for years president of the Bankers National, and a former comptroller of the currency, does not expect congress to pass the currency bill in time to be of service in the crop-moving season. He says if passed promptly it will be months getting into operation and that the banker for this fall, at least, must pin his faith to the Vreeland relief act.

SUGGESTS ALTERATIONS IN CURRENCY BILL

Prof. William A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin in an address on "Needed Currency Legislation" before the Northern Ohio Bankers Association, suggested a few amendments that might be added to the Owen-Glass banking and currency bill.

"The act confuses commercial and investment banking in a dangerous fashion," said Prof. Scott, "by placing investment paper secured by national and state bonds on the same basis as commercial paper, so far as concerns rediscounts and note issues. This opens the way for inflation of the most dangerous kind and endangers the elasticity of the note issues provided for."

The power given the federal reserve board to compel one federal bank to rediscount for another would subject the federal board to great political pressure, declared Prof. Scott. He said he believed the members of the federal board, who will reside in Washington, would get out of touch with the agricultural and commercial industry of the country, and hence there would be great danger of the development of an "invisible power behind the throne."

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF BUFFALO BANK.

Seymour H. Knox has been elected president of the Marine National of Buffalo.

FIX DATES FOR TEXAS CONVENTION

The 1914 convention of the Texas Bankers Association will be held in Fort Worth May 5th, 6th and 7th. This was decided upon at a meeting of the executive committee held in Galveston last week. At the meeting all standing committees for the ensuing year were appointed and the policy to be pursued under the new administration outlined. The executive committee decided upon the promotion of three main objects during the coming year. The Texas Bankers Association will devote an unusual amount of time, energy and money to the development of agricultural interests throughout the state and will endeavor to establish everywhere a closer relationship and better understanding between the bankers and the farmers.

In regard to legislative matters the committee will stand for the creation of a bonded warehouse system in Texas, to the end that banks will be enabled to make advances on stored products as collateral, and also will advocate the passage of a "reasonable" "Blue Sky" law for the avowed purpose of checking the promotion of "wildcat" development schemes, through which the bankers feel Texas investors have been and are being mulcted by unscrupulous financiers.

Joe Hirsch, chairman of the agricultural committee of the association, outlined to the members of the executive committee his plan of campaign for the coming year, which was approved by that body and a special appropriation made for carrying on the work. Mr. Hirsch has achieved a great deal of prominence through his efforts to increase the interest in agriculture in the Lone Star State.

A resolution was adopted providing for an increase in the dues of all members of the association for the purpose of providing a larger revenue to carry on the development work.

President Nathan Adams intimated that probably all future meetings of the executive committee will be held in Galveston, where the records of the association are kept in the office of Secretary J. W. Hoopes and are readily accessible.

TO INCREASE SECRET SERVICE EFFICIENCY

Bank Commissioner Charles Sawyer of Kansas is engaged in making the secret service connected with his department more efficient. He is endeavoring to combine the forces of the state surety companies and the national banks under one management from his office. He contends that working separately these interests do not do as effective work as they would if they were working together for a single purpose. While the yeggs are pretty well broken up in Kansas, unless attention is given to the matter new bands are likely to organize and it is the intention of Commissioner Sawyer to make this impossible for them in that territory.

NEW BANK OPENS

The Bank of the United States, which recently obtained its charter from the New York state banking department, opened for business July 1st in its temporary quarters at Delancy and Orchard streets in New York City. It is planned to erect a seven-story bank building adjoining the present quarters. The following are the officers of the new institution: President, Joseph S. Marcus, formerly president of the Public Bank and its founder; vice-presidents, William F. H. Koelsch, formerly of the Guaranty Trust, and C. L. Marcus; cashier, B. K. Marcus.

PROPOSE TO GIVE TRUST POWERS TO NATIONAL BANKS

Senator Owen expects to propose an amendment to the administration currency bill, the effect of which will be to confer limited powers on national banks. The amendment would confer the power of administrator and executor upon national banks, but would not permit them to act in the capacity of guardian. Mr. Owen said that the law governing minors is so complicated between the various states that he believes it would be unwise to permit national banks to act as guardians.

BANKS CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARIES

On Tuesday of the week the First National of Chicago celebrated its fiftieth anniversary and on Saturday of last week a similar event occurred in the First National of Davenport, Ia., the "first" First National of the United States. Both banks issued handsome and attractive books giving in detail a history of their growth and development. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful, many bouquets being sent by other banks. A steady stream of visitors thronged the institutions all day, calling to pay their respects and offer congratulations.

The Chicago bank has capital stock of ten millions and surplus of a like amount, and in addition, that of the First Trust and Savings, which is owned by and operated in the interest of the stockholders of the First National, is $5,000,000. The aggregate resources of the two are about $208,000,000. The history of the bank was written by Guy Wickes Cooke, who brought down to date a history written some years ago by another author. The bank has enjoyed a prosperous period under the presidency of James B. Forgan.

The First of Davenport, Ia., now possesses a capital stock of $200,000, surplus amounting to a like figure, and on April 4th had undivided profits of $40,290 and a line of deposits of $2,408,459. A. F. Dawson, the present head, is the ninth president. The bank received its charter under the national bank act, June 22nd, 1863. Although there were thirteen other banks chartered on the same day, the Davenport institution was the first to open for business, and therefore to it belongs the honor of being the "first" First National Bank in the country. Mr. Dawson has a national reputation, having served several terms in congress. His principal service was as a member of the committee on naval affairs and the committee on appropriations. He formerly was confidential secretary to Senator William B. Allison of Iowa.

GROUP NINE, OHIO

The members of Group Nine of the Ohio Bankers Association met for their eighth annual convention at Akron, June 27th, at the Portage Country Club. E. R. Fancher, vice-president of the Union National of Cleveland, presided. Prof. W. A. Scott of the University of Wisconsin and the Hon. F. W. Treadley, ex-lieutenant-governor of Ohio, were on the program. About 200 bankers, representing the nine counties in the group, were in attendance. O. C. Barber, president of the First-Second National of Akron, who operates a 3,000 acre farm in Summit county, was present, and told his fellow bankers of the great enjoyment he finds in active farming. F. A. Seiberling, of the Goodrich Rubber Company, acted as toastmaster at the dinner given in the evening and H. Evan Williams, the celebrated tenor, sang a number of old favorite songs.

Cleveland banks were well represented, a special trolley car party coming down from the city by the lake. Many of those in attendance found the golf links of the Portage Country Club attractive and put in part of the afternoon at the favorite pastime. Will Christy, president of the Central Savings and Trust Company, as well as other Akron bankers, were in attendance, and looked after the comfort of their visitors.

The group meetings have come to be very successful in Ohio, and are credited with building up a strong interest in the parent association. President S. D. Fitton and Secretary Stacey B. Rankin were both present at the meeting.

NEW SKYSCRAPER FOR MINNEAPOLIS

Plans have been drawn for a sixteen-story bank, club and office building in Minneapolis for the Investment Holding Company, to be erected at 4th Street and 2nd Avenue, at a cost of between $1,100,000 and $1,200,000. C. J. Hedwall is president of the investment company.

OREGON CROP CONDITIONS GOOD

Luther J. Chapin, government agricultural expert, who has returned from a trip through a large part of Marion county, says that crop conditions are unusually good and the prospects are for a record yield. The first crop, he says, will be much better than was expected earlier in the season. Mr. Chapin declares that the opportunities offered fruit-growers and agriculturists in this county and the entire Willamette Valley are unsurpassed.

NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY TO INCREASE CAPITAL.

At a special meeting of stockholders of the Union Trust Company of New York it was voted to increase the capital from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000, the additional 20,000 shares to be offered to the stockholders at par pro rata to their present holdings. A cash dividend of $2,000,000, or 200 per cent, also was declared, which reduces the surplus account from $7,400,000 to $5,400,000.

NEW NATIONAL BANKS

Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane received applications to organize the First National of Morrilton, Ark., capital, $50,000; the Bunker Hill National, Bunker Hill, Ill., capital $25,000; the National Port-Terminal Bank of Boston, Mass., capital $200,000, and the First National of Jarrolds Valley, W. Va., capital $25,000.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The warm weather and the good rains of the past fortnight have done much to aid the corn crop, and there is a more optimistic feeling among bankers and farmers over the prospects of a fairly good corn crop in spite of the fact that the "stand" of the crop is not satisfactory and much of it was replanted and is consequently late. The soil physics department of the University of Illinois has stated that the warm weather with the rains means "million of dollars" to the farmers and that the corn crop is being given a great opportunity to grow. The corn belt of Illinois has been well favored during the past fortnight, and while the city man may chafe under the heat, the farmer does not, as it "makes" good corn. Oats, however, suffer in the heat and the crop of early oats will be short and unsatisfactory. Late oats will be better, but only of fair yield and of fair quality.

Aurora Bankers Anti-Speeders

A news item from the Aurora informs us that twenty-five Aurora bankers, manufacturers and merchants have been sworn in as special automobile policeman. The wealth of these "rich autoists made coppers" is said to be more than $5,000,000, one of them being a millionaire. All of them are furnished with stars and will patrol the streets nightly on the watch-out for speeders. So many complaints have come into the Aurora police headquarters of speeding that these volunteer policemen were deemed necessary. As a "cop" is not supposed to do anything unlawful it is therefore presumed that the Aurora bankers are not "scorchers" and are willing to set a beautiful example of careful and slow driving before the citizens of their city.

County Soil Expert Educates Farmers

J. C. Collier, the soil expert of Kankakee county, conducted a party of 500 farmers to the University of Illinois, where they viewed the work which is carried on by the college of agriculture of that institution. The Kankakee county people made the trip on a special train. Dr. C. G. Hopkins, who is well known to Illinois bankers who have followed the "banker-farmer" movement, lectured to the visitors on soil fertility, and the university farm was inspected. Eighty women were included in the party, and the ladies were shown through the model kitchen and parlors of the household science department. Luncheon was served to the entire party in the cafeteria of the Woman's Building by "co-eds." The members of the party saw much to interest them and the trip was an incentive to many rural people to make better farm homes and to maintain more productive farms.

A few years ago such a movement as a "soil doctor" for a county would have been thought quite impossible, but the wide-spread interest now taken in the question of the cost of living and the future fertility of American farms has made it necessary that local areas, such as a counties, arm themselves with the intelligent weapons of making and preserving pleasant and profitable farm homes.

A Section of Land in Oats

Farm lands in most sections of Illinois have become so high in price that not many farmers rejoice in seeing a section of land, of 640 acres, in one field. Such a field is beyond the scope of the average farmers, as 80, 120, 160, 240, or 320 acres is the size of the average farm in Illinois, which is then far larger than farms in the more densely populated parts of the United States, not to speak of Western Europe.

However, near Hoopeston, there is a section of land which was this year sown in oats. The section is owned by J. S. McFerren, president of the First National of Hoopeston, and head of the Hoopeston Canning Company, and A. H. Trego, the lifelong partner of Mr. McFerren in the canning industry. While extensive packers of sweet corn, Messrs. McFerren and Trego do much general farming, as the section of oats will indicate. They use oats to rotate their crops, and they are believers in soil fertilization, as tons of by-products from the canning factory, such as stalks, cobs and husks, are hauled out in immense wagons and dumped on the soil, there to fertilize the ground. The Illinois Canning Company is another large plant among the many industries in Hoopeston. The Hoopeston canneries are the largest in the entire country. The merchants of Hoopeston now are interested in the building of a few stretches of gravel roads which will connect the nine miles between their city and the vast network of Indiana gravel roads. Much trade thereby will be brought to Hoopeston, which now slips away to Indiana towns when the Illinois roads are "bad." With an effective commercial organization, Hoopeston faces a bright future. I. E. Merritt, president of the Hoopeston National and chairman of the Vermilion County Bankers Association, is mayor of the city, which city is known to the press at large as

Guide to July Investment

THOSE having funds available will find our July List a guide to safe and profitable investment. This circular describes a great variety of thoroughly safeguarded first mortgage serial bonds, netting the investor 5½ to 6%, secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property. These bonds are backed by ample security, as well as ample earning power. We recommend them in the highest of terms to those seeking safe, non-fluctuating investments for income. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard the interests of our clients at all times and under all circumstances, is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago.

Illinois Notes

Joseph Easterday, until recently a teller in the First National of Springfield, has resigned that position to take a position in the banking department of the state auditor's office. He will be succeeded in the First National by Lyman Valentine, who has been with one of the banks of Kansas City.

Miss Mary Mantz, a maid in the home of S. B. VanPetten, president of the Citizens State of Buda, put to flight three burglars whom she found ransacking the house. She slipped downstairs and covered the trio of burglars with a revolver before they knew of her approach.

The Kankakee banks are paying four per cent upon savings accounts, and the First National and the Eastern Illinois Trust and Savings banks are doing some very effective advertising in promoting the welfare of their savings departments. The First National extends the days of grace to July 15th, as all amounts deposited up to that time draw interest from July 1st. Banks in all parts of the state are actively pushing the ideas of thrift and some large savings departments are the result.

I. E. Merritt, president of the Hoopeston National of Hoopeston, has just returned from a lengthy trip to West Virginia, and other points, where he visited the "old home," in company with two brothers. One thousand miles of the trip was made in an automobile, while a portion was enjoyed on an Ohio river steamboat.

The bank of Henry Denhart & Co. of Washington, donated a room in its bank building for the office of E. T. Robbins, the county agricultural adviser of Woodford county, who began his work a month ago. Mr. Robbins will make weekly trips over the county, will address farmers, and publish a weekly farm bulletin devoted to the farm interests of the county.

The estate of the late David S. Shellabarger, formerly president of the National Bank of Decatur, has been appraised at $642,742.

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign, formerly president of the Illinois Bankers Association, and a member of the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association, spoke before the convention of the Virginia Bankers Association at Old Point Comfort, June 20th, discussing the agricultural problems now being considered in Illinois.

The contract has been let for the new building of the First State Trust and Savings of Urbana, to cost about $25,000.

J. D. Phillips, of the Green Valley Bank, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, who is a farmer as well as a banker, reports that he has, notwithstanding the extremely dry weather of the early summer, 140 acres of good wheat and 270 acres of corn in excellent shape.

PREDICTS GOOD CROPS FOR TEXAS.

R. H. Taylor of the department of agriculture has predicted that if existing conditions continue Texas will produce a five-million-bale cotton yield this year. Wheat, like cotton, is in splendid shape. A yield of 15,000,000 bushels, as against 12,000,000 last year, is estimated by Mr. Taylor.

NEW NATIONAL FOR KANSAS CITY.

A charter has been issued to the Stock Yards National of Kansas City, Mo., capital $200,000, which succeeds the Stock Yards Bank of Commerce of that city.

RESTRAINS ENFORCEMENT OF "BLUE SKY" LAW

Judge A. W. Dana of the district court at Topeka, Kan., has granted a temporary order restraining the state officials from enforcing the "Blue Sky" law which has served as a model for nearly all similar legislation in other states.

A suit in which the court is asked to make the injunction permanent was filed by D. A. Mounday, manager of the American Sugar Refining Company with headquarters at Topeka. He alleges the law deprives him of all rights guaranteed under the state and federal constitutions. The petition states that the law has caused a general unrest among business men and that it has injured his business.

OGDEN STATE BANK.

Ogden State Bank of Ogden, Utah, is a Roll of Honor Bank, possessing surplus and profits in excess of capital. Of the 15,000 state banks in the United States only 900 occupy this position. The bank has capital stock of $100,000, surplus fund of $125,000 and had undivided profits amounting to $26,316 on April 7th. Total deposits on that date were $1,879,063. Officers are as follows: H. C. Bigelow, president; J. M. Browning, vice-president; A. P. Bigelow, cashier, and E. L. Van Meter, assistant cashier. A. P. Bigelow was president of the Utah Bankers Association during the past year.

FIRST NATIONAL, MARSHFIELD, WIS.

First National of Marshfield, Wis., with capital stock of $65,000 and surplus amounting to $40,000, possesses resources of more than a million. The deposits are close to $900,000. Officers are as follows: B. F. McMillan, president; J. C. Marsh, vice-president; H. G. Hambright, cashier, and J. C. Dorpat, assistant cashier.

BATAVIAN NATIONAL OF LA CROSSE

Batavian National of La Crosse has capital stock of $400,000 and surplus and undivided profits of approximately $200,000. The bank was organized in 1861. Officers are as follows: A. Hirschmer, president; E. M. Wing, vice-president; John A. Bayer, cashier, and K. O. Klein, assistant cashier.

INDIANA GROUP MEETINGS

Harry L. Arnold, clerk in the banking department of the state auditor's office, Indianapolis, was introduced to the members of the Indiana groups that met at Frankfort, Anderson and Indianapolis and created a favorable impression. Mr. Arnold is endeavoring to make the department serviceable to the banks of Indiana and the efforts of the administration in this direction are much appreciated by the banks.

W. G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, made a hit with the members of Group Four at the meeting held at Maennerchor Club House, Indianapolis, when he said he was glad the governor of Indiana is able to recognize the real "Blue Sky" when he sees it, Governor Ralston having vetoed the "Blue Sky" bill passed by the Indiana legislature which threatened to make the legitimate investment interests travel a hard way if it became a law.

John P. Frenzel, Jr., assistant cashier of the Merchants National of Indianapolis, retiring president of Group Four, pulled off a successful group meeting at Indianapolis although the thermometer was well up in the nineties. More than two hundred attended the dinner and stuck it out until the program was completely finished.

Otto Frenzel, president of the Merchants National and father of the chairman, told a story and proposed the health of the president of the Indiana state association, Col. J. L. McCulloch of Marion, who was present and who received word while the meeting was in progress that he had just been made a grandfather.

The meeting of the members of Group Three was held at the Anderson Country Club, a delightful location near the city of Anderson, on Wednesday, June 18th. B. F. Mustard presided and Carl Oesterle, the retiring secretary, was elected chairman.

The new chairman invited the bankers to hold their next annual meeting in Muncie. Jesse Vermillion of the Anderson Banking Company helped to make the day an eventful one for the visitors.

Group Four elected Will H. Wade, the popular manager of the bond department of the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis, as chairman for the ensuing year. Gus Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American, with a good heavy coat of tan, got back in time from a two weeks tour of New England to attend the meeting.

WOULD END COMMERCE COURT

Washington, D.C. — House democrats in caucus agreed upon abolition of the commerce court as a party policy and, turing deaf ears to the pleas from their leaders, rejected a plan for the creation of a budget committee to control all appropriations.

Representative Broussard of Louisiana, champion of the commerce court, precipitated caucus action on the mooted question by offering a resolution to authorize hearings of the Sims bill to abolish the court. Speaker Clark denounced the tribunal as useless and expensive and Representative Adamson of Georgia, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, offered a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the caucus that the court be abolished during the present session, due care being taken to protect and provide for jurisdiction over pending and future litigation. The resolution was adopted by viva voce vote.

Democratic Leader Underwood led the fight for the budget plan and had the support of Speaker Clark, Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the appropriations committee, and other powerful house leaders.

OHIO PLANNING FOR CONVENTION

Col. J. J. Sullivan, chairman of the committee which has in charge the annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association September 11th and 12th, has named the committees to work with the main one. On the main committee are Col. Sullivan, chairman; R. W. Judd, secretary; F. J. Woodworth, E. R. Fancher, A. G. Tame, C. A. Paine and E. V. Hale. Mr. Fancher is chairman of the finance committee, which includes H. W. Stecher, T. W. Hill, Harris R. Creech, and J. A. House. Mr. Paine is chairman of the entertainment committee, which includes Mr. Hale, G. S. Russell, E. G. Tillotson, A. H. Seibig, L. A. Murfey, G. N. Sherwin, P. J. Darling and W. G. Dietz. Mr. Woodworth is chairman of the program committee, which includes F. S. Borton, W. M. Baldwin and L. J. Cameron. On the reception committee will be one representative of every Cleveland bank, and it will be headed by Gen. George A. Garretson, Ambassador Myron T. Herrick and H. P. McIntosh.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis bank clearings for the month of June showed quite a gain over those of the corresponding month last year. Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite active. The demand for money was fair and the rates were firm at five and one-half to six per cent on call and time loans with nearly all the loans being made at the latter figure.

Country in Prosperous Condition

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust, St. Louis, on his return last Friday from the East, was very enthusiastic over the prospects for the results of the currency bill. He feels confident it will have a tendency to solidify financial conditions and will prevent future stringencies. Mr. Wade said, "The banking and currency bill which has been introduced in congress is regarded only in a tentative form. Those who have the matter under serious consideration are confident that any defects that may develop will promptly be cured by amendments." Mr. Wade thinks the country is in a most prosperous condition and believes that, in order to assure continued prosperity, the interstate commerce commission should grant an increase of five per cent in passenger and freight rates. During his visit in Washington he was thrown in contact with bankers from many states and the report from every section was that the manufacturing industries were running at full capacity. Every locality reported ample funds to take care of the legitimate requirements of the trade.

Finds Old-Time Bank Note

Joseph S. Calfee, cashier of the Mechanics-American National, has discovered a $1 bank note, issued June 21, 1861, by the Mechanics Bank of St. Louis, at a period when only three banks in Missouri had power to issue notes and before national banks came into existence. The note was taken to him by Charles Center of northern Missouri. Mr. Calfee purchased it for $2 and now has it displayed above the public writing desk at the bank in a gilded frame. The note, Mr. Calfee says, once was a popular form of currency in Missouri. It is about a half inch shorter than the dollar bill to-day and an eighth of an inch narrower. It has the figure of Liberty reclining in a chair and the eagle stamped on the fact in addition to a portrait of a distinguished-looking man whom Mr. Calfee has not been able to indentify. It is signed by Charles Everts as cashier and J. Waldo as president.

Book for Investors

Walker M. Van Riper, secretary of the American Trust and the Title Guaranty Trust of St. Louis, has made an interesting addition to the comparatively short list of books dealing with investments in, "What Every Investor Should Know." The author not only discusses finance and investments but also treats the political situation along broad lines and with much clear understanding of current conditions, their causes and possible effects. The book is well written and well bound and printed.

Bankers Plan Annual Banquet

The St. Louis County Bankers Association has just adopted a constitution which has been sent to its members. Section I of Article 4 provides that on the second Tuesday of April each year and at each annual meeting a dinner or entertainment shall be provided and the expense paid by the association. A limit of $50 a year is placed on the expenses and the minimum is $15. Only officers of banks and trust companies may become members.

Condition of Missouri Banks

The abstract of the condition of national banks of Missouri, exclusive of reserve cities, at the close of business June 4th, shows the average reserve held at 16.37 per cent; loans and discounts $30,063,745; gold coin $783,279; total specie $1,673,079; individual deposits $31,464,252.

Vandiver Made Subtreasurer

Willard D. Vandiver, insurance commissioner of Missouri under Governor Folk, has been appointed by President Wilson to be United States assistant treasurer in charge of the subtreasury of St. Louis. Mr. Vandiver is a native of West Virginia and is fifty-nine years old. He came to Missouri when two years old. He lives in University city.

Meramec Trust Company Opened

The Meramec Trust Company of St. Louis formally opened its doors for business on Monday of last week. The company is housed in a three-story brick building, the interior of which is finished in mahogany and marble. It is capitalized at $100,000. H. F. Reis of the Reis Lumber Company is president; William G. Arne, vice-president, and Fred Krone, secretary-treasurer.

New Bank at Moberly

The fourth financial institution for Moberly was organized recently. A. Vince will be president; R. A. Curran, vice-president, and J. W. Bundridge, cashier. The directors include the officers and B. C. Holbrook, Fred Priesmyer, Geo. W. Sparks and E. P. Newman. The new bank expects to open about September 1st and will be capitalized at $25,000.

New Missouri Banks

State Bank Commissioner J. T. Mitchell has issued a charter to the Bank of Swedeborg, Mo. The capital stock of the bank is $10,000, all paid up, and the board of directors is as follows: R. B. Stewart, S. C. Black, William Warner, J. P. Kreitzer, L. E. Rayls and Levi Lundstrom.

Charters were issued on Friday of last week to the following new banks by State Bank Commissioner Mitchell:

Ryan Banking Company, Norwood; capital, $25,000. Incorporators—Norwood Wright, R. A. Ryan, J. M. Ryan, W. S. Calhoun.

Farmer Bank of Rockville; capital, $10,000. Incorporators—T. W. Gray, J. N. McDavitt, W. W. Trail.

Union Savings, Sedalia; capital $10,000. Incorporators—M. N. Ehlers, A. T. White, Sam B. McVey.

Citizens Savings Trust, Kansas City; capital, $100,000. Incorporators—Arthur W. Corvan, Charles W. Bartlett, B. N. Deatherage.

The Bethany Savings has increased its capital stock from $33,000 to $66,000; Bank of New Bloomfield from $10,000 to $30,000; Farmers Bank of Unionville from $37,000 to $50,000.

Missouri Notes

The Citizens Trust, Caruthersville, is paying off depositors of the defunct Pemiscot County Bank. Most of the depositors merely have been transferring their accounts to the trust company.

I. G. Farnsworth, president of the Bank of Latour, has disposed of his controlling interest to parties from Kansas City, Clinton and Montrose. Mr. Farnsworth will remain as president until the close of the year and the former directors have been retained.

At the meeting of the directors of the Bank of Neosho, O. W. Epperson was elected assistant cashier and the other officers were re-elected.

Plan to Organize New Arkansas Bank

An application to organize the First National Bank of Morrillton, Ark., with a capital of $50,000 has been received by the acting comptroller of the currency. J. M. Scroggin, E. H. Dunaway, J. W. Massey, R. N. Vail, Ben Brints and others are named as the incorporators.

Argenta, Ark., Bank Closes

The Valley Savings of Argenta, Ark., recently closed its doors after a run. The president, W. W. Hurst, declared the bank solvent and asserted that business probably would be resumed. The bank's deposits are said to be about $150,000. George Vaughan, a Little Rock attorney, has been appointed receiver.

Fremont State Elects New President

James J. Holland, a prominent business man and one of the leading merchants of Fremont, Ark., who has been connected with various banking institutions for a number of years, has been elected president of the Fremont State. His appointment was made owing to the resignation of J. W. Jaco, who has served in this capacity since the bank was organized several months ago.

Bank in New Home

The First State of Bishop, Tex., has moved into its new home, which is one of the handsomest and most modern bank structures in that part of the state. The fixtures are of mahogany, marble and bronze, with ample room provided for the convenience and comfort of customers.

Southwest Notes

Charles L. Perry of Stuttgart, Ark., has accepted a position as cashier of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of that city.

The First National of Lockhart, Tex., has let the contract for a complete remodeling of its bank building.

The Lipscomb Bank and Trust Company, Luling, Tex., is arranging to enlarge its building. An additional vault will be installed and other extensive improvements will be added.

Bank Assessments Fixed

At a special meeting of the county commissioners, attended by representatives of the First National, City National and Texas Bank and Trust of Galveston, the board voted to leave assessments for state and county taxes of these three institutions the same as last year. Hoskins Foster represented the City National, Fred W. Catterall the First National and Joseph Seinsheimer, the Texas Bank and Trust.

Condition of Oklahoma Banks

The abstract of the condition of the national banks of Oklahoma, exclusive of reserve cities, at the close of business on June 4th, shows the average reserve held as 16.42 per cent; loans and discounts, $48,850,445; gold coin, $893,659; total specie, $33,502.15; individual deposits, $55,597,272.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Elias Greenebaum, founder of the banking business which is now the Greenebaum Sons Bank & Trust Company, celebrated last week his ninety-first birthday. He is at his desk every day at the bank. Coming to Chicago in 1848, Mr. Greenebaum started in the private banking business on his own account in 1855.

Newark, N. J.—Articles of incorporation have been filed for the new Lackawanna Trust Company. Many are interested in the organization.

Editorial Comment

TEACHING SCHOOL CHILDREN TO SAVE

One of the ablest addresses of the convention season was delivered by N. F. Hawley of Minneapolis at the North Dakota convention. It was a case of good seed falling upon good ground, for the North Dakota bankers were among the earliest in the field advocating practical education. Mr. Hawley said:

In education a new era is coming. We are tending more and more to the belief that it is a proper educational function for the schools to teach children how to earn a living. In fact there is a growing inclination towards the idea that it is appropriate and necessary that children should be taught not only "book learning," but also the means of sustaining life. This modern tendency of education is evidenced in our trade, vocation, domestic science, agricultural and other schools of applied education.

This of course is along the main traveled road and strictly orthodox. The speaker went further and proposed that—

Along with other practical arts the habits of saving is beginning more and more to be taught. Heretofore this function has not been undertaken by the schools. The example of France, which has made the teaching of thrift a part of the school curriculum with the resulting frugality and prosperity of its people, pointedly suggests to us that it would be profitable for schools of this country to inaugurate education in savings.

The savings bank section is doing effective work along this line and has just issued "Eight Lectures Upon Thrift" in pamphlet form. The talks were delivered at Cooper's Union, New York, and are a very valuable addition to the rich banking literature of the present year. Mr. Hawley's talk deserves to be added. The University of Illinois had 905 students taking the agricultural course the past year and forty-one per cent of the students who graduated had accepted positions as teachers, demonstrators or managers in advance. Bankers have done more public good in the last two years by urging practical and profitable education than in the previous ten. Can they keep it up?"

A GOVERNOR WHO GOVERNS

A governor who governs in the full meaning of the term seems to have fallen to the lot of Illinois after a lapse of years. To sign or veto by bargain or from political motives had become a habit. Chicago's big dailies had come to think they had vested rights as to say what a governor should approve or disapprove. With the habit strongly fixed, note how they hammered away and threatened, even demanding the park consolidation bill and denouncing the public utilities bill. The governor crossed their ultimatum both going and coming, vetoing the park consolidation bill and signing the public utilities act. He gave full and appealing reasons for his course, dodging not the least in fear of journalistic denunciation so effectual in the other years. A full dozen of the "big" bills were vetoed and more than a million in doubtful appropriations felt the axe. Governor Dunne explains that many other bad or undeserving appropriations went through because combined in an inseparable way with appropriations needed for the conduct of the public institutions, and here is the pledge the governor makes for the future:

"Hereafter appropriations are to be used upon a budget system, and it will be my endeavor to have every budget that comes under my jurisdiction prepared with infinite detail so that the people may know the ultimate purpose for which every dollar is appropriated. In any event, the legislature should arrange to remain in session at least three days following the time allowed the governor for the consideration of bills, so that recommendations which he might make concerning the alteration of various items can be satisfactorily passed upon.

This is planning to run the great commonwealth's business with the same care and economy as if it were a private enterprise. This will be good news to the bankers of the state, for all of them believe that there should be the same fidelity and sense of accountability in the executive head of the state that there is in the head of a banking institution. The governor signed the good roads bill furthered by the bankers' committee and by the improvement association headed by W. G. Edens of this city.

This will put Illinois on the automobile map where it belongs, and be money in the pockets of the farmers and gardeners. Speaking of this movement Governor Dunne refers to the legislation as "$1,100,000 for good roads, provided by house bills 608, 679, and 604. The enactment of these measures into law marks the beginning of a revolutionary change for the better in our internal affairs."

VIEWING THE NEW CURRENCY BILL

Really there should be no East, no West in the new currency bill, just as there should be no North, no South in the tariff bill. Yet all public questions are approached from varying viewpoints. Congress will do well if it refine the detail of both bills until injustice to sections is eliminated in full, or in as large part as may be consistent with the general welfare. The daily press continues to take an active part in the discussion of the money bill, some on partisan and some on territorial lines. The able editor of the much quoted Springfield (Mass.) Republican says that "The difference is marked between the reception of the bank bill in New York and its reception in Chicago." This was not spoken in criticism of either financial center but led to a general discussion of the same point by the Chicago Record-Herald, a paper which gives larger than usual space to financial news. The correspondent of a leading and independent New York daily reports that "taken as a whole the bill has made a favorable impression in Chicago."

The Record-Herald says it "does not believe in indicting nations, cities or communities. Nevertheless certain facts must be frankly faced. Abundant testimony has shown that, even in the opinion of leading bankers, New York is the chief beneficiary of the present monopoly-breeding and gambling-inviting banking system. Wall Street draws money like a huge magnet from every corner of the country, and the stock gamblers take advantage of the concentration of funds. Certain New York bankers have repeatedly had to preach conservatism and prudence to their brethren in and near Wall Street.

"Now, one great object of true currency reform is to prevent the diversion of money into speculative channels. True currency reform will, therefore, affect adversely certain New York groups and interests. It is well for the local press to bear that in mind and to refrain from comment the tone or spirit of which is calculated to excite suspicion in the middle and far West. We need banking legislation for the whole country, and for every legitimate form of business. New York especially must make an effort to think nationally and disinterestedly; to help instead of threatening and knocking."

It is a favoring sign when independent papers come out strongly for a measure the discussion of which largely interests only those personally affected. Bankers only are human and politicians only slightly less so. "The best bill that can be passed" was a qualifying phrase used by Taft while president. It drew fire from the radicals but there is some sense in being for the best bill you can get at the time. Western bankers are trying for useful and tactful modifications but not for the defeat of the administration banking bill.

JOHN L. HAMILTON HAS CURRENCY BILL

John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston, Ill., former president of the American Bankers Association, has sent to Senator Sherman a currency bill which provides that banks may issue emergency "credit currency" without the deposit of security, but under the direction of the "currency commission."

The bill provides that any national bank which has been chartered more than one year and has a surplus of 20 per cent above capitalization "may take out for issue and circulation national bank notes without a deposit of United States bonds, as now provided by law."

When the emergency ceased to exist the credit currency would be retired by the operation of a tax of $1\frac{1}{4}$ per cent per annum on the average amount of such currency the bank has outstanding every half year and $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent if the issue exceeds $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of capitalization.

An additional tax of 1 per cent is imposed on currency not retired at the direction of the commission.

Comptroller to Fix Form

These "national guaranteed credit notes," as the bill calls them, "shall be issued in such form and denominations and under such rules as the comptroller of the currency shall fix; the amount of said notes so taken out by any national banking association may be equal to 4 per centum of the amount of its national bank notes at any time outstanding which are secured by the deposit of government bonds, but shall not exceed in amount $37\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of its capital; provided, however, that if at any time in the future, the present proportions of the total outstanding unmatured United States bonds to the total capitalization of all national banking associations in active operation shall diminish, then the authorized issue of national bank guaranteed credit notes shall be increased to a correspondingly greater percentage of the bond secured notes.

Would Affect State Banks

"Any state banking association under state supervision and submitting to federal examination with same amount of capital, surplus, and reserve as required for national banks, may issue national guaranteed credit notes equal in amount to 25 per centum of its capital, secured by securities or corporate depository bonds acceptable to a commission of seven members."

Upon application to the commission, any national bank, or "the majority of the banks in any city," may issue credit currency to the extent of 50 per cent of the outstanding bond secured circulation of the national banks, or 25 per cent of the capital of the state banks, "secured by depository or corporate bonds approved by the commissioners."

The commission is to determine the necessity for the issue of such currency and the length of time it may remain outstanding.

Would Make Elastic Currency

Mr. Hamilton says this plan combines "all the good features of the Fowler, McKinney, and Aldrich bills, eliminating the undesirable features."

"This law," he says, "would create an elastic currency, there being no limit to the amount of the redemption of the credit notes and the limit of the redemption of bond secured notes being increased from $9,000,000 to $30,000,000. This measure will protect the national credit by maintaining a bond secured circulation that will gradually retire itself as the postal savings funds increase and the profit on bonds required circulation decreases with the $30,000,000 per month authorized retirement.

"Had this been a law in 1907, it would have provided sufficient currency and there would have been no panic.

"This bill will permit an immediate reduction of $62,310,000 of bond secured circulation, will permit a credit note issue by national banks of $395,599,593, or a total bond secured and credit issue of $1,052,265,581.

"If state banks were permitted to issue credit notes under federal supervision up to 25 per cent of their capital, they could issue $244,318,207. These with the national credit notes, $395,599,593, would give an elasticity of $639,917,800 absolutely under federal control."

unwarranted expense which delay always entails, and whereby only those who are either stubborn or actuated by passion or revenge will appeal to them. That is surely not in accordance with the highest purposes of law, I am speaking only of the detail, the machinery of legal procedure. I recognize the fact that the law must be behind the times, that law follows public opinion and, as Justice Holmes recently said, "law embodies beliefs that have triumphed in the battle of ideas and then have translated themselves into action. While there is still doubt, the time for law has not yet come, the notion destined to prevail is not yet entitled to the field." I recognize that law is a matter of wise decision, of intelligence rather than speed, but ordinary legal procedure involves no great new principles of government. In actions where careful preparation is essential to show what certain laws are relating to the case—laws already established after the most exhaustive research and careful deliberation—and the presentment of evidence, the business world asks the legal fraternity to advance the spark and open the throttle a trifle.

What constitutes the great physician? The M. D. who dreams about a surgical case and takes his time about performing it? No, it's the doctor who can get into a man's insides quickly and get out even quicker. In business you must go to a busy man if you want to get anything done—the man who lacks diligence is always "too busy" to attend to it. The same rule must hold good in the practice of law. I would expect the best quality of legal advice from the lawyer who uses system, diligence and promptness.

The people are not willing to maintain court-houses, salaried judges, court officers and janitors, to have those facilities used as social clubs where lawyers may, for unimportant reasons or for personal convenience, have cases postponed or drag actions along at their own sweet will to the delay of other litigants. In industry to-day they take moving pictures of workmen and then analyze their motions to save a fraction of a second. In commerce and finance no head of a department is too high to escape the criticism and advice of the expert accountant or the professional engineer whose business it is to systematize and save time. In this day of commercial progress in every department of trade and commerce, as well as in most professions, economies and improvements are being made, and the lawyer will have to recognize the tendency of the age and learn that success belongs to the prompt, efficient professional man as well as to the prompt, efficient and skilled workman. In every department of their throbbing entity, trade, commerce and finance depend upon the lawyer, but in this day of the "survival of the fittest" they are not willing to depend upon a slow or careless lawyer. The prosperous lawyers here know without my saying it that business goes to-day by preference to lawyers who stand well in their profession, who are known to have a practical knowledge of business as well as of law, and who have the reputation of being hustlers.

The day is coming when the eye of the public will make a mental moving picture film of the opening day of court. It will scan the docket at the close of the session. It will follow the trial. It will follow the judge and the lawyer to their offices, it will record whether they are energetic, systematic experts and how they are equipped as to working tools,—law libraries and systems,—for all these save work and increase efficiency in the professions just as well as in industry or commerce. The governing board of public opinion will sit in judgment and analyze that mental film, cut out the waste and deadwood, and the public, which gives the lawyer certain immunities—a house to work in and the machinery by which he transacts his business—is going to require just as prompt, efficient work from the lawyer as from the doctor, the railroad president, the accountant, or the skilled workman. And the beauty of it all is that it will save the lawyer time, worry and trouble and give his mighty intelligence greater opportunities to shower blessings upon his clients and humanity in general.

In using the calcium I have been showing in the Machievellian red and invidious green slides; now for the white and just a touch of lovely pink and violet!

Progress already has decreed that the lawyer of the future must be thoroughly grounded in the principles of law. As in the profession of medicine, the restrictions are becoming more stringent and the time required in preparation lengthened. The day is coming when a man will have to be of broad and practical education to qualify for either of these great professions. I hope the day will come when a college degree will be required as a foundation upon which to build the superstructure of professional training. Your profession is too great and too important to have any standard but the highest among them all.

I sincerely hope that the tendency will be more and more towards having lawyers equipped with a practical knowledge of business if they are to enter that branch of human activity. In the medical profession the time is coming when the doctor will be an adviser—a teacher of methods of right living, to prevent sickness and disease, and only use his pills and knives as last resorts. In the progress of trade and commerce the tendency is to consult the lawyer in every department of business in order to keep out of trouble and to save expense and loss. All large corporations and a majority of all corporations and business houses find it just as necessary to retain the lawyer the year round for advice and counsel as to maintain a working head in any department. In this the legal profession I think finds its highest efficiency, for it works for commercial and social peace. It is true that your profession has not kept all of our most progressive financiers, bankers and captains of industry out of jail or federal prisons, but the lawyer as he increases in efficiency will be able to better work along that line.

This is an age of specialists and you are the highest trained specialists we have. You are entitled to the highest compensation for your expert services [loud and enthusiastic applause] and I believe you never fail to get it. The lawyer who does not charge for advice injures both his profession and the public. In order to make a fee he must drag his client into court. It is better, higher, nobler work to settle the case in your office and you should not lose one cent by this concession to the good of society, and if you stand together as well as the bankers do on exchange and interest you won't have to—although I am not here to give any advice to “combinations in restraint of trade and commerce.”

If I referred to the part the lawyer has played in the progress of this country I would have to recite the history of the United States and picture the triumph of popular government. I would have to list the names of our patriots and statesmen, our national defenders and preservers.

We are now going through a commercial and financial readjustment, which, while it probably will be accomplished quietly, will not be easy, as there is no painless method of changing from limited markets and artificially sustained policies and prices to the standard of efficiency, regulated by the laws of supply and demand. It is inevitable and it will be worth a thousand times all it costs. It isn't the policy of any particular political party; it isn't politics at all; it is progress. We are upon the threshold of the most marvelous, sound and sane commercial and industrial progress this country has ever known, according to the opinions of some of our greatest economists. As progress carries American enterprise into a field bounded only by the circumference of the globe, with our unparalleled resources, our God-fearing and intelligent people, our skilled workmen and our trained professional men, the triumph is sure, and we should enter fearlessly and with confidence. It is the men of your profession who must educate, train and drill the hosts of commerce who are to carry the banner of American commercial supremacy to the markets of the world. In every campaign to be planned, in every battle to be fought, we must turn to the lawyer for advice and counsel. I have no doubt that he will be in the front ranks of this army of peace and progress, for he has been in the forefront of our greatest commercial and industrial progress in the past.

The spirit of commercial and industrial progress which has illumined every page of our nation's history, which within 20 years has doubled the value of all property, the circulation of money and wealth per capita, the products of the farm, the homes of industry, the tonnage of vessels and miles of railway, was born of the courage, loyalty and patriotism of this people, who through 137 years of popular government have maintained respect for our laws and support for our system of jurisprudence, under a constitution which knows no privileged classes, which recognizes no caste, which has endured the wear and strain of over a century and conferred upon the oppressed of every land the proud title of American citizenship.

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Henry W. Stecher, for eighteen years secretary and treasurer of the Pearl Street Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland, has been made president.

He takes the place of David McLean, who died some months ago. The directors also made A. F. Humel, assistant secretary and treasurer, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Stecher is a director of the Rocky River Savings and Banking Company, and is director or officer in a number of business enterprises. The Pearl Street Bank is one of Cleveland's most prosperous West Side institutions, with deposits in the neighborhood of $4,500,000.

Group Six at Mt. Vernon

The seventh annual meeting of Group Six, Ohio Bankers Association, was held at Mt. Vernon on Wednesday of last week and was one of the best the group ever has held. The attendance was good and the program of a very interesting character. The bankers of Mt. Vernon entertained the visitors, giving them an automobile ride to Kenyon College, also to the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium. In the evening a banquet was given. H. W. Geer, president of the Mt. Vernon First National, gave the address of welcome, and President George W. Miller, of the Farmers and Citizens Bank of Bucyrus, the response. Following reports and other business, Representative John F. Kramer of Mansfield addressed the convention on “Recent Legislation Affecting Banking.” Other addresses on the program were: “Employment of Our Surplus Funds,” H. C. Devin, Mr. Vernon; “Farm Finance,” Dean Homer C. Price, Ohio State University, College of Agriculture; “Blue Sky Laws,” Robert

A. Black, special representative commerce department of banks and banking; and reports of county executive committeemen. W. A. Blicke of Bucyrus was elected chairman and G. A. Wright of Bellevue, secretary and treasurer. The next place of meeting was not decided upon.

Ohio Heads List

With Ohio at the head of the list, Indiana third, and Kentucky twelfth, the Ohio valley states take front rank in the absorption of postal savings bonds of the issue of July 1st, according to a statement of Postmaster-General Burleson. Ohio, with a bond conversion of $199,440, has taken up nearly one-fifth of the total of $1,116,880. The issue of July is the fifth to be made since the installation of the postal savings banks, and Ohio has ranked first every time but the first. The present allotment is an increase of 2.6 per cent over that of January 1st.

File Suit Against Baxter

Depositors of the defunct State Bank of Albany have brought suit against former Bank Superintendent Frank E. Baxter and his bondsmen for $33,282. When the Albany bank failed the total of claims filed amounted to $47,000. A thirty per cent dividend has been paid and substantially all of the bank's assets have been consumed in paying this. Baxter is charged by the Association of Depositors with having failed to comply with the law in authorizing the bank to begin business in 1910 when fifty per cent of the capital stock subscribed had not been paid in; that he allowed deposits to be received when the bank was insolvent; that he allowed a depository for the Albany bank's reserve funds to be selected, which the depositors alleged he knew was insolvent; that he knew the officers of the bank carried loans in excess of twenty per cent of the capital stock and surplus, and that the Albany bank carried charges against insolvent banks, which were known to the state banking superintendent.

Philadelphia Bankers Claim Debate Championship

Since their victory over Pittsburgh by unanimous decision of the judges in the debate at Pennsylvania Bankers Association Convention, members of the Philadelphia Chapter, American Institute of Banking, claim their right to the title of eastern champions in debating in that organization. Charles B. Engle, chairman of the Philadelphia debating committee, calls attention to the fact that Philadelphia now has defeated Baltimore, Washington, New York, Scranton and Pittsburgh. In the case of the tri-city debate with Baltimore and Washington, Philadelphia won on both sides of the same question, and the Philadelphia Chapter was the only one to accept the general defi issued by the New York Chapter. The victory at Pittsburgh gives the Philadelphia Chapter possession for a year of the silver loving cup offered by the state bankers association, which had been held by Pittsburgh for two years.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

M. P. Beebe of Ipswich was elected president of the South Dakota Bankers Association at Watertown. Other officers elected were: T. W. Delcate of Custer, vice-president; S. T. Kiddo of Sioux Falls, treasurer; J. E. Platt of Clark, secretary (re-elected).

The new executive council is as follows: W. E. Stevens of Sioux Falls, chairman; Einer Johnson of Volina, district No. 1; W. E. Stevens of Sioux Falls, district No. 2; C. A. Fountain of Watertown, district No. 3; W. H. Pratt of Chamberlain, district No. 4; C. A. Russell of Aberdeen, district No. 5; B. A. Cummins of Pierre, district No. 6; G. H. Randall of Rapid City, district No. 7; E. S. Gay of Belle Fourche, district No. 8; Frank M. James of Hitchcock, district No. 9; John F. Whitlock of Gettysburg, district No. 10; E. A. Jackson of Dallas, district No. 11; F. A. Finch of Lemmon, district No. 12. Aberdeen was chosen as the meeting place in 1914.

Ed. Miller was chosen vice-president for the American Bankers Association, and F. C. Danforth, member of the nominating committee.

F. C. Danforth, Vermilion, retiring president, called the meeting to order to listen to an address of welcome from John B. Hanten for the mayor. Mr. Hanten expressed a desire for a bank guaranty law that will be satisfactory. He urged the bankers to work for a constitutional convention to amend taxation laws which, if enforced to the letter, will drive out moneyed interests and credit. E. L. Abel responded. Mr. Abel said he favored a federal guaranty law that would protect the bank as well as the depositor.

On bank guaranty, Mr. Randall said the bankers should act, and not leave it entirely with the legislature, which is likely to pass an inadequate law, as they are not conversant with the subject to the same extent as the men who make a study of it would be. He said that if the bankers could get together and make some recommendations concerning such a law, that he felt sure the legislature would be glad to get it off their hands and would give them their support.

His plan was to stop paying sureties companies for protection and instead provide for the creating of a surplus for guaranty funds. He stated that an immediate fund of $300,000 could be created by the payment of $500 by each of the 635 banks in South Dakota for membership in the association, and that officials of banks could be bonded by the association instead of sureties companies to create a growing surplus.

Banks in Good Condition

Seven hundred and ninety banks reported at the last call to the state bank examiner of Minnesota, as compared with 747, June 14, 1912. Comparative figures show gains, of which Kelsey S. Chase, examiner, said: "The increase of $14,785,120.72 in deposits is gratifying, and the statement in general shows the banks progressing toward a more satisfactory condition. This is especially true of the decrease in real estate holdings and in bills payable, but there is one feature I do not like, and that is the increase in overdrafts."

Approves Currency Bill

The proposed currency bill is approved by

Carmi Thompson, former treasurer of the United States, now at St. Paul in charge of the Hill ore interests.

"It will be a decided improvement over anything now existing," said Mr. Thompson, "and will in many ways be a much needed law. I do not say that I think the Glass bill is the best solution of the currency situation, but I do say that it will very materially help matters and should be put through."

"If the bankers oppose government control of the reserve board, as many of them do, to my mind it will be useless. There may be a provision for representation from the ranks of bankers, but they will never be allowed to control the board."

"I think that if the bankers did control the reserve board, which is really the big thing in the law, it would lose much of its strength and purpose. The people want to know, during a panic or depression in business, that the government is back of the situation. This will help to restore confidence."

"The ideal currency law would be to have a 'Bank of United States,' the same as the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank of Holland, or, like our neighbor, the Bank of Montreal, which is really the Bank of Canada. This has proved to be the best system, and in these countries they do not have the terrific and sudden panics that we have gone through."

Minneapolis Clearings

Bank clearings in Minneapolis for the first six months of the year give promise of a total of $1,500,000,000 for 1913. The clearings last year were $1,210,100,000. They have been above $1,000,000,000 since 1907. Clearings the first six months were $582,968,690 compared with the same period of 1912 of $487,751,791. June clearings reached $96,061,934 which is a gain over the previous June of $17,817,428. This increase is said to be due largely to bond payments and interest checks, in addition to a gain in business.

Frank M. Sturgis, director of the Meade County Bank, at Sturgis, S. D., withdrew his plea of guilty and entered an alternate plea of guilty of allowing and permitting shareholders to become indebted at one time in excess of 50 per cent of the paid-up capital of the bank. He was fined $500. Other indictments were dismissed on motion of the state's attorney.

W. M. Taber, president of the First National, Park Rapids, Minn., has let a contract for a garage, 50 by 72 feet, to be built next door to the bank. It will be of cement blocks and equipped to do repair and garage work.

Nearly $250,000 was distributed in bank dividends in Minneapolis July 1st. Four banks make their dividends January 1st, two in September, one August 1st. The new North Side Bank declared its first dividend at 2 per cent semiannual, or $1,500.

Three new South Dakota banks have been formed. Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Farmers State at Veblen, with a capital of $15,000. President, C. D. Thompson; vice-president, C. P. Akre; cashier, A. W. Thompson, all of Veblen. For the Bank of Victor, Roberts County, with a capital of $10,000. President, N. N. Powell; vice-president, S. E. Oscarsen; cashier, A. G. Molander, all of White Rock. For the Bank of Effington, Roberts County, with a capital of $10,000. President, S. E. Oscarsen; vice-president, Newell N. Powell of White Rock; cashier, E. W. Wood, Audubon, Ia.

The State of Bowman, N. D., has moved into a new brick building valued at $28,000 formerly owned by the Bowman State.

C. H. Anheiter of Fargo has been appointed national bank examiner to succeed S. E. Tiler, resigned. He was an insurance man and formerly served as receiver for a local national bank several years ago.

The Randolph State of Randolph, Minn., has been organized with $10,000 capital. Officers are, president, T. L. Beiseker; cashier, H. P. Hanson; assistant, B. J. Schwoefferman; H. P. Hanson, C. F. Duckman and Mr. Beiseker are directors.

The first insurance company authorized to sell stock in the state under the provisions of the "Blue Sky" law is the bankers and Mechanics Fire Insurance Company of Minneapolis.

Harry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants National, St. Paul, was elected director in the National Association of Credit Men, at Cincinnati. While there was keen competition for most offices, Mr. Parker was unanimous choice.

John Q. Mackintosh, vice-president of the Farmers and Merchants of Stillwater, suburb of St. Paul, state treasurer for the progressive party and prominent Mason, has appendicitis. With 2,000 of the best physicians of the country within twenty miles he could find no one to operate just at the psychological moment. The doctors from Stillwater and all over the United States were attending the American Medical Association meeting in Minneapolis. A woman fainted on the campus of the University of Minnesota, where the meetings were held, and no physician could be found at the correct moment.

GRAND RAPIDS BANKER RESIGNS

Frank S. Welton, cashier of the City Trust and Savings of Grand Rapids, Mich., has resigned and the work will be handled by A. H. Babcock and Earl Johnson, assistant cashiers, and E. H. Hunt, vice-president, until a new cashier is elected.

BANK BECOMES OWNER OF CHECKS

A jury in the circuit court at Kokomo, Ind., recently decided in favor of the defense in the suit of the Farmers Bank of Converse against James and Harry Flinn, and the decision carries with it much of interest to the bankers of Indiana. By the terms of the decision, when a bank receives a check on deposit it becomes the owner of the check and alone is responsible for its collection. In this case the check was issued by the late John Johnson, the Logansport financial plunger, whose spectacular career was ended by his suicide. The check, in the sum of $2,000, was cashed by the Converse bank and it was learned after the lapse of nine days, that Johnson had no funds in the bank at Logansport. The important principle decided by the jury is that in accepting the check the Converse bank became its owner and that it was in no sense acting as agent. The verdict absolves the Flinns from all responsibility. The case will be appealed to the supreme court.

BROOKLYN'S BANKING POWER

The banking power of Brooklyn as represented by the combined capitalization, surplus and undivided profits, circulation and deposits of all its commercial banks and its trust companies, shows an increase of approximately $5,000,000 since June 14th of last year. The banking power of the borough as of June 4th last was $362,268,429, which compares with $357,242,714 on June 14, 1912. Compared with April 4, 1913, an increase of nearly $15,000,000 is shown. If to the banking power of the commercial banks and trust companies of the borough is added the total of the deposits and surpluses of the twenty-one savings banks of Brooklyn, a grand total of $663,205,257 is reached this year compared with a grand total of $636,356,132 a year ago, an increase of nearly $27,000,000.

NEW YORK TRUST COMPANY DEPOSITS UP

The statement compiled by the New York Clearing House Association showing the condition of trust companies in the city of New York as of June 4th last gives the aggregate deposits at $1,163,329,800, an increase of $2,557,100 over the previous call of March 7th. Loans show a substantial contraction. Cash holdings are down over $2,000,000.

INSTITUTE MEN LEAD

Of the fifty-one men who passed the recent examination for state bank examiner in the state of New York, twenty-eight are members of the American Institute of Banking and twenty-three of the twenty-eight are New York Chapter men. This is probably the most significant comment that possibly can be made on the efficient training furnished by the Institute, and demonstrates in a concrete and practical manner just the kind of work that is being accomplished by this organization.

NEW BANK FOR NEW YORK

The Ontario State, to be located in the unincorporated village of Ontario, N. Y., has filed its certificate of incorporation. It will begin business January 1, 1914, with $30,000 capital, and the directors for the first year will be James Colwell, Charles C. Young, David P. Craven, William A. Tummonds, Martin F. Mahar, Arthur S. Pratt and Johnson S. Allbright.

NEW INDIANAPOLIS BANK

C. J. Murphy, Joseph Bell and others have filed papers of incorporation of a trust and savings bank with a capital stock of $100,000.

NEW PHILADELPHIA TRUST COMPANY

The newly organized Tioga Trust, Philadelphia, opened for business on June 19th with a capital of $125,000. The institution received over $25,000 of deposits on the opening day. The officers are: Charles W. Reuter, president; Charles E. Beury, vice-president, and Edward C. Snyder, Jr., secretary and treasurer. The board includes, in addition to the president and vice-president, the following directors: William Beury, James M. Snyder, John Y. Gilbert, Cornelius McMillicuddy, John A. Goodwin, Charles Moller, Frank E. Wallace, Robert L. Burns, Frank A. McManus, Charles W. Messner, W. L. Swetland, C. Raymond Rudauff, Michael McKeever, and F. B. Shimer.

BANK MERGER COMPLETED

The passing of the Citizens National of Milford, Ohio, organized in 1906 by W. R. Fee and Hiram Hubbard, took place recently when the transfer of the business was formally made to the Milford National. The merged bank will add two new directors, to be chosen from the stockholders of the Citizens National. It is understood also that A. J. Allen, assistant cashier of the Citizens, will be retained by the new organization. The Milford National will retain its name and have $6,000,000 assets, a surplus of $60,000 and capital of $60,000.

NEW YORK CITY STATE BANKS

The statements of the condition of the state banks in the city of New York as of June 4th last to the superintendent of banks show an increase in total deposits of $12,102,300, and in cash holdings of $5,373,400, as compared with the last previous call of March 7th. Loans were not materially changed. Net profits decreased $385,200.

RESIGNS BANK POSITION

R. O. Fitch, for twenty years with the Clark County National, Winchester, Ky., has resigned, his resignation to take effect on July 1st. He is one of the best known bankers in the state. Mr. Fitch started with the Clark County National as bookkeeper and has been promoted to the positions of teller and assistant cashier. He probably will enter the insurance field.

PURCHASES BANK'S BUSINESS

Citizens Savings Trust Company of Kansas City, Mo., has purchased the business of the Corn Belt Bank, and will occupy the same quarters at 1019 Grand Avenue. The capital stock of the trust company is $100,000. Arthur C. Cowan is the president.

ASK CHARTER FOR TRUST COMPANY

An application has been filed with the bank commissioner of Kansas for papers permitting the Lawrence Trust Company formally to complete its organization and begin business in that city. The capital stock of the proposed company is $100,000.

BANK EARNINGS

Earnings of the First National Bank in the first half of this year are estimated at about $1,050,000 and those of the First Trust & Savings at about $650,000.

SEDALIA BANKER ELECTED CASHIER

E. H. Harris, Jr., cashier of the Pilot Grove Bank at Sedalia, Mo., has been elected cashier of the Third National of that city.

The Waterloo banks have voted to close at noon Saturday during the summer months. A well known business man at Waterloo forgot the agreement one day not long ago. Accordingly he was forced to make a hurry up trip to Cedar Falls where he secured $2,000 for use in transacting the business of the afternoon.

Des Moines, July 3d—It is anticipated that a good big delegation of Iowa bankers will attend the American Bankers Association convention at Boston this fall. Efforts will be made to get two or three special cars out of Des Moines and it is not impossible that an entire train will convey the Iowa financiers eastward. Several Des Moines bankers have made reservation in Boston hotels. They include Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National and the probable next president of the A. B. A.; Percy W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association; Homer A. Miller, Iowa National; John Hogan, German Savings; Leo Stevens, Century Savings; R. A. Crawford, Valley National; George E. Pearsall, Citizens National.

Arthur Reynolds Returns.

Much interest surrounded the return to Iowa of Arthur Reynolds, following his recent attendance at the meeting of the currency commission. Mr. Reynolds opines that the bankers of the country will not take kindly to the proposed currency measure, although stating that it is possible that modifications will be made which will do away with the objectionable features. Iowa bankers as a whole look at the question the same as does Mr. Reynolds.

Dispose of School Bonds

Although the money market is tight, the Des Moines school board finally succeeded in disposing of its bonds worth $276,500 at 5 per cent to the Merchants Loan & Trust of Chicago. John Hogan, school treasurer, had endeavored in vain to sell the bonds at 4 per cent and the board voted to raise the rate, whereupon the sale was effected.

Must Refund Tax.

The Des Moines city treasury is feeling the effects of the supreme court decision which compels the refund of the tax collected on United States bonds held by three Des Moines national banks. The Citizens National, Valley National and Des Moines National are the successful institutions. The amount of money refunded is $53,000. Of this amount the city must pay back $30,000, the school district $13,000 and the county $10,000. The loss in city revenue probably will end the plan of the commercial organizations to secure a lower tax levy in Des Moines because of an increased valuation on taxable property.

"Humorous" Swindle.

Once in a while there is a touch of humor connected with a bank swindle and such proved to be the case in an instance reported from Casey to Secretary P. W. Hall at the headquarters of the I. B. A. It seems that a man giving the name of P. W. Hughes worked a check for $15 on the Citizens Savings. The check was signed by the name of H. W. "Hundredmark," supposed to live at Mansfield, O. The bank ascertained that such a man as "Hundredmark" did not exist but the discov-

Des Moines Visitors.

Many Iowa bankers have been seen in Des Moines recently. Here are some of them who have dropped in to call upon Des Moines bankers: Cashier Jas. Bruce, State Savings, Rolfe; Cashier L. H. Busselle, Lucas County National, Chariton; Cashier C. A. Twyford, Osceola National; Cashier L. J. Clave, Farmers Savings, Ottosen; President Elias Mills, Bank of Lacona; Cashier E. H. Bickford; Adair County Bank, Greenfield; Cashier E. Grismer, First National, Winterset; Cashier John Carmody, Peoples Savings, Perry; Cashier J. H. Van Scoy, First National, Rippey; Cashier C. E. Lofland, Oskaloosa National; President F. M. Hopkins, Peoples State, Guthrie Center; President E. H. Austin, Commercial Savings, Tama; President J. A. Brown, State Savings, Chariton; Cashier B. T. Heiney, Citizens National, Pleasantville; President D. M. Anderson, Peoples National, Albia; President A. L. Ackerly, National Bank of Leon; Cashier E. R. Jordan, Guaranty Bank of Knoxville; Cashier C. E. Brenton, Bank of Dallas Center; Cashier H. F. Lanphere, Citizens National, Grinnell; President M. M. Reynolds, Guthrie National, Guthrie Center; Cashier F. L. Johnson, Bank of Bondurant; Cashier C. C. Cook, Booneville Savings; Cashier H. G. Little, First National of Prairie City; Cashier S. L. Beale, Shannon City Savings; Cashier W. A. Tris, St. Charles Savings; Cashier E. A. Fawcett, First National, Nevada.

School Children Thrifty

The report of the Penny Provident Association of Des Moines was completed a few days ago at the conclusion of the school term. The report shows that over $100,000 in pennies has been saved by the youngsters of Des Moines since 1901. Since the association was established the youngsters have withdrawn $66,137. The total number of depositors has been 6,701. The total number of accounts carried in the Citizens National, the official depository, is 2,296 and the average amount per capita is $14.70.

Court Dismisses Slander Case.

Judge McPherson knocked out the case started in the federal court at Des Moines by Elbert Reed, E. H. Mitchell and Earl Sheets of Shenandoah against F. T. Neff, banker of Marseilles, Ill., and Lester Strawn, assistant attorney-general of Illinois. The plaintiffs asked $150,000 slander. The suit grew out of the indictment of the three plaintiffs for conspiracy. They were acquitted and started action against Neff and Strawn, who were instrumental in the securing of the indictment. The court held that the damage suit was not properly started under federal court rules.

Iowa Notes.

Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state for the Hospers Savings at Hospers and the Citizens Savings at Wyoming. The former will have capital stock of $15,000. The latter will have a capitalization of $50,000.

The J. C. Voorhive bank building at Anita is well underway and gives promise of being a splendid addition to the town.

Frank B. Miller, cashier of the Cedar Falls National, has been granted a year's leave of absence to settle the estate of the late A. F. Call of Sioux City, his brother-in-law, who was killed in Los Angeles. Mr. Miller has removed with his family to California. F. O. Jackson of Cedar Falls succeeds him as cashier. Mr. Jackson is a good man.

The Davenport Savings has decided to pay dividends quarterly instead of semiannually after July 1st. A three per cent quarterly dividend upon $300,000 was paid July 1st and will be paid each quarter hereafter.

The German State at Dyersville is now in its new quarters, and the new structure is declared to be a beautiful building, modern in every way. It is claimed that its equal cannot be found in any city in the state of less than 10,000 population.

Cashier Charles Shaw of Wall Lake Savings is laughing at the coarse work of a couple of young fellows who walked into his bank the other day and asked him if anyone had telephoned some money to them. The cashier, laughing in his sleeve, calmly informed the young man that the telephone game did not "go" with him and advised them to have the money sent by telegraph. Needless to say, the telegram never arrived.

The George M. Bechtel Building at Davenport is going to have a cement overcoat, the first of its kind in the business district of Davenport. The idea is new for banking houses and Davenport asserts that the interior is in strict accord with the exterior. In fact, one Davenport paper asserts that the interior is "without doubt" the finest of any banking house in Iowa.

The directors of the German Savings at Davenport declared a four per cent quarterly dividend upon its $600,000 capital stock on July 1st.

The Cedar Rapids Clearing House Association has passed a resolution whereby the banks belonging to it will close at 12:30 noon each Saturday for the remainder of the summer.

Hervie D. Lockwood, assistant cashier of the bank at Central City, slipped out of town the other day and annexed a bride in the person of Miss Cora Pauline Bird of Mt. Carroll, Ill.

Alvin Booth, paying teller of the Iowa State Savings at Sioux City, has been dangerously ill with an abscess at the seat of the brain and at this writing it is thought he cannot live.

The First National at Garden Grove has notified the comptroller of the currency of its voluntary liquidation.

The State Bank of Sewal has succeeded the Bank of Sewal. It has a capital stock of $30,000. Henry Whitely is president; Fred Laughman, vice-president; H. J. Davis cashier.

The Weston Savings has been organized with a capitalization of $10,000. W. J. Deater is president; Charles R. Hough, vice-president.

Bankers generally sympathize with George W. Marquardt, pioneer Des Moines banker, in the loss of his wife. Mrs. Marquardt was 78 years of age and a resident of Des Moines since 1886. Mr. Marquardt founded the bank formerly known as the Marquardt Savings Bank, but now the Commercial Savings, a well known and prosperous Des Moines financial institution.

Edwin R. Mauss of the Citizens National at Spencer was married last week to Miss Bessie Cronk of Logan. It was one of the leading society events of the season at Logan.

The Merchants National of Cedar Rapids has been made reserve agent for the First National of Floyd. The Hanover National of New York has been made reserve agent for the Ames National of Ames.

W. C. Brown, state treasurer of Iowa, has returned from Excelsior Springs, Mo., where he went because of failing health. He is much improved.

Representative Woods of the Tenth Iowa district is not very strong for the currency legislation which is being sought of congress, because, he says, it will throw the banking business into politics.

The school board at Shenandoah has called an election for June 19th to vote on the question of issuing bonds for $80,000 for a new school building.

G. W. Marquardt, well known pioneer banker, lost his case against H. G. Sedgwick, an Indianola inventor whom he was suing for alleged misrepresentation in the sale of stock.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Morton are the parents of a handsome baby daughter. Mr. Morton is assistant cashier of the Century Savings of Des Moines.

South Dakota Notes.

The First International State is the name of the new bank at Rosholt, which has a capital stock of $20,000.

A. J. Aisenbrey is assistant cashier of the Bank of Alpena.

The new Peoples State has been organized at Sisseton. A. K. Kolsett is president and D. P. Andrisen is cashier.

N. Noble of Centerville has purchased an interest in the Citizens National at Woonsocket and will be actively identified with its management.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Articles of incorporation have been filed for the new State Savings and Trust Company with a capital stock of $1,000,000.

Resources Over Two Million Dollars

NEW BANK BUILDING FOR EDWARDSVILLE

The Bank of Edwardsville, Ill., has begun the erection of a new building to cost in the neighborhood of $60,000. It will be built of reinforced concrete faced with terra cotta and brick on two street fronts and of brick on the other sides. The Bank of Edwardsville was established in 1868 by Edward M. West and William R. Prickett as a private bank. It subsequently was incorporated under the state banking act. Capital stock is $150,000 and surplus amounts to $50,000. The bank has a line of deposits of nearly a million.

BANKERS PLAY BALL

The outing of the bankers of Moline, Rock Island and Davenport recently was attended by about 150. A ball game between the bankers was a feature. Davenport bank presidents, cashiers and directors won over the combined forces of Rock Island and Moline. Short bats and a big indoor baseball were used. The final score was 1 to 0. A. F. Dawson pitched for Davenport.

RULES AGAINST SMALL SUBURB BANKS

The attorney-general has rendered an opinion to the treasury department holding that it is not lawful under the National Bank act to consider suburbs as separate places from the cities within whose corporate boundaries they lie, and that if a city has population of more than 50,000 people the minimum capital for its national banks, whether in the city or in the suburbs, must be $200,000.

OHIO BANK CLOSED

State Superintendent Emory Lattanner of the department of banks and banking, Ohio, has closed the Osborn Bank at Osborn. It is the first financial institution under the department to be closed by the new superintendent and the fifteenth of the department. The Osborn Bank has been under the care of the state banking officials for some time and it was at first thought that it could be pulled through. Bad loans are attributed as the cause of the suspension. The bank had a paid-in capital of $30,000 and approximately $145,000 in deposits. J. H. Barkman was president of the bank and C. C. Jackson, cashier. J. A. Holmes, examiner of the department, has been placed in charge of the bank's affairs.

THIRD NATIONAL, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Third National of Buffalo, N. Y., has compiled a table showing the increase in bank clearings in that city for the months of this year as compared with the corresponding period of 1912. Up to May 29th, inclusive, Buffalo clearings amounted to $48,100,689, an increase of $6,072, 274 over the same time last year. The bank is capitalized at half a million and has surplus and profits of half that amount and deposits are more than four millions. The officers are as follows: John W. Robinson, president; W. F. Hopkins and H. H. Baker, vice-presidents; G. A. Drummer, cashier; and C. J. Ritter and Benjamin C. Ralph, assistant cashiers.

WASHINGTON PARK EXTRA DIVIDEND.

Washington Park National of Chicago declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent and an extra dividend of 3 per cent payable July 1st.

Boston, Mass.—Articles of incorporation have been filed for a new bank under the title of the Grove Hall Trust Company with a capital stock of $200,000.

With a single exception, the assets of the defunct State Bank of Commerce, at Wallace, Ida. (the O'Neil Bank), were sold at public auction for the original estimated amounts, by Receiver L. C. Wilson. The exception was a note which had been listed by the receiver at $1 and was bid up to $100, netting just $99 more than the original estimate, or a grand total of $37,263.69. Little attention was attracted by the sale, and with the one exception, no bids were offered in opposition to those agreed to and bid to-day by Harry L. Day. Mr. Day is the purchaser of all the assets, subject to the confirmation of the court. Judge Woods will hold a session of the court in chambers on July 7th, at which time the petition of the receiver for the confirmation of the sale will be heard, and, it is expected, an order signed directing the proper conveyances to Mr. Day. The amount bid is to be paid to the receiver on confirmation of the sale. This amount together with the cash now in the hands of the receiver will make a total of approximately $45,000 to be applied to the immediate payment of a balance of attorney's fees, costs of administration, and a dividend to the depositors. Mr. Wilson has received a telegram from Breed Abbot Morgan, his New York attorney, that the court of appeals had affirmed the judgement of the lower court obtained by him against the Carnegie Trust Company for $17,934.54 and this claim will be paid practically in full. It is included in the assets purchased by Mr. Day.

A notable success in dairy farming, recently reported, is that of James C. Graham, a farmer near Palouse. In the spring of 1910 Mr. Graham bought 160 acres of ground, 90 acres of which was under cultivation. After settling for the farm, Mr. Graham had a capital of $300. Borrowing $300 more he started the search for stock. At the end of the first year, though handicapped by lack of adequate capital, he had a herd of 32 cows, and had built a necessary addition to the barn. After three years, inventory of the stock, equipment and improvements show a net profit to the business of over $13,000, which has accrued to the owner over and above living expenses. Strict attention was given to the improvement of the herd, which now numbers 60 head. Two years ago the best cow gave a yield of 56 pounds, whereas now the best cow yields 80 pounds of milk. This success has been accomplished through careful breeding up to a high standard, and by strict attention to crops and pasturage.

H. C. Sampson, secretary of the North Pacific Fruit Distributors Association, recently attended a meeting of the orchardists at Moscow, Ida., and reports that the growers of the Lewiston-Clarkston district are preparing in an enthusiastic and capable way, to co-operate with his organization. Garfield has been selected as the headquarters of the agency, and the following named as temporary trustees: Frank Schlaegel, Pullman; F. H. Michaelson, Garfield; F. N. English, Colfax; N. B. Parkman, Oakesdale, and R. W. Safford, Moscow. "Garfield was selected because it is the center of the largest apple growing territory in the district," said Mr. Sampson. "It is estimated that Latah and Whitman counties will ship from 800 to 1,000 cars of fruit this fall, most of which will be apples."

Four South Dakota bankers with their wives, who have been touring the Pacific Coast, were visitors in Spokane during the "Pow Wow." They are S. E. Morris of the Western National of Mitchell, S. D., and interested in a line of South Dakota banks; F. S. Brown, cashier of the Doland State of Doland, S. D.; A. M. Moore, cashier of the Merchants State of Faulkton, S. D., and W. M. McDonald, president of the Western State of Mount Vernon, S. D.

VIRGINIA OFFICERS

The new officers of the Virginia Bankers Association are as follows:

President, J. M. Hart, of Blackstone; vice-president, C. T. Tiffany, of Warrenton; secretary, Walker Scott, of Farmville; treasurer, Julian Hill, of Richmond. The only contests were those of election to the executive council and for treasurer. Fred D. Maphis, of Strasburg, opposed Mr. Hill.

The Executive Council

The executive council was elected as follows: C. T. Burke, Alexandria; S. L. Barrow, Blackstone; J. W. Bell, Abingdon; O. J. Sands, Richmond; J. J. Scott, Bedford City; W. B. Vest, Newport News; R. E. Jordon, South Boston; H. W. Jackson, Richmond; T. B. Berry, Harrisburg; G. R. Radcliffe, Warrenton.

Midland, Pa.—Charter has been granted for the organization of a new bank being formed under the title of the Midland Savings and Trust Company. Among the incorporators are the following: Herbert Depuy, chairman of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Crucible Steel Company of America; J. W. Dougherty, president; Geo. A. Turville, treasurer; C. H. Ramsey, Gilbert M. Black, Reuben Michener, T. Hart Given and Forest G. Moorhead.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Kansas City Terminal Trust Company reports Albert A. LeRoy vice-president.

RAIN IN NORTH DAKOTA

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis, had gone out to Grand Forks, N. D., to attend the bankers' convention.

He arrived late. When he started out of the hotel it was raining hard. He had neither raincoat nor umbrella. Still the rain came down and the convention hall was three blocks away. He tried to borrow an umbrella or raincoat, but could not. It was pouring.

"Come all the way from Minneapolis?" asked a Grand Forks man who took refuge on the porch with him.

"All the way," responded the Minneapolis banker.

"Come to go to the convention down the street?"

"That's right."

"And now when you're only three blocks away you're tied up by rain?"

"Right again."

"Ain't you sore?"

"Never happier in my life," responded Mr. Chapman.

"Well, I should say you're a pretty good-natured fellow."

"On the contrary, I am naturally mean by nature," responded the banker. "But they don't particularly need me down at that convention and I don't really have to listen to the proceedings there. But this country does need rain and it's raining now to beat the band and every time a raindrop hits the ground I am that much happier. I am getting more fun watching this magnificent rainfall than by listening to the finest oration to be sprung in that convention. And if this rain will keep on falling for a while I will guarantee to stay here and watch it until it gets tired."

A. P. Bigelow at Utah Convention

President of the association in his annual address comes out strongly for advanced agriculture and says it is incumbent upon the bankers to assist in bringing this about Four years ago the bankers of Salt Lake issued a call to the bankers of the state to meet with them with a view to organizing an association. The time appeared to be ripe, for the suggestions met with an enthusiastic response. The Utah Bankers Association was the result. That meeting was presided over by Utah's leading banker, W. S. McCornick. Since that time L. S. Hills and his vice-president, A. R. Heywood, W. S. McCornick and M. H. Walker have ably led the association. In the brief time thus covered the custom of bankers meeting together in convention to discuss the important problems which concern themselves and their clients has seen a most wonderful development throughout the country.

Many of the larger states have been divided geographically into sections, and each group of bankers holds its own convention, as well as participating in the general convention of the state association each year.

The social side of these meetings is very important, bringing together the bankers of the state, promoting a more friendly feeling, and forming acquaintances that cannot but be beneficial to all concerned. Competitors meet who are, perhaps, in the habit of regarding each other in an unfriendly light—they lay aside the harsher feelings they have harbored, and after the personal contact are unable longer to feel any rancor, and their relations are sure to be more pleasant thereafter. A man who sticks too closely to his business is sure to become narrow, and lacks the generosity and larger view that brushing against his fellows gives.

Here in Utah we all have, as an important class of our customers, the farmers and the stockmen. The bankers throughout the country are just beginning to become interested in the problems of the farmer and to recognize the fact that agriculture is the basis of all wealth and that stockraising is its most profitable feature. Statistics show that there has been a great movement from farm to city, but we now have reason to hope that this exodus will be stayed by the greater comforts and conveniences in increasing number now being afforded our rural population. Electric lights, telephones, rural delivery, interurban systems, automobiles, good roads—perhaps the humble phonograph plays its part.

Yet the farmer has problems he is not solving, and I believe it is the duty of the banker to assist him in the solution. A banker from one of the Middle States told me recently that at one of their group meetings the governor of the state, in responding to a toast, said: "I am ashamed of you bankers—while there is a committee of 100 bankers on their way to Europe to study the land banks and currency systems of those countries, and congress is in special session to pass a tariff law, and our president has announced that he favors the passage of a measure to revise the currency either at the present session or at the beginning of the next, the only thing you can talk about is silos."

Now I take issue with the governor on that point, for the committee of 100 bankers will no production and lowered cost, as all other men, but that he is standing still and the stiller he stands the higher the cost of living. As an evidence of this, from 1899 to 1909 prices of farm cereals increased 47 times the quantity, which only increased 1.7 per cent, although the acreage of improved land had increased 15.4 per cent. Decreasing fertility is thus clearly shown. Our per capita production has decreased 9 bushels, while Europe's continues to advance. Now you may not think this especially interests us here in the West, where so much virgin soil is being brought under cultivation, but already our beet lands show a falling off in yield per acre and a scientific rotation of crops must be adopted, for it is wiser to conserve the soil than to try to bring back its productivity after impoverishment as in the Eastern States.

Here in Utah the Agricultural College is doing a big work for the farmer, but I believe it is every banker's duty so to inform himself of the efficacy of scientific methods that he can recommend them in a convincing way to his customers.

Two years ago our legislative committee, with the aid of some of our influential bankers, had an important influence in the framing of the state banking law passed at that session, bringing in the aid of the legislators, the practical experience of a lifetime and an earnest desire for a law that would safeguard the interests of the people.

There are yet 26 banks in the state who are not members, but several of them have indicated their intention of joining during the coming year. Every bank in the state should be a member, and some of you present are either officers or stockholders in the absent banks. I hope you will assist the membership committee by bringing them in.

The committees, as well as your president, have been rendered able assistance by our efficient secretary, J. E. Shepard. He has worked untiringly and with an unusual enthusiasm; he has perfected a system of keeping the records of the association: he has given prompt and careful attention to every matter referred to him; in fact he has been the busy little thinker who has kept all the rest of us going to keep up with him. It is a happy circumstance that our constitution does not enjoin rotation on the office of secretary.

Personally I wish to thank him and the various committees, as well as individual members of the association, for courteous consideration and willing co-operation wherever I have asked it.

The year's work has been a pleasure to me and I shall always be glad that I have had this opportunity to serve you.

doubt be capable of bringing its report in due time and Heaven only knew what kind of a currency measure would be proposed. It would be time enough to discuss it when it was presented, but the farmers' problems—they affect us vitally and that the bankers know better than any other class, for their relations are most intimate and confidential. Census figures show that the farmer has not increased

Some of the Dangers in the Present Rural Movement

By L. H. Bailey, director New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. Believes country life evolution depends on sending well informed and properly energized young men and women into the open country to live

Every one seems to be conscious of a new attitude toward rural problems and we are talking of a country life movement. Persons naturally endeavor to visualize this movement and to work it out in programs. We are constantly asked for a definition of the country life movement and for advice as to how a person may set himself to work in it.

Any new interest attaches to itself persons and organizations that have ulterior or personal ambitions, and the rising interest in country life is no exception. There are also many organizations or groups that desire a field in which they may operate, and tiring of one field or not finding results to accrue rapidly, they are ready to expound themselves in the country life movement or in any other direction of public interest that promises something of novelty and is likely to give immediate results.

It is to be deplored that there has been some application to the new country life interest of ideas that are employed in rescue work or in the slum work in the cities. While there undoubtedly are certain rural communities in which there is decadence, these are clearly exceptions and they always need special treatment. The work is not an "uplift" and the application of this and similar terms to country life discussions not only prejudices the situation but also indicates a lack of keen appreciation of the problems at issue.

The Several Dangers

Special future dangers that lie in the present situation are the likelihood of overorganization; the application of the method of the untutored social worker who is burning with zeal; the grotesque efforts of those who would go into farming for the purpose of showing the farmer how; the moving out from the cities to the farms of persons who ought never to think of being farmers; the selling of rural properties of little value to unsuspecting and confident purchasers; the inflating of the opportunities in farming by many kinds of shows and attractive advertising; the utilizing of the rural movement to achieve personal notoriety and advancement, and particularly to gain office and political ends; the foisting of many kinds of fantastic and cranky schemes on the public; the diverting of the attention from the homely essentials by overhead schemes; the aggrandizement of institutions that play to the situation for the purpose of securing appropriations and advertisement; the display of beautiful pictures and superficial writing that misrepresent the farming conditions even while they tell the truth; and the starting of many enterprises that are essentially fictitious or at least unnecessary and that will bring confused if not serious results in the end, and which may entail more expense of maintenance than the situation warrants and which may not follow either sound educational ideas or good business administration.

It undoubtedly will be found that those who know the rural condition best will tend to be more and more conservative, and it will seem to an impatient class of very zealous citizens that these men are attempting to hold back the development. It will be known, however, that the sure results will be those that come slowly and as the result of patient study rather than from any rapid, showy or exploiting work. We probably shall find many persons making headway with attractive schemes that have no substantial foundation. There is danger that the situation may get into the hands of those who will agitate it rather than solve it.

Whenever a new interest arouses in any situation, the symptoms and the difficulties of the situation first appear. It is natural that these symptoms should be attacked. Even in our regular agricultural educational work we have been to a large extent attacking the secondary rather than the primary things. It is, of course, essential that we should meet the special difficulties of the farmer, such as the depredations of the injurious insects, the ravages of diseases of animals and plants, and the lessening fertility of the land. All kinds of defense work have gained much prominence; and yet a farmer may be taught all these difficulties and still be very far from success. We are just now beginning to reach the basis of the situation in the new studies of farm management, whereby we are to understand the nature of the organization of a farming business. It probably will be increasingly necessary to defend the farmer against his dangers and his difficulties; but we can never help him best until we place before him an analysis of his farming organization and show him wherein he is weak and wherein he is strong, so that he may reorganize his affairs from the bottom up and apply sound business principles to his occupation. He cannot apply the methods of business organization that are applied in any other occupation whatever. The situation must be worked out of the farming occupation and it must be worked out largely for every farmer independently.

In the varied social and educational rural work, the same process finally must obtain. The present mode of treating symptoms or of "hitting heads" is largely little more than palliative. I do not say that it is not worth doing; but I am sure that other things are more worth doing.

The Direction of Attack

If the above statements are sound, then it follows that the results in the country life movement are not necessarily to be secured by means of organization. The country life movement means nothing less nor more than a new consciousness touching the rural phase of our civilization. The movement is not a new scheme or a new plan.

The country life movement is an effort to secure from society fair attention for agriculture as an industry and for the country folk as a part of society, and to attain for them their proper share of the common good. It is by no means an organized plan of certain things to be accomplished or of legislation to be secured. It is a movement and not an association. We are to accomplish less by means of ready-made plans than by means merely of suggestions.

Unfortunately, most of us are so constituted that we see new public situations only in terms of organization; and we visualize a movement in association names, regalia, passwords, constitutions and by-laws, meetings at stated intervals, and resolutions. In the meantime, however, some patient soul working away, perhaps obscurely, may set going a whole train of ideas that will work out a revolution in men's attitudes toward their situation; and this man may never have belonged to an organization.

Not everything is to come about through organization and particularly not if an organization or a group is so conscious of itself as to have a patronizing spirit, an attitude of superiority, or a very satisfied consciousness that it is engaged in "welfare work."

We are all committed to the organization idea—to the way of doing business by doing it together. The great economic and political results have been secured largely by coalition of persons and of interests. And yet I wish to suggest the great importance of individual and even unrelated action. Because we organize in business and politics, it does not follow that we also must organize collectively all the processes of our daily lives. I fear we have overlooked this fact, and are too much in the habit of thinking that because great results have been secured in the commercial world by incorporation and the like, comparable results are to be secured by similar processes in all lines of endeavor.

Of course, the tendency is naturally toward organization, or at least toward togetherness. The group spirit is strong in human beings. They come together almost unconsciously for mutual welfare, and they also follow leaders; this results in two kinds or types of organization. Much of what we call organization is really only the imitation of a strong personality. We go in droves like sheep. We trail through life as the buffaloes trailed after each other on the western plains. We hunt in packs because there is a master hunter. Organization of this kind, or, in fact, of any kind, means that there is a separate individual around whom the organization crystallized. Most of us run our ideas through well-worn grooves.

Now, the group tends to perpetuate itself and to propagate its ideas. It is likely to become a formal organization; and when the organization becomes very rigid we call it a machine, because we have no other word that so well expresses the regularity of action and the interlocking of parts into a working concern. We ordinarily apply the terminology of machinery to the political organization, but it might be applied just as well to many commercial bodies.

In themselves, organizations are not progressive. Their process is always one of crystallization. The strong individual breaks out of the organization and becomes a progressive, a rebel, or a radical; he attracts a following, finally assembles it, and a new organization is made; and this organization in turn becomes crystallized and finally other uncontrolled souls break out of it and still other groups are formed. For a time the group serves its original purpose; but the usual method of progress is by the breaking away from solidified organization. And yet we have come to look upon "regularity" and group loyalty as one of the high virtues.

We cannot arrive at any great work by means of an organization that is self-satisfied and is concerned primarily in perpetuating itself, or that is out for glory. The test of any organization is that it shall be willing and spend and dissolve itself, if necessary, that it may accomplish a forward result. As with persons, so it is with organizations, he who loses his life shall find it.

We are making the mistake of trying to work out many of our social and economical reforms by means of groups that are self-centered and which, whether they know it or not, are concerned primarily in upholding the name and the insignia of the organization. The only reason for an organization that aims at anything more than entertainment or killing time is that it shall contribute something worth while to the general welfare. As soon as the organizations become too insistent on themselves, by that fact they begin to perish.

The flux from one organization into another, so often seen in political parties, is the rebellion against the concentrated group-spirit as personified in the master or boss of the group.

I am always doubtful of any organization that has very much to say about "the cause." An organization or body may think it is standing for a cause when, as a matter of fact, it is standing for itself, and when the group-spirit may in reality be hurting the very cause that it names in its program. The group-spirit often so far forgets its cause that it is willing to go to any extremes of violence and disorganization in order to maintain itself as a name before the public.

In action, some group associations are essentially clans; or they may be controlled by a gang spirit. In some cases this expresses itself in a group insanity.

The greater the number of organizations and the more widespread the organization sentiment, the greater is the need of individual separate men and women who will think out something clearly and who will stand for a final human result rather than for the name and associations of an order. Perhaps not one of us is really sure whether he is standing for a free result or whether he is dominated by loyalty to the group to which he belongs. Many of us are buried in orders and organizations.

I hope that we may protect the country life interest from overorganization and let the association into groups and societies (which is really very desirable) work itself out of the situation as a natural expression of the situation. We are not to think that the degree of organization that obtains in general business can be taken over into agriculture.

The Real Need

The real need is to discover the exact rural status in detail, to analyze it, and to place the analysis before the people. When people understand, they will act. Any organization founded on the fact and dominated by persons who are interested in the fact rather than in themselves, will have powerful influence in correcting deficiencies. All this means that we must set educational forces at work, and we define education forces to be those that investigate for the discovery of truth and that set the truth before the people. The investigation must be undertaken by those who are trained to investigate just such problems; and it must be made mostly on the spot and not in some foreign country. It must be made by those who really know the situation and are close to the ground, and who appreciate the limitations under which the farmer works and who are not impatient for results. If I could present to any rural community what are its opportunities and advantages and also what are its handicaps in soils, crops, climate, natural resources, markets, schools, libraries, churches and play, I should be sure that substantial results would accrue, even though I did nothing more. In fact, it is only by efforts that will secure for us this knowledge that any great or permanent improvement will be possible.

This Chicago Bank Buys 21 "Built-to-Measure" Burroughs

The 21 machines shown in the above illustration were "built-to-measure" in one order for the First National Bank of Chicago. This bank now owns 72 "built-to-measure" machines—111 Burroughs in all.

Regular machines of the ordinary kind wouldn't fit all the systems in use in this bank. Seven of the machines are 17 columns capacity, designed for handling several sets of figures at once.

The other fourteen machines are 11 columns "double"—equivalent, for tabular work, to 22 columns capacity.

It is estimated that these 21 machines will save their entire cost to the First National in one year—proof that it pays to buy machines that fit the system.

Nearly all large banks and hundreds of those in smaller cities are having machines "built-to-measure" for the special systems in use. Nearly half the several hundred machines ordered by banks last month are being "built-to-measure."

"Burroughs" now means "a machine to fit your Bookkeeping System." If one of the regular machines in our long line of models doesn't fit your particular need, let us suggest a "built-to-measure" machine that will fit and cost but little more, if any.

If there is figure work in your bank which is not, or can't be, handled on a regular machine, let us show you how a special machine can handle it.

Ask for Bank System Bulletin 497 or tell us the special work you want to do.

And herein is the reason why the habitual politician, as such, or why any self-centered man or self-centered institution, cannot really lead and direct the country life movement. No person who has his ear to the ground can do very much to help the situation, from the very fact that his attitude is one of listening rather than of working. He is an opportunist. He is interested in applause or at least in approval. Of course, he may hit upon a great many excellent things and be a mover in much useful legislation; but these results are more likely to be unrelated pieces than to be the outcome of any real understanding of the situation. For the same reason, the attractive schemes of business men and others who attempt to get the attention of the farming folk cannot afford much relief. We must get away from the idea that the farmer is begging for help. He merely wants a fair chance amongst his fellows. He may now have the chance or he may not; but rural conditions, as all other conditions, are capable of betterment.

The larger part of the work to be accomplished, then, must come about merely by the extension of knowledge and by the spread of educational advantages to the people, letting them see the situation in order that they may understand it, and that they may then take such action as may seem to them to be wise. We should be very careful not to project on the rural folk a set of organizations and movements that are devised by persons from the outside, not even from persons who are managing the colleges of agriculture. Even though such movements arise somewhat slowly, nevertheless they will in the end accomplish the best results if they come up out of the rural population itself; and it is surprising how soon suggestions will take root and begin to assume definite form in the discussions of the country people. Because the country people do not quickly organize themselves into formal groups, we have come to feel that they are hopelessly conservative, but in this we are mistaken, for the forward results are likely to come in the rural districts through advanced individual action rather than wholly through collective action.

The farming folk need knowledge and they need guidance. All this can be provided without imposing outside schemes. If the movement is allowed to rest very largely with the farming folk themselves, we shall be protected from fictitious land schemes and from designing persons who desire to make capital for themselves and perhaps for their institutions by taking advantage of a movement that it at present popular. My suggestion is that you do not worry about the farmer, but that you provide him opportunities and that you allow him to arouse himself by understanding his condition and by realizing his part in the scheme of things.

Some Kinds of Organizations

If we are to make these suggestions concrete, it will be necessary to mention organizations by name. In order to apply the discussion, I shall speak of only two organizations; and these are not organizations in the ordinary understanding of the term.

Institutions for Agricultural Education

The colleges of agriculture are organizations within the meaning of this discussion. They are engaged in research, in educational activity, with regular students and with extension work. The extension phase of these institutions is now much in evidence. I am afraid that extension work is not always clearly distinguished from advertising and from exploitation. The widespread extension effort is one of the most hopeful educational applications of the times. It may also be one of the most inefficient, depending on how it is done and particularly on the motive that propels it. It is proper that every public institution that is doing good work at home should extend itself freely to the people, but it is well also to bear in mind that the institution should not begin the extension process until it has something to extend. Extension effort should be the result of work rather than the beginning of work. The people, on their part, should not be too anxious to have extension work issue from any particular institution. What a locality gets in extension work should depend directly on what it wants and what it puts into the work. At this day, extension should meet demands rather than make demands. There is now and then a feeling that a community is entitled to extension service from a state college of agriculture without direct expense to the community, since the people feel that they have paid for the work in their taxes; but, as a matter of fact, a very small amount of extension work can ever come to any given rural community merely on the basis of the taxes paid. Taxation supports the institution and maintains the staff: the institution is there, for such use as the people desire to make of it in an extension way. Of course, the institution always reserves the right to aid backward or disadvantaged localities; but nowadays the larger part of the extension enterprise in communities must come as a result of genuine desire. It is only in this way that the extension work can be made to be of great consequence to the persons in the localities. If the colleges of agriculture, and other rural institutions and agencies, ever come to be dominated by the ambition to aggrandize themselves, or to exploit the people for the sake of appropriations, they will fail of their purpose and be repudiated by the people. Only so long as they have the spirit of service and of substantial disinterested work will they have reason permanently to exist.

The Big Town

The other organization of which I wish to speak is the big country town or the rural village. The town or village is essentially an organization, and it is possessed of a very strong group spirit. It takes things to itself. If it is a rural village or city, it lives largely on the surrounding country. The wealth of the country builds up its trade. This wealth so far as it is not put into private fortune, is likely to be applied to the improvement of the town itself. The farmer may never have thought of this relationship, but nevertheless it has become unconsciously a part of his psychology. When the country village puts in boulevard lights and cement sidewalks he knows that these things are not of him; and while he may have a general pride in them as a part of the development of his region, they are nevertheless likely actually still further to accentuate the social difference between himself and the townsmen.

Of course the big country town must perpetuate itself. It seeks for ways of growth. Like any other organization, it takes advantage of new and popular movements. The town has suddenly become very much interested in country life. It is good business to develop farm bureaus. It is natural that the town should assume an attitude of benevolence toward the farmer.

The farmer has not been the recipient of much attention heretofore on the part of chambers of commerce, business men's associations, and other groups. Suddenly he finds himself much consulted, invited to the banquets, and much talked about. Under such conditions he is easily persuaded and he is off his guard. He allows the organization of business men and others to plan his farm agencies and other betterments for him. Undoubtedly he needs the help and the contact with the town-centered enterprise, but he must not let his work be done for him nor let things slip through his hands.

The trouble is that the rural incorporated village has been interested mostly in the development of the village, and its general ambition is to attract trade and to become a city. But I contend that a village in a rural community should not desire to become a city, or, at all events, that this desire should be wholly incidental. The prevailing spirit of such a settlement organization should be to remain a part of the country that made it and to exist for the entire region, village and country together, rather than for itself alone. Its looks should be outward; it should desire to be a part of American country life rather than of American city life.

The necessity is now upon us to overcome our attitude of benevolent urbanism and to bring together town and country in a genuinely co-operative evolution. We are doing everything we can to develop the industries and the pride of the open country. While we are doing this we should also develop co-ordinately the industries and the pride of the rural town. If we are to extend the benefits of agricultural advancement into the towns, then we must equally extend the benefits of the town far into the agricultural country. We must completely attach the town to its surrounding country and we must put into it the ambition to serve its surrounding country to the utmost rather than to desire to become a city. It is better for the town itself, as well as for the whole region, that it develop local industries than that it put its whole energy into the attracting of unrelated enterprises from the outside.

If these points of view are sound, then it follows that there should be one program for the developing of town and country. Just how such a program may be organized or be worked out it is yet too soon to say. It is probably not desirable that in the present stage we outline a very definite or thoroughly detailed scheme. The thing to do is to begin work, and as we have begun work for the rural country, piece by piece and step by step, and suggestion by suggestion. After a time, the town will begin to make its own program, and then the real progress will be under way.

Much has been said about the necessity of redirecting the rural school so that it will meet the rural conditions. The town school should equally meet town conditions. Note the inadequacy of much of the manual training, for example. The town school should react to the arts and crafts and trade of the town community. The village library should be more than a village library; it should have relations. So should the village church have very real and active relations.

Very definite things can be accomplished for the machinist, and for the blacksmith and the carpenter and the stone mason and the road builder and the decorator and the hotel-keeper, and also possibly for the retired resident of the country town. As soon as the interest of these townspeople is centered in their entire region, they will have a new incentive for development, they will have entirely new plans, and they will reverse their outlook as to the functions of a rural settlement; and the attitude of benevolence will be absorbed in one of co-ordination. We look for the time when there will be just as many plans and suggestions made by the agricultural folk for the advancement of the town as are now made by the town folk for the advancement of the open country.

We must outgrow the notion that we are bound to maintain the country town on its present basis of trade and organization. The opposition to the parcel post proceeded mostly on the assumption that we must not disturb present trade relations, whereby the town is too often an agency for the exploiting of the people or for controlling their trade in the interest of organized or intrenched traders. We need to develop new courses and methods of actions, and to break up the present combinations of intermediaries. The growing co-operative enterprises will in time produce some surprising results.

It is too bad that we are obliged to have corporation lines. If we could obliterate these arbitrary boundaries of the rural villages and small cities, I suspect that we should develop a new philosophy of rural development. Perhaps, in that event, there would be no attitude of tolerance or condescension of the town folk toward the country folk. It is unfortunate that we must have village improvement societies rather than township or county or regional improvement societies; that the business men's associations should be immersed in the big towns; that town church and town school are one thing and that rural church and rural school are another thing. We need a new alignment of agencies and an elimination of arbitrary divisions, if we are to maintain a civilization that is really free.

Civilization was once chiefly rural; lately it has been chiefly urban; in the future it will be a co-operative complex of rural and urban.

So far as the country-life evolution is concerned the nub of the situation is to send well-informed and properly energized young men and women into the open country to live.

PITTSBURGH BANK GOES UNDER

This week the First-Second National of Pittsburgh, the First National of McKeesport, a neighboring city, the American Water Works and Guarantee Company and the banking house of J. S. & W. S. Kuhn of Pittsburgh were forced into the hands of receivers as a result of the failure of the First-Second National to open its doors.

John Skelton Williams, assistant secretary of the treasury, said "The First-Second National Bank of Pittsburgh has been greatly mismanaged. It is very likely the case will be turned over to the department of justice for action. It would appear that the bank managers lacked moral responsibility, and while there were no defalcations, the institution has made reckless loans and shown favoritism."

Secretary McAdoo stated later in the week that his department would take no action looking to criminal prosecutions as a result of the failure until the receiver has made a report of his findings.

Application also was granted this week by Federal Judge C. P. Orr for receiverships for six subsidiary companies of the American Waterworks and Guarantee Company.

Reports made to the comptroller of the currency by the First-Second National indicate that one-third of the $3,400,000 capital stock of the bank has been impaired and that the surplus and profits have been wiped out and it is believed that the losses, judging from figures in the last report submitted to the comptroller, may reach $3,000,000.

KENTUCKY BANK MERGER

First National and Lexington City National of Lexington, Ky., two of the leading financial institutions of that city, have reached an agreement to consolidate their interests under the name of the First and City National Bank of Lexington. The new bank will be the largest and strongest national bank in Kentucky outside of Louisville. It will have capital stock of $800,000, surplus of $450,000 and deposits aggregating $2,250,000. The assets will amount to about four millions. Officers are as follows: Leonard G. Cox, chairman of the board; J. W. Stoll, president; John G. Stoll and J. E. McFarland, vice-presidents; J. W. Porter, cashier; Garland H. Barr, J. W. McMeekin and Frank C. Bell, assistant cashiers.

NEW CALIFORNIA TRUST COMPANY

Articles of incorporation of the Anglo-California Trust, Stockton, Cal., have been filed with the city clerk. The company is organized at $1,500,000 of which $400,000 has been subscribed.

SUE BANK DIRECTORS

Minority stockholders in the Jackson Trust and Savings, which was saved by its directors in 1906 when a "run" was made, have instituted suit asking that the directors of the bank pay back to it $212,316, which it is alleged they voted themselves. This amount, the bill asserts, was advanced by some of the directors of the bank out of their own pockets at the time the "run" was in progress. For it they

President D. C. Armstrong of the Minnesota bankers is president also of the Albert Lea State of that city. He presided this week at the big convention of the state association held in Duluth, which was a huge success from the standpoint of attendance as well as attractive and interesting program numbers.

G. H. Richards pulled off his first convention as secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association in creditable style. He reported a membership of 1,008, which makes the association among the largest in the country. Mr. Richards formerly was assistant treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings of Minneapolis and has been actively connected with A. I. B. work.

obtained securities to which the state bank examiner objected and which are described in the bill as "worthless." When the "run" was over and the position of the bank re-established, the bill recites, the directors voted to reimburse themselves and took back the money they advanced.

NEW YORK BANK OPENS

The Bank of the United States, New York city, opened its doors July 1st with a capital of $200,000. Joseph S. Marcus, founder of the Public Bank of New York and president of that institution for some time, is president; vice-presidents, Wm. F. H. Koelsch, formerly of the Guaranty Trust, and C. L. Marcus; cashier, B. K. Marcus.

DEATH OF OTTAWA BANKER

John F. Nash, aged eighty-nine years and a resident of Ottawa, Ill., for sixty-four years, died Sunday of apoplexy. Mr. Nash was one of Ottawa's oldest and most highly respected citizens and was prominent in the up building of the city and its financial business and educational institutions. He was made assistant cashier of the First National June 1, 1865, and was shortly afterwards advanced to the position of cashier, which he held until July 1, 1901, being then seventy-seven years old.

BANKERS TO HELP FARMERS

A committee of Kansas bankers is engaged in formulating a system of cheaper agricultural credit for the farmers of that state. The plan is to develop the land as much as possible, provision of farm experts, simplification of marketing methods, and furnishing advice in matters of seed selection, soil improvement, crop rotation and the development of cattle raising and dairying.

It is said that in several counties where agricultural societies have been formed and farm experts furnished, effective results have been obtained.

BANK CASHIER RESIGNS

Lewis O. Bordelon, cashier of the Moreauville (La.) branch of the Avoyelles Bank and Trust Company, has tendered his resignation to take effect September 1st. Maurice S. Gauthier has been elected to fill the vacancy.

IT is doubtless true that the Mullhall revelations led to the incorporation at Detroit of the Anguish Manufacturing Company, or, is it only a branch of the main factory at Washington?

IF there was any thought of placing the president on the defensive by a senate investigation into what he had described as "the insidious lobby," such an idea must have been given up before now.

"WE need to get over the idea that commercial paper is inferior security," says the McKeesport (Pa.) News, in commenting on the Owen banking and currency bill. "When such paper is good," it adds, "there is no better security."

DES MOINES is getting some notoriety by having a blind garbage collector. Yet she has nothing on Chicago. The Twenty-second (Red Light) Street Station sends out as many as 300 "blind" policemen every night to supervise her 300 "blind pigs."

C. J. GUTHRIDGE, in charge of the engineering department of the E. Jackson Casse Company, Chicago, has visions of a "Guthridge Nine" to be the equal of the Callahans or the Cubs.

THE third member of the team arrived at the Guthridge home July 5th, at 3 A. M. C. J. is keeping score with "only six to go."

PRESIDENT JAMES G. CANNON of the Fourth National, N. Y., has had printed for free distribution copies of the new Federal Reserve Act with side notes and annotations. It is in a most convenient form for study, comparison, or reference. Write for a copy.

CASHIER J. C. TRICHEL of the Continental Bank and Trust Company at Shreveport is proud of that bank's deposit growth, the total now being $1,417,650.45.

NEBRASKA convention, this year, will be held in Lincoln, the date to be fixed by the Lincoln clearing house.

AFTER a long time discussion the Nebraska executive council has decided that hereafter no wines shall be served at the annual banquet.

WE suggest that Brother Hughes get the distinguished grape-juice advocate at Washington to give his brother Nebraskans the recipe for his famous decoction.

HUGHES notes quite an increase in the custom of bonding bank officers and employees over the whole state. The Nebraska association "has the best form of bond at the lowest premium rate" and "Barkis is willin'."

VIRGINIA was the 26th state to hold its convention this year. There was present from Philadelphia an "insidious lobby" asking for an indorsement of a candidate at Boston for the A. B. A. vice-presidency.

NO objection was heard to the banker-candidate, but the Virginia committee, as in many other states, hesitated to adopt the indorsement method of choosing for the A. B. A. its future officials.

YET in opposition to its own sense of the ethics of the occasion the indorsement was passed because of the constantly reiterated statement that "twenty-nine states already have indorsed Mr. Law."

VIRGINIA accepted the positively repeated statement rather than appear to be prudish or to ask for proof.

SO far as the published records go but twenty-five other states had held conventions, and thus if it had been unanimous there could not have been twenty-nine of them.

FOLLOWING are the states and the dates of conventions held prior to the Virginia meeting:

Vermont, February 21st; Tennessee, April 16th-17th; Louisiana, April 17th-18th; Arkansas, April 23d-24th; Florida, April 24th-25th; New Jersey, May, 2d-3d; Kansas, May 6th-7th; Oklahoma, May 8th-9th; Alabama, May 8th-9th-10th; Nevada, May 9th-10th; Texas, May 13th-14th-15th; California, May 15th-16th-17th; Georgia, May 16th-17th; Missouri, May 20th-21st; Mississippi, May 21st-22d; Iowa, May 27th-28th; Idaho, June 5th-6th-7th; Michigan, June 10th-11th-12th; West Virginia, June 11th-12th; New York, June 12th-13th; Maine, June 14th; Oregon, June 16th-17th; North Dakota, June 17th-18th; New Hampshire, June 10th; and District of Columbia, June 16th.

LET the list be checked and see if Virginia has been imposed upon and thus released of her pledge?

HAVE any other states been misled?

SINCE Virginia there have been seven state conventions and ten have unfilled dates. Four are not listed.

IF political methods appear to have destroyed the initiative of the nominating committee at Boston, it very likely will be disregarded and nominations made from the floor.

THE "Marble Bank Monthly," published by the Union Trust and Savings at Spokane has been reduced to "pocket-size," to be more conveniently distributed.

IT is one of the best of the house organs and keeps uppermost in the minds of its readers the various forms of service provided by the trust company, with "savings" in the foreground.

PRESIDENT HENRY M. CARPENTER of the Monticello (Iowa) State is strong on comparative statements and sticks to it, "up or down." He says:

"FEW people carry the figures of a statement in their minds. For this reason this bank has for many years made comparative statements regardless of whether such comparisons would show an increase or decrease in totals, believing that in the long run it is better both for the bank and the public to be frank in such matters."

CHARLES N. FOWLER of New Jersey has challenged President Wilson to a joint debate on the provisions of the currency bill, but it appears that he got the busy signal.

FOWLER'S denunciations of the Owen bill remind one of what W. J. B. had to say, a few years ago, about "the crime of '73."

FOWLER wants to meet the president "in at least one hundred cities" which would be "some debate" for a busy chief executive.

A VERY prominent Chicagoan had been nominated for mayor and had a fair chance of election.

HE was without political sagacity or experience and anxious, so he said, for a popular issue.

AT an evening party a lady told of getting a dress hopelessly soiled by dust sent up that day in the down-town district by a coal heaver.

SOMEONE suggested that coal should be delivered at night only when the streets are free of all pedestrians. The candidate was impressed, and between then and morning he secured an interview in all the papers.

HE came out boldly for night delivery of coal, night collection of garbage, etc., "when he was mayor" and his managers when they saw the headlines had a fit.

THE women did not vote then but the labor unions did. Even the socialist ran ahead of the candidate with "the issue."

WAY back when George Russel was elected chairman of the big council the other candidate (an Illinoisan) had "pledged" every member's vote, so he said.

RUSSEL won hands down because of the political methods used by his opponent. Yes, and Col. Russel remembered it at Lansing where an attempt to get Boston instructions for a vice-presidential candidate was attempted.

HE told the interesting story and predicted such attempts never had and never would win.

KANSAS and Missouri will have two trains to the Boston convention. One is to leave Kansas City September 30th on account of the low rates prevailing. This train will run out over the Rock Island and will tour about to put in the time.

THE other train will leave St. Louis over the Wabash on October 3d. The first train from western Missouri and Kansas will stop one day in Chicago.

A FAST little automobile ride with lunch at the South Shore Country Club would be a nice order. Both of these trains will beat the Chicago Special by a day.

THE Chicago all-western will pull out Saturday, October 4th, ten minutes behind the Century for a practically non-stop run. It will reach Boston at noon on Sunday. Diagrams ready in a few days.

ALL passably well informed men should know that the labor conditions in West Virginia which are the fundamental cause of the present trouble far antedate the present administration.

THEY existed under McKinley and extended through the Roosevelt and Taft administrations up to the present.

George M. Reynolds Discusses Currency Bill

George M. Reynolds, Chicago's big banker, discussed very ably at Duluth the provisions of the administration currency bill. Prefacing his remarks, he said:

"Recognizing as I do that the need for early currency legislation is imperative, it is with conflicting emotions that I undertake a public discussion of the administration currency bill. While I hope for the earliest possible enactment of a good currency law, still, my great desire in this respect cannot, and I feel should not, stifle my convictions as to the soundness and probable efficiency of the plan covered by the bill which has been introduced.

"I do not want to criticize the legislative measure offered for enactment into a law simply for the sake of opposing the plan embodied in that measure, but, rather, I want to be clearly understood as being willing to waive all petty and technical objections to the plan, in the hope that discussion and analysis of it may result in its modification to the extent that it will conform as nearly as possible to the legitimate and pressing needs of the business of the country, and at the same time be fair to the banks and also assure a just and equitable treatment of the public when the new plan is put into operation. I am well aware that the enactment of legislation is very largely the result of the application of a "give and take" policy, for there are so many in congress whose views must be considered that any bill finally passed must, to some extent, be a compromise bill, and I have long since abandoned the hope of securing such legislation as I, or any other individual, might regard as ideal. Inasmuch as no one individual can possibly know all upon this or any other subject, it is to be presumed that a consensus of opinion of many should represent greater wisdom than the opinion of one. However, to make this literally true, the consensus of opinion of the many must be the result of a broad-gauged and open-minded consideration of the subject, free from all prejudice and preconceived notions, so that their conclusions will reflect equity and justice in all their ramifications.

"As a result of personal interviews with President Wilson and his administration heads who have been charged with the responsibility of preparing a currency bill, I have been impressed it is the earnest desire of all concerned to devise the best plan which it may be possible to enact into a law. Therefore, I believe they will welcome constructive criticism of the bill, for I feel that they, too, will recognize the wisdom of accepting the consensus of opinion of the many rather than to rely upon the knowledge or belief of but a small number. The bill is intended to provide for a system of banking and currency in the United States which, while it will give a greater elasticity in our credit and bank note issues, should also protect our organization of credit and give stability to our business. It is sought to bring this about through a provision for the establishment of twelve federal reserve banks, one each in twelve important commercial cities so geographically located as to be best calculated to serve the needs of all sections of the country."

He then went on and explained the provisions for federal reserve banks, their capitalization, boards of directors, etc., all of which is familiar to those who have studied the bill. It will be recalled that the federal reserve banks are to have nine directors, three of whom are to be selected by the federal reserve board at Washington, one of whom shall be designated by that board as federal reserve agent and who shall have an office in the premises of the federal reserve bank and be chairman of its board of directors. The board thus constituted is to have the right to elect its own officers and manage its own business, subject to such supervision and control of the federal reserve board as has been provided.

"So far as I can see this is satisfactory," said Mr. Reynolds, "except that I think the federal reserve agent, who, it is provided, will represent the government on the board, should not be its chairman, even though, as I understand from the authors of the bill, this is meant to be only an honorary position and it is not intended he should have anything more to do with managing the business than his influence as one director would give to him.

"The provision made for allowing member banks to discount commercial paper is satisfactory also, except that the bill does not limit the amount of rediscount to which any one bank shall be entitled. I think this should be modified to make the limit of rediscounts for any member bank an amount equal to its capital. Otherwise the door will be open for inflation."

The speaker then discussed briefly four sections of the bill which he regards as comprising its most important special features.

"Placed in the order of their importance from the standpoint of principle as well as in their practical effect, should they be adopted, I would group the sections as follows:

"(1) The one providing for the organization of the federal reserve board;

"(2) That relating to the proposed treatment of the national bank United States bond secured notes;

"(3) The note issues;

"(4) The reserves.

"Believing that in the interest of the public welfare the government should exercise a certain supervision or control over the new system, in a regulatory way, the framers of the bill have provided in it for the creation of a federal reserve board of seven members, which will include the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, and the comptroller of the currency, respectively, the four additional to be appointed by the president of the United States.

"Inasmuch as the three first named would be members of the president's official family, receiving their office through appointment by him, it will be seen that the entire federal reserve board would be appointees of the president; and since by the terms of the bill itself not more than one of the directors appointed to serve on that board must be a banker of wide experience, thereby prohibiting the sole owners of the stock from the right of representation, in fact, excluding them from any participation in the deliberations of the board, bankers, business men, and thinking people generally regard this prohibition as most revolutionary in character and calculated to place our whole system of banking under the domination and control of a purely political board.

"Inasmuch as it is made obligatory upon the national banks of the country to become subscribers to the stock of the federal reserve banks (and it will be necessary for the national banks generally to comply with this requirement if the plan becomes successful) they would be compelled to subscribe for $200,000,000 of stock, one-half, or $100,000,000, of which they would have to pay in, and in addition they would, in accordance with the reserve requirements, upon which I will touch later, be compelled by law to carry about $550,000,000 of their reserves with the federal reserve banks, over which the federal reserve board, composed exclusively of the partisans of the particular political party in control, would exercise a dominating or controlling power. Do you not think the people of this country should deliberate upon this fact and carefully weigh the possibilities involved? Instead of offering a system sufficiently attractive within itself to cause the bankers of the country to desire to go into it on its merits, as I claim it should be, we are told we must contribute approximately about $650,000,000 to its success, and, by implication at least, we are told we are not worthy to be represented on the federal reserve board. If the government can rightfully compel the banks to contribute this vast sum for this purpose, would it not follow that it could compel corporations doing an interstate business to invest their funds for some other purpose? and if so, how long do you think there would be any capital invested in enterprises over which this drastic

The Federal Reserve Act

RECOGNIZING that all bankers and business men are interested in currency legislation, we have had the bill now before congress printed in convenient form, with side notes, and will send you a copy on request.

"It is one of the traditions of the Anglo-Saxon race and in accordance with the spirit of true Americanism that capital must be managed by those who supply it, and, furthermore, that the investor must be free to decide whether or not he shall make investments; yet we are confronted with a plan which proposes to compel the banks of the country to turn over to a political committee virtual control of about ten billion dollars of banking power, the result of fifty years of conscientious labor on the part of the officers of 7,500 national banks in the United States. I want to say here and now that I am firmly of the belief the government should have some supervision over the system of banking and currency which shall be established, but it should be purely regulatory and not an initiative, administrative, or controlling character. Since banks are only the 'warehouses' for the money and credit of the country, thereby providing places to which the people may go either to deposit their money for safe keeping or to secure credit to the extent of their needs against the money so left, whatever is provided for in a banking system that will be either beneficial or detrimental must ultimately fall with full force upon the public. Whatever assets a bank owns in excess of the funds invested by its stockholders are offset by an equal amount of liabilities to the public; therefore any condition which seriously disturbs the banking business of the country to the extent of entailing loss or impairing general business must be borne very much more largely by the masses than by the banks; so the question of the failure of this bill to provide representation for the banks on the federal reserve board is one which in the last analysis is of vastly more importance to the people than it is to the bankers themselves.

"The manner of the appointment of the board, together with the fact that three members of the president's cabinet would be members thereof, provides for administrative control as well as government control, and it seems to me inconceivable that the matter could be kept out of politics; I fail to see how it would be possible to keep our banking system from becoming a political issue every presidential election; and since the entire business of the whole country of every kind and character is conducted mainly through the wide use of credit, making control of our banking system mean, in fact, the control of all lines of business, it seems to me the adoption of this plan would be certain to bring disorder and chaos to our business to a much greater extent on the occasion of future presidential elections than has been the case in the past.

"We are told that the power given to the federal reserve board for the control of our banking system is very similar to that given to the interstate commerce commission, but the fact that a railroad has the right of appeal to a court provided for that purpose seems to me to make the cases entirely dissimilar."

Mr. Reynolds told of the announced intention of the administration not to give to the federal reserve board power to control or interfere with the federal reserve banks to the extent that his remarks would imply. He then called attention to some of the powers given to the federal reserve board and said that little more would be necessary to give the board absolute control over the banking business of the country. Mr. Reynolds believes that the powers of the board should be restricted to those which are purely regulatory in character, defining fully just what power is vested in the board.

Speaking of that portion of the bill relating to the national bank notes secured by government bonds, Mr. Reynolds expressed the belief that any plan of currency legislation which is provided for should either employ these bonds upon some basis which will protect the banks from loss, or it should take them up and pay them off, or refund them into bonds which will be worth par in a normal market for securities. He said in part:

"The bill also provides for an issue of federal reserve treasury notes not to exceed $500,000,000, and in addition thereto a sum equal to the difference between the total amount of national bank notes outstanding at the time of the passage of the bill. It also provides that these notes shall purport on their faces to be the obligations of the United States and shall be issued at the discretion of the federal reserve board and solely for the purpose of making advances to federal reserve banks. It provides that they shall be receivable for all taxes, customs, and other public dues, and shall be redeemed in gold, on demand, at the treasury department in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, or at any federal reserve bank. The mode of procedure through which these notes would be put into circulation would be that any federal reserve bank could, upon a vote of its directors, make application to the federal reserve board, through the local federal reserve agent, for such amount of the treasury notes as it might deem best, such application to be accompanied with a tender to the local federal reserve agent of collateral security to protect the notes for which application is made equal in amount to the sum thus applied for, the collateral security thus offered to be notes and bills accepted for rediscount; and if deemed advisable the federal reserve board would be authorized at any time to call upon a federal reserve bank for additional deposits of like security. Whenever any federal reserve bank shall pay out or disburse federal reserve treasury notes it shall segregate in its own vaults, and shall carry to a special account on its books, gold or lawful money equal in amount to 33 1/3 per centum of the treasury notes so paid out by it. The federal reserve board shall have power in its discretion, to require federal reserve banks to maintain on deposit in the treasury of the United States a sum in gold or lawful money equal to 5 per centum of such amount of federal reserve treasury notes as may be issued to them from time to time; but such 5 per centum shall be counted and included as part of the 33 1/3 per centum reserve hereinbefore required.

"In addition to the pledging of commercial paper to the extent of the par value of the amount of notes thus received by any federal reserve bank, such notes when paid out by that bank would become a first and paramount lien on all of its assets. Thus you will see that these notes would be secured, first, by the credit of the government, and, second by a specific deposit by the federal reserve bank of commercial paper equal to the amount of notes received, and, third, when paid out for a federal reserve bank they become a first and paramount lien on all of the assets of that bank. Believing that the bank note issue, as proposed in the bill, is neither sound nor scientific from the standpoint of modern banking, the committee of bankers who called upon the president suggested an entire change in the manner of issue and a somewhat different method of securing these notes. We held that the government should not guarantee nor undertake the responsibility of the redemption of the notes issued, for since they would, even under the plan proposed in the bill, be abundantly secured, it seemed to us entirely unnecessary that they should bear the promise of the government to redeem them in gold; especially so, since under the proposed plan the real burden and responsibility of maintaining the necessary gold reserve against them is placed upon the federal reserve banks. Our reasons for this were based upon the theory that it would be putting an unnecessary responsibility and burden upon the government and one which might cause embarrassment.

"If the notes were the obligation of the federal reserve banks alone, and properly secured, any emergency which could possibly cause a default in the payment of gold would not affect the credit of the government and would leave it free and unhampered to use its influence and prestige to bring about stability, whereas if the promise of the government to redeem these notes in gold should be linked with that of the federal reserve banks and a default should occur neither would be free to assist the other. In case of war with a foreign nation making it necessary for the government to use its credit freely, its guarantee of the payment of these notes in gold would, no doubt, impair its ability to borrow on the most advantageous basis, and it would at the same time, through so materially increasing its obligations, cause more or less apprehension concerning such outstanding notes; and if a condition should be created through which the public would doubt the ability of the government to pay gold against these notes, gold would be hoarded and the notes would depreciate in value. Furthermore than this, the manner in which they must be gotten into circulation is unscientific and would have a tendency for inflation, for any plan which does not force immediate automatic redemption of a bank note, once it has served its purpose, is built upon a wrong premise.

"Much confusion regarding bank notes is created through the fact that many regard them as money. This is a fallacy, for nothing could be further from the truth; they are, in fact, only instruments of credit given such form that the public will know they are secured and are generally accepted as a circulating medium; they perform the same functions as a check, and if they are effective and are outstanding only to the extent of the requirements of business, they, like checks, should be cancelled when paid."

The plan proposed by the bankers' committee which went to Washington was not adopted by the government. Mr. Reynolds said he believes the ideas of the bankers' committee in regard to issuing bank notes are immeasurably better than those embodied in the plan provided in the bill.

The reserve features were next taken up and discussed. "After the plan has become fully operative," said Mr. Reynolds, "the so-called 'country' bank members of the federal reserve bank of any district will be obliged to carry 5 per cent of their 15 per cent reserve in lawful money in their vaults, 5 per cent with the federal reserve bank and the remaining 5 per cent wherever the federal reserve board in its discretion may require.

"Banks in reserve and central reserve cities will be required during a period of thirty-six months to so adjust their reserves that at the end of that period they will be carrying 10 per cent in gold or lawful money in their own vaults and an additional 10 per cent to their credit with the federal reserve banks."

The speaker told of the reserve recommendations made by the committee of bankers who visited Washington, but stated that the suggestions had not been complied with. He said in part:

"I do not see that any provision is made that will allow any of the reserves of reserve city banks to consist of their balances in central reserve cities. I contend this drastic and wholesale shifting of reserves from the natural centers, where the requirements of business have caused them to flow automatically, will disturb business and greatly impair the ability of the public to secure credit accommodations. If none of the balances in reserve city banks are to be counted as reserve it naturally follows that in time these balances will be withdrawn, especially so since the plan is so drawn as to encourage the members to do most of their business with the federal reserve banks. Consequently we are, I think, justified in the belief that in due time this business would practically be forced into the federal reserve banks.

"Framers of the bill claim that the relationship which would exist between the banks of the country and federal reserve banks, combined with the shifting reserves, would enable the public to secure a greater amount of credit than is now extended to it by existing banks, but I am unable to confirm this opinion unless it should contemplate almost unlimited discounting with the federal reserve banks by their members. As a concrete case, take my own bank. Under normal conditions we have balances from our correspondents of over $100,000,000. If none of these balances can be counted as reserves by our correspondents and they are forced to carry them with the federal reserve banks, does it not follow that we may ultimately lose that amount in bank reserve deposits? We usually carry cash means of 40 per cent of our gross deposits, so that a $100,000,000 deposit gives us a loaning power of $60,000,000. To take away from the banks of Chicago the reserves thus carried by its banks for their correspondents, or $200,000,000, would decrease their loaning ability $120,000,000. In like manner, take away from New York City banks $240,000,000 in deposits of this character and you would reduce the loaning power of the banks of that city $180,000,000. Add to this the disturbance of business that would be caused by a similar and proportionate shrinkage in the ability of banks in nearly fifty other reserve cities and in country banks to furnish credit to their customers and you will get some idea of the effect this 'redistribution' of reserves will have upon general business. We are told that this shrinkage in our loaning power is to be offset by the right of member banks to rediscount with the federal reserve bank. Now, if we, in our bank, should carry a continuous line of rediscounts with the federal reserve bank equal to our capital, we would, in the event we should lose our bank balances, still be obliged to reduce our loans forty million dollars.

"In order to continue to extend the same amount of credit to our customers that we do, my bank would be obliged to carry with the federal reserve bank of our district rediscounts in an amount equal to two and one-half times our capital stock. Can you conceive that there is a banker in the country, worthy of the name, who would think of assuming such an enormous responsibility, taking the risk of loss incident to carrying such a large line of loans simply because he could loan more money than he would have, or to assure the success of a system of banking which would give the government the major portion of the profits of such transactions? A system of banking, the success of which would require that banks dealing with the public should carry excessive lines of rediscounts continuously would prevent our having the much needed elasticity in our credits, and would defeat the chief purpose of legislation on this subject."

Mr. Reynolds then submitted figures in support of his arguments. He also added:

"I do not, of course, assume to believe the passage of this bill would take away all of our bank balances, because most bankers carry cash means largely in excess of their legal requirements, and, besides, many of our correspondents may not join the system in which event their balances would remain undisturbed. I cannot, therefore, tell definitely to what extent our deposits would be affected by the adoption of the plan embodied in the bill; no more can the framers of the bill know."

In conclusion, Mr. Reynolds recommended the following changes in the bill as a means of bringing the plan to a much more workable as well as a more equitable basis:

"Provide for representation of banks on the federal reserve board or for the organization of an advisory board composed of one selected by each federal reserve bank, thus bringing into daily contact with the members of the federal reserve board men who would be familiar with the banking business and agricultural conditions in each section of the country, thereby insuring a more intelligent discharge of their duties so far as their actions would affect business in the various sections.

"Modify the section relating to reserves by providing that until the plan has been fully tried out one-third of the reserves that banks in country towns and in reserve cities are required to carry may be carried with reserve correspondents, as is now done under the National Banking Law, leaving the requirement that banks in central reserve cities must carry 20 per cent reserves, one-half of which must be in their vaults and one-half to their credit in the federal reserve bank. This would decentralize reserves in the centers over one-half and would be much less liable to disturb general business than the drastic and revolutionary shifting of reserves now provided for in the bill.

"Later on, say five years after the plan has been in operation, any further shifting of reserves of the bank found to be necessary or desirable could be effected without taking that risk of disturbing business that might follow if the plan proposed is now enforced. I would also recommend a change in the plan for the issuing of notes. While I think it much preferable that the federal reserve bank should issue the notes, yet, knowing, as I do, how determined in their opinion are many who are powerful in the democratic party, that the government should issue the notes, I am willing, in view of the fact the notes are abundantly secured, to yield that point, but even then, the limit of the amount that can be issued should be removed and the tax, instead of being on the notes when issued, should be levied only when the federal reserve bank issuing them should fail to maintain a proper reserve of gold against its liabilities.

"I cannot feel that the administration has a full conception of the ramifications of the power the bill vests in the federal reserve board, and I hope that in their desire to enact the best possible legislation they will clearly see the necessity of modifying the bill in two or three sections with a view of so harmonizing the situation that the banks not only will be willing to enter the system, but that they will do so enthusiastically, and on that co-operative basis so necessary for the success of the plan and the future welfare of our country."

MARSHALL AND ILSLEY BANK, MILWAUKEE

The Marshall and Ilsley Bank of Milwaukee has capital stock of $500,000, surplus and profits of $684,000 and a line of deposits of $11,385,000. GRAHAMS SONS BOND OFFERING

The bond department of Graham & Sons bank is offering $90,000, 6 per cent bonds of the Frances Willard National Temperance Hospital Association at par and interest. Also $175,000 of the Argyle Apartments, at Argyle and Sheridan Road, paying the same rate. President Graham calls attention to "the enviable record of this banking house is responsible in a large degree for the favor in which these securities are held. We have been engaged in the banking and investment business for fifty-six years—since 1857. Not once has any purchaser of bonds of mortgages sold by Graham & Sons been unable to receive every cent of both interest and principal on the days they were due, or been compelled to accept property instead of cash in exchange for any part of their mortgages or bonds."

TROUBLE FOR BETTER FARMING ADVOCATES

Trouble is brewing for the North Dakota bankers and the North Dakota Better Farming Association. Cows imported as strike breakers from all over the country say the bankers have put one over on them and that they were brought to the state under false pretenses. Some sort of cow convention is in sight. One hundred and seventy cows have arrived from Ohio and the cattle from all over the country seem to be interesting themselves in the situation. Nearly 3,000 cows have arrived in 1913 and have assumed a threatening attitude.

The trouble arose from a sentence in a letter addressed by E. J. Weiser, president of the First National of Fargo, N. D., to a Minneapolis banker, reading: "It is fair to suppose we will put in at least as many more cows next year and that most of the 3,000 cows already here will have cute little calves." In some way this came to the cows' ears. Mrs. Holstein, voicing the general complaint of the imported animals, said: "The bankers have sure put one over on us. They promised us each a cute little calf when we got to North Dakota. When we arrived they turned us loose and said: 'Now dig up your own little cute calves.' Here we are without acquaintance in this country and most of us are widows. Oh! it is too much. We have been deceived."

Mr. Wesier's letter was optimistic otherwise. He said: "Corn and alfalfa are perfect, upon which the ultimate prosperity of North Dakota is based. The 170 head of cattle which the association obtained in Ohio are to be distributed among the farmers in the locality. This is one evidence of what we are doing in the way of dairying and stock raising. I figure that through our efforts 3,000 head of high grade cows and heifers have been distributed through North Dakota this summer. It is fair to suppose we will put in at least that many more next year.

"Experiments with alfalfa in every county in North Dakota have been without exception successful."

SWIFT & CO. EARNINGS

Earnings of Swift & Co. are reported to have been for the first three quarters of the fiscal year at the rate of nearly 15 per cent on the $75,000,000 capital stock. Gross sales show some gain over last year. The increase is ascribed to enlarged sales of by-products.

CONDITION OF NATIONAL BANKS

Figures obtained from reports submitted to the comptroller under the last call show a big contraction of loans and individual deposits, but gains in cash on hand as compared with the previous call.

Loans decreased $35,068,246 since April 4th, but increased $189,123,701 since June 14th, 1912. Cash increased $25,546,000 since April 4th and decreased $31,220,254 since a year ago. Deposits showed a loss since April 4th of $15,325,493 and a gain since June 14, 1912, of $128,000,387. The total legal reserve held by the 7,473 national banks on June 4th was $1,492,366,335, an average of 20.95 per cent or $72,775,028 above the requirements of law. The per cent of actual reserve, including amounts deposited with reserve agents which could not be called legal reserves, was 24.02.

The resources of the banks aggregated $11,036,920,000, a decrease since April 4th of $45,055,000 and an increase since a year ago of $175,155,000.

BANKERS REGAINING CONFIDENCE

It is becoming more apparent from week to week that the feeling of uncertainty, and almost distrust, which could be noted among banking and business interests in the latter part of May and early June is gradually disappearing. While it might not be exact to say that optimism is prevailing instead, still it is true that everywhere there is more cheerfulness.—Chicago Tribune

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

General business conditions over the state seem to be good although there has been some slackening of purchases in some of the "dry" counties on account of the short oats crop. In many localities the oats crop, especially the later oats, are improving rapidly, due to frequent rains and a fair crop will be the result in many instances. Corn is doing well and there are prospects for a large corn crop if the remainder of the season is satisfactory with plenty of moisture. Crops in Illinois "pull through" in remarkable shape on account of the great fertility of the soil, yet there can be no denying that early oats and wheat have been shortened enough to make a wide difference in money matters in many counties while pastures, hay and gardens have suffered to the extent of many thousands of dollars. Much depends upon the corn crop which is now looking well.

J. A. Montelius Retires.

J. A. Montelius, a well known banker and business man of Piper City, Ford county, and president of the First National of that city until a few months ago, has withdrawn from all business connections and will live a retired life. Mr. Montelius came to Piper City in 1867 when there were but four houses at the place then called New Brenton. He laid out the town of Piper City and remained until very recently one of the most public-spirited business men of the community. He established himself in the general merchandise business and later engaged in handling grain, farm implements and real estate. He established a private bank in Piper City at an early date and in 1910 this was reorganized into the First National. His sons entered various lines of his business and will continue portions of it but the family have disposed of all their interests in the bank. Mr. Montelius came to Piper City with only $200 but now owns several thousand acres of good farming lands in Ford and Iroquois counties. His history is one of the many cases where young men with ambition and character but little money have made fortunes in the small towns of the state. His career has been a busy one and he retires from active business with the knowledge of having lived a useful and well-spent life. He has served in the Illinois legislature.

Would Boycott Springfield Banks.

As a result of the recent action of the Springfield Commercial Association in declaring in favor of the open shop, the Springfield subdistrict, No. 5, United Mine Workers of America, has drawn up the following resolution:—

"Resolved, that we request our state executive board to withdraw our money from the Springfield banks and all other business with the Springfield Commercial Association and that copies of this resolution be sent to the state executive board, to the building trades council and to the public press."

Rural Social Center Established.

Bankers who are interested in the betterment of rural conditions in their vicinity will read with interest of the new $400,000 social center known as the New Trier Social Center, near Kenilworth, Cook county. The equipment includes a township high school, with all laboratories, manual training and domestic science departments, a complete men's and boys' gymnasium, a complete women's and girls' gymnasium, a large swimming pool, a lunch room seating one thousand people at a time, a fully equipped theater, a library and a ball room, as well as several base ball diamonds and tennis courts out of doors. Chauncey Hyatt, a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, has been appointed director of this social center.

While this may be considered rather an ideal social center yet it suggests what may yet be worked in a more or less elaborate way in many rural communities. That there is an imperative need for better social life in rural communities, especially in sections of the state where tenant conditions prevail, can not be denied, yet the field has as yet been hardly touched. Good roads possibly will help in making more demand for rural social improvement.

Guide to July Investment

THOSE having funds available will find our July List a guide to safe and profitable investment. This circular describes a great variety of thoroughly safeguarded first mortgage serial bonds, netting the investor 5½ to 6%, secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property. These bonds are backed by ample security, as well as ample earning power. We recommend them in the highest of terms to those seeking safe, non-fluctuating investments for income. The soundness of these securities, together with the care with which we safeguard the interests of our clients at all times and under all circumstances, is best shown by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded thirty-one years ago.

having fallen upon it frequently. The Illinois Canning Company, also in Hoopeston, has about the same acreage.

C. H. Oathout, formerly connected with the Illinois state soil survey, has been named county soil expert for Champaign county. His salary will be $3,600 a year.

The banks of Galva are doing some excellent publicity work and are calling attention especially to their savings accounts, upon which they are paying four per cent interest. The Galva State, The Farmers Co-operative State, First National and L. M. Yocum and Company are all doing good advertising and are placing their banking facilities before the public in a telling manner.

Professor David Kinley, director of the courses in commerce in the University of Illinois, has been named vice-president of the institution and in this capacity will stand second to President James. Dr. Kinley is well known to bankers and business men, having spoken and written much upon commercial topics.

R. B. CRANE FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT

R. B. Crane has been promoted from the office of second vice-president to first vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, Toledo, to succeed W. W. Edwards, who died several weeks ago. E. C. Edwards, son of W. W. Edwards, has been elected to succeed Mr. Crane as second vice-president and George L. Mills, heretofore receiving teller, has been promoted to assistant cashier, taking the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of A. H. Peiter to become secretary and treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company. The other officers of the bank are S. D. Carr, president; George W. Walbridge, cashier; W. L. Lamb, assistant cashier. Mr. Crane began his banking career as bookkeeper in the old Holcomb National. He was successively promoted to teller, assistant cashier, cashier, and when the National Bank of Toledo merged with the National Bank of Commerce six years ago, Mr. Crane was elected second vice-president. Mr. Crane has proved a potent factor in building up the business of the National Bank of Commerce until now its deposits have outstripped all other institutions in Toledo.

GROWTH SHOWN BY INDIANA BANKS

The comptroller of the currency has just issued a report on the condition of all the national banks in Indiana. This report shows that in Indianapolis the individual deposits now are $25,110,720.47, an increase of $1,154,221.15 over those of last year. The growth of individual deposits outside of Indianapolis is larger than the increase in the city. In the state of Indiana outside of the capital city, the individual deposits in national banks one year ago were $119,760,439.79 and now are $123,635,112.02, a gain of $3,874,672.23. Loans and discounts have increased from $131,898,876.88 in 1912 to $137,516,545.05 in 1913, while the total resources now are $249,847,639.78, a gain of $4,773,248 over 1912.

BANKERS ORGANIZE COAL COMPANY

Holders of the first mortgage bonds of the Great Lakes Coal Company, Pittsburgh, who recently bought in the property at foreclosure sale, have reorganized the property under the name of the North Penn Coal Company, with $2,750,000 capital and no debts. A board of directors of seven, including President William Price of the Diamond National, J. M. Young, cashier of the First-Second National and A. C. Robinson, first vice-president of the Commonwealth Trust, has been elected. Mr. Price has been elected to the presidency of the company; Gibson D. Packer, vice-president.

and Mr. Robinson, secretary and treasurer. The new company's property includes 22,000 acres of coal lands in Butler and Armstrong counties, on which there are four mines.

PLANS TO ADD TRUST DEPARTMENT

The Peoples State of Winchester, Ky., is planning to add a trust department of which R. O. Fitch, for many years with the Clark County National, will be the head. The new bank will be known as the Peoples State Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Fitch has been succeeded in the Clark County Bank by John C. Hodgkin.

OHIO BANK CLOSED

The Amherst Banking Company at Amherst voluntarily closed its doors on Thursday of last week. The capital is $50,000 and the deposits $300,000. Indications are that the depositors will be paid in full but the loss to the stockholders will be almost complete. Bad loans that had accumulated and could not be collected is given as the cause of the trouble. The officers are, president, Elias Baumhardt; vice-president, H. C. Bechtel; secretary, F. H. Steele; treasurer, E. F. Steele.

TACOMA MERGER

Announcement has been made that the Pacific National and the National Bank of Commerce, Tacoma, Wash., will consolidate as soon as they can work out the details, which it is estimated will take about sixty days. Ralph Stacy is president of the former institution and Chester Thorne of the latter.

Stockholders of the Pacific National include James J. Hill, members of the Weyerhaeuser family, George S. Long, general manager of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Company and heirs of the late Robert McCormick, who was its president.

The consolidated institution will have capital stock of a million. It is said that interests behind the new concern contemplate the establishment of one of the largest trust companies in Washington, which will occupy the present National Bank of Commerce building.

Harrodsburg, Ky.—At a recent meeting of the directors Jas. Isenburg was elected president of the State Bank and Trust Company to succeed the late George W. Robinson.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Now that the Wisconsin State Bankers Association actually has begun work upon a plan for mutual insurance for bank deposits, there is very little prospect that the state guaranty bill, which was introduced early in the present session of the legislature, will be pressed. In fact it probably will be allowed to rest indefinitely pending the outcome of the bankers' mutual company. Although there has been no definite agreement on the subject the general understanding is that the voluntary action of the bankers has been received in good faith by the legislators and will be given a fair trial without hindrance of further legislation toward compulsory guaranty. Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt says that although membership in the mutual company is optional, all the banks in the state will be compelled by public opinion to insure their deposits in the mutual company for the reason, he declares, that no uninsured bank will be able to retain its deposits in the face of the competition of the insured ones. Bankers who have been working in the interest of the bill, enlarging the risks that the mutual bankers organization might assume over those allowed by companies giving other forms of insurance, express their confidence that the mutual company insuring bank deposits will prove a complete protection to Wisconsin depositors and that all the banks in the state will fall into line when the project is launched.

Sees No Need for Rural Credit System

Andrew J. Frame of Waukesha comes to the defense of the banks as opposed to the proposed state farm loan organization with the statement that a farmer may get money as readily in proportion to his security as any business man.

"Banks would not lend as readily on land in upper Wisconsin because the land is not developed and its exact value has not yet been determined," said Mr. Frame. "The improved farm has a certain definite value and a loan can easily be placed on property of stable values. There is little need of a farm credit system in this country. In Russia and Germany the people of a neighborhood live on a co-operative plan. Enclosed in their own little valley they are set off by themselves and much of the enterprise necessarily is conducted on a co-operative scale. Banking is run on a similar scale. Co-operative credit comes easily where conditions are so favorable to its propagation.

"In Wisconsin, on the other hand, a very large proportion of banks are controlled and managed by farmers. In some instances the vast majority of banks in a county are so controlled. They consider lands the best kind of security and make loans with such backing with as much freedom as is consistent with sound banking. These farmers understand the needs of their fellow farmers and respond quickly. When farmers own and operate their own banks there can be little need of a rural credit system. In fact such agitation does not come from the people but is hatched by political reformers who mistake the flourishing conditions of credit institutions abroad as a sign that this and other states are just as badly in need of them."

W. R. Dysart of Ripon sustains the arguments of Mr. Frame, declaring that he has received no complaints of the farmers for more credit. "They are getting money right now for 5 per cent when the ruling rate for most city loans is 6 per cent," said Mr. Dysart. "Surely the farmer cannot complain of any such treatment as this."

Wilford M. Patton was re-elected president of the Northwestern National Fire Insurance Company at the annual meeting this week. Other officers elected are, first vice-president, Alfred F. James; second vice-president, William D. Reed; secretary, Joseph Hueble; directors, J. Ogden Armour, Washington Becker, Robert Camp, Grant Fitch, Howard Greene, Alfred F. James, James G. Jenkins, Frederick Layton, Wilford Patton, Charles Rat, John H. Tweedy, Jr., H. A. J. Upham, W. D. VanDyke, and Fred Vogel, Jr.

European interest rates are higher now than for many years past, says Thomas A. "European business conditions are generally good, but there is a great demand for money," said Mr. Buckner. "The State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt has issued a certificate to the LaCrosse Trust Company. Capital is $50,000. L. C. Colman is president and G. Van Steenwyk, secretary.

The Whitewater Commercial and Savings Bank was chartered this week. The capital is $50,000. D. O. Kinsman is president and Merton R. Fish cashier.

MINOOKA BANK ADDS TO SURPLUS

At a meeting of the directors of the Farmers First National of Minooka, Ill., it was voted to add eight per cent to the surplus of the institution. This makes the capital and surplus $40,000. It was also decided to start a three per cent savings department, which began July 1st. Since its organization in 1908 the Farmers First National has added ten per cent to its surplus each year with the exception of this time when the rate was eight per cent. J. P. Clennon is president; H. P. Dwyer, vice-president, and D. A. Henneberry, cashier.

CAPITAL NATIONAL OF ST. PAUL

Capital National of St. Paul is capitalized at half a million and has a surplus fund of $100,000. The officers are John R. Mitchell, president; Jerome W. Wheeler and William B. Geery, vice-presidents; James L. Mitchell, cashier, and George M. Black and Edward H. Miller, assistant cashiers.

The Garrett (Ind.) State has increased its capital stock to $50,000.

SALT LAKE HAS NEW TRUST COMPANY

Announcement has been made of the organization of the Western Security and Trust Company of Salt Lake City, capitalized at $100,000. Lloyd Sigler is president and the other officers are George A. Snow of Salt Lake, vice-president; Mart Adson of Salt Lake, secretary, and H. D. Prout of Salt Lake, treasurer. The company is the largest and only one of its kind that has ever been incorporated in either the eastern or western states, and has been organized to make a specialty of the scientific colonization of irrigated farm projects throughout the West, not only those projects in which the officers and directors of the company are immediately interested, but other projects, the successful development of which will depend to a great extent on the manner in which they are colonized.

NEW NATIONAL BANKS

During the month of June twelve applications to organize national banks were received by the comptroller of the currency. Of the applications pending ten were approved and none rejected. In the same month fourteen banks with a total capital of $800,000 were authorized to begin business, of which number eight with capital of $200,000 and six with capital of $600,000, had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On June 30, 1913, the total number of national banks organized was 10,415, of which 2,923 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,482 with authorized capital of $1,063,986,175 and circulation outstanding secured by bonds $737,065,050. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $759,157,906, of which $22,092,856 was covered by lawful money.

NEW TEXAS BANKS

The Texas state banking board has acted favorably upon the applications the following banks, all of which accepted the guaranty fund plan of insuring their deposits:

Farmers State of Gunter, Tex.; capital stock, $15,000. C. B. Dorchester, president; James R. Lanius, cashier.

Hebbronville State of Hebbronville; capital stock, $25,000. H. C. Yeager, president; Payne Briscoe, cashier.

Premont State of Premont; capital stock, $10,000. Charles M. Miles, president; L. M. Laughlin, vice-president, and W. C. Smith, cashier.

Farmers State of Chisholm; capital, $15,000. A. H. Edwards, president and J. O. Wallace, cashier.

WILL REMAIN IN DAYTON

W. R. Craven of Dayton, who two months ago was tendered and accepted the presidency of the new United National Bank and United Savings and Trust Company of Cincinnati, has announced that he has concluded to remain in Dayton in his present position as secretary and cashier of the Dayton Savings and Trust. He was to assume his duties with the Cincinnati bank on August 1st.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis last week reported the smallest decrease in bank clearings compared with clearings for the corresponding period a year ago of any city in the United States. The local clearings were $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent lower than last year, while the decrease for the whole country was a little more than $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite active, while the demand for money has been of more than fair proportions. The discount rate for call and time loans was 6 per cent, with little demand for call money. Commercial paper was discounted wholly by brokers and the discount rates were 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

First Broadway Bank Dividend

The Broadway Bank has declared its first semiannual dividend of 4 per cent. The Broadway National was reorganized as a state bank January 1st, and on June 30th had $781,544.52 in deposits, an increase of $199,140.45 over those of June 30, 1912. F. E. Cramer is president and Edward Beisbarth, vice-president and cashier.

Pillman Brothers Lose Bank Suit

A suit between the American National of Macon, Ga., and Pillman Brothers of St. Louis, a commission firm, was decided last Saturday in favor of the bank by the St. Louis court of appeals. The decision is of importance to banking institutions, holding that it is not the duty of a bank to investigate the condition of a shipment of goods before honoring drafts issued by one principal on another. In July, 1909, Pillman Brothers notified the Macon bank to honor drafts of H. T. Montgomery on account of six cars of peaches shipped by the latter concern to the Pillmans. The Pillman firm paid drafts for five of the cars, but refused to pay for the sixth, claiming that the last shipment was not up to standard and that the bank was negligent in not ascertaining the condition of the peaches before honoring drafts. Accordingly the bank brought suit on the last draft for about $316.

Salisbury Banks Merged

The consolidation of the Peoples Bank and the Farmers and Merchants National, both of Salisbury, has been announced. The officers of the Peoples Bank will continue to serve as the officials of the consolidated banks. The Farmers and Merchants National had about $100,000 on deposit and $25,000 capital. This added to the resources of the Peoples makes the combined resources of the two more than $350,000.

Missouri Notes

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Sedalia National it was decided to increase the number of directors from seven to nine, the two new members elected being E. R. Blair and Peter Pehl.

The Bank of Portland recently paid a dividend of twelve per cent.

The directors of the First National, Pierce City, have declared the regular semiannual dividend of 4 per cent.

A charter has been issued to the Citizens Savings Trust Company, Jefferson City, capital stock $100,000, of which one-half has been paid up. The stockholders are Arthur W. Cowan, Charles H. Bartlett and B. N. Deatherage.

E. W. Cook has severed his connection with the Farmers Bank of Lebanon to accept the position of cashier of the new bank to be established there.

The Farmers Bank of Rockville has been organized with a capital stock of $10,000. T. W. Gray, I. N. McBavitt and W. W. Trail are the incorporators.

Asks Injunction Against Directors

Charging that the directors of the Valley Savings of Argenta, Ark., "culpably and intentionally" neglected their duties; that they permitted the business of the bank to be attended to by President W. W. Hurst alone; and that the directors are thus responsible for the failure of the bank, George W. Vaughan, as receiver, has filed a petition in the Pulaski chancery court to restrain each of the directors from disposing of his property pending a settlement, and in addition asked judgment of $75,000 or more from each to reimburse depositors for their losses. The petition sets forth that through the failure of the bank depositors have lost at least $126,000, probably $150,000 or more, and that this loss was due to the negligence of the directors in permitting W. W. Hurst, president and cashier, to obtain full charge of the affairs of the bank.

Texas Bank Examiners Given New Assignments

At the close of the quarterly conference of the Texas state bank commissioners with the state bank examiners the following assignments were made: Houston district, John S. Wightman; Amarillo district, W. L. McFall; Tyler district, Louis Cohn; Sherman district, C. S. Holderness; Waco district, W. F. Gossett; San Antonio district, L. R. Buchanan; Greenville district, J. H. Cheatham; El Paso district, W. H. Leftwich; Calvert district, J. O. Jackson; Austin district, F. A. Jamison; Wichita Falls district, C. E. McCutcheon; Dallas district, Reuben R. Cook; Fort Worth district, L. J. Davis; Brownsville district, C. F. Goodenough; Pittsburg district, Clyde B. Payne. F. A. Jamison, assigned to the Austin district, has been promoted from bank clerk,

Texas Banks Make Fine Showing

The commissioner of insurance and banking of Texas has made public a condensed statement of the condition of the 790 state banks and bank and trust companies in Texas at the close of business on June 4th. An interesting feature of the report is the number of state banks that have increased their capital stock during the two months elapsing since the last call was made, the number being ten banks and five trust companies. During the period from April 4, 1913, to June 4, 1913, the capital of state banks and state bank and trust companies increased a net amount of $1,495,000. This includes three new bank and trust companies with a capital of $325,000 and fifteen new banks with a capital of $280,000. The surplus and undivided profits have increased $688,088.95 and the loans and discounts, $5,557,046.58. Individual deposits have decreased $5,520,756.55. The total reserve on demand deposits is 39.3 per cent.

Bankers Will Aid Farmers

The banks of Texas will extend their cooperation to the members of the Farmers Union this year in the effort to market the coming cotton crop to the farmers' best advantage. President Peter Radford of the Farmers Union sent a circular letter to all the banks in the state asking that they advance money to the farmers on their cotton in order that they might hold their cotton and distribute the sale of it over several months instead of disposing of it all as soon as it is picked. President Radford states that nearly all the banks heard from signify their willingness to let the farmers have money at 6 per cent and several even have offered to assist the union in erecting storehouses for the cotton.

Third Bank For Sealy

The Farmers National of Sealy has received its charter and will be open for business on or about August 1st, as soon as the bank building will be completed. The officers of the new bank are: W. F. Viereck, president; Max Sailer, vice-president, and E. L. Gallia, cashier.

Southwest Notes

The Riverside (Tex.) State opened for business recently with J. M. Broyles, president; H. B. Yelvertin, vice-president, and E. M. McDonald, cashier.

The South Texas State of Galveston has completed its organization. It is capitalized at $100,000 and the officers are: J. P. Alvey, president; E. R. Cheesborough, vice-president; C. G. Sweet, cashier, and J. Carroll Alvey, assistant cashier.

The First National of Galveston has declared a semiannual dividend of five per cent.

The Texas department of banking has approved the following reserve agents: Boatmens Bank of St. Louis for the First State of Denison; Corpus Christi National of Corpus Christi for the Hidalgo County Bank of Mercedes; First National of Fort Worth for the First Guaranty State of Aubrey; Temple State of Temple for the First State of Jarrell; Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas for the Farmers Guaranty State of Midlothian; Citizens National of Cameron for the Citizens State of Ganado; Farmers and Mechanics National of Fort Worth for the Farmers Guaranty State of Midlothian; Waxahachie National of Waxahachie and the Chase National of New York for the Farmers Guaranty State of Midlothian.

LIFE TENURE FOR BOARD OF CONTROL

The chief contention of those who do not like the "Federal Reserve Act" is that it provides for a political board of control rather than a banker board, as in the Aldrich plan. Those friendly to the act as published do not see the political menace so clearly, and certainly not in an offensive sense. The latter point out as examples of what one could expect the high standing of federal appointed judges, and especially so of the supreme court. John Har- sen Rhoades, a leader in Eastern banking opinion, has from the very first "publicly said that any concentrated banking control should be in the hands of presidential appointees. The plan now offered constituting a federal board of control, the members to be appointed by the president, approaches so closely my own views that I venture to suggest certain modifications which may commend it to those who now object."

Mr. Rhoades is one of the best known figures in the New York banking field. He has addressed a personal petition to the president suggesting "that the sovereign control of our financial welfare should rest in and be exercised by the people through the president, rather than as now proposed by the president, through the people. In other words, the president should act merely as an intermediary, thus making the appointee answerable solely to the people. The shorter the term of office, the greater the subserviency to the president, the greater the temptation to serve one's own ends, the less the responsibility upon the shoulders of the president, the less the responsibility upon the shoulders of the appointee."

The proposal of Mr. Rhoades no doubt will appeal to President Wilson, as it comes as the best thought of an able student of banking, and entirely independent of dictation from any source whatsoever. The new federal board will be vastly more important than the Interstate Commerce Commission, and entirely non-political in the sense that a cabinet naturally is political. Mr. Rhoades believes that appointment for life would free the appointee from all political service to the president and from the necessity of bettering his financial position as would be a dominating thought in a short term appointment.

"Then again," writes Mr. Rhoades to President Wilson, "this obvious disinclination to have the banker upon the central board. Granting that he may not be essential, other things being equal, why this discrimination? What would be the just objection to the banker provided he were appointed by the president for life and not elected for limited service, as suggested in the National Monetary Plan? With such amendments it strikes me that much of the opposition would disappear, and we might achieve a happy compromise."

The suggestions of the New York banker no doubt will be backed up by many other bankers if occasion permit. He is nearly enough in accord with the administration ideas to be received as a friend of the court. No doubt the proposed changes would soften the opposition which now is felt so generally in banking circles to the purely governmental board of control.

TREATING OF THE CURRENCY BILL

Bankers will be glad to find that George M. Reynolds devoted his Duluth address entirely to a discussion of the Glass-Owen bill. From the very first this eminent banker's counsel has been sought and freely given to the president and his advisers. Many important modifications have been secured but nothing can be done to prevent an army of national bankers who are republicans from seeing a political bogie in any bill prepared by members of congress who are democrats. That's only human.

At Duluth Mr. Reynolds treated the bill on its merits and frankly criticised objectionable features just as he frankly commended those which appealed to him. It is to be hoped that all readers of THE CHICAGO BANKER will give the time necessary to a study of the Duluth address, which is printed in this issue.

From London comes a cable giving the opinion of Samuel Untermeyer, attorney for the Pujo committee. Mr. Untermeyer has been canvassing the London banks for their opinions and, immediately before cabling, had dined at length with Walter Cunliffe, governor of the Bank of England. Mr. Untermeyer said:

The proposed new currency bill is surprisingly well understood here. It has been carefully studied and digested and is favorably regarded.

The fundamental principle of a government currency, issued and controlled directly by the government, is universally regarded as sound. I had rather expected that the English traditions of banking would create a prejudice against so radical a departure, but I find that the question has been considered on its merits and meets with approval. The sentiment that bureaus of great New York financial interests have tried to create against it is not shared here.

The great investigator says that our other laws should be changed so as to prevent interlocking directories and private supervision of credits. He believes the Owen bill will help to establish the free flow of credit, so much desired by the president. Mr. Untermeyer wants regulation of clearing houses but says the present and urgent need is the passage of the currency bill.

WILL PITTSBURGH TAKE WARNING?

Pittsburgh is about the only financial center of any size which has not adopted the Fenton-Chicago plan of clearing house examinations. Many attempts to install this most efficient of modern safeguards met with opposition or open defeat. Perhaps the Kuhn banks were not ready for the searching scrutiny and, having been eliminated, the clearing house may yet see the wisdom of double supervision of the kind that counts. The long drawn out interlocking system of the Kuhns could not have been possible under the Chicago plan, now in operation in every city of size except Pittsburgh. If the stated causes of the First-Second failure prove to be correct early detection and prevention must have been certain with an efficient clearing house examiner at work.

Everyone is hoping with Secretary McAdoo that the outbreak is simply "sporadic bad banking" and only of local effect. The losses promise to fall chiefly upon shareholders.

LETTER ON NATIONAL RESERVE ACT

The July letter of the National City Bank of Chicago has this to say of the currency legislative situation:

"The greatest question before the country at the moment is that of currency reform. The prospect is that congress will enact a new law before the year is out unless it should be found impossible to bring the contending factions together. Currency reform is needed, but it would be better to drop the agitation altogether than to pass a faulty bill or one which would expose the banking system of the United States to the dangers of political control or rigorous contraction of credit. All the proposals so far made have had to do with providing the facilities of a great central bank without calling the proposed system by that much feared name. In order to get around this difficulty some advocates of reform have proposed systems that have provided cumbersome machinery and a great deal of red tape. It is to be hoped that the advocates of real reform will finally get together and that a bill can be drafted which will command the support of bankers and business men alike. The interests of the banks and the public in this matter are indetical. The banks' dividends on their stock in the proposed Federal Reserve Banks are to be limited to 5 per cent and they are to receive no interest whatever on their deposits. There is, therefore, no possible way by which the proposed currency could be used to the benefit of the banks and the detriment of the public, although some of our politicians hint at such a possibility.

"The time has come to do something if it can be done well and for the best interests of all concerned; but the effort must be intelligent, sound, and comprehensive enough to give the country what is needed, and that, too, along perfectly safe lines."

Bankers From a Farmer's Viewpoint

By CHARLES B. METCALFE, San Angelo, Texas

Ill-natured adverse criticism, fault finding, or controversy rarely brings forth benefit. Frank, candid and friendly discussion does.

To illustrate, suppose I should be so ignorant as to believe and say, that there is a so-called banker who accepts deposits from the poor servant girls, widows and newsboys, which he never intends to repay, but squanders in riotous living and will go bankrupt; and that the belief prevails among us farmers that he is a typical banker. It would be of value to know that such an erroneous idea did exist, so that bankers could meet and remove my false belief, or if by any unlucky chance such a man did belong to the profession, he could be unloaded. The people shy off, you know, from big red automobiles, champagne and red-light lady friends, when bought with the depositors' money.

The conservation of the people's confidence is vital to bankers, for I take it a great proportion of their wealth is accumulated through ability to borrow the people's money, as deposits, without security or payment of interest to them.

Those millions on which you thrive are produced from our fields and flocks, and some foreign money on farm mortgages.

The safest, most profitable and greatest volume of business, comes from that other section of customers, farmers who borrow and pay interest.

As depositors the bankers owe us; as borrowers we owe them. All of our interests are indissolubly mingled, intertwined and mutual. Their progress depends entirely upon us. If poverty envelops us, their deposits and value of collateral both shrink, and the borrowers are too poor to be safe debtors.

When prosperity is with us, their vaults overflow. Men borrow money with which to "plow deep." The bankers sleep well at night without fear that all their depositing creditors will want to collect at one time in the morning. The bankers have money to loan and progress begets more prosperity.

I have no patience with the Shylock style of banker who imagines that poverty and stress, and the pound of flesh off the debtor are profitable to him.

Happily there are few such narrow, mistaken men in Texas. We have no place for them. I emphasize and reiterate these truisms without intent to attract attention, but in order that we shall be in full accord and to point to you what we farmers consider the foundation and basis of the banker's business.

I wish to take up one most important specific practical matter, in which I frankly say the bankers of Texas and the whole country have been unaccountably indifferent, lethargic and delinquent as to their own interests, and especially as to that of us farmers to whom the bankers owe so much.

Six years ago, acting as vice-president of the Southern Cotton Association, I had the honor and pleasure of making a short address to the Texas Bankers Association at Corpus Christi, in which I called attention to the fact that many millions of dollars are lost every year to the growers of cotton, without any resultant benefit to consumers, because of the bankers' negligence in failing to join us to sell cotton in a practical way, and that they should get out among and join with us for their own business profit. At that time there was much less sympathy with our view, which has since spread widely.

However, a committee was appointed at my suggestion, on which my friend Oscar Wells served, to take up the matter, and from which good resulted. But in 1907 the Texas bankers had allowed themselves to become so entangled with Wall Street, that when they got

W. G. Edens Talks Good Roads at Duluth

Chicago banker tells Minnesotans some of the things accomplished in Illinois in the direction of road improvement. Suggests necessary steps in a successful campaign for better highways

The subject of good roads is one in which we all are interested, not only from the standpoint of members of the banking fraternity who have interested themselves in the movement to bring about better road conditions, but also from the viewpoint of citizens who are desirous of seeing order brought out of the present chaotic highway system existing in many communities to-day.

The importance of better highways in Illinois has been appreciated and bankers and other business interests of the state have labored diligently and unceasingly to secure the enactment of legislation providing for relief along that line. I am pleased to report that our efforts in that behalf have not been without success. The Tice good roads bill, the measure supported by the Illinois Highway Improvement Association of which I am president, was passed by both the senate and house of our legislature, and signed by the governor. It provides for a nonpartisan state highway commission of three members to be appointed by the governor and plans for a system of state aid for the building of hard roads by counties. Funds derived from automobile licenses are to be used for the roads and additional appropriations to be made. Each county is to have a county superintendent of highways. A referendum is provided by which each township and road district may vote whether it will continue the present system of three highway commissioners or come under a one-man system. Forty feet is to be the standard width of all highways in the state.

Bills also were passed providing for $300,000 for the next two years for state aid roads from the general fund and $400,000 of the road fund already accumulated from automobile licenses for 1913 and a similar amount for 1914.

Statisticians tell us that it costs $1.80 per ton to haul wheat ten miles in this country and only 10 to 20 cents in Europe. It costs more per bushel to haul wheat the average distance from an American farm to the railroad station than it does to transport it from New York to Liverpool, a distance of 3,100 miles.

The roads of the country are the farmer's transportation facilities. The word "facility" is derived from the Latin "facilitas," meaning easy. Judging, however, from the wretched highways over which some of our farmers are compelled to haul their produce to market, perhaps it is a misnomer to call the roads "facilities," for they certainly are not easy to contend with and there is nothing so aggravating or discouraging as being obliged to travel over roads in poor condition, be it for pleasure or business.

A great deal of time and money have been spent in improving the other methods of transportation, viz.: the waterways and the railroads. The roads of the country are, we might say, the farmer's railroad. It would seem, therefore, that a little of the thought and energy expended in other directions might profitably be used in looking after the needs of the farmer, evolving some highway system which will provide roads which will not render the calling of the farmer so arduous and so disagreeable.

The problem of the American farmer has now reached a serious stage and unless something is done to improve the conditions under which he labors the time soon will come when the farms will be deserted at a more alarming rate than even at the present time and the nation, instead of being able to derive revenue from exporting products raised here, will have all it can do to supply the demands of its own citizens. The matter isn't local in character, but is national in its scope. The federal government is interested and should devote serious consideration to the matter in its efforts to better the condition of the farmer. The government would be well repaid for any money expended in that behalf as an improved system of highways would greatly increase the efficiency of the rural mail service.

things can be accomplished. A body of individuals all working together toward the same end can accomplish far more than can a similar number of individuals working, perhaps toward the same end, but unorganized and each pursuing a different method. The question of road development is one which cannot be gone at in haphazard manner. It is an important matter vitally affecting the future welfare and prosperity of the country and as such merits intelligent study.

With this idea in view a number of organizations have been formed throughout the country having for their purpose the improvement of roads. Much attention has been given to the subject. The benefits to be derived from a system of good roads are so well known that it has not been deemed necessary to call to the attention of the public that part of the subject. The thing to do is to get busy and do something and not go around telling people how nice it will be to have such an improvement.

In this movement for better highways the bankers of the country have taken an active and prominent part. Good roads committees have been appointed by a member of the state associations and these committees have worked in conjunction and co-operated with the various civic and commercial bodies interested along these lines. It has been intimated by a certain misinformed element that the interest of the bankers and others in the good roads question is actuated by selfish motives. I do not believe it is necessary for me to advance any arguments to refute this. The interest of those who are working for better highways is the result merely of a desire to serve the community by making possible a system of roads which will cause our hearts to swell with pride and not make us hang our heads in shame.

If we are to have good roads all classes must help in the endeavor to attain them and the farmer must play no small part in aiding in the accomplishment of such a reform. One hears a great deal nowadays about the indifference and neglect of the government, both state and national, toward problems vitally affecting the interests of the people. We must concede that in the past this has been true to a certain extent, but lately a healthier and more enthusiastic interest has been manifested in these matters, which it is expected will result in the accomplishment of something really worth while. Too much criticism must not be directed toward the government for the attitude which it has assumed in the past. The old adage "God helps them who help themselves" is just as applicable to the road question as to any other question in which relief is required, and not only the farmers but the civic and commercial organizations and all others who will be the beneficiaries of a system of good roads, can, by co-operation and persistent, intelligent effort succeed in greatly improving road conditions. All of these interests have begun to see the light now and are getting busy and doing something instead of sitting around and whining about the wretched roads prevailing and the enormous cost of living. In fact, economic conditions have become so distressing that the people no longer will submit passively but have determined to arrive at the reasons for the unsatisfactory situation and to improve fundamental conditions.

It is pretty generally conceded that, notwithstanding the fact that a state is in rich natural resources, her general welfare and development are sure to be retarded by a poor system of public highways. One of the greatest difficulties experienced nowadays is that roads are constructed and maintained under systems in vogue centuries ago, which are not adequate to cope with the situation presented by modern traffic conditions and which are out of harmony with the advancement of the state in other directions.

In Illinois we found that a great network of 95,000 miles of country wagon roads were left to the haphazard efforts of 4,800 highway commissioners, working independently of each other, poorly paid, largely inexperienced and provided with inadequate funds for carrying on the work of road construction and maintenance.

Another trouble which it has been found necessary to contend with is the appalling waste of money paid by taxpayers for road improvement. In my state we found that of the seven millions expended annually 37½ per cent was being wasted and in some townships a much greater percentage was spent without permanent benefit.

I believe that effective work can be accomplished in the direction of road improvement by a system of state and county co-operation in the construction and maintenance of main highways and bridges and that a non-political

Robert W. Webb was elected vice-president of the Minneapolis Trust Company at a special meeting. Other officers and six new directors were chosen. The directors are W. A. Lancaster, Lancaster, Simpson & Purdy, attorneys; Walter C. Leach, president of the Northwestern Fire & Marine Insurance Company; Francis W. Little, capitalist; W. L. Martin, vice-president of the Soo line; George F. Piper, Piper & Company; F. M. Prince, president of the First National; Dana L. Case, cashier in the East Side State, was elected secretary, and H. O. Hunt, who has been with the trust company five years, was made assistant treasurer.

Mr. Webb, who is now active vice-president, treasurer and trust officer, has been engaged with the company nineteen years. About sixteen years ago he was elected assistant secretary and treasurer and later secretary and treasurer. Elbridge C. Cooke is president, and the other vice-presidents are James S. Dell, O. T. Jaffray, who is vice-president of the First National, and W. G. Northup. Benjamin Webb is assistant secretary and treasurer and A. B. Whitney assistant trust officer. The other eighteen directors of the company are well known business men.

In May the capital stock of the First National was increased from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 and the increase was given to the stockholders of the Minneapolis Trust Company in exchange for their trust company stock, so that the stockholders of the two institutions are identical. The election of Mr. Prince as director in the trust company strengthens the close association of the two institutions.

North Dakota Active for Better Farming

North Dakota leads all states in the Union in the number of men engaged in better farming association work and in the territory covered. Work is being conducted in all or parts of sixteen counties. Nearly one-third of the total area of the state is under the supervision of the field agents of the organization and crops on about 20,000 acres are under the direction of the twenty-four men employed by the association. Last year over $43,000 was spent by the association and this year's appropriation is $75,000. The association pays a part of the expenses in each county for a period of five years. The farmers supply the remainder of the funds and in certain counties operating under the new law the county commissioners provide appropriations. At the end of the five-year period the counties are supposed to have reached the stage where they can take care of themselves and the association devotes its energies to other counties. As soon as the counties are able to raise a sufficient sum to take care of their end of the matter, the association co-operates and secures expert field agents. It is believed that the fund can be increased to $100,000 next year and that twenty-five of the fifty counties in the state can be embraced by the organization.

The Better Farming Association was formed in November, 1911, and incorporated under the laws of the state. Its object is the dissemination of information and instruction in modern, scientific methods as applied to agriculture, the promoting of better soil, including crop rotation and diversification, raising of live stock and poultry and kindred efforts.

Merchants National Secures Quarters.

The Merchants National has taken the old quarters of the former Second National in St. Paul, also the adjoining old Security Trust rooms and the basement underneath in the New York Life building. The change was made to these quarters instead of to the former banking rooms of the Merchants National at Fifth and Jackson streets as intended. It will take eighteen months to build the skyscraper for the new banking house. President D. S. Culver said the bank feels fortunate, as it will be able to serve customers better. The razing of the old bank will begin this month.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Farmers State of Tabor, S. D., with $10,000 capital.

In circuit court at Sturgis, S. D., D. A. McPherson, president of the former Meade County Bank, pleaded guilty to permitting shareholders to become indebted to the bank in excess of 50 per cent of the capital stock, and was fined $500. All other indictments against him were dismissed.

George J. Haas has been elected cashier of the First National of Detroit, Minn., and H. G. Carroll, assistant cashier.

George H. Prince, chairman of the board of the Merchants National, has gone to the Pacific coast for July.

New banks have been authorized in North Dakota as follows: Security State of Banks, McKenzie County, $10,000 capital; incorporators, C. F. Bilbow of Carrington, A. M. Wilfred T. Anderson was found not guilty of murdering Cashier Clarence Funk of the Washburn bank in North Dakota. Funk was shot April 4th. Anderson was in the same bank.

W. D. Willard, cashier of the First National of Mankato, Minn., has been elected chairman of the new state educational commission to which he was recently appointed. The secretary is the only paid commissioner. The commission will survey the public school system of Minnesota with the idea of bringing the various classes of schools into relationship for greater efficiency.

CATTLE FEEDERS AT URBANA

The Cattle Feeders Association of Illinois will meet at the University of Illinois for a state-wide picnic on July 15th. The experiment station has been conducting an extensive beef feeding contest and the result will be shown and discussed.

The address of the day will be delivered by Director Charles E. Thorne of the Ohio Experiment Station, on "The Relation of Cattle Feeding to Soil Fertility." Dr. Thorne tells a wonderfully interesting story based on the history of two farms hewn out of the white oak forest in Ohio almost a hundred years ago. Beginning with two brothers of thrifty German ancestry as the original owners, the virgin soil responded bounteously; large barns and two fine homes, one of stone and one of brick, were erected—elegant monuments to the fertility of that virgin soil. But continuous cropping with little or no use of manures or other fertilizers, reduced the productive capacity to a very low point. This much is the story of thousands of farms throughout the eastern half of the United States. But Dr. Thorne's own story begins when these two farms came into the hands of the Ohio Experiment Station about twenty years ago. Upon them were established different systems of farming; some fields received commercial fertilizers, some manures, and some received a "balanced ration" of manure and various kinds of commercial fertilizers. These experiments stand alone as a source of information on different systems of farming. Dr. Thorne is without doubt the foremost authority in America on the value and use of farm manures. His interpretation of the results of his experiments will be given in his discussion of "The Relation of Cattle Feeding to Soil Fertility." His address will generously repay any farmer for a trip to the University.

The program will begin promptly at 10 A. M. The meeting will be held in the Agricultural Building or on the campus, depending upon the weather. No cattle feeder can afford to miss this meeting.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS FOR POSTAL BANKS

Editor Chicago Banker:—It is my conviction that the following provisions if enacted into law will remedy the most obvious defects in our financial system:

1. That congress designate the United States treasury and postal savings banks as the only depositories for all governmental funds.

2. That congress open the postal banks to checking accounts and remove all limitations as to the maximum of individual deposits therein.

3. That after providing a safe cash reserve the deposits in the postal savings banks and the surplus government funds shall be returned to circulation by redeeming outstanding interest-bearing government bonds and by furnishing money for local or governmental public works.

4. That whenever funds in the hands of the government prove insufficient congress shall authorize the secretary of the treasury to issue United States notes.

Bills containing these provisions are in the hands of Senator J. Hamilton Lewis and Congressman Frank Buchanan. Please urge their introduction and give them your support.

W. K. Cleverley of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been advanced to the position of cashier in the Seaboard National, New York, succeeding C. C. Thompson, who has been chosen a vice-president. B. L. Gill, formerly commissioner of banking of Texas, also was elected a vice-president of the institution.

DEATH OF WASHINGTON BANKER

Richard A. Walker, president of the Lincoln National, Washington, D. C., died on Tuesday of last week.

SECOND WARD SAVINGS, MILWAUKEE

Second Ward Savings of Milwaukee has capital stock of a million, surplus and profits of $416,000 and a line of deposits amounting to $13,419,000. A cut of the new building recently built by the bank appears elsewhere in this issue. The officers are Joseph E. Uihlein, president; Chas. C. Schmidt, A. C. Elser and H. Bielfeld, vice-presidents; W. L. Cheney, cashier; A. O. Paunack and Frank Brand, assistant cashiers.

NEW ILLINOIS BANK

The Farmers State of Atkinson, Ill., opened for business June 17th. L. Verbeckmoes is president; A. W. Allen, vice-president, and Paul R. Walters, cashier.

CHICAGO SAVINGS HAS BOND ISSUE

Manager H. T. Sibley, of the bond department of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Co., is offering a choice issue of Virginia-Western Power Co. bonds on a 6.15 per cent basis. The circular gives full details.

Most leading banks specify the use of Brown's Linen Ledger Paper for their record books, ledgers and loose leaf systems. Never discolors or weakens from age. Its strong texture stands hardest usage and won't tear out of loose leaf systems. Its perfect writing and erasing surface is an aid to neat work.

Brown's Linen Ledger Paper

It is made of pure white rags—not of colored rags as are ordinary ledger papers. That's why Brown's is superior. No strong chemicals in it which weaken the fibre, make the paper grow dingy, turn yellow at the edges and pull away from the book bindings. Made with or without our invisible hinge.

BANK CLEARINGS GAIN

A remarkable gain in bank clearings in Rockford is shown in the monthly report of the Rockford Clearing House Association. The report shows a gain of nearly a million dollars for the month of June over the corresponding month last year. Clearings for the month just past were $4,448,800.

UNION NATIONAL OF EAU CLAIRE

Union National of Eau Claire, Wis., has capital stock of $200,000, surplus of $70,000 and deposits amounting to $1,851,000. The officers are as follows: O. H. Ingram, president; Jas. T. Joyce, vice-president; Marshall Cousins, cashier and M. E. Baumberger, M. B. Syverson and K. Anderson, assistant cashiers. Mr. Joyce is prominent in the affairs of the Wisconsin Bankers Association and was president of that body last year.

Savings Banks Amend Articles

Practically every city savings bank in Iowa is amending its articles so that it may act in a fiduciary capacity as provided in the new law which became effective July 4th. It has been a busy season for the state bank examiners and A. O. Wolever of the state department has asked Attorney-General Cosson to give an opinion as to just what the law contemplates. He says there is a difference among bankers of Iowa as to just what their rights are under the new statute.

Made Assistant Cashier

William E. Rose, the popular young receiving teller at the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines was advanced to assistant cashier of the institution as a twenty-first birthday present when the directors met last week to declare their semiannual 3 per cent dividend. Since his father was killed, Mr. Rose has been under the guardianship of Gilger E. MacKinnon, president of the institution. H. F. Schoen and Mr. Rose are now co-ordinate assistant cashiers.

Optimistic Outlook

The Iowa National of Davenport has issued its second letter on general trade conditions. The bank takes an optimistic view of present business conditions, as will be seen from the following paragraphs:

panic. Men of consequence in the financial world have recently publicly referred to the present situation in Wall Street as a stock market panic. So far as the figures we have been able to bring together on the situation are concerned, we find no evidence of a present or prospective panic, either in business or in the financial world. Business has been falling off, as was expected and as is quite usual at this season. The falling off has been somewhat more sensational because of the tight money market. Business men have been unable to get enough money to finance enlargements or extensions except by paying interest rates which are too high for such purposes. Up to this time there has been sufficient money for the regular needs of current business and interest rates have risen because we have been called upon to export a considerable amount of gold to European countries which needed it worse than we did.

"The average farm prices of all leading crops advanced over 4 per cent during May and on meat animals the increase was 3.7 per cent. Farm prices on meats are 11 per cent higher than a year ago, 28 per cent higher than two years ago and 4 per cent lower than three years ago. Prices of principal grains, cotton, potatoes and hay average 28 per cent below a year ago, 5 per cent below two years ago, 9 per cent below three years ago and 17 per cent below four years ago. The natural trend will be advancing prices on all farm products. The decline of 28 per cent during the last year in grain prices was not justified by supply and demand wholly, being partially influenced by scarcer money.

Blackhawk National Increases Circulation

Forty thousand dollars were added to the amount of money in circulation in Waterloo last week through the Blackhawk National, which received that amount of currency in exchange for $40,000 worth of government bonds. This increased the total of circulation of the notes of the Waterloo banks from $160,000 to $200,000, the latter figure the capital of the Blackhawk National. The adding of this amount to the circulation medium in Waterloo will preclude any stringency in the money market there. No sign of any such stringency has as yet manifested itself, but the bank wished to head off any stringency before it should prevail.

Iowa Notes

The First Savings of Reinbeck has changed hands, the new owners being business men and farmers of that vicinity. The new organization will erect a new bank building on the location of the old bank.

Simon Casady, president of the Central State, Des Moines, has returned from Colorado, where he has been visiting and sight-seeing for two weeks, accompanied by Mrs. Casady.

Jay Hart, assistant cashier in the Iowa National, Des Moines, sought to slip away and get married unbeknownst to his associates. Futile dream! The day before the event Mr. Hart discovered his place in the bank decorated with earts, flowers, baby buggies, old shoes, rice, cradles, etc. But he promptly "fessed up." Miss Anna Canavan of Lena, Ia., was the fortunate young woman.

The Reinbeck State at Reinbeck announces plans for a brick addition and other improvements to cost $2,500.

The closing of the banks of Waterloo at noon on Saturday has resulted in a storm of protest from farmers thereabouts and some of the business houses of the city.

W. C. Creath has been chosen cashier of the State of Cantril.

E. C. Copeland has been elected president of the Bailey State at Correctionville to succeed the late E. A. Hall.

Emory Barrick has succeeded J. N. Myers as cashier of the Farmers Savings at Morrison.

Among out-of-the-city bankers seen in Des Moines recently were noticed Vice-President C. E. Rice of the City Trust and Savings of Boone; Cashier T. M. Kile, Stuart Savings; President F. L. Dobbin, First National, State Center; Cashier J. R. Buckley, State of Prairie City; Cashier R. D. Aitchison, First National, Colfax; President S. S. Dillenbeck, Citizens State at Perry.

However, my general plea there, "that bankers should come from behind their brass bars and get with the people for mutual benefit," must have produced some good results, for the next time I saw Mr. Joseph Hirsh, our genial host at Corpus Christi, he was, and is now, on a committee for the farmers' uplift. He is spending time and money to help educate us to produce more economically and abundantly. Further I understand that Col. Exall, our Texas Apostle for cheaper and greater production, only has to call on Texas bankers to get all the money he needs for his uplift movement. This to us is proof of sincerity. If one belonging to a church, puts up his money on it, that is a near indication he has religion.

I circumscribe my discussion to marketing this one item of our production, for while the same truths apply to all of our other crops, the immediate certain cash profits derived from a single crop of cotton are so immense that when the bankers join with us in this, we will realize enough money from it to augment our capital in their hands, which automatically will enable us jointly to finance all our other needs. In recent years the growers of cotton have sold it for about $50 or less per bale, during the short selling season from September to January. Speculators then profit about fifteen dollars per bale, or thirty-three per cent during the eight months, from January to September, at a rate of nearly fifty per cent per annum. We consider this an exorbitant rate of profit, solely for the use of money invested in cotton, which is the best kind of property. In fairness bankers should be satisfied to loan money to us with good stored and insured cotton for collateral at six per cent per annum, which is an eighth of the average profit taken from us growers by the system of short loans and quick collections in the fall. The arbitrary custom maintained is destructive to us. Surely there is no reason whatever why banks should fail to change this habit by arranging collections to begin in April, so as to give us an opportunity to market our crops gradually, instead of forcing us to dump a billion dollars' worth of cotton on the market during ninety days in the fall. This is the sole reason why we have not been able to conduct our affairs in a business-like way, and keep our cotton until spinners or investors want it at a fair price, which we could then name in reason.

When the laborers who grow cotton in any series of five years receive one dollar per day for their labor, with interest and maintenance funds on their farm investments, it costs not less than 15 cents per pound or $75 per bale to grow cotton. When sold for less as we have been doing, labor receives less than a dollar per day, and there is no return to us for the wear and tear and interest.

The world will consume our average or maximum crops at $75 per bale, provided we keep it until the legitimate investors in cotton, and spinners, are ready to buy or use it.

We have been selling cotton under pressure of debt, short loans and quick collections for $50 or less per bale. The difference on a four million bale crop in Texas alone is a hundred million dollars, or nearly as much as the banking capital of the state.

The bankers of Texas can approximately double their banking capital with foreign money in a year, by their action in standing firmly with us to sell our cotton at a fair price. We grow nearly one-third of the entire crop in Texas, when our bankers show that they will not allow us to sacrifice it. This plain announcement will lead all the other financial interests to follow and adjust themselves to the inevitable. The result will be permanent widespread prosperity, in which we all will participate.

We submit that up to this time the bankers have not done their whole duty to us in this particular, and to that extent have been short of full development as our broad-minded, far-sighted fearless financial agents, who should protect our interests in every way, in whom we have confided and now trust will do so.

Our ideal bankers must rise above the functions of mere money changers, collectors of discount, depositaries and salesmen of exchange. We expect a broad, even patriotic interest in us and the general business affairs of our common country, which will increase our aggregate wealth and thereby keep your coffers full and a great volume of collateral available for your profit.

Sixty per cent of the farmers in Texas are renters who have no realty security to offer. Our lands have passed from our ownership because the bankers have not joined with us, as I have indicated, to see we should receive for our products prices adequate to yield us a living and to pay the exorbitant sums and rates of interest which have been indirectly absorbed from us through credit merchants and vendors of lands.

It is to their profit as well as ours that this sixty per cent of our farmers become solvent owners of available collateral: if they will co-operate with us in the single operation of marketing this one crop, we will bring into the South a billion dollars of foreign gold each short year. That vast sum will solve forever the problem of capital for our use, provided the banks will keep it at home for our convenience and their profit, instead of piling it up in remote cities for their bankers to manipulate for their gain. Much has been said recently about rural credit banks to be organized and financed by the farmers themselves. Doubtless many features of the foreign system would be workable here. It is especially necessary to have a sufficient amount of money or tokens of exchange to reduce the rates of interest. As you have not devised a way to furnish us this, it may be necessary for us to turn bankers and do it ourselves. But if you will stand with us on the price, we will fill the banks with foreign gold.

It also has been suggested we bond our land and borrow money on it abroad. This leads to a permanent peonage and would make us serfs and perpetual tributaries to foreign countries. This we oppose and deprecate. It seems absurd to us, who own the property and values without limit, to say we are unable to furnish ourselves with mediums of exchange without hypothecating our property in Amsterdam, London and Paris, for which we must pay them perpetual tribute.

We farmers have more confidence in bankers and our government than they have in each other. We are even willing to accept and use as mediums of exchange and legal tenders their notes, bills of exchange, checks and even greenbacks, based on our faith in the government, with its power to tax, and them, with their property values behind them.

We long have advocated a system along these lines. We hope to see it accepted yet, in lieu of the cramped, constricted and inadequate system now obtaining.

OLD BANK CASE HEARD

The final report of the trustees of the defunct Imperial Savings of Toledo has been made to the supreme court. It was a part of the suit brought by the attorney-general in the liquidation. In the report Mr. Sheets states that the man who wrecked the bank was sent to prison and died there. A dividend of twenty-five per cent has been paid and another of eight per cent can be paid. Holders of claims against the bank have scattered so that over $800 in dividend checks cannot be delivered. The supreme court will hear objections to the report in October.

OSBORN BANK LOSSES

Upon completion of the investigation of the books of the Osborn (Ohio) State by State Bank Examiner Emory Lattanner and his assistants, it was announced that the loss in the bank would amount to about $80,000 consisting of $34,000 in paper of doubtful value and $70,000 is Osborn concerns. George Knecht of Dayton has been appointed by Governor Cox to assume charge of the defunct bank and close up the accounts outstanding. The first dividend will be paid on October 1st.

The fundamentally prosperous condition of Spokane and the Spokane country was evidenced recently by the statements of local bankers attending the payment of quarterly and semi quarterly dividends by the financial institutions. One bank reported an increase of 10 per cent in savings deposits over the corresponding month a year ago. A substantial increase in deposits and the prospects for a splendid summer and fall business was reported. The condition of the banks is practically the same as it was at the time of the call of the comptroller of the currency on June 4th, when a complete statement was made public.

"Our savings bank deposits are over 10 per cent greater than they were at this time last year," said R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president and general manager of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company. "These savings deposits are showing a daily increase."

The Spokane and Eastern Trust pays a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent on a capital stock of $300,000. In addition it pays an extra dividend at the end of the year.

"The banking business is on a better basis than it has been for some time and it is getting better right along," said W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National. "Prospects now are good."

The Old National pays a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent on a capital stock of $1,000,000. With the payment of the recent dividend the dividends for the first six months of 1913 reach a total of $50,000.

The Washington Trust Company is paying a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent. J. Grier Long, president of the company, announced recently that hereafter, beginning with October, the company will begin the payment of a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent, instead of a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent.

"Our business has shown a considerable increase over the preceeding six months," said Mr. Long. "At the call for statements on June 4th our deposits were the largest in the history of the institution. The same statement applies at this time."

The Spokane Savings and Loan Society, of which F. A. Chase is secretary, has declared its 29th semiannual dividend of 4 per cent, marking the close of a successful half year. This association has resources of $485,000 and is the pioneer institution of its kind in Spokane. Secretary Chase also reports that during the year the growth of the assets has been between 15 and 20 per cent. July 1st the new state loan and building law took effect and hereafter all associations of this character must conduct the business on a uniform basis.

W. E. Hanson of Pullman, Wash., was appointed recently as state bank examiner, succeeding J. L. Mohundro of Seattle. The appointment will date from July 1st. Mr. Hanson is at present cashier and manager of the Farmers State of Pullman.

Henry A. Yeomans, assistant dean of Harvard College, will spend a two months and a half vacation with his brother, Jay A. Yeomans, assistant cashier of the Old National.

Bank clearings for the month ending July 1st totaled $17,325,514, according to figures compiled by the Spokane Clearing House Association. This is a decrease of 3 per cent as compared with the clearings of the corresponding week of last year.

F. L. Willmar, cashier of the Whitman County National of Rosalia, Wash., was a business visitor in the city recently.

EDMONTON NEWS

Holders of policies in companies operating in the province of Alberta are fully secured against losses through default of the concern under the new insurance act which became operative on July 1st, under the direction of Gowan H. Babbit, superintendent of the department, formerly secretary to Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea. The protecting clause provides that foreign companies shall deposit $20,000, while companies with head offices in Alberta are required to deposit $10,000. Two hundred companies operating in Alberta are required to register at the parliament buildings in Edmonton.

The amount of the fees varies according to the nature of the business carried on by the company. Fire and life insurance companies are required to pay a fee of $300 annually, while for hail, accident or guaranty companies a fee of $200 is called for. The fee for mutual and other insurance not specified is $100. The full amount of the fees will not be required paid for the present year, but the amount for the remaining months in proportion with the total annual amount.

A fee of $10 must be sent with the act of incorporation, also power of attorney authorizing the superintendent of insurance to receive notices of suits against the company, and a statement of the affairs of the company where the company is not already licensed under the dominion insurance act.

Plate glass companies only will be required to place a deposit of $3,000. The deposits of fire insurance companies will be $5,000, while benevolent, industrial and provident societies will be required to place a deposit of $10,000. If only carrying on funeral and sick benefit business the deposit required will then only be $2,000. If the company's total contingent liability exceeds $1,500,000, an additional deposit of one-half of the original deposit is required.

The new act also regulates the capitalization of the companies, and companies incorporated under the act will be required to have capital as follows:

Life insurance companies, a capital of not less than $500,000, of which $200,000 must be bona fide subscribed and taken up; sickness, accident or live stock insurance companies, $200,000, with half subscribed; property insurance, $100,000, and plate glass and vehicular insurance companies, $25,000. A company will have the privilege of taking out more than one kind of insurance upon paying the additional fee.

Five thousand dollars will be levied upon the companies doing business in the province annually toward the cost of keeping up the department. Besides the capitalization restrictions, an annual statement of outstanding liabilities will be required by the department. Should the company not be able to show thereby sufficient assets, or if it appear in any way unsafe, the license may be canceled and the company prevented from doing further business in the province. Power also is given the superintendent to inspect the books of a company and a refusal to give out any information is punishable with a fine or imprisonment. The penalty for operating without a license is fixed at $200.

The Bank at Galesburg

The Galesburg Daily Mail, in an enlarged special edition, commenting upon the financial and business interests of that city, speaks of the new building of the Bank of Galesburg as follows: "No better sign of the progress of the city of Galesburg can be seen anywhere than by taking a trip through the Bank of Galesburg building, a five-story office building of red pressed brick, trimmed in red sandstone. The main lobby is very commodious, as well as handsome; is finished in white Vermont marble wainscoting eight feet high, tile floors, magnificent solid bronze elevator enclosure, with a white marble stairway leading to the second floor. All the corridors have marble wainscoting and tile floors, are well ventilated and have a constant flood of daylight. All the offices throughout the entire building are especially well lighted, ventilated and heated and are models of convenience. The banking room on the first floor is admitted to be one of the finest in the state. The building is equipped with its own water works, having a deep well. Two of the best elevators that the Otis Elevator Company know how to make are installed, having every modern safety device known; also one freight elevator, located in the rear.

"The heating of the building satisfactorily is of the utmost importance, and this has been admirably solved in this building. The steam heat is circulated through the building by means of vacuum pumps located in the basement. These pumps create a vacuum on all the steam pipes, thereby insuring uniform heat throughout the entire building and avoiding all cracking and pounding in the pipes usually heard under the old system."

The officers of the bank are C. C. Craig, president; N. O. G. Johnson, vice-president; P. N. Granville, cashier, and C. E. Johnson, assistant cashier. The capital and surplus are $450,000 and the total resources, $1,650,000.

MINNESOTA CONVENTION

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Minnesota Bankers Association, held in the Lyceum Theater, Duluth, July 10th and 11th, was a record-breaker.

Thursday morning the convention was called to order by President D. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea. After invocation by the Rev. Charles N. Thorp, Mayor W. I. Prince of Duluth welcomed the bankers and J. S. Pomeroy, vice-president of the association, responded. President Armstrong then delivered his annual address, followed by reports of the executive council and Secretary G. H. Richards, Treasurer A. G. Wedge, Jr., of Bemidji, and the committees on agriculture, "Blue Sky" law, redistricting and highways. The reports of group officers also were submitted.

George M. Reynolds, president of the big Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, discussed the administration currency bill and there were addresses on "The Banker and the Sovereign Law of the Land," by Allen D. Albert of the Minneapolis Tribune, and the negotiable instruments law by Charles R. Fowler, an attorney of Minneapolis.

The afternoon session on Thursday was given up entirely to addresses. G. L. Russell, dean of the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, spoke on the banks and the farmer; W. F. Schilling of Northfield, president of the Minnesota State Dairymen's Association, on "The Relation of the Cow to Progressive Agriculture"; Warren E. Green, an attorney of Duluth, on "An Uncontrollable Outburst"; Frank W. Murphy of Wheaton, president of the West Central Development Association, on "Elements and Results in Minnesota's Agricultural Development"; and W. G.

Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, talked on good roads and the value of co-operation in securing better highways.

Friday morning currency legislation was the subject of the remarks of Congressman W. S. Hammond of the Second Minnesota district. After reports and election and installation of officers adjournment was taken.

At seven-thirty Thursday evening automobiles were provided for a drive over the beautiful system of boulevards about Duluth, taking in the residence district and affording from the bluffs one of the most striking views obtained in any American city. After arriving at the Duluth Boat Club house, there was boating and dancing provided as the entertainment. Friday afternoon a special train was arranged for to carry the party to the United States Steel Corporation plant now being constructed, where the bankers were enabled to see the wonderful shipping facilities of grain, coal and ore. A buffet luncheon was served at the Spirit Lake Branch of the Duluth Boat Club early in the evening and the return trip to the city made by boat down the river and about the harbor.

Officers of the Minnesota Bankers Association during the past year were as follows: President, D. C. Armstrong, president Albert Lea State; vice-president, J. S. Pomeroy, cashier Security National, Minneapolis; secretary, George H. Richards, Minneapolis; treasurer A. G. Wedge, Jr., Bemidji, vice-president First National.

W. F. Schilling, president of the Minnesota Dairymen's Association, Northfield, addressed the convention on "The Relation of the Dairy Cow to Progressive Agriculture." He said in part:

"To my mind the farmer is constituted about the same as bankers and any other class of citizens and he is most interested in the kind of farming that will give him the largest net returns for the amount of energy and capital expended. The "back to the farm" movement will be spasmodic and short lived if the farmer cannot receive a profit on his labor, energy or capital invested, and the first proposition, then, that confronts those who are assisting in the development work is to interest themselves from the financial standpoint.

"The easy method of farming, that of robbing the soil of its fertility by constant cropping of the small cereals, must be supplanted by a more scientific or common-sense method—that of crop rotation and diversification. All admit that this is the surest method of conservation, but when it comes to making the most out of the various crops grown in a profitable and successful rotation some differ, though the good business farmer must admit that the greatest factor in development of agriculture along progressive and profitable lines is the dairy cow. You may ask why. Simply because the good dairy cow consumes a large amount of roughage that has comparatively small market value and converts it into money, and she is doubly a God-send to the farmer who is living on the land depleted in fertility, as she converts his product into cash, and by reason of the manure and skim milk left on the farm she leaves it in better condition than before her coming."

Mr. Schilling urged dairying in every section of Minnesota, and especially in the northern section, where there is an abundance of good clover land. He said that the presence of the cow on the farm necessitated the diversification and rotation of crops in order to feed her, thus greatly increasing the producing power of the farm. In conclusion, he stated that from the standpoint of feeding the American people the cow holds a place that cannot be filled by any other animal or agency; that, much as we love our beefsteak, we are forced to acknowledge that the cow produces human food with five times the efficiency as does the steer. The value of butter produced in Minnesota alone last year summed up to forty-five million dollars, and when one considers that the cow produces on the average of eighteen dollars worth of fertility a year we have an additional wealth of over eighteen million dollars.

H. L. Russell, dean of the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, addressed the Minnesota bankers Thursday on "The Banks and the Farmer." Mr. Russell called attention to the radically changed conditions of to-day with the attendant rise into prominence of the American farmer, who quite naturally is a little suspicious of this increased interest in his affairs and must be shown that economic advantages will accrue to him by following better methods. The farmer is an individualist and his isolated relationships make him less susceptible to co-operative influences than the city business man, who sees the necessary interdependence of industry. Mr. Russell said that the local bank was in a position to aid immensely in fostering this movement for better farming and that the agricultural college or any other agency must have the support and aid which come from local initiative, if the best results are to be obtained. He then cited some of the things which the Wisconsin Bankers Association, with which the State Agricultural College has been co-operating, had done to forward the movement. Sixteen corn and grain contests were held last year, while this year the movement for better agriculture was furthered still more by starting a campaign on cow testing work. Another movement that has been headed by the bankers, acting in an individual rather than collective capacity, has been to finance a project to enable pioneer settlers to secure improved stock. Much attention is being paid to the matter of rural credit and some communities have developed homemade plans which have worked very effectively. Mr. Russell concluded by saying that the significance of this movement can be appreciated when we consider what it means to a community to start right when it begins to develop, the feeling of community success in the enterprise that has been gotten under way, and the inauguration of a practical plan of rural finance that does not need legislative fiat, but has been the outgrowth of common sense ideas.

The general committee consisting of Chairman E. L. Mattson of the Scandinavian-American National, Minneapolis; J. W. Wheeler, Capital Trust, St. Paul, and W. D. Willard of the First National of Mankato, is to be congratulated for the effective service which it rendered.

F. W. Murphy, president of the West Central Development Association, Wheaton, talked on "The Elements and Results in Minnesota's Agricultural Development," in which he told of the work being done in his state to further advanced agriculture and of the immense value to the state of improved agricultural methods.

North Carolina Convention

North Carolina bankers held their seventeenth annual convention at Asheville, July 8th, 9th and 10th, being called to order by President Leake S. Covington of Rockingham Tuesday evening at nine o'clock. After invocation by Bishop Junius M. Horner of Asheville, J. E. Rankin, mayor of Asheville and cashier of the Battery Park Bank, delivered the address of welcome, which was gracefully responded to by Joseph B. Ramsy, president of the First National of Rocky Mount. President Covington then delivered his annual address and Secretary and Treasurer W. A. Hunt presented his report for the year.

Wednesday morning J. B. Blades, delegate to the convention of the American Bankers Association held in Detroit, reported. Following the reports of standing and special committees of the association Dr. Bradford Knapp of Washington, D. C., talked on "A Better Agriculture, Helped by Better Business," and the Hon. James J. Britt of Asheville discussed the feasibility and desirability of one cent letter postage. After the appointment of committees on resolutions, nominations and auditing, adjournment was taken.

Thursday morning there were reports of committees, motions and resolutions and election and installation of officers for the ensuing year. An agricultural conference was held to consider plans for farm financing. The several bankers' associations of the Southern states sent delegates. Among the speakers were Senator Fletcher of Florida, B. F. Harris of Champaign, the Hon. Charles Hall Davis of Virginia and Jos. G. Brown, Raleigh.

Tuesday evening there was a reception and dance, Wednesday afternoon a drive over the Biltmore estate and Thursday evening a banquet tendered by the bankers of Asheville.

The officers of the association during the past year were as follows: President, Leake S. Covington, cashier Farmers Bank, Rockingham; vice-presidents, Geo. A. Holderness, president Farmers Banking and Trust Company, Tarboro; Thos. E. Cooper, cashier American National, Wilmington, and J. L. Armfield, president Bank of Thomasville, Thomasville; secretary-treasurer, William A. Hunt, cashier Citizens Bank, Henderson.

President's Address

President Leake S. Covington in his annual address said: "We demand and must have a perfected banking and currency system—one that would make it possible for every section of the country to provide a sufficient amount of funds to meet agricultural, commercial and industrial emergencies. It should not be necessary to call on New York or any other section for aid. There should not prevail a stringency in one market and a plenty in another. Banks under an elastic currency system would possess ample facilities and furnish all relief desired. We can and we must create and promulgate a healthy system of bank co-operation. I do not profess to know the panacea for our complex needs, but I believe there are men who do and who can be trusted to be the Moses that will lead us out of our present gloomy conditions into the light of hope.

"Trade conditions continue active in most lines with the exception of the textile and probably some others where there is a disposition to await action of the tariff. We admit there is some restraint caused by the consideration of the currency, tariff and other momentous questions. There is a crying need for undelayed action. We should act and act quickly. I believe the solution is being carefully studied by competent men who recognize their important charge. Whatever is done, I believe that congress will work along the line of a constructive rather than a destructive nature. Reform is expected along certain lines and an attempt to adjust the tariff so that the necessities of life will be made cheaper and thereby reduce the cost of living expenses. The removal of the tariff from many articles of food and clothing, with broad reduction in rates of duty on all of the necessities of life, will of course decrease the revenues, but provision has been made for a corresponding increase by certain taxes, such as the incomes of the more fortunate. There has been a steady improvement in labor conditions. Improvements in machinery and in many new time-shortening devices. The nation is awakening to the scientific methods of farming as never before. Congress recently has passed an appropriation of fifty thousand dollars to enable the secretary of agriculture to acquire and to diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with marketing and distribution of farm products, and for the employment of persons and means necessary to carry out this authorization. Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia has framed a bill for the benefit of the farmers, which will have the endorsement of every bankers' association. The Southern Commercial Congress and the Rural Commission are now studying conditions of agriculture in Europe and our nation as well as our state has special representatives investigating improved farming conditions. Three patriotic gentlemen from North Carolina are abroad with these commissions, bearing their own expenses, giving their time and powers to this important question for the benefit of farmers. I believe that we should give to the tiller of the soil every encouragement that other lines of commercial and industrial interests have received. Farmers in the South pay a higher rate of interest for money borrowed than is charged in other sections of the country. It has been wisely said that if we as bankers expect to get interest out of the farmer we must put interest in him. Let us join in this great wave that is sweeping the whole nation and enlist in this practical, agricultural educational work. Assist the farmer to produce more and better crops. Encourage him by prizes, clubs, and by furnishing improved seed. Sell lime or other fertilizers and improved machinery on a close margin. Employ for him a soil doctor. Help him to enrich himself and thereby enrich us as a nation. Begin the noble work of uplifting and helping your brother. I commend the good work of the agricultural committee of the South Carolina Bankers Association under Robert I. Woodside and others that are doing so much to develop our great possibilities."

John Bruton's Address

John F. Bruton, president of the First National, Wilson, chairman of the bills of lading committee, reported that the Uniform Bills of Lading Act was passed without opposition in the house but failed to pass in the senate by three or four votes owing to the fact, it is the belief of the committee, that the bill was not reached until the latter part of the session, when those hostile to the measure had succeeded in prejudicing certain senators against it. As chairman of the legislative committee, Mr. Bruton reported that the bill, entitled "An act to amend, revise, consolidate and codify the law relating to banks and banking," with a slight amendment was passed in the house by a practically unanimous vote. The senate committee, which was composed in part of prominent bankers of the old school, opposed what they termed undue supervision of banks and reported the measure adversely in the senate. Mr. Bruton goes on to say, "The senate committee undertook to submit a substitute therefor, and the very fact that four-fifths of this substitute applied to bank failures and receiverships incident thereto inspired a comment thereon to the effect that the senate committee recognized the necessity of making ample provision in this regard in the absence of laws looking to the prevention of bank failures. This substitute passed the senate and was tabled in the house." Mr. Bruton urged united effort of the association to improve the banking laws of North Carolina, little having been done by the legislature during the past year affecting the banking interests of the state.

The Davis Plan of Rural Banks

Charles Hall Davis, an attorney of Petersburg, Va., discussed at some length the Davis Plan of Rural Banks, state and national, as partly outlined in Senate Document No. 1006, providing for a plan for the organization of a rural banking system in the state of Virginia by Mr. Davis, introduced by Senator Fletcher, January 14, 1913. Lack of space prevents our giving Mr. Davis' plan in detail.

Bradford Knapp Speaks

Dr. Bradford Knapp of the U. S. department of agriculture, said: "We have been wont to call upon the farmer's name and pat him on the back in time of political power and consistently ignore him and his problems after the office has been landed. The time has come when the entire country is recognizing the greatness of this problem and the fact that it calls for more hard thinking, more earnest work, more conscientious application than any other problem we have."

WACHOVIA BANK AND TRUST CO.

Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, Winston-Salem, N. C., has capital stock of $1,250,000, surplus and undivided profits amounting to $424,926 and a line of deposits of $6,571,083. This institution is the largest bank in North Carolina. Branches are conducted at Asheville, High Point, Salisbury and Spencer. The bank has for its home a splendid seven-story building recently constructed. The Wachovia Bank and Trust Company is made up of the Wachovia Loan and Trust Company and the Wachovia National, which consolidated to form the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. The bank publishes a clever little magazine each month entitled, "The Solicitor."

Officers are as follows: President, F. H. Fries; vice-presidents, James A. Gray and T. S. Morrison; vice-president and treasurer, H. F. Shaffner; secretary and assistant treasurer, James A. Gray, Jr.

Col. Fries is one of the most prominent men in the South, being interested in many business enterprises. He is an ex-president of the North Carolina Bankers Association and has served as president of the trust company section of the A. B. A.

This progressive institution numbers among its patrons people residing in thirty states of the Union as well as the District of Columbia, Panama, China and the West Indies.

BANK OF GEORGETOWN

Bank of Georgetown (South Carolina) was organized in 1891 with a capital of $50,000, which was increased in 1893 to $100,000. There also is an earned surplus fund amounting to $100,000. Deposits at the time of the last annual statement, March 31st, were $490,691. Officers are W. D. Morgan, president; H. Kaminski, vice-president; J. I. Hazard, cashier, and L. Coit Brock, assistant cashier. Mr. Morgan and Mr. Hazard are respectively the first and only president and cashier of the institution since its organization.

SOUTH CAROLINA CONVENTION

The South Carolina Bankers Association held its annual convention this week at Lake Toxaway, N. C., July 10th and 11th. Officers during the past year were as follows: President, Emslie Nicholson, president Nicholson Bank and Trust, Union; vice-president, Bright Williamson, president Bank of Darlington, Darlington; secretary and treasurer, Lee G. Holleman, president Peoples Bank, Anderson; attorney, B. Hart Moss, president Edisto Savings, Orangeburg.

SCANDINAVIAN-AMERICAN NATIONAL

Scandinavian-American National of Minneapolis, with capital stock of $500,000, has surplus and profits amounting to $131,000. Deposits are approximately four millions. Officers are as follows: President, Theodore Wold; vice-presidents, C. L. Grandin and A. Veland; cashier, Edgar L. Mattson; assistant cashier, E. V. Bloomquist.

Mr. Mattson is well and favorably known to bankers. He takes an active interest in association matters and is a member of the executive council. He was chairman of the committee in charge of the convention and active in arranging the program and other matters in connection with the convention.

state highway commission should be provided of at least three competent members, said commission to devote its entire time to its duties. The subject of good roads is of vital interest to the whole state and the farmer, workingman and business man suffer great loss due to the conditions resulting from bad highways. It is a matter in which all the citizens are interested and I believe that the state should assist in solving the problems which roads in poor condition present to its people. The matter is of sufficient importance to warrant the employment of a commission who shall be thoroughly competent and who will give the matter conscientious and intelligent thought and consideration. If anything worth while is to be accomplished the entire time of the members must be given to the work, for nothing can be done unless all of the members having the subject in charge are on the job all of the time and devoting their best efforts.

There should be improvement in such counties as elect to come under the law of main, continuous, inter-county highways connecting county seats and other important cities, principally at the expense of the state and county; such roads to be selected and improved by the county authorities subject to the approval of the state highway commission and after the improvement to be turned over to the state for perpetual maintenance and the improvement and maintenance of the remaining roads should be under the supervision and direction of the county and township authorities.

It doesn't do much good to provide a system of creditable highways unless steps are taken for their proper maintenance after construction. In some states there are compulsory road drag laws and any community could without doubt enact such a statute to its infinite benefit.

Automobilists do not derive the least benefits from good roads and therefore ought to be willing to bear a portion of the expense necessary to provide them. As I already have pointed out, in Illinois, under the law recently passed by our legislature, the money derived from automobile licenses is to be used in the construction and maintenance of the roads. It is believed, however, that this source of revenue alone would not be sufficient to take care of the entire outlay of money necessary. Therefore the legislatures of the various states where such is not already the case should be prevailed upon to pass other appropriations to take care of the matter.

Under our new law the use of convict labor in the preparation of material for road building and in actual work on the roads is provided for. I visited Colorado last year where the convict-labor plan is in vogue and the results obtained thereby are such as would reflect creditably to any state. There is as fine a system of roads in Colorado as one would care to see. Warden Tynan of the state penitentiary at Canyon City told me that of the 800 inmates of the prison more than 400 were located in various camps throughout the state engaged in road building, and that statistics showed that 80 per cent of those paroled or released return to useful occupations and make good in their efforts to be restored to citizenship. During the winter months the prisoners are engaged in the preparation of road material and in the summer months engaged in the actual road construction. This is a system of road construction which any state might profitably adopt. There is great benefit, not only to the state, but to the convict as well, for he is enabled to be employed at outdoor work, which has a tendency to keep him in good health, and after his term of servitude has expired he is the better prepared to resume his place in society.

Federal aid in road work is very desirable and all who are interested should request their representatives in congress to work toward this end. Enthusiasm in the subject could be stirred up through the designation by the governor of the state or the legislature of a good roads day, on which the attention of the whole people, especially the teachers of the public and normal schools, could be directed toward the importance of improved highways.

As I already have intimated, the benefits to be derived from a system of good roads are so numerous and so apparent as hardly to require mention. I desire, however, to call your attention to just a few of them. Improved roads mean better schools and larger attendance; better health and quicker medical attention; better farms and more cultivated land; better crops and cheaper transportation; better economic conditions and more producers; better social conditions and less isolation; better church attendance and better citizens; better postal service and closer friends; better business and more consumers; better industries and more employment and a better state and a better nation.

A great deal of attention has been paid lately to tariff reform and the provision of an adequate banking and currency system in response to the continual complaints prevailing about the present law. In my opinion, the economic welfare of this nation depends to just as large an extent upon the provision of a system of highways consistent with the development and progress of the age as it does upon either tariff revision or currency reform. While these matters are of vast importance and remedial legislation should be enacted in regard to them, the subject of good roads plays just as important a part in our progress and welfare and as such should receive thoughtful consideration and our best efforts. The one important thing to be borne in mind, however, is that the success of road development and improvement is indissolubly connected with the idea of complete co-operation.

Charles H. Huttig

St. Louis, Mo., July 16th.—The funeral of Charles H. Huttig, president of the Third National of St. Louis and president of the American Bankers Association, who died Saturday last in the Adirondack Mountains, New York, was held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the residence, 37 Washington Terrace. A delegation representing the American Bankers Association was present.

The funeral was attended by many bankers from cities and towns in the St. Louis district, and by prominent St. Louisans.

Many beautiful floral tributes from business associates and friends banked the walls of the home. The casket was covered with a floral blanket of American beauty roses and smilax. The burial, in Bellefontaine Cemetery, was private.

Following is Dr. Lee's eulogy of Mr. Huttig: "Charles H. Huttig was born February 14, 1864. The years he spent on the earth were well used. As a banker, manufacturer and citizen he was a conspicuous success. The external facts of his life are known. It is fitting that we pass behind the scenes and find the interior elements of intelligence, will and emotion, by the exercise of which he made a large place for himself.

"First, Charles H. Huttig had deep and abiding faith in his fellow-man. He has been heard to say that if the time ever came when he had no longer unshaken confidence in mankind he would feel that there was nothing left. He keenly delighted in companionship. In his office, in his home, on the street, everywhere, he rejoiced in association.

"He believed in the righteousness of the universal order in which each human being must make his way during his few fleeting years. In his deep conviction that the Creator directed the fortunes of the universe, he found confidence that made him brave to face the problems of life. He was speaking of some person who had written him to know how he thought, in case a certain man were elected president of the United States, business would be affected. He replied that the commercial world is regulated largely by great fundamental laws, and that the president, whoever he might be, could do but little to modify them one way or another.

"Mr. Huttig believed thoroughly in the immortality of the personal spirit. He did not believe that death ends all. He enjoyed life, loved nature. Flowers, birds, trees, stars, flowing rivers, constituted for him a literature."

Mr. Huttig never had fully recovered from an operation which he underwent for intestinal troubles a year ago last September and his death was not unexpected to his friends and business associates here.

Accompanied by Mrs. Huttig and their two children, Jeanette, 16 years old, and Charles, 13, Mr. Huttig went to his summer home on May 1st, hoping to secure relief from his affliction. He failed to improve, however, and recently sank rapidly. The wife, son and daughter were with him when he died.

The Citizens National of Tell City, Ind., has increased its capital from $30,000 to $50,000.

Two of the New Presidents

R. H. TREMAN
ITHACA, NEW YORK

J. S. POMEROY
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

MESSRS. Treman and Pomeroy are the new presidents of their respective state bankers associations, being elected at conventions held in Ottawa, Canada, June 12th and 13th, and Duluth, Minn., July 10th and 11th. Mr. Treman is president of the Tompkins County National and Mr. Pomeroy vice-president of the Security National. Both have served the bankers of their states in other official capacities and are expected to maintain the high standards of efficiency in the new positions which have characterized past services.

E. D. HULBERT ON THE SITUATION

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, said this week:

"This bank is in a strong position. We are carrying 43 per cent of cash resources. We are perfectly comfortable and inform our own customers that they have no need to worry about their future needs, since we will take care of them. We cannot say as much to borrowers who are not our regular patrons. We may make loans to such if they are willing to pay the necessary rate of interest. We feel there is no other proper course open to us."

PRIVATE BANK FAILS

The Pate Bank of Wellington, Ill., a private institution, failed this week, due to the inability of former Postmaster Gordon of Chicago to meet a $20,000 note indorsed by his father-in-law, Alexander Pate, proprietor of the bank.

TWO'S AT 98

"Government coupon two's are quoted and readily salable on New York Stock Exchange at 98." This in reply to a bear circular letter sent out by a Chicago bond dealer.

C. H. FOX CAN BOAST A TITLE

C. H. Fox, who has been traveling representative for the Chicago Savings Bank & Trust Company for the last four years in Illinois, was made an additional assistant secretary of that institution at a meeting of the directors on Thursday. Mr. Fox is favorably known to the craft and his promotion will be popular.

NEW BANK PLANS MADE

Plans for final organization of the proposed Madison Street State Bank, to be opened in the vicinity of West Madison Street and Western Avenue, were discussed at a dinner held in the Hotel La Salle Thursday night by the stockholders and promoters of the new concern.

RETURNS FROM MINNESOTA

W. G. Edens of the Central Trust has returned from Duluth, where he attended the Minnesota convention, and Minneapolis, where he was present at the sessions of the K. P. finance committee of which he is a member.

Edens reports good crops from Minnesota and a general feeling of optimism. The state convention was largely attended.

CHAMPAIGN COUNTY (Ills) Agricultural Improvement Association has appointed C. H. Oathout of Tolono, county adviser for a term of three years.

MR. OATHOUT graduated from the University of Illinois in 1907, was for several years assistant in the soil survey work of the Agricultural Experiment Station, and since 1908 has been manager of an 800 acre farm near Tolono.

THE cashier of an Indiana bank has written to B. F. Harris of Champaign to inquire about "the American Bankers Surety Co. of Indianapolis, now of Chicago."

"IT was represented to me that you are its president and active business head," wrote the Hoosier banker.

THE cashier and his president had dipped a little into the stock but were getting restless. "Give us all the light possible ere we pay our last installment," he wrote.

MR. HARRIS promptly telegraphed that he'd never heard of the company before and isn't interested in any business dealing with bankers.

THEN he promptly put Sleuth Andrew Smith of the I. B. A. onto the whole deal. You can look out for a hot "Warning" bulletin from the active Indiana secretary.

THE AMERICAN BANKERS SURETY CO. isn't in the latest Chicago Telephone directory. We find listed "Amer. Bankers Ins. Co."; "Amer. Bankers Safety Co." and "Amer. Bankers Security Co." but no "Surety" company.

THE BANKERS will expect such men as Harris and Smith to dig up the truth and let it be known. Mr. Harris, like Dean Swift, has an "irritable brand of virtue" and will see that his name is not wrongfully used.

FIRST result of the "dig" was that "John L. Hamilton and not B. F. Harris is the president." The Indiana bank cashier still thinks, however, that the man who sold him the stock said Mr. Harris was the president.

FORMAL notice was served on the Indiana banker on Wednesday that "Hon. W. C. B. Harrison is the president," which may account for the whole mix up.

THE BRITONS dined the American farm finance experts last week. Just as soon as George Woodruff had arrived and been measured for his knee-pants and black silk stockings the cards were sent out.

IN addition to G. W. there were the American Ambassador and Mrs. Walter Hines Page, Lord Strathcona, Sir George Reid, Earl Grey, former governor general of Canada; Sir Rider Haggard, the Earl of Shaftesbury, the Earl of Denbigh, Baron Blyth and Baron Islington.

RIGHT HONORABLE Walter Runciman, president of the board of agriculture, congratulated the Americans on the success of their tour and spoke of the good relations existing between the two countries.

HONORABLE RUNCIMAN went home loaded with amortization tables for the new Woodruff Trust Co. Said he was glad he came.

RICHARD BURTON, well known as professor of English in the University of Minnesota, as an assistant editor of The Bellman at Minneapolis, and as vice-president of the Drama League, has written a work on "The New American Drama" which the Thomas Y. Crowell Company is to publish in September.

DR. BURTON'S chief aim is to trace the growth of a native drama on American soil, in place of the foreign importations so long the dominating influence. Special attention is given to recent productions by American playwrights. The volume will have great value as the most up-to-date contribution to the literature of the stage by a recognized authority.

THE HANCHETT BOND COMPANY gives it as a consensus of financial opinion that the present high rates of interest on good bonds will not be seen again in years. Now is the time to buy.

TIME was when twenty-five or thirty New York financial newspaper and bank men would attend all of the larger western state conventions.

AT Duluth there was but one lonesome delegate, named Smith, from the metropolis. "Why's the reason?"

BERT JOHNSON of Waterloo, Edgar J. Hughes of the First National, Milwaukee, Geo. D. Bartlett, secretary, and F. J. Carr of Hudson, former president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, were some of the outsiders present.

RAIN which set in the first day continued and rather spoiled the trip planned by the local committee for the inspection of the steel mills and ore country, although nearly 100 ladies and about 300 gentlemen made the trip out and back.

THE Duluth committee headed by Messrs. Lyder, MacGregor, Ordean, Johnson, Moore and others are entitled to great credit for their efforts in entertaining and looking after the comfort of the visiting bankers.

W. G. EDENS took a bath, changed his M. B. A. badge for a "K. P." emblem and headed for Minneapolis to attend a meeting of the financial committee of the supreme lodge K. P.

"LEGISLATION, banking—General conditions have remained undisturbed, the score of vicious measures aimed at the banks being quietly laid to rest."

ABOVE is a quotation from a bulletin issued by the Illinois Bankers Association and was made the basis of a half column stinging editorial in the Chicago Tribune.

THE general literary style of the bulletin was egotistical brag, and it may be that neither the association itself, nor its legislative committee, had anything to do with "laying" bills "to rest."

LIKE Col. Mulhall, perhaps the indiscreet author claimed too much? Putting bills to sleep in the Springfield legislature isn't understood to be a very highly moral undertaking, judging from recent revelations.

THE names on the legislative committee are sufficient reply to the evil boast—such men as Crabtree, Goddard and Blum are not in such business.

A companion bulletin to the one quoted gave Chairman Bradt of the good roads committee "almost absolutely" sole credit for the good roads legislation secured at Springfield.

NO such boast or claim, of course, had the sanction of the modest Mr. Bradt. There were hundreds of men and a score of organizations asking for the bills.

A dozen might be named off hand, including the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, the automobile clubs, chambers of commerce and commercial associations in every city in the state.

SUCH a prostitution of the bulletin issuing function hasn't been seen in a single other case within memory.

THE I. B. A. of A. BULLETIN for July is a regular "Blue Sky" encyclopaedia. It contains a summary of all laws enacted to date.

ILLINOIS is one of the seven states which will have no new "Blue Sky" bill this year.

THE I. B. A. isn't anti protective laws, by any means, but its directors "commend such laws as will protect the investment public from fraud and urge upon its members the fullest co-operation with state officials having charge of the enforcement of such laws."

BILLS, many of them over drastic, were considered in thirty-five states and passed in most of them.

THE heavy investment states of Pennsylvania, New York, Illinois, Minnesota, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts did not enact the law, but in most cases the subject will be up again.

AT Springfield the bill died a natural death in a house committee.

CAIRO bank clearings for the first half of 1913 have broken all records, totaling $6,851,286.34.

NOT only that, but the clearings for June broke all June records, just as the month of May broke all May records.

THE clearings do not tell the whole story. Every one of the Cairo banks declared the usual dividend on July 1st. Despite the flood this spring, carrying with it additional financial burdens upon many who had not fully recovered from the 1912 flood, and despite the fact that the banks are still carrying the bills for both the 1912 and the 1913 floods, amounting to something like $80,000, every stockholder in the Cairo banks received his usual dividend check on July 1st.

ALL this despite the horrible fake flood pictures run in the Chicago and St. Louis papers showing water eight feet deep on streets which the flood never even approached.

RECEIPTS from the sales of stamps and postal supplies at the Cairo postoffice have not only broken all records for the year ending June 30, 1913, but they have more than doubled in ten years.

IT was tough assignment, to be sure, but the governor slid through on a list of glittering generalities. The few positive things he said had stout strings attached.

THE directors of the First National of Bay City, Mich., are considering the construction of a new six-story bank building in the near future. The building as proposed is to house both the First National and the Bay City Savings banks, which are operated and controlled by the same group of capitalists.

THE bankers of Charlevoix county, same state, are active in the organization of a farm bureau for that county. Among those taking an active part are W. J. Rachow, cashier Charlevoix State Savings; S. C. Smith, cashier First National, Boone City; R. O. Bisbee, cashier Peoples State of East Jordan.

THIS is not written to injure Mr. Ottley's feelings nor to hurt Atlanta's chances for getting the 1914 A. B. A. convention.

CERTAIN big New York bankers have importuned their western friends to save them from going to Atlanta on account of the heat in any reasonable convention season.

THEY say the hotels are too few and much too small and that it ought to go to Minneapolis or St. Paul for sure.

ONE reason they urge is that Mr. Chapman is sure to be elected vice-president at Boston and he would be made president then right in his own town.

OF course this plan eliminates Mr. Ottley and his city and Mr. Law and his campaign manager. It is no idle dream either. Think it over?

PORTLAND has adopted the commission form of government. This is the punishment for letting Lydell Baker loose on the Chautauqua circuit and at bankers' conventions as an orator de luxe.

WE hear by long distance that "the Commerce and the Chase are flirting again to beat the band." Do you believe it?

YES, and another message was to the effect that the distinguished ex-vice-president of the Commerce prefers "Hank" to "Hal." No matter what you call him, he's "our friend."

HIS confidence shaken in banks by the Pittsburgh crash, Barnett Gilford, of Brooklyn, withdrew $700 from a savings bank and placed it in the kitchen range in his home. He failed to inform his wife, who built a fire which destroyed the currency.

THIS shows that Secretary E. G. McWilliam didn't start those lectures on Thrift a moment too soon. Main thing, of course, is to get the thrifter to put his money in the bank. Next thing is to prevail upon him to leave it there.

ONE of the letters reads: "I believe that if by mischance the nominating committee should return the name of this office seeker a concerted movement for some first-class man would sweep the convention. Chapman if possible; if not, then some one else. The methods of this canvass leave a bad taste in the mouth."

THE MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL has a picture of W. G. Edens wearing his K. P. fez. Looks fine.

WE take it that the "S. E. De Kalb" (see Tribune) who addressed the Cook county roads meeting is none other than S. E. Bradt, who doesn't claim to be quite all there is to De Kalb, nor "almost absolutely" the whole thing in securing good roads legislation at Springfield.

THE "almost absolutely" whole thing title was inflicted by a bulletin carelessly issued from I. B. A. headquarters.

WORST of it all is your Uncle John D. Phillips has gone clean wrong. For weeks and weeks he has been ignoring instructions as to where to get on and where to get off.

HE is such a nice man, too. He's going to have something to say about the Chicago convention in September and likely will continue to throw aside the patent inside programs furnished almost daily from the Rookery building.

NEITHER does J. D. take much stock in the charge that "there is a traitor in the ranks," because someone gave the Chicago Tribune a copy of that foolish bulletin boasting of how the association "laid to rest" the anti-banking legislation at Springfield.

THE bulletin was the real offender, for no one believes the state association to be in the business of "killing off" legislation in the offensive sense.

SECRETARY BOWMAN has ignored the thermometer in Kansas and has that state's advanced agricultural program well in hand.

THE Hutchinson convention in May instructed its committee on agriculture to "organize the county units," and it is being done.

THE committee met at Topeka recently and Bank Commissioner Charles M. Sawyer and President H. J. Waters of the state agricultural college were present at the all-day session.

THE committee decided that "the banker holds an unique position in the community. The united efforts of all banks directed to one common end insures success. Millions of dollars can be added to the wealth of the state every year by intelligent efforts. This can be done."

THE committee then told how it "can be done" and a circular was sent out by Secretary Bowman with the information.

EVERY bank in the state is on the mailing list and county-seat banks were asked to call the county organization meetings. The grand roundup will be before August 15th.

THE State College, the State Board of Agriculture and the Farmers' Institute are in for keeps and Bowman has won out again.

GEE! what a secretary like that could do in a state like Illinois!

"EVERY banker will recognize the vast good that can be accomplished for the community in general and for the banking fraternity in particular through such effective organization and concerted action."

PECULIAR bird is the Pelican:
His bill can hold more than his "belican";
He can tote in his beak
Enough food for a week,
And we don't understand how the "helican."

SECRETARY E. G. McWILLIAM tells how a man went out West some time ago and got up a get-rich-quick scheme and got hold of the money of the people and failed; a public meeting of those who were the sufferers was held.

THE "promoter" appeared and spoke, said he was awfully sorry and ready and willing to do anything he could, was ready to be cut up into little pieces and distributed among those present. An old settler near the door said: "Mr. Chairman, if that air feller is cut up, I want his gall."

COLONIAL TRUST, Chicago, will increase capital from $600,000 to $1,000,000. New stock will go to holders of record until September 1st at $160.

WE have been furnished a record to show that Virginia did not indorse Mr. Law of Philadelphia for vice-president of the A. B. A. as claimed.

SEEMS the resolution was strongly opposed and the indorsement went to Thomas B. McAdams of Richmond, president of the Virginia Bankers Association.

E. B. SPENSER of Roanoke was named for the nominating committee and his alternate will be H. R. Booker of Newport News.

LEADING bankers from a number of states where "instructions" (a new form of "Quay politics" in A. B. A. matters) were passed, often by a mere handful, who did not know what they were voting on, are saying now that the return of a pledged committee will not go at Boston.

LOUIS G. KAUFMAN believes in printer's ink," says a New York paper in large headlines. Of course he does. He's building up a big western bank, too, right in New York.

DROP in and see the ex-president of the Michigan bankers. You will feel quite as much at home in the Chatham-Phenix as you would in the First at Marquette. L. G. hasn't swelled, just grown.

JUST now Mr. Kaufman is at his famous summer camp near Marquette.

WARE & LELAND say that the present situation "brings into prominence the fact that important issues, with a good prospect of dividend maintenance—take for example the Union Pacific in the railroad list and U. S. Steel Common in the industrial group—are selling at prices which permit liberal yield from dividend payments, which do not seem at the present time to be seriously menaced.

R. E. JAMES of Easton, chairman of the committee on revision of the A. B. A. constitution, has so far recovered his health as to be "back to work."

HE was taken ill at the Pittsburgh convention and obliged to return home.

HE says the document will be in shape to forward to members well within the time limit for such matters.

"INTERVENTION in Mexico" is the new college yell set up to detract attention from intervention in N. A. M. affairs. Possibly, too, to embarrass those working for tariff and currency reform.

FORTUNATELY Col. Mulhall has told the public how these "demands of business" are arranged to come from all over. He should tell us, too, how the war scares originate coincident with the battleship appropriations.

THAT new six-million-dollar hotel in London will, in the end, be financed by the American tourist.

Jerome Thralls on the Clearing House

Manager of Kansas City Clearing House Association tells of its functions and relations to domestic exchange

The idea of the clearing house, like many of our most important inventions and scientific discoveries, had its origin in an accidental way. In the early seventies of the seventeenth century a number of banking houses of the city of London, England, employed walk clerks or collectors, as we would term them, whose duties were to go daily from bank to bank and collect the actual cash to cover checks, drafts, and credits of like nature that accumulated during the day's business. Two of these collectors, representing banks located in extreme opposite sections of the city, met in a downtown coffee house one day and, while visiting and lunching together, found that each held a like amount of items against the other's bank. The thought of trading these items, and thereby saving themselves a trip half way across the city, suggested itself to these boys. They not only traded but agreed to meet in the same place on the following day for the purpose of again trading. Keeping this practice up several days, the news of what these two boys were doing spread to the other collectors and, within a very short time, practically all the collectors of the London banks were meeting in this coffee house each day and making trades. On learning of what the boys were doing, some of the bank officers criticised them severely—others saw merit in the idea, and it resulted in a conference of the officers, at which it was agreed to hire a room in the downtown section of the city where these boys might meet daily and make their trades. Errors resulting from these trades soon made it necessary to install a system of records and to place a manager in charge. From this developed the London Clearing House, which is to-day one of the greatest, if not the greatest, clearing house in the world.

The idea was introduced into America in the year 1853, at which time the New York City Clearing House was established. It was later taken up by Boston, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, drifting on westward to Chicago and St. Louis. Kansas City may rightfully be considered among the pioneers in clearing house affairs, our association having been organized in the year 1873, and having for its original purpose the same idea as permeated the minds of the two English lads who were dubbed by certain London bank officers as "lazy ones"—that is, the idea of establishing a place where representatives of the several members might meet daily and exchange their local checks, drafts, and credits of like nature.

This continues to be one of the great functions of the clearing house, but the rapid development in all lines of business throughout the country and the great growth of our financial affairs have created necessity for closer co-operation through clearing houses, and, as a consequence, many additional and highly important functions have developed. You have heard the saying, "Necessity is the Mother of Invention." In the development of the clearing house necessity has proven, in most instances, the only true promoter of action.

The panic of 1907 will be remembered for years to come as a most disastrous affair, yet that panic brought about more improvement in our financial methods and a greater development in the clearing house system than did all elements combined for a period of twenty years prior to that time. Scores of clearing houses have been organized since the panic of 1907, and now every city or town in the United States of any size and commercial importance has a clearing house of some description.

What I may say is based on my experience in what we have undertaken to make the best clearing house in the United States. Clearing houses are of two kinds, incorporated and voluntary organizations. Some authorities hold that all clearing houses should be incorporated, but, under the existing laws and practices, I do not see that anything is to be gained through incorporation. The voluntary organization can sue and be sued, assert its rights, and conduct its business the same as an incorporated body.

The powers and rights of the clearing house have never been clearly defined but it has proven to be almost helpful, in fact an indispensable, factor in the conduct of the banking business of this country.

The objects and purposes of a modern clearing house are to facilitate the handling of business between its members and clearing banks, to facilitate the handling of business between these institutions and banks and trust companies of other localities, and to foster and encourage at all times safe, sound and conservative banking methods.

The Kansas City Clearing House Association is a voluntary organization of seventeen banks and three trust companies, in which the Country Clearing House and the postoffice are members to all purposes except as to a voice in the government of the body, and through which nine other local banking institutions have clearing privileges; making thirty-one institutions in all represented. We undertake the conduct of our business through three separate departments: the city, the auditing, and the country departments.

Each member is assigned a number under which its business with the clearing house is conducted. These numbers were assigned on the seniority basis; the oldest bank member being given No. 1, the second oldest No. 2, and so on. Each member has in its office a department known as its clearing house department and to which is charged, by the several departments, all items that are drawn on or payable at the offices of other members. These items are usually recorded in the department in which they originate and, on reaching the clearing house department, are inspected as to signatures, dates, etc., are endorsed with a rubber stamp showing the name and clearing house number of the clearing bank, and the date of the clearing. They are next sorted, all items drawn on or payable at the office of each member being placed in a separate pile. When the sorting is completed and the clearing hour approaches, each pile of checks is taken to the adding machine and a list is made of the items and a total taken. The items are then done up into packages, the list covering the items in each package being placed on its face, and the clearing house numbers of the members on which the items are to be cleared are marked on the respective packages with pen or pencil. The lists are then endorsed with the regular clearing house endorsement stamp.

Each member has been supplied with statement blanks which are in duplicate and which show at the top the name and number of the bank using same. Along the left margin of each statement appears, in regular order, the numbers and names of all the members. Immediately to the right of these names and numbers are several columns, the two principal ones of which are headed "On Clearing House" and "From Clearing House." The total shown on each package is entered in the column "On Clearing House," and directly opposite, the number and name of the bank on which the items are to be cleared. When all totals have been entered, the statement is footed and, if the work has been done correctly the footings thus obtained will prove against the combined total of all charges made by the several departments to the clearing house department. Assuming they do so prove, the packages are placed in a satchel and the clearing house clerk and messengers grab the satchel and statement and make a mad rush to the clearing house. The reason for this mad rush is that the clearing hour is fixed at 11:30 A. M., except Saturdays, when the hour is 10:30 A. M., and any member not represented on the dot is fined $1.00 for each five minutes or fractional part thereof, and if tardy over thirty minutes the member is shut out of the clearings for the day. The exchange room at the clearing house is equipped with a cage or desk for each member and a manager's desk. The cages or desks are arranged in two parallel rows and in numerical order with reference to the numbers of the members.

On arrival at the clearing house the clerks enter their respective cages and the messengers pass around and deposit their packages of items—packages No. 1 being deposited in cage No. 1, packages No. 2 in cage No. 2, and so on down the line. When all clerks and messengers have arrived at the clearing house and all deposits have been made, each clerk has on his desk twenty-one packages of items, and proceeds to enter on his statement, in the column headed "From Clearing House" and opposite the respective names and numbers of the members, the amount shown on the package received from each. The packages, when entered, are laid on a shelf, from which they are taken by the messengers, who rush back to the banks so the items may be quickly distributed to the bookkeepers who pass upon the genuineness of signatures, etc. All items are cleared subject to being returned before 3:00 o'clock P. M. (Saturdays 12:30 P. M.), if found not good for any reason.

Each clerk foots his statement, when all totals have been entered, and, if he finds he brought to the clearing house a greater volume than he received from the members, he carries his "From Clearing House" footings to his "On Clearing House" column and makes his deduction, showing the amount due his bank from the clearing house, or his credit balance, as we term it. Should the amount received at the clearing house exceed the amount brought to the clearing house, the operation would be the reverse and he would show the amount due the clearing house, or his debit balance, as we would term it.

A duplicate of each statement is passed to the manager, who enters on the clearing house records the net debit or credit balances, and the On Clearing House and From Clearing House totals. He then foots these balances and, if they prove, the clerks are dismissed, and they return to their respective banks. The statements are filed as a record of the transactions between the several members, and the manager proceeds to foot the "On" and "From" Clearing House columns and if they prove it is conclusive evidence that the work has been correctly done. The "On Clearing House" column represents merely the items brought to the clearing house and are the figures that you see reported in the daily newspapers and financial journals as the bank clearings.

We clear an average of about ten million dollars worth of items each day; the balances resulting average around $600,000; so by the operation the amount of cash necessary to handle this large volume of business is reduced from $10,000,000 to $600,000.

The next step is the settlement of balances. The manager draws his check against the debtor members in favor of the creditor members, the first check being drawn against the largest debtor in favor of the smallest creditor, the second in favor of the second smallest creditor, and so on down the line in regular order until all the credits have been satisfied. These manager's checks are payable in cash and must be settled at or before 2 o'clock P. M. In case of failure to collect at or before that hour, all members, other than the one against whom the check is drawn, are released from responsibility. To simplify the payment of these checks we have established a clearing house gold depository, in which the members deposit gold of the required weight and fineness and United States gold certificates, in lieu of which are issued clearing house gold certificates in amounts of $5,000 and $10,000. These certificates pass current among the clearing house members, the holders of the same being the owners of the gold and United States gold certificates so deposited and which counts as reserve. In settling balances of $600,000 it is necessary to bring into play only sixty $10,000 certificates. This plan saves the abrasion on the gold, the labor of carrying it back and forth, and recounting same; also eliminates the danger of street robberies. If you consider the number of clerks that would be required to go from bank to bank and make the collections each day and the immense amount of labor that would be involved in handling ten millions in actual cash, you can get some idea of the convenience of the exchanges and the saving resulting therefrom.

Another very important function of the city department is the issuance of loan certificates and script during times of stringency. We are glad to report that pooling of resources and reserves in this way has been resorted to only once in our city, that being during the panic of 1907, when we issued clearing house loan certificates and script aggregating about eight million dollars, and through this means we averted untold losses, not only to the banks and business concerns of our own community, but to the entire Southwest. The basis of issue was to the extent of 75 per cent of the value of the approved collateral deposited, and the understanding was that the assets of all our clearing house banks would protect every dollar of such loans and scrip issued, making them as good as gold. There remains unredeemed about $800,000, for the redemption of which we are holding cash.

Another important function is to formulate and enforce rules on exchange and collection charges, which function I will discuss under the country department.

The auditing department conducts, under the supervision of a committee of five members elected annually from among the active officers of the members, rigid examinations of all banks and trust companies having the privileges of the clearing house. A detailed report of each examination is made to the president of the bank examined, and notices are sent out requesting the directors to call at the president's office and go over the report. A copy of the report in detail is filed at the clearing house and a skeleton report is made to the clearing house committee, who call the managing officer of the institution being examined into a conference and go over it with him, giving him such advice or suggestions as may seem expedient. Under this plan all our bank officers exercise greater care in the extension of credit, knowing that their loans are subject to scrutiny and criticism of not only the state or national bank examiner but the clearing house examiner and committee as well. The plan prevents, in many instances, over-extension of credit.

We have found cases where two or more

WILL LOSE EVERY CENT

Depositors in the All Night and Day Bank of Memphis, Tenn., which failed August 15, 1911, probably will lose every cent. It became known soon after the bank's failure that the wreck was a complete one. A partial report filed by W. P. Biggs, attorney for the receiver, Gen. D. A. Frayser, indicates that the depositors probably will not get a single cent and that the cost of the receivership will consume about all the collectable assets. The receiver's report shows that out of assets of about $84,000, as shown by the bank's books, the receiver has been able to collect in two years only $19,662.99. The assets mentioned consisted of commercial paper and notes, most of which proved to be worthless. The bank, according to the auditor's report, owed depositors at the date of the failure over $71,000. Besides the deposits, the bank has outstanding a total of $24,982 in certificates of deposit. There were other evidences of debt which ran the total apparent indebtedness to nearly $200,000. E. L. Hendrey, the president, and most of his associates were convicted and are now on bond pending appeal.

BOSTON BANK ON THE SITUATION

"There has been some improvement in the monetary situation during the last month, but further restriction of mercantile credit, particularly in directions where overextended conditions have prevailed, is continuing. Money, released in the curtailing of credit, is being eagerly sought after by the large corporations whose necessities are urgent, as evidenced by the high rates which are being paid. This corporation borrowing, the disposition of bankers to go strong in these troublesome times, and the imminence of the crop movement have resulted in a continuance of the firm time rates of last month. There is practically no buying of outside paper, although the rates are nominally quoted at 6 to 6 1/4 per cent. Gold shipments have started afresh, and if continued will tend to firm up call money rates, which are still low at 3 to 3 1/2 per cent.

NEVADA BANK CLOSES

The First National of Goldfield, Nev., has gone into voluntary liquidation. The directors of the bank have issued a statement as of June 30th showing that the assets of the bank amount to $103,491.73 and that the liabilities are $34,966.95.

BANKERS TAKE CRUISE

Twelve prominent bankers from different sections of the country chartered a launch this week and left for a two-weeks' cruise on the waters of the gulf. The majority of the time will be spent in fishing on the coast waters. The cruise will wind up at Corpus Christi about the 27th. The party is made up of the following:

F. Dietze, German-American, New Orleans; S. Chesney, National Reserve, New York; W. B. Taylor, Boatmans Bank, St. Louis; A. T. Kahn, Commerce National, Sherman; D. W. Cooley, Union National, Houston; Joe Hirsch, Corpus Christi National; W. D. Snaders, De Kalb Exchange, De Kalb; J. B. Martindale, Alamo National, San Antonio; R. N. Martindale, M. and P. Bank, Martindale; J. W. Hoopes, City National, Galveston; G. M. Booth, Taylor National, Taylor; and W. T. Montgomery, railroad official, San Antonio.

COLONIAL TRUST TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Directors of the Colonial Trust and Savings voted this week to increase the capital stock of the bank from $600,000 to $1,000,000. Stockholders of record up to September 1st will be offered the privilege of subscribing for the new stock pro rata at $100 per share. After the new stock has been paid for at that price there will be $500,000 to be added to the surplus fund.

TO FORECLOSE ON $3,319,000

Boise, Idaho.—Attorneys for the State Bank of Chicago filed a petition in the federal court to foreclose a mortgage of $3,319,000 against the Idaho-Oregon Light and Power Company because of a default in the payment of $95,345, in interest on the bonds due and payable April 1st. The Chicago bank is the holder of the mortgage.

It is announced by officers of the company that this is but the first move in a reorganization and consolidation of the Idaho-Oregon Light and Power Company with the Idaho Traction Company, operating all the interurban lines in this vicinity.

PLAN NEW BANK BUILDING

President F. T. Moloney of the State National, Mattoon, Ill., has announced that the directors of this institution have formulated plans for the erection of a five story banking and office building at Seventeenth and Broadway, to cost about $100,000.

NORTH CAROLINA'S NEW PRESIDENT

The president of the North Carolina Bankers Association is George A. Holderness, president, Farmers Bank and Trust, Tanboro; Ex-President Leake S. Covington, cashier of the Bank of Rockingham, was elected a member of the nominating committee of the A. B. A., and J. C. Braswell, president of the Planters Bank at Rocky Mount, was elected vice-president of the A. B. A. for the state.

MONEY FIRM IN CHICAGO

Rates for money in Chicago are firmer now than at any time this year. In all of the larger banks 6 per cent seems to be the minimum on new loans and some money is being lent at 6 1/2 and 7 per cent. A considerable amount of commercial paper of high quality has been sold at 7 per cent.

It is not expected that the rates for money will be lower until the crop demands are fully supplied.

BATAVIAN NATIONAL BANK

Batavian National of La Crosse, Wis., has capital stock of $400,000 and a surplus fund amounting to $150,000. Undivided profits are $62,286 and the deposits $2,955,600. Officers are as follows: A. Hirsheimer, president; E. M. Wing, vice-president; John A. Bayer, cashier, and K. O. Klein, assistant cashier.

James B. Forgan Reviews Currency Bill

Veteran Chicago financier takes up some of the important provisions of the currency measure and offers suggestions

In discussing section 2, which provides for the organization of not less than twelve federal reserve banks, Mr. Forgan declares himself in favor of the position taken by the currency commission of the A. B. A. in its answer to question 13, submitted by the sub committee of the senate banking and currency committee, that one central reserve association with branches would best serve our necessities and that failing in this a small number of regional reserve associations with branches should be organized, but if there are to be a number of regional reserve associations they should be under some kind of central control in which both the government and the various associations should have representation. Three objections, however, were advanced to the regional reserve associations, which are familiar to all those who have studied the answers of the currency commission.

"From the standpoint of financial stability and strength," he said, "there is not a doubt in my mind that one central reserve association with branches in which all the reserves of all the banks could be mobilized and controlled would best serve the purposes of all business interests in all sections of the country. Not a single valid reason from a business standpoint has been put forth in favor of their multiplication. I venture to predict that within ten years, if twelve federal reserve banks are now established, congress will be called upon by the business interests of the country to pass an act consolidating them into one."

The belief is expressed that that portion of the bill which provides that the chairman of the board of directors of the federal reserve banks as designated and appointed by the federal reserve board, will be the principal executive officer of the federal reserve bank, will have a tendency to place the control of the federal reserve banks in a politically appointed body.

In regard to the federal reserve board, Mr. Forgan fears that the president might find it difficult to secure the services of a banker of adequate ability and banking experience to fill the position of governor and that the salary and conditions connected with the office are not such as to attract a man of sufficient ability unless he were willing to make a great personal sacrifice.

"It seems right and reasonable that if there are to be not less than twelve federal reserve banks there should be a federal reserve board to supervise and within reasonable limitations to regulate them. The government should be properly represented on the board, as also should be the commercial, industrial and agricultural interests of the country. And the contributing banks through the federal reserve banks which they own and which the federal reserve board is to regulate and direct should also be properly represented on it. Surely the national banks without such representation could not be expected, let alone compelled, to supply $105,000,000 capital and $410,000,000 deposits to the federal reserve banks. By such compulsion the rights of property would have to be entirely ignored and a practical confiscation of the possession and control of their own property to the extent of 40 per cent of their paid-in capital would take place. The directors of banks in their fiduciary capacity are directly responsible to their shareholders as well as to their depositors for the funds they would thus be compelled to place beyond their own control. Could they do so and would they do so if they could find a way out of it?"

Objection is made to the power given the federal reserve board to require a federal reserve bank to rediscount the paper of any other federal reserve bank.

Section 13 of the act, which states the conditions under which the federal reserve banks are to rediscount the bills and notes for the member banks and grants power to all member banks to accept to the extent of one-half of their paid-up capital drafts or bills of exchange drawn upon them at not exceeding six months' sight and growing out of transactions involving the importation or exportation of goods, constitutes the two principal advantages to be obtained from this act, in Mr. Forgan's opinion. "In regard to the power to be given to all member banks to accept time drafts drawn on them, all banks do not need the power," he said, "and I think it is doubtful if they should all have it. It seems to me that only those having a specified strength from the standpoint of paid-in capital and whose acceptances would pass as prime bills in the money markets open for such paper should enjoy this privilege. Otherwise there might be about as much difficulty in judging the quality of bank acceptances afloat in the market as there was in connection with the state bank note issues before the national banking system was inaugurated. The possibilities of undue inflation of credit resulting from the use or misuse of such acceptances should, in my judgment, be guarded against by restricting the privilege to banks having a paid-in capital of not less than $1,000,000."

Section 17, which relates to note issues, is next taken up. In this connection he says: "The proposed hybrid form of federal reserve notes—half government and half bank obligations—had better be either the one or the other. As bank notes they would be amply secured without the superfluous government guaranty. Issued by the banks when and as needed they would more readily automatically adjust themselves in volume to the actual commercial needs for them. As obligations of the government they are likely, as do our present government issues and our government bond-secured national bank notes, to remain too long in circulation, no active redemption of them being deemed necessary. It should not be overlooked that it is the active and constant redemption of a circulating medium that makes it elastic. Expansion without contraction is not elasticity, but inflation. I would very much fear inflation in connection with such an issue as is proposed. The suggestion that the federal reserve banks issue the notes and maintain a 50 per cent reserve against them, being taxed when their reserves fall below that figure, the tax to increase as the reserves diminish, is a good one and worthy of careful consideration."

Attention is called to the following inconsistencies in the bill:

"1. It is not stated what the banks in the reserve cities will be required to do with their additional reserve above the lawful money they are required to maintain after the thirty-six months' period, during which they may keep it either with the federal reserve banks or with a reserve agent in a central reserve city. This is evidently an inadvertent omission.

"2. The central reserve city banks for a period of fourteen months are required to maintain a reserve in lawful money of 25 per cent, thereafter for twelve months 22½ per cent and after twenty-six months 20 per cent. This must mean a 'legal reserve' not 'a reserve in lawful money,' as the next sentence permits them to immediately reduce their reserve in lawful money to 20 per cent and after sixty days to 10 per cent.

"A committee of the currency commission of the American Bankers Association has criticised this section as follows and as their criticism expresses my views I will here quote it:

"The reserve requirements in the bill will, it is believed, bear most hardly upon country banks and seriously curtail their ability to extend accommodations to their customers as compared with the requirements under existing law. It is suggested that no plan to redistribute deposits with a view to eliminating concentration at centers should overlook the natural flow of commerce between the country and the financial centers which contributes a natural part of the concentration of funds at centers, as distinguished from the artificial or unnatural concentration there. While the bill makes the requirement of reserve in the same percentage as under existing law, it does in effect increase the requirement of actual cash means, since country banks would find it necessary, in addition to the reserve specified, to carry considerable balances in reserve cities to enable them to transact their customers' business conveniently and in order to maintain a relation that will establish a privilege of borrowing upon collateral such as would not be available for discount with federal reserve banks.

"The same reasons apply measurably to reserve city banks."

"To this I would add that in the case of the reserve and central reserve city banks, to the extent that the legal reserve deposits of the banks are withdrawn from them, their loaning power will be proportionately curtailed and the contraction of credits which this would cause might produce a serious situation."

NORTH DAKOTA DEPOSITS DOWN

A comparative statement issued by the state examiner for the close of business on June 4th shows the 603 state banks and the three trust companies of North Dakota had $20,456,130.09 in deposits subject to check, which was a decrease of $2,388,359.42 from the showing on April 4th.

This decrease is accounted for in the fact that this is the time of the year when there is demand for cash among the farmers while their crops are growing, as the $1,164,798.82 increase in loans in that period testifies.

In the same period there was an increase of $167,633.45 in demand certificates of deposit and an increase of $894,480.55 in time certificates of deposit, which shows the savings of the people of the state have been gradually increasing. The statement also shows there has been an increase of $1,242,351.57 in the resources of the state bank and trust companies.

CENTRAL TRUST PENSION PLAN

A pension plan prepared by Henry R. Corbett, Insurance Exchange building, Chicago, has been adopted by the Central Trust Company of Illinois. The scheme provides for the retirement of employees upon reaching the age of sixty-five.

The main provisions are these:

After retirement the amount of annual pension is to be two per cent of the salary for each year of service. Illustration: A man beginning at forty years, salary $1,200, will receive at sixty-five a pension of $600. Two per cent of the $1,200 for each year from forty to sixty-five.

If at age forty-five he should receive an increase of $600, making his salary $1,800, his pension at sixty-five would increase $240 (two per cent of the $600 increase for each year from forty-five to sixty-five), making the total pension $600, plus $240, or $840. The widow and children under 18 will be entitled to receive half the pension which would have been payable to the employee himself. Total disability entitles the employee to an annual pension of two per cent of the aggregate salary for all the years of his service. The age adopted for retirement will be sixty-five, the bank being in position, however, to retire the employee somewhat sooner, or, with his consent, retain him longer, according to the circumstances and the value of his services. As a rule a minimum service of fifteen years will be required to entitle the employee to a pension. At dismissal or resignation (or at death if not entitled to pension for family) the employees' contributions are returned with three per cent interest, compounded annually.

Employees will be required to contribute one-third of the actual cost to their respective present ages (or ages at entrance later), the bank contributing the remainder. This pension plan is based upon the actual mathematical cost of the stipulated pension, according to the American experience table of mortality and an interest rate of four and one-half per cent.

A table has been prepared showing for each age what percentage of salary must be paid continuously until age sixty-five in order to provide the stipulated pension. This percentage varies from 3.69 per cent at age eighteen to 10.35 per cent at age forty-five. That is, for a man now aged eighteen, it will cost 3.69 per cent of each pay check until he is sixty-five years old to provide the required pension, of which the employee will pay 1.23 per cent—the bank 2.46 per cent.

WATERWORKS COMPANY AFFAIRS TO BE ADJUSTED BY COURT

The six per cent preferred stock of the American Water Works and Guarantee Company is now selling around fifty. The common stock, which passed its dividend in May, is selling around twenty-five. There is not much doing.

The common and preferred stockholders, following the appointment of receivers for the company and some of its subsidiaries, have united for the protection of their interests. Edmund C. Converse, Albert H. Wiggin, and Charles F. Brooker of New York have decided to act as a stockholders' protective committee and request stockholders to deposit their stock certificates with the Bankers Trust Company, depository for the committee. Stockholders will receive certificates of deposit specifying the class and amount of stock deposited.

The American Water Works Company has done a great deal of constructive work in developing water power and to that extent commands sympathy in the company's present position. But the business of holding companies in the utility field is mostly for the purpose of profits to the promoters and this element of the company's business is what is regarded by the bankers as having finally led to its downfall. Promotion profits come under the class of "easy money" and when the constructive idea is cast aside for the purely promotion one the essentials of sound business enterprise are being left out of consideration.

Wilmington, Del.—Oscar O. Gouert was elected assistant treasurer of the Wilmington Trust Company.

SEES PROSPERITY FOR WEST

David R. Forgan, president of the National City of Chicago, sees prosperous times in store for this section of the country. He said:

"Crops generally look excellent, though with some damage in various localities. Business is still good in this section. The danger of a money crisis is never over under our present banking and currency laws. Think tariff reduction has been discounted. No reason in the West itself why it should not be as prosperous as last year. Money very tight, but country banks running strong and likely to take care of themselves during the fall."

ADVISE PURCHASE OF STOCKS

Ware and Leland say: "We favor buying good stocks now for the following reasons: The market acts as though well liquidated and thoroughly sold out. Many good dividend payers can be bought at bargain prices. We have had all the bad news possible and the next change in the situation should make it appear more optimistic. Also the short interest is reported as large, and of course will have to be covered some day. There seems to be no further adverse influence possible unless later on in the year there should develop a great scarcity of money to the extent that it would be impossible to negotiate loans on stocks. There is plenty of time ahead, however, to foresee this."

THE NUMERICAL TRANSIT SYSTEM

Burroughs Adding Machine Company is sending out extracts from a paper read by Roscoe P. Sears, auditor of the Cleveland National Bank, before the local A. I. B. Chapter, relating to the numerical transit system and in which is given a history of the various methods of handling transit items which led up to the adoption of the A. B. A. numerical system. Mr. Sears describes the methods in vogue in his own bank.

George Toombs has been elected assistant cashier of the Winfield (Kan.) National.

By C. C. Burford

It is too early yet to predict the outcome of the oats crop in Illinois but bankers everywhere are awaiting the returns from the fields with considerable anxiety. Throughout the dry districts of central and southern Illinois the oats will be short, less than one-half of a crop being the expectations. "A half-crop of oats, an uneven stand of corn and a wheat yield of twenty-five bushels to the acre" is the summary drawn by twenty-five retail grain dealers from eighteen Illinois cities who gathered in Decatur last week to discuss the general crop outlook.

The wheat yields have been generally good this year, the general wheat outlook being better than the oats. Counties which raise wheat in preference to oats will fare better this year and there are many farmers who believe that wheat is a better paying crop for central Illinois than are oats, although the black loam of the corn belt is not generally recognized as the best wheat lands. "Corn is King," first, last and all the time, and the welfare of the corn crop is now the real concern of bankers and land-owners throughout the corn belt. In spite of long dry periods and insufficient moisture there are favorable indications for a good crop of corn. General business has been good all summer and there are good prospects for continued good business, although some economy must be made by those who have raised "short" crops.

New Banks Chartered in Illinois.

A permit has been issued by the auditor of public accounts of Illinois for the organization of the Utica State Bank of Utica, La Salle county, with capital of $25,000. The permit was issued to George M. Reynolds, A. O. Esmond, A. C. Wylie, N. J. Cary, James Bauman and Kimball W. Leland.

A permit also has been issued for the incorporation of the Lake County State Bank of North Chicago with capital stock of $50,000, the permit having been issued to John Sherwin, Frank N. Tomlinson, Louis B. Jolly, James T. Hayes, Earl P. Sedgwick, C. Oliver Holmes, Orin D. Goss, William Hamlet, and Jacob Kukar.

The stockholders of the Calumet Trust and Savings Bank of Morgan Park have voted to increase the capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000, the stockholders being given the right to subscribe for the same number of shares as they are now holding.

The Capital State Savings, at North Clark street and Balmoral avenue, Chicago, has begun business in a new building and the opening of the bank was marked by a public reception. W. J. Klingenberg, who is president of the Sheridan Trust and Savings of Chicago, is head of the Capital and the stockholders of the two institutions are practically the same.

Young Banker Dies Abroad

Joseph H. Zearing, who has been a teller with the First National of Champaign for the past four years, died in Edinburgh, Scotland, of diphtheria, which disease he contracted while en route to Europe to spend a number of weeks sight-seeing. Mr. Zearing was reared in Princeton, Ill., and graduated from the University of Illinois in 1908. He was a prominent university student and after graduation accepted a position in the First National Bank of Champaign. He was very prominent in Champaign and University Masonic circles, being especially active in the Acacia fraternity, the Masonic organization at the University of Illinois, and had much to do with the plans for an immense chapter-house which the fraternity expects to build in the near future. Mr. Zearing was about twenty-six years of age and unmarried. He was a young man of most excellent character, of pleasing personality and kindly disposition and his future seemed bright and prosperous. The many friends of this high-minded and ambitious young banker were deeply shocked when they learned of his death although they had known that his health had not been robust for some time. Owing to rigid quarantine laws burial was in Scotland.

New Bank Building at Blandinsville

One of the best appointed banking houses in the smaller towns of the state in the new building of the Huston Banking Company. Incorporated, of Blandinsville, a thriving town in the western part of Illinois near Macomb. The bank is a family institution and is owned by the well-known Huston family, who have lived in Blandinsville since 1828. The Hustons entered the banking business in 1895, John and Preston Huston establishing a private banking business with W. H. McCord, under the name of Huston & McCord. Ten years later Mr. McCord retired and George B. and Guy Huston, sons of John and Preston, entered the business. In 1907 the Hustons purchased the business of Grigsby Bros. & Co., which banking business was the successor of a pioneer private bank known as Hardin & Co., which had been established in 1868. In 1910 the Hustons took out a charter as a state bank and the business now is known as the Huston Banking Company. The bank, with assets of over $700,000, is one of the largest state banks in towns of less than one thousand population in the state. John Huston is the president; George B. Huston, vice-president; Guy Huston, cashier, and W. D. Thomas, assistant cashier.

The building of the Huston Banking Company is a square structure, of classic lines, and was designed by John N. Sherwood of Chicago. The E. Jackson Casse Company of Chicago furnished the vault equipment and the last word in safety and security in vaults is provided. The interior of the bank is most elegantly appointed and every detail of beauty and convenience are included. The bank fixtures run entirely around the room and there are cages and private rooms for directors, which one does not always see in banks in such small towns. The entire structure is a monumental piece of work and reflects upon the stability of the Hustons, indicating that with a new structure and an incorporated bank that their bank is permanently established in their community. Among the directors are S. J. Grigsby, whose father was president of the old Grigsby bank; Isaac Argenbright, a breeder of Shorthorn cattle and Percheron horses and an extensive farmer; and E. N. Hicks, whose family is one of the largest land owners in that vicinity.

Blandinsville always has been known as an important live stock town, there being a number of breeders of cattle, hogs and horses there who are known over the state. Almost every farmer there feeds at least one carload of cattle every year and almost every customer of the Huston Banking Company is a stock feeder. The town is known as a center of Angus and Shorthorn cattle and Percheron and Clydesdale horses, and a number of fast harness horses, including Minor Heir, were trained there. Good stock can be seen upon almost every farm around the town. This point is in striking contrast to the "mining" processes of farming corn and oats only which prevail in many parts of the state and which ruinous methods are most severely condemned by enlightened farmers and bankers.

The Huston Banking Company has deposits of $655,000, capital and undivided profits of $82,500 and loans of $616,000, with $40,000 in real estate and $81,000 cash and due from banks. THE CHICAGO BANKER has been a visitor at the bank for a number of years. The correspondents of the bank are the Continental and Commercial and the Live Stock Exchange Nationals of Chicago, the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis and the Illinois National of Peoria.

Illinois Notes

A meeting held in Rock Island and attended by business men from that city and Moline resulted in a movement to employ a crop expert for Rock Island county. It is believed that it will cost about $5,000 a year to carry on the work and it is planned to employ a man for three years to give the farmers practical instruction in scientific farming.

The Peoria County Farm Bureau has been in operation for a few weeks and the work of aiding the farmers of the county is now fairly well started. Henry Truitt, who is in charge of the work, has opened offices in the Peoria Association of Commerce building and is very enthusiastic over the encouragement which he has received from the citizens of the county.

Bankers who are acquainted with George W. Curtiss, as hundreds of them are, will join in sympathy with him in the death of his wife. Mr. Curtiss has been president of the Dime Savings Bank of Peoria for many years and also has been president of the Peoria Clearing House.

The Peoria Highway Boosters have adopted as their slogan, "Build Good Roads and See Illinois First." They declare that the present crazy-quilt patchwork system soon will be succeeded by modern and up-to-date methods and that the onward march of progress demands better roads and modern pavements.

Bloomington is rejoicing over the new shops which the Chicago and Alton railroad recently has built in that city at an enormous expense. These shops will mean permanent industries for Bloomington for years to come and will add much to the prosperity of one of the best cities in the state.

Roy C. Bishop, county agricultural agent of Livingston county, is conducting publicity departments in Livingston county newspapers and is seeking in every way to aid the farmers of his county in their efforts to do better farming.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE FOR COMPTROLLER

J. R. Stevens, examiner for the New Orleans Clearing House, has the indorsement of a number of state bankers' associations of the South for comptroller of the currency, also the support of senators from Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and North Carolina, and from one of the senators from South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, West Virginia, Maine and Delaware. It is twenty years since the comptroller has been from the South.

OLD NATIONAL OF OSHKOSH

Old National of Oshkosh, Wis., has capital stock of $300,000, surplus and profits of $158,000 and deposits amounting to $2,827,000. The officers are as follows: E. P. Sawyer, president; Chas. Schriber, vice-president; Louis Schriber, cashier, and J. P. Fitch and F. A. Labudde, assistant cashiers.

CAIRO HAS CLEARINGS RECORD

Despite the fact that this was a flood year and there was a complete cessation of business for two weeks, Cairo (Ill.) bank clearings for the first six months of 1913 have broken all previous records.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

A meeting of the incorporators of the Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company of the Wisconsin Bankers Association will be held in Madison July 22d, to elect officers. Articles of incorporation were filed this week with the insurance commissioner. The incorporators are E. A. Dow, Plymouth; Earl Pease, Grand Rapids; H. A. Moehlenpah, Clinton; C. R. Thompson, Richland Center; E. S. Williams, Delevan, and eleven others. The articles were filed by Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. Liability to members is limited to the annual premium, one-fourth of 1 per cent of deposits a year.

Bartlett Returns

George D. Bartlett returned from the annual convention of the Minnesota Bankers Association in Duluth last week, with the report that the administration currency bill came in for principal attention. George M. Reynolds of Chicago held that the bill would immediately curtail the loaning power of banks and adversely affect business. A resolution was passed opposing the bill in its present form but urging need of currency reform. A plan is on foot to secure a special train for Wisconsin and Minnesota delegates to the convention of the A. B. A. in Boston next October.

Approves Currency Bill

William George Bruce, secretary of the Milwaukee Merchants and Manufacturers Association and member of the currency committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States believes that the Owen-Glass bill to reform currency is right in its fundamental provisions.

"The bill carries the first principle of currency making," said Mr. Bruce upon his return from a recent currency conference at Washington. "This is absolute government control of the system, not only in times of stress, but at all times. I also believe that the government should be responsible for the $500,000,000 or more of notes contemplated. The government should not only back them but guarantee them. They will then command the full confidence of the people. There may be some minor defects in the bill, as it stands. For instance, shifting a certain portion of the banking capital of the country swiftly to twelve regional banks may cause some disturbance of business conditions. If three or four of these banks were first established it would cause less of a jolt. The government should move slowly and adapt itself to actual conditions as far as possible."

Discuss Bank Stock Taxation

The report of the special investigating committee recommending impeachment of Tax Commissioner L. A. Arnold of Milwaukee has reopened discussion of the question of taxation of bank stocks, over which the charges against Mr. Arnold originated. Assistant City Attorney G. S. Canright supports Mr. Arnold and exonerates him from the charge of malfeasance in office by recommending the same course in assessment of bank stocks this year as that taken by Mr. Arnold last year and of which he was found guilty of "coercion" of assessors by the special council investing committee. The opinion was given in reply to a request from the board of assessors as to how the stock of the First National Bank and the First Savings and Trust Company should be assessed. "To understand the situation it is necessary to state that the bank and trust company are still two separate corporations," said Mr. Canright, "although the latter is owned by the former company. The holder of each share of stock in the First National Bank carries a corresponding interest in the First Savings and Trust Company and this is responsible for the fact that last year the bank stock had a market value of $296. Therefore to get the true market value of the bank stock it is necessary to deduct from it the interest each share of stock holds in the trust company. I advised the tax commissioner a year ago as a matter of law that this deduction must be made so as to prevent double assessment, which was done. This was one of the points drawn into the Arnold investigation, and on which one of the charges of malfeasance was based."

Ex-Tax Commissioner Frank B. Schutz advises referring the whole matter to the state tax commission. "These banking institutions are separate corporations and under the law should be assessed separately," says Mr. Schutz.

The board of review has directed the tax commissioner and assessors to compile a de-

Wisconsin Notes

As the result of difficulty in the conversion of securities offered as collateral on a note which he endorsed, John I. Beggs, formerly of Milwaukee has commenced suit against George Kobusch, chairman of the board of directors of the St. Louis Car Company for $19,606.75. Beggs states that he endorsed a note for $50,000 which Kobusch gave the First National of Milwaukee, putting up as collateral 400 shares of stock in the Union Trust Company of New Jersey and 500 shares common of the car company. The petition states that when the note was not paid the collateral was sold for $30,393.25, Beggs being forced to pay the difference to the bank.

R. M. Pomeroy, vice-president of the State Bank of Minong, was instantly killed on his farm near Minong when the roof of a new concrete building on which he was working collapsed, burying him in the debris.

Crandon residents are seeking a pardon for Albert J. Eidsmoe, former cashier of the First National of that place, now serving a five-year sentence in the federal penitentiary. The petition was circulated following the discharge of John E. Hart, former cashier of the Bank of Elroy, and George W. Price, of Marinette, in the federal court two weeks ago. Eidsmoe entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced, while Hart and Price stood trial and were acquitted of similar charges. The petition was drawn by Henry Hay, one of the directors of the bank of which Eidsmoe was formerly cashier.

EUROPEAN MONEY IN NEW YORK

Europe loaned time money in New York—90 days at 5 1-4 per cent—and broke the local rate. It also caused the stock bears to seek cover and prices to go up. It was a novelty but was a huge success.

BANK FINDS UNDERLYING CONDITIONS SOUND

Mechanics-American National of St. Louis says in its July circular:

"The majority of the St. Louis merchants are still doing a profitable business, and in some branches the volume continues to average well above that of a year ago, when the markets were upset with a good many uncertainties which no longer exist. From now on crop conditions will have a most important bearing upon the whole business outlook. The indications are satisfactory, and it looks as if the total yield in this section would be sufficient to impose a considerable burden upon the banks of the West and the Southwest in connection with the crop moving preparations. There is no doubt whatever but that very large shipments of currency will have to be made this season from the reserve centers of this territory. Money is still in good demand here, but business men are being accommodated with whatever they need for carrying on legitimate undertakings.

"This inquiry is likely to continue for some time to come, since the demands from all quarters appear to be well above those of a year ago, and show that while there has been a falling off in business in some lines, there have been sufficient gains in others to give the banks plenty of opportunities to employ at good rates whatever loanable funds they have to offer. The situation has been admirably handled, and there is nothing exceptional in present conditions unless it be that most borrowers have been very conservative; that large corporations have postponed new financing in cases where such operations could be deferred; and that underlying conditions throughout this territory are unusually sound and characterized by a caution which has done much to strengthen the position of merchants generally.

"Oats and hay have been a good deal damaged by the excessive heat that has prevailed in certain sections of Missouri and Illinois. There are also indications that a portion of the corn crop in this country has been, and to an extent is being, threatened. An abundant rainfall would be of great service over a large portion of the Southwest, where the country is suffering from the dry weather. Conditions cannot be called critical, for high temperatures at this season are not unusual, but a point has been reached where the crop outlook in various sections will be largely governed by the rainfall of the next few weeks. Given fairly favorable weather conditions from now on, it is probable that the yield of corn and wheat will be highly satisfactory.

"The agricultural communities are hopeful, but farmers generally are continuing to pursue a conservative course and will not buy more liberally until the crops are assured. The banks of the agricultural sections are pretty well loaned up, and should the yields be very large, a large amount of new borrowing will be required in connection with the crop moving arrangements. The demand is perfectly healthful, and there is nothing in the outlook to occasion alarm, and no indications whatever of sensational conditions in the money market. It may be said that the banks of the Southwest are in excellent shape to meet the demands made upon them."

LOUISVILLE CHAPTER ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Louisville Chapter, American Institute of Banking, the following were elected officers for the coming year: President, Thomas Green, National Bank of Kentucky; vice-president, C. H. G. McKeldin, Fidelity-Columbia Trust; secretary, V. F. Kimbel, Louisville Trust; treasurer, Coleman Simpson, National Bank of Kentucky.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has been fair, while the rate was firm and uniform, call and time loans being discounted at six per cent. Commercial paper was in moderate offerings and was discounted by brokers at six to six and one-half per cent, in some cases a little higher. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand, but the premium was very small.

Study Currency Bill

A committee of nine St. Louis bank presidents in an all-day session at the Log Cabin Club, Tuesday, examined in detail the provisions of the Glass-Owen currency bill and the report of the currency commission of the American Bankers Association on the measure. The inquiry is made at the request of the St. Louis bankers who appointed the committee several days ago. The members of the committee are Festus J. Wade, president Mercantile National; Breckinridge Jones, president Merchants-Laclede National; Walker Hill, president Mechanics-American National; N. A. McMillan, president St. Louis Union Trust; Edwards Whitaker, president Boatmans; Tom Randolph, president National Bank of Commerce; F. O. Watts, first vice-president Third National; Breckinridge Jones, president Mississippi Valley Trust, and Otto L. Teichmann, president German-American. They were unable to reach a decision for a report back to a meeting of all the local bankers and adjourned to meet the latter part of the week or the first of next week.

Contest for Feeder Cattle

A contest for feeder cattle, the first of its kind ever held in the United States, is announced by the National Stock Yards, East St. Louis, for September 1st to September 26th, with $1,500 offered in prizes and no expenses attached to the exhibitor. The idea originated with General Manager E. F. Bisbee, when he found that feeders have difficulty in getting a supply of desirable cattle for their corn. He says that cattle feeders in the corn belt are growing more particular each year about the grade of cattle bought to eat the corn crop. They all want high grade stock of the beef breeds. As an incentive to raise the better grades the stock yards company and commission men are offering this $1,500 in prizes in the hope it will convince the range men it is better to grow the improved stock. The seven states included in the prize list are Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas—with prizes of $200 for each state—first $100, second $65 and third $35. In addition, there is a prize of $100 as a sweepstakes for the best load. Professor W. J. Kennedy, head of the agricultural extension department of the Iowa College of Agriculture, Ames, Ia., will be on hand daily to do the scoring. Iowa was eliminated from the list so as to relieve the professor from any suspicion of favoring his own state.

Twelve Banks Chartered

State Bank Commissioner Mitchell issued charters to ten banks, with a combined capital of $163,500, and to two trust companies, with an aggregate capital stock of $200,000, during the month of June. The increase in the capital stock of banks and trust companies during the month amounted to $1,348,000.

An attachment suit for $6,832.58 has been filed in the circuit court by the Central National of St. Louis against the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Slater, Mo. The petition alleges that January 6th the Slater bank executed a note for $10,000 in favor of the Central National, agreeing to repay the money on demand at 6 per cent. April 9th the Slater bank repaid $3,000 and also paid interest up to May 31st. The amount sued for is alleged to be due.

Elect New President

At a meeting of the directors of the Commercial Bank of Booneville held last week E. W. Chilton was elected president to take the place of Judge J. H. Sollinger, who has been unable to attend to the duties of the position for a long time. Mr. Chilton has been engaged in banking in Booneville for thirty years and stands very high in the estimation of the community.

Missouri Notes

The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Lebanon has been organized with a capital of $30,000. O. L. Weissgerber will be president and E. W. Cook, cashier. The directors include the officers and J. E. Millsap, W. E. McComb, J. H. Caufield, W. H. Owen and C. D. Rippey.

A charter has been issued to the Bank of Maxville, Maxville; capital $10,000. The incorporators are William Schwalbert, Henry Marx, Sr., William Vogel and others.

Davis Reappointed Banking Examiner

John M. Davis, assistant cashier of the German National, Little Rock, Ark., has been reappointed state bank examiner, a position created by the act of the recent Arkansas legislature. Mr. Davis was appointed examiner in March last, by Governor Robinson, but it was ascertained that the law would not become effective until ninety days after its passage, and the office was declared vacant. The appointment of Mr. Davis by Governor Futrell was made at the request of practically all the bankers of Arkansas. The state banking department will not begin operations until January 1st, but Mr. Davis, who will be inducted into office on September 1st, then will begin preparations for its organization. He has announced that he will appoint as his deputy J. D. Covey of Bentonville. Mr. Covey has had twenty years experience in banking and is at present cashier of the Benton County National at Bentonville. He is well known in banking circles throughout the state and at the recent Arkansas Bankers Association convention was elected president of the organization. Mr. Davis has been engaged in the banking business since 1898, when he left Clarksville to assist in the reorganization of the Bank of Central Arkansas at Lonoke, of which he was elected cashier. He held this position until 1905 when he returned to Clarksville to accept the position as cashier of the Bank of Clarksville. In 1911 he came to Little Rock and was made assistant cashier of the German National Bank. His appointment is for four years.

Bank Creditors Organize

A meeting of a committee of seven men, representing depositors in the defunct Valley Savings Bank, Argenta, Ark., have formed a permanent organization with E. O. Manes as chairman, A. R. Finke, vice-chairman, and E. A. Vogel, secretary, for the purpose of working at all times in conjunction with the receiver, George Vaughan, and to lend him all aid possible in the speedy settlement of the affairs of the bank. The first move toward the prosecution of those said to be responsible for the failure of the bank and for the loss of approximately $150,000 to depositors, was taken last week when Clare A. Strickland, vice-president; W. S. Grove, cashier, and W. J. Denson, assistant cashier, were bound over to await the action of the Pulaski county grand jury. The men separately are charged with "knowingly receiving moneys and permitting moneys to be received after the bank was insolvent." T. W. Cotton, Adolph Kahn and Fred Schneider, directors in the bank, were arrested and released on bond on Thursday of last week, permitted and connived at the receiving of money at the bank when they knew it to be insolvent." A warrant has been issued for the arrest of W. H. Hurst, president of the bank and leading spirit in three other concerns which failed since the bank failure. Hurst went to St. Louis immediately after the failure, saying that he would try to raise the funds, but all efforts to locate him have proved futile.

B. L. Gill, the retiring commissioner of insurance and banking of Texas, has gone to his old home at Terrell where he will spend a week or more. Mr. Gill's resignation will not now become effective until August 1st, and while he may not be in Austin, he will be the official head of the department. This arrangement will give the governor about two weeks more in which to select a suitable banker for the position vacated by Mr. Gill.

Record Texas Corn Crop

Texas is very optimistic over the splendid crop prospects in every part of the state, according to press reports. More seasonable weather for the growing of cotton and corn, as well as for the production of forage, could have hardly been had than that which has obtained ever since planting time. The rains have been abundant and timely. The corn crop is made. It will be the largest production in the history of the state and it is estimated that the yield will exceed 225,000,000 bushels. The recent general and heavy rainfall added fully 25,000,000 bushels to the prospective production of this grain, it is claimed. Many farmers and others are at a loss to understand the almost absolute freedom of the cotton from insect pests, which in former years have wrought enormous destruction to the crop. Carefully compiled statistics show that the cotton acreage of the state this year is approximately 900,000 acres larger than last year. This should, it is stated, give an increase in the total yield of more than 400,000 bales. It is considered practically certain that the crop of the state this year will be in excess of 5,000,000 bales and it will not be surprising if it runs to 5,500,000 bales.

ADJUSTING BANKING BILL DETAILS

Much can be accomplished often in an indirect way. By going before the Minnesota bankers at Duluth Mr. Reynolds found an opportunity to address the whole reading public, so generally was his talk printed by the daily press of the country. He was the first to make formal estimate of the soundness and to classify the weaknesses of the administration banking bill. The Duluth Herald is an "independent" in the newspaper field but has supported Wilson from the very beginning of his public career. It is known as an administration paper. The president sets great store by the Herald, as is well known. The editor heard Mr. Reynolds attentively, and this is his comment in part:

As was to be expected, Mr. Reynolds' talk on the banking bill was an extremely able statement of the banker's side of the question. It was fair, withal, and open-minded and not hide bound, though not lacking in positiveness. If everybody approaches the problem in the same spirit there will be no difficulty in reaching the highly desirable result of an agreement on a bill that will best serve all interests. The interests of the banks should be carefully conserved in any currency and banking legislation that may be adopted, and the advice and experience of the bankers should be consulted freely. Mr. Reynolds has contributed to the discussion an intelligent and temperate statement which we are sure will have its due weight with congress.

The editor was especially pleased to note that the Chicagoan "did not fall into the common error that banking is exclusively a private prerogative."

It was noted that Mr. Reynolds "did not relish government control, though welcoming regulation from that source." The writer gave it as his opinion that while federal control is essential there could be no valid objection "to giving bankers larger representation so long as the government supremacy is acknowledged." It was freely conceded that "many changes are yet to be made," and that "Mr. Reynolds' talk will have great weight with congress." Among the points made by the editor which should not be overlooked are:

That the first essential is the public welfare. Cash and credit are to be mobilized so that they will be effective to their maximum capacity; but the process is not intended for the benefit of the banks any more than for their harm. It is intended to make the banks, and the resources which are entrusted to them, more useful to the public. What is to be done is to be for the best interests of all—bankers, merchants, manufacturers, laborers and professional men. Therefore it would be as wrong to let the control rest in the hands of one class as another. Control should be by the government in the common interest, though that does not mean that the controlling board should not have the fullest possible benefit of banking experience in its councils. President Wilson's insistence is upon fundamentals like control in the public interest. His viewpoint is that of the common good; and we are sure that he and those who are working with him will give full weight to every practical suggestion, not affecting adversely the fundamental essentials, that qualified bankers like Mr. Reynolds may offer.

Rumor has it that many members of congress, both houses, will be in Boston for the convention if the currency bill is not passed or defeated before then. The requests from Washington for rooms at Boston hotels for convention week are five hundred. Demands for an open discussion with Mr. Reynolds as leader for the bankers have been made. Should such an arrangement be agreed upon "all previous records for attendance will be dumped in the bag." At New Orleans the Aldrich plan held the boards, and perhaps it just so happened, but the speakers were all pro-Aldrich in a most positive degree. At Boston that mistake should not be repeated. It will help mightily if the big bankers and the congress can agree on a bill such as this country needs and so richly deserves.

LEGISLATORS WHO MISREPRESENT

The character of some of the legislation enacted nowadays raises a doubt in many minds as to whether we really have "representative" government. "Let the people rule" and similar expressions sound quite democratic in a campaign speech and help wonderfully in the acquisition of votes, but unless the ideas embraced in such expressions are followed out in practice, the "people" are "ruled" by their "misrepresentatives."

In Illinois, and in other states, public sentiment has been very strong against the promiscuous organization of banks and unsupervised banking. There can be no doubt of the will of the people in this respect. Nevertheless, in spite of the numerous attempts which have been made to pass remedial legislation, we still are compelled to tolerate "banks" conducted under absolutely no supervision other than that of the owners and to see inexperienced people running banks without complying with any of the legal requirements imposed upon "real" bankers.

The newspapers contain many examples of the pernicious results of such a condition. It is hard to believe that members of the legislature fail to appreciate the seriousness of the problem presented. If this hypothesis is correct, but one conclusion is possible. Candidates for election to the legislature should be made to declare their attitude on this matter and should not be permitted to dodge the issue. Chicago had another private bank failure last week, loss probably total to depositors. One or two creditors seem to have been secured. This keeps up the record of about one such failure per week in Illinois.

LETTING IN THE LIGHT

Secretary Bartlett of Wisconsin has adopted a wise policy in sending to member banks certified copies of the Owen-Glass currency bill accompanied by Senator Owen's explanation of it. He calls attention of the members to the fact that "the financial papers are full of the other side of the question." Few of them will admit anything favorable to or explanatory of the new bank act, this being one weakness of the banker side of the contest. Bartlett has the right and the broader view, which is typical of Wisconsin on all public questions. Up in that great state, said by economists to have a more advanced code of laws than any other state or nation in history, details are conceded if the main issue is right. This is the true progressive religion of the student of finance and economics.

Of course there are two sides to the question. Chairman Glass of the house committee met one of the denouncing critics recently. The critic could see nothing in the whole world "so dangerous as government control," to which Chairman Glass softly responded:

"The question of government control seems to have provoked the greatest amount of criticism, and upon this question opinions may fairly differ. The bill itself provides a wholesome means between the extremes of absolute government control and absolute bank control. In short, the bill gives the banks full control of all the ordinary banking functions and reserves to the government the powers of examination, supervision and conservation—meaning by the latter term the right to step in when the interests of the entire business community demand and prevent widespread and disastrous financial disturbances."

Mr. Glass further explained that the regional reserve banks are operated by the bankers themselves, as all know who read, but claims a board of non-bankers should be in a position to step in at a vital point "in the interests of the whole American people." "Another feature of the bill," said the chairman, "which has been subjected to serious criticism, is the reserve provision. The purpose of this provision was to relieve the congestion of money in the central reserve cities and to put a check upon the habit of using the reserve funds of the country for stock speculation purposes."

This anti-speculation provision will upset central reserve balances unless changed, but withal it is one of the most popular countryside features in the whole act as drawn. The chairman's critic demanded that Mr. Glass explain the bond refunding section as he understands it:

"The bond refunding feature of the bill, involving retirement of national bank notes at the end of a 20-year period and the substitution of 3 per cent government bonds without the circulation privilege for the existing 2 per cent bonds, seems to have provoked some controversy. This provision, which was in the original draft of the bill, was subsequently omitted, but there was such a protest from bankers and other holders of 2 per cent bonds that the provision was reinstated. I may state that owing to some confusion as to the exact meaning of the provision this paragraph of the bill will be so amended as to indicate clearly that any national bank may maintain its circulation privilege as long as it is possible to obtain bonds during the 20-year period. At the end of that time all of the 2 per cent bonds not then retired by permission will be refunded into 3 per cents by the mandate of the law."

Every state secretary should put his members, like those of Wisconsin, in possession of "the other side of the case." The time to modify objectionable provisions is right now. Do as Bartlett suggests. "Let your views reach your member of congress." Then it's up to him to "do the rest." Go to the Boston convention. It will be a sort of national referendum on the question, but don't go handicapped with the notion that there is but one side to the issue or that the bankers are the only legitimately interested parties to it.

HIS DEATH A PUBLIC LOSS

The death of Charles H. Huttig, president of the American Bankers Association and of the Third National, St. Louis, is a distinct loss to the public as well as to the financial world and to its greatest and most powerful social and business organization. No more popular or deeply loved official ever served the American bankers. His career as a banker would have been phenomenal for a less gifted man. He had grown rich in commercial pursuits before he ventured into that most trying of all professions—banking. He grew and broadened as a man even more rapidly than his bank grew until he finally was elected without a dissenting voice to the premier position known to the whole banking world—the presidency of the American Bankers Association.

During the past year Mr. Huttig suffered as few mortals ever do. No word of complaint ever left his lips. His cheery disposition conveyed hopes of recovery which were not to be realized.

The end came in the peace and quiet of his mountain home, where his life had been prolonged by the ceaseless and loving vigil of Mrs. Huttig, always at his side. His death is a distinct loss to all who knew him and his example of patient tolerance and indefatigable industry will long remain as a standard to be attained.

DENIES BLAME FOR PITTSBURGH FAILURE

Lawrence O. Murray, formerly comptroller of the currency, in a statement issued this week denied all blame for the failure of the First-Second National of Pittsburgh. Mr. Murray said:

"A few weeks before my term of office expired a plan to consolidate the First National Bank of Pittsburgh and the Second National was laid before us. The plan had been carefully worked out by the board of directors of each bank and had their hearty approval. It provided in the usual way for the voluntary liquidation of one bank and the increase of capital of the other, the increased capital being used to purchase the assets of the liquidating bank. The boards of directors of the two banks went over the assets of each bank with the greatest care, taking several days to do it, and agreed on the value of the stock of each bank for the purpose of consolidation. The examiner's report showed the stock to be about the same value as the directors fixed it. The papers presented to me set forth the fact that the board of directors of each bank wanted to consolidate; that they had gone over the assets of the two banks carefully; that they had agreed as to their value and had fixed on the valuation of stock in each bank as a basis of their going together. To these papers was added a letter from the bank examiner for the district, recommending and approving the plan. I gave the matter careful consideration and approved the plan of merger.

"When I became comptroller, five years ago, the First National Bank of Pittsburgh was under criticism. The situation was in the office when I went there—it did not develop during my term. After I became comptroller the bank was forced to charge off one million and a quarter in losses, and just before the consolidation the bank charged off over eight hundred thousand more, so that during my term more than two millions of losses were forced out of the bank. That is a tremendous cleanup in a bank of that capital and surplus and it was done in about two years.

"After the first charge off of losses of a million and a quarter, the bank still had a capital of a million, surplus of a million, and some undivided profits. The book value of the stock, therefore, showed over $200 a share. In the report of the examiner just before the consolidation he estimated additional losses of $800,000, and that amount was charged out at the time the plan of consolidation was made. The charge off left the book value around 150—the basis on which the banks went together.

"There never was a report from any examiner during my term that ever showed the capital of the bank to be impaired. I could not legally close a bank when the report on it showed it to be solvent. There was never a word from any examiner during my term that any reports the bank was making were not correct reports, and I never heard of such a thing, either directly or indirectly, until I read it in the press recently."

Bennettsville, S. C.—A. L. Hamer was elected president and treasurer and T. M. Hamer, vice-president and secretary of the Farmers Bank and Trust Company.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Cleveland now has two banks with deposits in excess of $50,000,000. The deposits of the Citizens Savings and Trust have averaged above $50,000,000 since July 1st, when it came into the custodianship of some $6,500,000 of city money. Heretofore the Society for Savings, the first of the Cleveland banks to reach that figure in deposits, has held the distinction alone. It has been above $50,000,000 for about six years. To-day its deposits are around $58,000,000 and its total resources around $63,000,000. Total resources of the citizens are $58,000,000. The First National is third with $35,000,000 and total resources of about $42,000,000; Cleveland Trust fourth with deposits close upon $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 total resources. There are nine leading banks in Cleveland whose deposits rank around $10,000,000 or upwards. These nine control $247,000,000 of the $310,000,000 deposits of the thirty Cleveland national and state banks.

Death of H. S. Newberry

Henry S. Newberry, for forty years connected with Cleveland banks, died early Tuesday morning at the age of sixty. He had been in ill health for several months. Mr. Newberry was born in Cuyahoga Falls and came to Cleveland with his parents when six years old. He was connected with the Mercantile National for a number of years and then became bookkeeper and later assistant secretary of the Citizens Savings and Trust, with which institution he was associated during the last fifteen years.

Paid-in Capital Basis of Credit

In an opinion given to State Banking Superintendent Emory W. Lattanner, Attorney T. S. Hogan holds that where "capital stock" is used in the statutes relating to banking, that paid-in capital stock and not authorized capital stock is meant, and that state banks must restrict their credit to the amount of their paid-in capital stock and not to the amount of their authorized capital. The state banking department has been enforcing this ruling, but some state banks have attempted to evade it.

Cincinnati Bank Delays Opening

Owing to the action of W. R. Craven in withdrawing his acceptance of the presidency of the proposed United National of Cincinnati, the new bank project is practically at a standstill. It is understood that the project has not yet been definitely abandoned, but is merely held up until conditions are more settled.

Dayton Chapter to Have Outing

Final arrangements have been made for the annual outing and picnic of the Dayton chapter to be held August 13th at the N. C. R. Country Club. The affair will be held in the afternoon and it is expected that the banks and building associations will declare a half holiday for their employees. Arrangements also have been completed for a series of educational lectures during the coming fall and winter. Speeches will be given on banking and general commercial subjects and banking law will be brought up for thorough discussion.

Toledo Bank Enters New Home

On Saturday of last week the Market Savings of Toledo opened its new home on Jefferson Avenue and Huron Street to a stream of visitors that crowded the handsome new banking room throughout the day. Friends showered congratulations on the officers and many remembered them with tokens of esteem, the flowers sent by other banks and by individuals assisting in making the new business place a veritable bower. The officers are: President, J. T. Smith; first vice-president, John J. Vollmayer; second vice-president, William F. Donovan; cashier, W. G. Vollmayer; assistant cashier, John C. Bradley. Henry J. Miller, Peter Sattler and W. B. Geroe, with the excepting M. Bradley, comprise the directorate.

Growth of Ohio Banks

Steady growth of Ohio banks and trust companies is shown in the abstract of statements made by these institutions to State Banking Superintendent Emory W. Lattanner as of June 4th. It compares very favorably with the statement of February 4, 1913, increases being noted in all the four principal cities of the state. Total resources grew from $556,187,892.68 in the February report to $573,367,361.58 in June. Capital stock paid in increased from $41,743,160 to $43,482,975. Comparative data on the four largest cities of the state as to resources follows: Cleveland, $245,444,730 in February to $255,373,539.38 in June; Cincinnati, $77,647,151.58 to $79,144,649.84; Toledo, $30,378,465 to $32,233,617; Columbus, $11,295,797 to $11,958,014.

Ohio Notes

The City Savings of Youngstown, Ohio, has changed its name to the City Savings and Trust. The capital stock also has been increased from $100,000 to $150,000.

Adelbert Martz has been elected cashier of the Greenville National to succeed Frank T. Conkling, who died recently. H. T. Lecklider and A. F. Marker have been advanced to assistant cashiers, and W. E. Nelson is the new director.

The American Banking and Trust, Sandusky threw open the doors of its new home at the corner of Columbus Avenue and Market Street to the public recently.

Irvin Woodruff, president of the Woodruff National, Dunkirk, died on Thursday of last week.

Indianapolis Bank Incorporates

The Capital State, Indianapolis, has been incorporated with a capital stock of $200,000 and has leased the room formerly occupied by the Farmers Trust at 10 East Market Street. William F. Churchman is president. Mr. Churchman was cashier of the Capital National for ten years and president one year, but sold out his interests several years ago. John W. McGinety, who has been connected with the Security State at Gary, and H. M. Evans, vice-president of the Valparaiso National, are vice-presidents. Emmet M. Smith is cashier.

$1,000,000 Loan Company

The Colonial Savings and Loan Company, Indianapolis with a capital stock of $1,000,000, has been incorporated and began business Tuesday at 20 South Illinois Street. The incorporators are A. Jennings, R. E. Mitchell and H. J. Martin. The new company, aside from doing a general loan and savings business, will conduct insurance, real estate and rental departments. Mr. Jennings, who was secretary of the Central Trust for a number of years, is president and Mr. Mitchell is secretary. Among the directors of the new company are H. J. Martin, Lafe D. Weathers, William P. Kappes, Joseph J. Schmid, Conrad Jennings, A. Jennings and Mr. Mitchell.

Prominent Richmond Banker Dies

Irving M. Ridenour, one of the most prominent citizens of Richmond, Ind., died recently.

Mr. Ridenour was for a number of years a director in the Union National and a stockholder in the Dickinson Trust of Richmond, the Indianapolis National and City National of Indianapolis.

Detroit Bank Increases Stock

The capital stock of the National Bank of Commerce, Detroit, Mich., has been increased from $750,000 to $1,000,000. This institution has a surplus of $500,000 and undivided profits in excess of $150,000.

Detroit Bank to Build Sixth Branch

The Michigan Savings, Detroit, has purchased forty-seven feet of frontage on Dix Avenue and will begin the erection of a new $10,000 branch bank at once. This will be the sixth branch of the Michigan Savings.

Elected Vice-President Buffalo Bank

Edward H. Hutchinson has been elected vice-president and director of the Peoples Bank of Buffalo. As director he takes the place vacated by Daniel O'Day of New York, who resigned because his business kept him in New York a greater part of the time. Heretofore there has been only one vice-president, Charles R. Huntley. The board of directors has decided to have two vice-presidents and Mr. Hutchinson was honored with this election. Mr. Hutchinson has been chairman of the finance committee of the Marine National for about twenty years and when he resigned from his position as director had been director for about twenty-seven years. The Peoples Bank is making steady progress. It was organized in 1889 and now has resources of over $8,000,000. It has paid 170 per cent in dividends and the stock is worth twice the amount paid. The officers are: President, Arthur D. Bissel; vice-presidents, Charles R. Huntley and Edward H. Hutchinson; cashier, E. J. Newell; assistant cashiers, Howard Bissell and C. G. Fell.

Resigns Cashiership

Harry E. Freeman, cashier of the American Trust and Savings, Springfield, has resigned his position to take a position with the American Commercial Company of Cleveland. L. H. Cook, assistant cashier, succeeds Mr. Freeman as cashier. Mr. Freeman came to Springfield from Cleveland at the time of the organization of the American Trust and Savings and has demonstrated his ability by the constantly increasing business of that institution. His resignation was accepted with great regret by the officers of the bank.

Ohio Notes

The First National of Farrell has been granted a charter by the comptroller of the currency. It is capitalized at $100,000 and F. S. Fish, formerly cashier of the First National of West Middlesex, will be cashier.

Everett Ferguson has been elected a director of the Peoples National of Toronto.

Plans have been completed for the remodeling of the First National Bank building of Fremont and active construction will be started within the next two months. The cost of construction is estimated at $60,000.

Michigan Banks Prosperous

According to the report of the state banking department for the period ending June 4, 1913, Michigan state banks and trust companies show a gain of $5,061,008.14 in aggregate business during a two months' period or since the last report of the banking department was

M. Swanson is president; George C. Morrin, cashier.

The Southwestern Trust, with headquarters in Texas City, Tex., is being organized. The charter will be applied for shortly and it is expected the company will be ready for business within a month or two. It will capitalize at $250,000 with the intention later on of increasing to $500,000, and will perform all the functions of a trust company but will not have banking privileges. The officers are: C. D. Gustavus, president; H. B. Moore, vice-president; E. D. Smith, secretary and treasurer.

At a meeting of the directors of the Commercial National, Galveston, Tex., the surplus fund was increased from $75,000 to $100,000—double the bank's capital stock. R. H. Berry was elected a member of the directorate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of W. O. McCurdy.

Russell H. Sheffield has sold his stock in the Bank of Excelsior Springs, Mo., to S. A. Wardell of Wichita, Kan., who succeeds Mr. Sheffield as cashier.

The comptroller of the currency has received an application to organize the First National, Braggs, Okla.; capital $25,000. A. E. Ramsey, F. C. Hubbard, L. W. Duncan of Muskogee, and S. S. L. Garret of Fort Gibson are the incorporators.

The Cibola State of Cibola, Tex., has been organized with a capital stock of $10,000. C. E. Lips of Seguin has been elected president; R. W. Vordenbaumer, vice-president; Anton Pfeil, secretary.

The First National of Brenham, Tex., recently celebrated its thirtieth anniversary with an all day reception.

The First National of Crowley, La., paid its usual semiannual dividend of 5 per cent on July 1st. This was the twentieth dividend paid by the bank. P. L. Lawrence is president; Tom Freeland, vice-president; C. W. Finley, cashier; C. J. Samon and D. W. Thibordeaux, assistant cashier.

The Texas Bank and Trust Company of Beaumont, Tex., has declared a 4 per cent semiannual dividend, payable July 1st. The surplus has been increased from $60,000 to $65,000.

Among the new Texas banks are the First State Bank of Merit with a capital of $10,000; South Texas State Bank with a capital of $100,000, succeeding the Rosenberg Bank, which suspended operations recently; Bank of Richmond, capitalized at $25,000.

H. M. Carson, who has been with the Continental State of Blue Ridge, Tex., as cashier, has resigned his position to take a like position with the Continental State at Gunter. Mr. Carson will be succeeded by his brother, H. Carson, who has been connected with the Continental Bank and Trust Company of Fort Worth.

A bankers' meeting and stock show held at Mercedes, Tex., on July 10th. A very interesting program along the lines of practical farming was given, with Col. Henry Exall, president of the Texas Industrial Congress, and other distinguished speakers. A large number of bankers in the valley were in attendance.

A meeting of the bankers of the Rio Grande Valley was held at Harlingen recently having for its principal object the promotion of advanced agriculture in the Rio Grande Valley. Vice-President Joe Hirsch of the Corpus Christi National, who is chairman of the agricultural committee of the Texas Bankers Association, was present by invitation and addressed the meeting in behalf of advanced agriculture and the development of the valley's vast resources along agricultural lines.

McADOO HAS CURRENCY BILL AMENDED

Secretary McAdoo has had the Glass-Owen currency bill amended so as to permit national banks to take up government 2 per cent bonds with the assurance that they will not be called in for redemption before twenty years. These bonds are received by the government for national bank note circulation. This privilege will remain to the bonds as long as they are outstanding.

The currency bill originally provided compulsory retirement of 5 per cent of the outstanding $700,000,000 bonds each year from the passage of the act for twenty years. The compulsory feature was done away with and redemption of the bonds by the banks made permissive.

NEW BANK FOR SAN DIEGO

Work has been commenced fitting up quarters for the new Union National of San Diego, Cal. The organizers have secured a lease on the corner in the Louis J. Wilde building for two and one half years, terminating January, 1916, when it is expected that new and permanent quarters will be ready. The men behind the new bank, which is to start with a capital of $200,000 and a large surplus, are J. R. Burrow, president of the Central National, Topeka, Kan.; his son, F. H. Burrow, vice-president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, and C. W. Landis, cashier of the First National of Osborne, Kan. The building will be entirely remodeled and the new institution is expected to open its doors in about two months.

NEW STATE BANK FOR ARIZONA

Articles of incorporation of the Santa Cruz Valley Bank and Trust Company, Nogales, have been filed, the incorporators being Senator J. Harrison, I. E. Wise, Calabasas; Sam Laaker, Mrs. Geo. B. Marsh, W. J. Neumann, H. J. Karns, and E. O'Neill. The bank, which will do general commercial and banking business, including loans on farm mortgages, will begin business sometime in July.

FOURTH NATIONAL LETTER

It is the belief of the Fourth National of New York, formed after hearing from correspondents in all parts of the country, that the two things needed to stimulate general business this year are a realization of the best crop promises and the granting of the five per cent freight increases asked by the eastern railroads.

"The outlook for the crops is still reassuring," the bank says in its bulletin, "but in some quarters the promise is for a somewhat reduced yield of wheat and corn. It is still too early to attempt definite estimates, but on the basis of both public and private advices the chances are that the people of the United States will this season, as usual, derive a vast amount of new wealth from the soil. The farming communities are hopeful. This optimism is cautious, however, since it is obvious that in some lines of trade there has been a decided slackening, with a disposition to proceed slowly with respect to new business until a new tariff law has been enacted. Business men everywhere continue to conduct their affairs on a hand-to-mouth basis and it is probable that there will be little broad buying by the small merchants until the crop prospects are absolutely sure. This is natural enough in view of the fact that the 'crop scare period' is near at hand, when the markets ordinarily pass through an interval of uncertainty respecting the possible effects of high temperatures and drought in the wheat and corn area.

"The decision of the interstate commerce commission to hear the petition of the eastern railroads with reference to the increasing freight rates of five per cent shows that the commission is alive to the needs of a situation which is becoming each day more embarrassing to the railroads. There seems to be a consensus of opinion that the railroads will win their case and that the advance in freight rates asked for will be granted next autumn. There are indications that the public is favorable to the increase, although it will be necessary for the railroads to prove their claims and to show beyond doubt that the increased revenue is needed in order to pay them for rendering the service called for by the people of the territory served. The people of the United States apparently view this step very differently from what they did three years ago when the increase asked for was turned down by the commission and strongly objected to by the shippers' organizations everywhere.

"This disposition on the part of the public to view the matter without prejudice and to act justly is of great importance, coming as it does at the moment when the United States supreme court has handed down a series of remarkable decisions in the so-called Minnesota and other rate cases where the right of state railroad commissions to fix rates within the limits of their own states was upheld except in cases where a railroad is able to show that the imposition of a specific rate would be confiscatory or insufficient to pay for the service rendered. The fact is that the public is coming to see that the welfare of whole communities is tied up with the welfare of the railroads, and that there can be no thoroughgoing prosperity for the country as a whole if the common carriers are not prosperous or are denied a proper return on the capital invested. This question has come to be of the greatest importance because of the steady advance in wages, the increased cost of financing, and the larger relative outlay for every variety of railroad equipment."

WELL-KNOWN PHILADELPHIA BANKER DEAD

Isaac Blum, president of the Bank of Commerce, Philadelphia, and well known in financial circles, died last Saturday in that city.

NEWS OF THE INVESTMENT BANKERS

Secretary Frederick R. Fenton, of the Investment Bankers Association of America, has mailed to the membership of the association a fifty-page bulletin which contains information of value to investment bankers in this country. The bulletin supplements former issues and brings up to date many state legislative conditions affecting the purchase and sale of investment securities.

The survey of the association as set forth in this bulletin treats with the eighteen "Blue Sky" laws that have been enacted in the various states and includes a comprehensive tabulated summary of the requirements of each act, printing in full all the laws passed recently on this subject. The proposed income tax law and a timely discussion of the German methods of regulating the purchase and sale of securities also form part of the current bulletin.

President George B. Caldwell has announced a general committee, composed of Chicago members of the association, which has begun elaborate preparations for the second annual convention which will be held in Chicago this fall. This committee is headed by H. L. Stuart, N. W. Halsey and Company, Chicago, and is composed of the following: John E. Blunt, Homer W. McCoy, R. E. Wilsey, F. W. Leach, George H. Taylor, Clark L. Poole, John J. Abbott, Charles Counselman, R. U. Lansing, Robert Stevenson, F. P. Judson, C. P. King, H. T. Sibley, W. G. Leisenring, Walter Greenebaum, N. Roberts, C. F. Childs, B. F. Taylor, C. Edward Carlson, James L. Martin, Jr., Paul Chapman, Joseph A. Rushton, Gerald W. Peck, T. J. Bolger, R. B. Upham, Stanley Miller, B. L. Jonson, R. E. Danielson, Percy C. Hord and George F. Hardie. A New York committee headed by L. B. Franklin of the Guaranty Trust already has begun plans to bring a large Eastern contingent to the Chicago convention.

Definite arrangements have not yet been announced, but the tentative dates of October 28th, 29th, and 30th have been fixed and are expected to be decided upon for this big gathering. The first annual convention, held last year in New York, attracted over 500 investment bankers from all parts of the United States and Canada. Inasmuch as the association will have completed its first year of activity, the approaching convention is expected to far surpass this first gathering in point of attendance.

TO WIND UP CHICAGO NATIONAL

Stockholders of the old Chicago National Bank will hold a meeting August 12th to place the bank in final liquidation. The charter has been kept alive since the bank collapsed in December, 1905, along with its affiliated savings bank and trust company, but now the comptroller's office insists that its affairs be wound up.

It is understood that there are sufficient assets to pay a dividend of about 15 per cent to the stockholders at once and another of like amount a little later. There may be a small balance after that.

The directors refused to accept $150,000 in settlement of the stockholders' claims against C. K. G. Billings, the demand being for $3,000,000. The matter is still in the courts.

VERMONT PROCEEDINGS OUT

This office has received a copy of the proceedings of the fourth annual convention of the Vermont Bankers Association held in Rutland February 21st. The book contains a full report of the meeting and is compiled in Secretary C. S. Webster's usual efficient manner.

BONDS GOING AT BARGAIN PRICES

Banks and conservative bond houses handling high grade first mortgage issues report a moderate but improved demand for the class of securities mentioned. There are many long term bonds yielding 5 and 5½ per cent that afford the most attractive returns which safe issues have yielded in the last ten years. This situation has resulted from the extended period of high interest rates, and in consequence the bargains now offered are being presented to investors in a light which appeals to their judgment.

Some of the banks are advising the purchase of mortgage bonds as against short term issues, since it is thought by them the present opportunity for attractive safe investments will not continue a great deal longer in the sense that it will be possible to secure as good a return on the same class of security.

TO DEFEND "BLUE SKY" LAW

J. N. Dolley, ex-bank commissioner of Kansas and author of the famous "Blue Sky" law has started a fund for the defense of the statute which now is being attacked. A suit has been brought to test the constitutionality of the law and Mr. Dolley is urging a fund to employ counsel to assist the state in defending it.

Mr. Dolley said: "An attack has been made in the courts to destroy and set aside the statute known as the 'Blue Sky' law in this state. This statute has become a law in many of the states of the Union, and it is doing splendid work where properly administered for the protection of the investing public, which has been paying a toll in the past years of somewhere between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000 yearly to the dishonest, unreliable promoters and dealers in worthless stocks, bonds and other investments. This statute has saved Kansas during the past two years between $3,000,000 and $5,000,000 a year and has driven out of the state an army of several thousand illegitimate promoters and fake stock salesmen that have tolled this state in the past fifty years of tens of millions of dollars, with practically no returns at all from these enormous investments, and the money was obtained largely from those who could least afford to lose it."

CONDITIONS AROUND SIOUX CITY

W. P. Manley, president of the Security National, Sioux City, said:

"Crop conditions in this vicinity are average despite slight rainfall. Business conditions are good. There is abundant money for local needs. But little concern is felt and no disturbance concerning tariff reductions. Paper currency legislation is earnestly desired. All signs indicate a year as prosperous as last."

UTAH OFFICERS

The following were elected officers of the Utah Bankers Association at the recent convention held in Heber City: President, Frank Knox, president National Bank of the Republic, Salt Lake City; first vice-president, H. E. Hatch, cashier Thatcher Brothers Banking Company, Logan; second vice-president, John D. Dixon, cashier Farmers and Merchants, Provo; secretary and treasurer, J. E. Shepard, cashier of the Cache Valley Banking Company, Logan.

HUNGRY FOR THE REAL THING

Showing that the papers are hungry for the real thing and that a fair broad-minded man of ability can get a hearing, the dailies all over the country printed in full the criticisms and recommendations made by George M. Reynolds on the currency bill at the Duluth convention of the Minnesota Bankers Association.

The formal petition seeking clemency from President Wilson for Charles A. Isaacs, the Forest City banker, has been forwarded to Washington. Isaacs pleaded guilty to one indictment charging him with illegal banking and was sentenced to five years at Stillwater penitentiary by Judge Reed, who granted a mittimus of sixty days to seek clemency.

Des Moines, Iowa, July 17th.—Iowa bankers were grieved last week to learn of the death of J. A. McWaid at Atlantic on July 8th. Mr. McWaid was one of the pioneer residents of that city, a capitalist and one of the best known bankers in the state. Death came very suddenly and was a surprise to his countless scores of friends in the state, as the day before his death he was about Atlantic attending to his duties as usual and even rode on a road drag with some friends to see how the drag worked. Sudden complications of cancer trouble was the direct cause and death came at 4:20 A. M. after only a few hours' illness. Mr. McWaid was 77 years old and president of the Atlantic National. He was a good roads booster and president of the recently formed North Star Road Association; was formerly an honorary president of the Atlantic Commercial Club and twice mayor of that city. He had made his home in Atlantic for 44 years and during that time had aided in every movement for the upbuilding of the city. He is survived by a large family and leaves a fortune estimated to be worth at least $250,000.

To Adjust Taxes

Cuts into the state taxes are expected to follow the consideration of property valuations in Iowa by the state executive council this week. The council has before it the assessed valuations from every county and it is planned to raise the country town and farm valuations so that they will bear a more proportionate share of taxation. These reports on farm lands show that the reported valuation as set by assessors on the average in 1903 was $42.04 per acre, adjusted to $41.97; in 1908 it was $42.17, adjusted to $42.64, and in 1911 it was $43.43, adjusted to $49.07. Now the average per acre valuation as reported from the counties, after county adjustment, on the assessor's valuations, is $50.67. Unusual things are shown in the county reports, among them being Van Buren county. There the assessors and the county board let the average valuation fall from $38.21, to which it was raised two years ago by the state from $35.55, and is down to $33.87 this year, which indicates a strong raise may come here. On the other hand, Franklin county, where the state in 1911 raised the average valuation from $44.96 to $48.33, came up this year with an average valuation for taxing purposes of $84.66 per acre. The charge often has been made in Iowa that the city property is bearing more than its share of the taxation burden and that farm lands were escaping.

Fort Dodge Banker in Auto Accident

E. H. Rich, the well-known Fort Dodge financier, had the misfortune a week ago to be in an automobile accident in which he received a broken hip that will keep him confined for some weeks. While out riding with his son, W. F. Rich, in the family machine and several members of his family, the car skidded and turned turtle in a ditch, Mr. Rich being beneath the machine. Unable to see he threw on the brakes but was too late and the car overturned. Mr. Rich is cashier of the First National at Fort Dodge and was in Des Moines on business a day or two before the accident occurred.

Des Moines Visitors

Local banks have received calls from several of the out-of-town financiers during the last week. Among those who have been in the city are Cashier J. E. Walker of the Truro Savings; President Chas. Schenck of the First National, Red Oak; President A. J. McDermott of the Commercial Savings, Lohrville; Cashier N. B. Shaffer of the Citizens of Altoona; President S. S. Dillenbeck of the Citizens of Earlham; Assistant Cashier Hal Y. Lemon of the Tootle-Lemon National at St. Joseph; President J. G. Dutton of the Farmers at Nevada; Cashier T. L. Hall of the Weldon Savings; Cashier E. H. Bickford of the Adair County Bank at Greenfield; Vice-President J. S. Rhynsbarger of the Citizens National of Pella; Cashier M. B. Whitlock of the Citizens State of Colfax; Cashier N. A. Williamson of the Reasnor Savings; Cashier T. R. Watts of the Citizens at Grand Junction; President E. R. Barringer of the Farmers Savings of Ruthven; Cashier H. S. Taylor of the Woodward State; Cashier W. J. Steckel of the Exchange of Bloomfield; Cashier J. E. Reid of the Altoona Savings; Cashier E. P. McDonald of the Farmers Savings, Berkley.

To Discuss Currency Bill

Des Moines bankers have received invitations to attend a conference of western bankers at Omaha on July 17th from the bankers of that city when the currency legislation will be discussed. The clearing house was asked to send a committee, which probably will be done, and several local bankers may go individually. The Owen-Glass bill will be up for discussion and dissection and the Omaha bankers hope to have representatives there from all the mid-western cities.

Banker Victim of "Black Hand"

George Naeve, vice-president of the Crawford County State at Denison, has just passed through a "blackmailing" experience that has caused him and his family much worry and sleepless nights. Recently he received one of those "blackhand" letters containing some kind of a threat that might be anything from death to ruin, demanding that he leave $385 in a certain spot on a country road. Immediately he conferred with the sheriff, who advised him to leave phoney money as directed while they looked on, but no one called for the package. Either it was a joke or the activity of the officers scared the offenders. Inspector Caine of the postoffice department has been put to work on the case and is expected to develop soon who wrote the letters and the motive therefor.

Iowa Notes

Hubert L. Tinley, for many years cashier of the State Savings at Council Bluffs, has been chosen to a place on the board of directors of that institution to succeed the late Ernest E. Hart, whose death caused a vacancy that had not previously been filled. Mr. Tinley has been connected with the bank for many years and succeeded the late John Bennet as cashier. The deposits now almost reach a million.

The Farmers Bank of Elkhorn will be in a new home this fall, as the contract for a new one-story bank building has been let to J. W. Lorenson of Atlantic. The Farmers Bank was only organized last month by William Hoegh, assistant cashier of the Farmers Savings of Atlantic. It is capitalized for $10,000.

Local authorities and the aid of the state bankers' detective force have been sought to find out who raised the check of J. H. McGregor of Swea City on the State Bank there from 50 cents to $50. McGregor did not detect it until his bank book was balanced. The word "cents" had been erased and two ciphers added.

Don McEwen, president of the State Savings of Rolfe, died at the home of Dr. Gray in this city July 5th. The funeral was held at the home at Rolfe last Wednesday. Mr. McEwen had scores of friends among the bankers, who will regret to learn of his death.

B. B. Vorse, cashier of the Century Savings here, is visiting at Benton, Iowa.

The National Bank of Sioux City has been approved as a reserve agent for the First National of Hay Springs, Neb.

issued. Since the April report there has been an increase of approximately $6,400,000 while mercantile and savings loans and discounts show an increase of approximately $6,500,000 while commercial and savings bonds and mortgages show a decrease of about $2,400,000. The banks show a total reserve of $12,711,319 above the requirements of the banking law. Fourteen new banks and one trust company were organized in Michigan during the first six months of the year. In addition to the banks organized, the applications to organize nine more state banks have been approved.

Increase in Detroit Bank Clearings

Detroit bank clearings for the first six months of the year aggregated $637,086,369, compared with $532,063,003 for the corresponding period in 1912, an increase of 2 per cent. The gain alone is equal to the total clearings of the city twenty years ago and equal to half the total clearings in 1903.

Lexington Bank Merger

A merger of the First National and the Lexington City National, both of Lexington, Ky., has been announced, the new institution to be known as the First and City National Bank of Lexington. Its capital will be $800,000 and surplus $450,000. The officers are: Leonard C. Cox, chairman of the board of directors; J. W. Stoll, president; John G. Stoll and J. E. McFarland, vice-presidents; Joseph W. Porter, cashier, and Garland H. Barr, J. W. McMeekin, Frank C. Bell, assistant cashiers.

Miscellaneous Notes

Joseph R. Kraus, former assistant cashier of the First National, Cleveland, has been elected vice-president, succeeding F. J. Woodworth, who recently resigned to become vice-president of the newly organized First Trust and Savings Company. Mr. Kraus' election completes the circuit from bank messenger to the vice-president's chair. He was messenger for the old private banking firm of Crumb and Baslington and later for the Ohio National, which subsequently became the State National. He was general bookkeeper of the latter when the American Exchange National was formed and he was offered the position of assistant cashier. Later he organized the Bankers National of which Luther Allen was president and Mr. Kraus, cashier and active executive. After the death of Mr. Allen, Mr. Kraus brought the Bankers National into the First National and was made assistant cashier, holding that position until his election to the vice-presidency.

Isaac Blum, president of the Bank of Commerce, Philadelphia, died on Saturday of last week. Mr. Blum for years played an important part in the banking and financial circles of that city. He became head of the Bank of Commerce at the time of its organization in 1904.

The Exchange Bank of Littleton, W. Va., has been closed by Banking Commissioner Samuel V. Matthews for failure of its officers to comply with the state regulations. No report has been received from it since last October, when it had on deposit about $95,000.

The application of J. M. Day, S. G. Fairchild, G. M. Adams and D. Hays for authority to organize the First National of Whitesburg, Ky., with a capital of $25,000, has been approved by the comptroller of the currency.

The First National of Stambaugh, Mich., has been chartered with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are James S. Wall, O. C. Lundin, B. Harris, W. D. Laing, C. E. Lawrence and C. S. Hopkins.

Alanson Osborn, for thirty years assistant cashier of the First National, Eaton Rapids, Mich., died on Thursday of last week of apoplexy.

Akron Bank Increases Capital

The Peoples Savings has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $125,000.

A. I. B. CONVENTION PLANS

The entertainment committee of the annual institution convention, which will be held at Richmond this year, September 17th, 18th, 19th and 20th, are making some interesting announcements concerning the plans that are being made for entertaining delegates and visitors.

"Arrangements will be made to take the entire party on a sightseeing trip over the city on the first afternoon. On this trip opportunity will be given to see some of the novel manufacturing plants, such as a short trip through one of the tobacco factories where hundreds will be found making the cigarette or cigar, which is possibly your favorite brand, then a visit to the largest wood working plant in the world, to see them make the many household articles that we find around the office and home. The management is very strict at this plant and will exact a promise of us that none will kick the bucket while going through the works."

"The next point of interest will be a stop at Old St. John church in the center of the old residential section. We will pile out here to get a glimpse of a few of the old tombstones dating back into the early seventeen hundred. Time also will be given to see the old church and to hear the sexton, a direct descendant of Patrick Henry, as he impersonates his ancestor in his famous speech of colonial days.

"From there we will journey to the beautiful country club of Virginia, where a lawn luncheon will be served and later dancing. Thursday we will go to work with a vim to get over the many attractive papers being arranged by the program committee. This will keep you all day, but in the evening you will be ours again and the entertainment features will be a smoker in the hotel. The ladies will be expected to be present to hear some of the stories and the songs of the old time southern darkies. Friday morning again we get to work, while a part of the afternoon will claim the attention of all as the convention elects its officers for the coming year and selects a meeting place of the many who are always anxious to have the A. I. B. Friday evening another entertainment, of which we will not tell you until the last minute. The program committee has allowed us the privilege of keeping this one dark, so just leave it to us and we will try to see that you enjoy yourselves. If you do not, all admission tickets will be redeemed by us at twice their value, even if they are not worth anything. Saturday will be given over to the local crowd and early we will start down the river for a visit to dear old Jamestown, passing the many homes along the river front. A number of guides will be aboard the ship to give us the narrative of life in the early days. This should be a most interesting trip to all, and we will stop at Newport News so that those wishing to catch the Saturday afternoon boats to Boston, New York or Baltimore will have ample time to make these connections, while those returning to Richmond will be brought back by special train, reaching Richmond in ample time to allow those finding it necessary to leave for home or other parts to catch their trains in all directions."

NEW KANSAS TRUST COMPANY

A charter has been granted to the Lawrence Trust, Lawrence, Kan., with a capital stock of $100,000. The directors of the new company are Louis Kreeck, B. B. Beery, A. J. Ross, John Herman, J. Q. A. Norton, W. R. Stiner, Geo. L. Kreeck, Chris. Schaake and John Boener.

The First National of Brighton, Ill., has declared a dividend of three per cent and has added $250 to the surplus fund.

Spokane's industrial prospects are given new impetus by the decision of the Day Automobile Company of Detroit, Mich., to remove its plant to the manufacturing district four miles east of this city, which accomplishment is the first signal success in a three-years' campaign for new factories recently inaugurated by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce. The company plans to manufacture and distribute from Spokane its Day Utility car, which in five minutes can be converted from a touring car to a delivery car of 1,500 pounds carrying capacity.

Thomas W. Day, president of the company, has been in Spokane five weeks looking into the situation, and he expresses himself pleased with all conditions surrounding the manufacture and distribution of his product.

The industrial committee of the chamber of commerce headed by Charles Heberd, is responsible for Mr. Day's interest in Spokane. The company contemplates turning out 150 cars the first year, 400 the second and 1,000 the third.

Total figures showing the great amount of business handled by the Old National on Monday, July 7th, following two holidays, July 4th and 5th, have been compiled by J. H. Tatsch, chief clerk of the bank. During the day the Old National handled 21,834 items, aggregating $3,583,948.05. These are segregated as follows: Items on the Old National, 9,198, amounting to $1,176,485.74; items on other Spokane banks, 5,562, amounting to $419,421.02; items on out-of-town banks, 5,622, amounting to $717,774.98; credit items by local depositors and out-of-town banks (exclusive of general ledger entries which would represent duplication of figures), 1,452, amounting to $1,270,266.36. The figures do not include collections and other items handled through the collection department. The bank mailed 680 letters during the day and used $18.89 worth of stamps. Instead of sending each enclosure in separate envelopes all mail concentrates in one section of the bank, where enclosures from various departments addressed to the same bank are mailed in one envelope, saving stationery and postage. Single letters Monday addressed to eastern banks bore postage ranging from 10 cents to 36 cents, so numerous were the enclosures in some instances.

F. W. Anderson, organizer and cashier for eleven years of the Lincoln County State at Davenport, Washington, has purchased a home in Spokane and will engage in the mortgage business here with J. Bert Cowan, with whom he has been associated in banking. Mr. Anderson retains his interest in the Lincoln county bank, and will spend part of his time there. He has been prominent in group activities of the Washington State Bankers Association since coming here eleven years ago from Blue Earth, Minn., where he was engaged in the banking business.

A safe that probably has held more millions of dollars than any other in the Inland Empire during its twenty-two years of service is on exhibition in the Spokane offices of the Norris

Safe and Lock Company. The safe is apparently as good as ever and it will be overhauled and put into service again. It was purchased by W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, twenty-two years ago, at the time the bank was organized, and it has been in service ever since. The safe cost the bank $2,400 in 1891. It has seen the deposits of the institution grow from half a million dollars to over $8,000,000 at the present time and has held that amount within its doors.

Fred K. Bressler, cashier of the Exchange Bank of Genesee, Ida., who motored through the Big Bend wheat district this week, told Spokane bankers that crop conditions in the Big Bend are the best since 1897, when wheat first was cultivated there to any considerable extent. He says recent rains assure a bumper crop, and bankers in that district are preparing for a material increase in financial activity. Thomas H. Brewer, president of the Fidelity National of Spokane, also is president of the Genesee bank of which Mr. Dressler is cashier.

J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, has departed on an extended tour East and probably to Europe. He will spend several weeks camping on Long Island Sound; will attend the general convention of the Episcopal church in New York City as a delegate, and visit his son, William Richards, at the Annapolis Naval Academy, before returning to Spokane.

R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust and president of the Western Union Life Insurance Company, whose home is in Spokane, announces that the last six months have been the best in the history of the life insurance company. He said the company had done a business of $500,000 during June and had written, issued and paid for policies aggregating $2,390,000 during the six months closed June 30th. The reports showed progress in every department.

Purchase of the properties of the Idaho-Washington Light and Water Company, with headquarters at Moscow, Ida., has been completed by the Washington Water Power Company of Spokane, under direction of D. L. Huntington, president. These properties include the electric light and power companies at Tekoa, Farmington, Pullman, Palouse, Garfield, Uniontown, Oaksdale, all in Washington, and Genesee, Colton, Troy, Moscow and Maries, Ida. The price was not named. The properties were secured from trustees of the M. J. Shields estate.

Alberta-Saskatchewan Life Insurance Company, capitalized at $2,000,000, the first life insurance company chartered by a special act of the dominion parliament to do business in western Canada, elected these executive officers and directors at the annual general meeting in Edmonton, Alta., on July 5th.

President, Lieut.-Col. B. J. Saunders; vice-president, Hon. P. E. Lessard, M. L. A.; second vice-president, Robert L. Shaw, M. L. A.; secretary-treasurer, Lou. L. Moody; solicitor, Hon. A. C. Rutherford; medical referee, J. A. Hislop; Arthur Davies, former mayor of Strathcona, James A. Powell, Colonel F. C. Jamieson, J. H. Morris and A. Williamson Taylor.

President Saunders announced that J. S. Wallace, formerly of Winnipeg and Vancouver, where he has had twenty years' experience with the Canada Life and the Imperial Life companies, has been engaged as general manager. Mr. Wallace is now in the east arranging for beginning the actual work of writing insurance.

"We have made highly satisfactory progress," the president said, "and the fact that we are finding no difficulty in interesting business men in our proposition indicates the need of such an institution as we have organized."

MINNESOTA'S NEW OFFICERS

Officers of the Minnesota Bankers Association for the ensuing year were elected as follows at the convention held in Duluth last week: President, J. S. Pomeroy, vice-president Security National, Minneapolis; vice-president, W. D. Willard, cashier First National, Mankato; treasurer, J. J. Ponsford, cashier State Bank of Watertown; secretary, G. H. Richards, Minneapolis; vice-president of the A. B. A. for Minnesota, E. A. Shaw, cashier Clearwater State; member of executive council of the A. B. A., J. B. Galarneault, cashier Aitkin County State, Aitkin.

Resolutions were adopted at the convention providing for the increase of the membership of the agricultural committee to one from each of the ten congressional districts and one at large. Each district member is to name four other bankers in his district to act with him as a subcommittee.

Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis was indorsed for the first vice-president of the American Bankers Association.

TRUST COMPANY IN NEW QUARTERS

The San Diego (Cal.) Title and Trust has moved into new offices on the ground floor of the Spreckels Theater building. The business of the company, heretofore being exclusively that of titles, now will embrace that of a modern trust corporation, its capital being increased to $500,000 to provide for the proposed enlargement.

banks each would extend a full line of credit to a certain concern, each bank thinking that it enjoyed the entire business of said concern. In such instances the examiner informs each bank of the total borrowings of the concern in question, also advises what is to be considered a liberal line of credit, and the concern in question is caused to reduce its borrowings accordingly. This department works a hindrance to the financing of illegitimate schemes, undertakes to make banking in Greater Kansas City clean, sound and conservative, thereby benefiting not only the clearing house banks, but all business interests of the entire community. It is without doubt one of the greatest functions of the clearing house.

We are now down to the country clearing house, where we are going to discuss the subject assigned. Thus far I have undertaken to give you such information as will put you in a better position to understand how we have extended at least one side of the original idea of the clearing house to a territory, the scope of which extends thousands of miles. The fact that 95 per cent of the business of this country is now handled through the means of checks, drafts, and similar instruments of credit, impresses upon our minds the importance of such items and the need for the most highly improved methods of handling the same. Country bankers, city bankers, and merchants all have been a party to popularizing the use of the personal check. That instrument has become a great factor in business; merchants make sales through its agency, country bankers build up their business by telling their prospective patrons of its many virtues, city bankers double their volume of business by handling such items for their city customers and bank correspondents but, in many instances, do it at a great sacrifice of profits. The personal check is innocent and harmless in appearance but I have known instances where large banking institutions have had their very life sapped out by carrying an overload of such business. Some twelve or thirteen years ago the banks of the city of Boston found themselves overburdened with a constantly increasing expense in handing out-of-town cash items. This expense was rapidly eating away their profits, and some means of overcoming this trouble had to be found. The country clearing house was accordingly created.

In the year 1905 the banks of Kansas City found they were facing the same trouble that had confronted the banks of Boston and, on seeking a means of betterment, investigated the workings of the Boston Clearing House and were so well impressed with the good results obtained under the Boston plan that it was decided to undertake some similar plan for Kansas City. Our conditions were entirely different from those that existed in the New England states at the time the Boston plan was put into operation. Our country was new, our city young, hundreds of banks were being organized in our territory each year and we were surrounded on all sides by competing reserve cities, but the troubles we were seeking to correct were the same as were experienced in Boston. We wanted a means of reducing the exchange which we were obliged to pay on out-of-town cash items, a means of securing more prompt returns for same and a means of reducing all items of expense connected with handling such items.

The country clearing house, or the machine which we built, and with which we are accomplishing these ends, may be likened unto a bank with its functions limited to the collection of out-of-town items in a certain territory and with its depositors limited to the members of the clearing house. I will undertake to give you an outline of the mechanical operations of the country clearing house as it is conducted in Kansas City.

Each member of the clearing house is supplied with a book giving a complete list of all the banks to which the clearing house has arranged to send items, and the rate of exchange charged by each. The members are informed from time to time of all changes in and additions to this list. The making of arrangements for handling items is left entirely to the judgment of the manager of the department. He proceeds much in the same manner as does an officer of a bank in making connections for his institution. A card is sent to each country bank, requesting certain information, including a list of the bank's correspondents, a list of the bank's officers, time of arrival and departure of Kansas City mails, and rate of exchange, if any charge is to be made on our cash items, and a statement of the financial condition of the institution. These cards are filed for reference and, in case of any question as to the validity of the information given thereon, it is checked up and further investigation of the character of the officers and the general character of the institution is made through its correspondents and other sources.

The several members of the clearing house are supplied with combination endorsing stamps which endorse the items to the clearing house and for the clearing house at one application. The members are also supplied with combination record-sheets and foreign slips which are of such form that when the items are being recorded thereon they are, through the means of a carbon sheet, entered on the foreign slip to which they are finally attached when brought to the clearing house for deposit. Each slip shows at the top the clearing house number of the member endorsing the items, the date of endorsement and the name of the bank and town to which the items are to be sent, in accordance with the clearing house list. This information is repeated on a stub at the bottom of the slip and the amount of each item is entered on the body of the slip and a total is made and carried to the stub. The foreign slips, thus prepared with items attached, are sorted in alphabetical order and an adding machine list of the totals is made. This list is endorsed by the member and the items are placed in a package with the list on its face and are delivered to the clearing house in this shape. A check or due bill, payable through the clearing house on the third or fourth day, is issued to the member in lieu of the total day's deposit, it being estimated that three or four days is the average time required to collect in our territory. When the packages are opened at the clearing house, the stubs are detached and filed. An adding machinelist is made of the totals shown on the slips and is proved against the list which accompanied the items. The slips with items attached are then distributed on the sorting table in alphabetical order with reference to towns. When all the slips with items attached have been distributed, they are sorted further with reference to the banks to which they are to be sent, so that when all deposits have been made and the sorting is completed, the items are ready to be run on the clearing house letter of transmittal (these letters and corresponding envelopes having been prepared in advance). The amounts of the items and the numbers indicating the members endorsing same are entered on the letter of transmittal by means of a Burroughs Adding Machine, and a subtotal is made on the letter. The letter has a stub at the bottom on which is duplicated the address as shown on the letter, the date and the total.

These stubs are detached and filed as a record of the transit charge against the out-of-town bank. At the close of each day a total is taken of all such stubs and, if the work has been correctly done, this total will prove against the total of all deposits made with the department for the day and is the charge to be made against the transit account. When letters are paid the accounts are credited by eliminating or removing from transit the corresponding stubs. All returns are made direct to the manager of the clearing house, and all refused and protested items, together with fees, are deducted and returned with draft to cover the balance of the letter with which they were originally sent out.

The country clearing house is represented as a member in the daily exchanges at the clearing house, and in that way distributes the returns and secures credit for all returned items, and the members charge to the country clearing house checks or due bills which have been issued in lieu of the items deposited with the department for collection. We find that on a three or four day's basis our returns just about offset the due bills as they become payable, but should our returns fail to meet these demands we run a debit in the clearing house and the bank that falls heir to our debit balance carries it until the following day. In event of the department running a credit, it is carried over and the bank falling heir to it is thereby benefited. I believe in Atlanta and Boston these debits and credits are taken care of daily by issuing new due bills to cover the actual balance due to each member, but with us these balances on a three and four day's basis run so small that the expense of clerical work involved in issuing new due bills would more than offset the loss of interest that might be occasioned by carrying them over until the following day.

Our office or operating expenses are prorated monthly on the basis of the total business transacted through the office for the month. The exchange charges are assessed against the members at the close of each month, each member being charged with the actual cost of its items on each letter. These charges are taken from the letters as they are paid and are figured and totaled up each day. The plan is, therefore, fair and equitable to all the clearing house members.

This about covers the mechanical side of the department, but there are some other features connected with its history that are important and interesting. At the outset, in order to give the plan a try-out, it was agreed that practically all items, other than those on regular correspondents of members, on about three hundred banks, in what was at that time Oklahoma and Indian territories, would be turned into the clearing house for collection. These three hundred banks were then charging an average of 25 cents to 30 cents per hundred dollars and their returns were very slow. Circulars were sent out advising these banks of the plan, giving the cause; also advising that items would be sent direct to banks remitting promptly and at par, but, where banks continued to charge exorbitant rates of exchange, their items would be sent through the express companies for collection. These circulars stirred up a very warm protest, but quite a number of banks temporarily waived their charges. The opposition was strong and a meeting of the Bankers Association was called to consider the matter. This meeting had only a small attendance and it was the sense of the meeting that a uniform rate of 10 cents per hundred should be made. The results at the end of six months were that we had effected a saving of over 50 per cent on the matter of exchange, and were getting prompt returns from practically all of these three hundred banks, but we abandoned the use of the express companies for the reason that where banks were forced to make concessions in rates on account of their items being sent for collection through the express companies they never felt that they had been treated fairly and would become disagreeable on the slightest pretext. It is our experience that country bankers will, as a rule, act fairly on such matters, provided they are properly approached and properly informed in regard to them, and, since that time, we have resorted to persuasion and have been actually as successful in securing results in one-bank towns as we have in towns where there are two or more banks.

Our territory has been gradually extended and now covers the states of Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas, and includes about 5,600 banks. Our clearing house rules have been amended from time to time, and now provide that our members shall send to the country clearing house practically all items on Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Southern Nebraska points, outside of those sent to their correspondents on their own towns, and such items as they are able to collect otherwise at par. It is optional with the members as to Colorado, Northern Nebraska, New Mexico and Texas points. The country clearing house, as operated in Kansas City, does not interfere with the individual arrangements of the clearing house members, but merely gives them the benefits of additional facilities. The par lists of the members are increased by the several hundred par points obtained through the country clearing house, and the cost on charge towns is reduced materially, both as to the matter of exchange charges and the other expenses incidental to the handling of the items. For example: Suppose that ten members have items on a certain town; the minimum cost to each in postage would be 2 cents and the minimum cost to all would be 20 cents, while, if these items are consolidated at the clearing house and sent out in one enclosure, the total cost would be from 2 cents to 4 cents per letter, and a saving of from 16 cents to 18 cents would be effected. So the saving in postage alone on two thousand towns on this basis would be from $32.00 to $36.00 per day. In addition to this there is a saving of nine envelopes, and nine remittance letters, and in the handling of the returns there is considerable saving on the matter of labor. The same is true when it comes to tracing and handling of the correspondence. The plan effects a saving to the country banker, as it is necessary for him to handle only one letter, write one draft, address one envelope, and use 2 cents in postage instead of 20 cents.

We have effected a saving of over 50 per cent in the gross expense of handling the items on the territory covered by our country clearing house, and have reduced the time required in securing returns about 25 per cent. In addition to these benefits the department serves in the nature of a credit bureau, gathering information with reference to 5,600 banks and placing same at the disposal of the members.

When drafts covering returns are refused, the members are given the information immediately by telephone and are thereby warned against taking items on the bank in question until an investigation has been made and a definite report secured, showing the condition of the bank. The members are supplied with a list of points where unsatisfactory and unsafe conditions are known to exist. All this information is valuable to the members.

Notwithstanding the saving we effected through the operation of our country clearing house, we found we were still sustaining an enormous loss on exchange and collection charges and that loss, coupled with the loss of the use of our funds during the time items were in process of collection, made the cost more than the banks of our city could afford to bear and in order to improve conditions further we formulated certain rules on exchange and collection charges and put same into operation in the month of March, 1910. The country clearing house has been a great factor in enforcing these rules and making them a success.

You might be interested to know about these rules. We divided the territory west of the Mississippi river into common charge and discretionary points. By common charge points I mean points where banks charge all members of our clearing house when remitting for cash items, also charge on items sent direct by the clearing house. All banks of Kansas City charge on all items on each of these several points at the rate charged by the bank or banks located therein. We treat as discretionary (that is, it is optional with our members as to whether they shall charge on) points where banks remit their Kansas City correspondent satisfactorily and at par and to the clearing house on a satisfactory basis, and points where banks remit to the clearing house on a par basis. Our theory in this plan is that the country bank has the right to determine whether a charge shall be made. If a charge is made, we reserve the right to charge it to our depositors and they in turn back down the line to the party who draws the item, and, if the drawer is not satisfied to stand the charge, he will call upon his local banker and have him adjust it and also have him name more satisfactory terms for the future. In other words, we do not make the rates, but simply apply the rates fixed by the country banks.

It is further provided that the clearing house banks of Kansas City will not extend par facilities to banks in this territory that will not remit for items on their own towns at par. It is also provided that eastern exchange will be furnished to and received from reserve city banks in the territory west of the Mississippi river at the market rate.

The argument has been offered at times that the country clearing house plan is unsafe on account of the liability incidental to sending items direct to the bank on which they are drawn for collection, but the dangers in this regard are no greater through the clearing house than otherwise. All banks of any importance send items in this way and I believe that, if it came to a show-down, the courts would recognize the justice of such a practice; in fact, we have not had a single loss on account of sending items in this way, and I am sure that we have had about as varied a lot of banks to deal with as will be found in any territory. Another objection that has been offered is that it hinders the growth of deposits. In answer to this I will say that, through analysis and experience, we have grown to learn that it is not volume alone that banks should undertake to show, but some heed should be given as to the profits and to strength. We know that the banks of Kansas City could have had a larger volume of business had we continued to pay exorbitant exchange charges and permitted other incidental expenses to increase, but what as to the profits and as to the solvency of our banks? These are important matters and are among the first to be considered. While we would have appreciated more good business, yet we feel pretty well satisfied; in fact, we are proud of the showing made by the banks of Kansas City during the period of the life of our country clearing house. We have gained 56 per cent in deposits during that period and the capital and fixed surplus of our banks have increased 295 per cent. Our monetary conditions and the convenience of the check and draft are such that there will continue to be a great growth in the volume and number of such items to be handled through the transit department. To get an idea as to how this increase is averaging I secured an analysis of more than a dozen of what would be termed good country bank accounts and found that, in a period of five years, the increases in the volume of transit items passing through those accounts was 52 per cent, while the net deposits increased only 34 per cent. Facing an increased demand for service, which is, in our section, 18 per cent greater than is the increase in loanable funds, how can our banks continue to make profits and increase and maintain their strength? It can be done by injecting into banking the same standard of improved methods as is urged upon the farmer in order that he may increase and better the quality of his production. Bankers constantly must improve their methods and increase the efficiency of their respective institutions.

It occurs to me that the time is not far distant when the matter of establishing district clearing houses, through exchanges of country items may be effected between banks in each district and between districts, along somewhat the same lines as are our exchanges of local items through our present city clearing houses, might be taken up. Such a plan might first be worked out by and between reserve cities with the view of further extension, if successful. It would seem that we are to have certain monetary reform legislation real soon.

There is no question but some plan or place must be established where banks can go at all times with perfectly liquid assets and convert these assets into actual cash with which to move the crops and take care of the legitimate business needs of this country. Personally, as I study the question, I become more impressed with the present temporary measure which expires in 1914, known as the Aldrich-Vreeland Act, and which provides for the establishment of national currency associations through which emergency currency can be secured. This is a splendid law, but its provisions are inadequate. I believe, if it were amended and extended to include and legalize the operations of clearing houses and to place them under national supervision, and to make them the agency or channel through which the currency shall be issued, a great step towards the solution of this all-important question would have been taken.

In working out the details of the plan some means should be provided for free transfer of funds from one center to another, through requisition or otherwise. Such a provision would do much towards curing our exchange troubles.

It is the duty of bank customers to pay their bills in cash, or exchange that can be converted into cash, and for the full face amount of their bills. It is a great convenience for those customers to be able to sit down in their homes or offices and draw their personal checks against their local bank, and send them to neighboring towns and cities in settlement of their indebtedness. This plan saves the customers a trip to the bank, relieves the banker of the trouble of waiting on the customers, and of having to issue exchange to cover each transaction. The banker is further benefited from getting the use of the customers' funds, which, if loaned at a fair rate, will yield more than would be derived from the sale of exchange, should the customers call at the bank and buy drafts instead of sending out their personal checks.

Where exchange is charged back to the depositors, and in turn by the depositors to the drawers of the checks, it retards the circulation of the checks and hinders the business relations of the communities involved and, personally, I believe that every banker should undertake to promote and encourage development of business in the community where he does business, and that it is to the advantage of all bankers to have the personal check circulate as nearly at par as is possible in their natural trade territory. In order that business development may be encouraged, I would favor universal parring of checks, when a means of free transfer of credits from one reserve city to another has been established and a way has been provided to overcome the interest loss on the vast volume of floating credits. In the meantime, if reserve city bankers expect their country banker friends to remit at par, it is the duty of the reserve city bankers to provide the most economical means through which they may do so.

The country clearing house furnishes such means. It has been and is being successfully operated under varied conditions, and I believe it will work satisfactorily in any city where there is sufficient business to justify its establishment.

CASUALTY COMPANY TAKEN OVER

A bulletin issued on Thursday states that "The Equitable Casualty and Bank Depositors' Guarantee Company of Columbus, Ohio, has passed under the control of the American Bankers Security Company of Chicago. The latter has been selling stock to finance a company to guarantee bank deposits, and the deal with the Columbus company meets its requirements. The name is to be changed to the American Guarantee Company, with John L. Hamilton of Chicago as president and E. H. Parr as treasurer. The capital of the insurance company has been increased from $200,000 to $250,000 and $70,000 has been contributed to surplus. The stockholders of the Ohio company have cut their holdings in two, putting the difference into surplus, and the American Bankers Security Company is to take $100,000 of stock at two for one, further increasing the surplus. It was lack of surplus which prevented the Ohio company from doing much business."

"MADE-IN-CHICAGO" DINNER

The Chicago Association of Commerce will give a Manufacturers Conference and Dinner on next Tuesday evening, July 22d, at 6:30 P. M. at the Sherman. The purpose is to complete plans for the celebration of "Made-in-Chicago" week, August 11th-16th. Business Manager H. F. Miller is looking after the details.

ACQUIRE NEW QUARTERS

The Northern Bank Note Company of Chicago moved this week to more extensive quarters in the new Rand-McNally building, Clark and Harrison streets, covering twenty thousand square feet on the seventh floor. They have taken substantially half again as much space as they formerly occupied at 633 Plymouth Place. Specializing in the manufacturing of negotiable instruments, especially for the bank trade, their volume of business has grown to such proportions that they now move, in spite of the necessity of assuming their old lease until next May. Their moving slogan is "More Room for More Business."

In 1891 most of the bank lithographing was being sent away to St. Louis and Milwaukee. This afforded the opportunity to specialize in the manufacturing of bank lithographing, and at that time Samuel W. Earle opened the doors of the Northern Lithographing Company in the Manhattan building. Before long it became necessary to move to larger quarters, so that in 1894 the business moved across the street to the Girard building—old 302 Dearborn Street. After nine years another move was made to the Charles Pope building, 633 Plymouth Place, and at that time the name was changed to the Northern Bank Note Company. After another nine years they move to the Rand-McNally building, the largest and best manufacturing building near the loop. The volume of business has increased to over half the bank trade in the city of Chicago, besides a large 'out of town' correspondence. In their new quarters the Northern Bank Note Company expects to give a greater service, being within three blocks of La Salle Street and close to the loop—a moment's call of any customer. The arrangement of the many departments will also make it possible that an order does not retrace its track but moves on from office to shipping with little friction and great rapidity.

The officers are: S. W. Earle, president; C. F. Reinboth, vice-president; A. H. Gilbert, secretary; S. Edwin Earle, treasurer.

In the factory the superintendent and foremen, with one exception, have been with the firm fifteen years, so that the whole organization is thoroughly versed in the needs of bankers for all negotiable and commercial forms, including bonds, stocks, checks of all kinds, drafts, letterheads, etc.

Inspection of the new plant is cordially invited.

JOHN J. MITCHELL COMMENTS ON RATES

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Trust, said:

"Our rates run from 6 to 7 per cent. We are lending more money at 6½ per cent, however, than at 6 or 7. We have some old loans still standing at 5½ per cent. Our 7 per cent money goes mostly to borrowers in the grain and provision trade. They are able to pay 7 per cent and still make a profit on the proceeds of the loan.

"I am inclined to believe money is as high now as it will be in November. There are several reasons for believing this. In the first place, a great many borrowers, having become apprehensive, have really borrowed more than they needed and have made arrangements at this time for their autumn requirements. They will not be in the market at the time of the crop moving demand.

"Again, the banks are not lending to borrowers with new enterprises to promote or to borrowers who wish to expand their facilities. The accommodation usually extended to these classes of borrowers will be available for other lines of business."

HEALD ADVANCE FOR FAITHFUL SERVICE

The directors of the Canton (Ill.) National have advanced E. A. Heald to the presidency after 23 years faithful service as cashier. Howard B. Heald, for 14 years assistant cashier, was given the charter position. There was a banquet and a grand time.

U. S. TREASURY SETS NEW RECORD

The United States treasury handled in actual cash during the fiscal year ended June 30th, $7,071,520,000, excelling all previous records and stamping the federal treasury, officials declare, the greatest banking institution in the world.

These figures exceeded the cash transactions of the previous year by $469,769,000 and those of three years ago by $1,478,826,000. The figures show that treasury officials during the year just closed handled in cash nearly twice the amount of the total stock of money in the United States, which is estimated at $3,720,000,000.

Including bonds, checks and warrants, the treasury handled over $10,000,000,000 during the year. This, which does not include the transactions of the sub-treasuries, was handled without the loss of a cent to the government.

The government received for redemption during the year $606,666,000 in time-worn United States currency and $675,889,000 in national bank notes.

BILL FOR FARMERS' LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

A bill has been introduced in the house by Congressman Hullings of Pennsylvania in which a plan is devised whereby an association of not less than twenty-five members may borrow from the government at low rates of interest on mortgages upon their farms, repaying the loan in payments arranged to give the farmer ample time.

The organization is to be somewhat the same as that of national banks, the subscribers to pay 10 per cent in cash and also give their notes, payable to trustees for the use of the United States, for the amount of their subscriptions. The notes are secured by mortgages upon farm lands having an assessed valuation of double the amount of the mortgage.

What is Being Done for Agriculture in Michigan

The report of the agricultural committee, Michigan Bankers Association, covering the work performed during the past year, has been printed and is being sent out. The report follows:

Committee of the state bankers association presents its report of work the past year and offers suggestions for next year

Our investigation of last year showed a great loss in the rural population of the State of Michigan and a great gain in the population of the cities. It appeared that this change had taken the active, progressive man to the city and left tenants on the farm; that the development of the farms has been checked and the fertility of the fields diminished; that the average yield per acre in the state would not pay the farmer ordinary day wages; that there had been a great increase in the price of farm products to the consumers in the cities and not a proportionate increase in the price paid the farmers.

The committee assumed that the bankers of this great state would rise as a single person to this situation and try and solve the questions which are conceded by all to be of the utmost importance. The committee has been nobly supported, but the support has not been as unanimous as might have been expected. If the bankers would be as greatly interested in the stock on the farms as they are in the stocks in New York City, and would pay as much attention to the farmer who is mining his land as they do to the copper and iron mines of the upper peninsula, there would be much less of speculation and more of investment in the state of Michigan. Your committee has been specially active in the bulletin line, and no doubt have pestered some of the banks of the state with their circular matter, but the waste baskets of many of them have helped solve their troubles.

Out of circular letters sent May 21st to the members of the state association, about 535 in number, asking as to the agricultural development in the different counties, 135 escaped the waste baskets, and of this number 38 knew of steps being taken for agricultural development in their counties and 97 knew of no effort being made. There were reports of 39 corn contests and of nearly $2,000 offered in prizes for agricultural exhibits.

Better Methods Rather Than Laborers the Need

One banker reporting from a prosperous farming county stated that he knew of no efforts being taken in his county toward agricultural development. He says: "Farmers are surfeited with efforts to teach them how to farm. Say it is laborers they need rather than more knowledge. For want of labor they are unable to put into practice what they already know. Again we are facing an unfavorable season for corn contests on account of cold, backward weather."

To this banker we reply that for want of the proper scientific knowledge and some energy the codling moth is costing the farmers of the United States thirty million dollars annually; the Hessian fly is costing sixty millions of dollars; that the average yield of wheat per acre in Michigan last year was 10 1-10 bushels; corn 31 bushels, oats 33 bushels, rye 13 bushels. It is not the want of labor that produces so low an average yield; it is the want of knowledge and energy. One of the best posted men on the subject states that these yields are not what they ought to be; that many farmers are doubling and tripling them, and these larger yields are the results of better methods of farming.

Another banker says: "We lost interest in the farm deal when the legislature failed to pass the joint ownership bill. If the bankers cannot do business with these joint deed farmers, we feel that we have no time to waste."

Agriculture Making Wonderful Progress

In spite of these views, and in spite of the fact that the bankers have seemingly shown so little interest, agriculture has made wonderful progress in the state during the past year where members have become interested. Your committee has as its greatest problem the question of arousing public sentiment. With that object in view, a full report of the proceedings of the second annual conference of the agricultural committee of the State Bankers Association held at Minneapolis August 7, 1912, was mailed to every member. The addresses in that book, which is one of the most valuable books ever put out by any association, have had much to do in bringing forth the change in our state.

Fourteen bulletins have been prepared and distributed by the committee. In December we asked the members to get together to see if they could not employ a farm adviser in accordance with the plans adopted in Kalamazoo and Kent counties. In January we asked every banker in the state of Michigan who was willing to put some time and energy into the agricultural movement to mail the card enclosed to the secretary of the association. About two hundred replies were received to this circular. The secretary of the state association tabulated results and appointed a member in each county, the supervisors of the township, the superintendents of schools, the commissioners of schools, and the newspaper men to a conference, the conference to have the following objects in view:

First, to obtain a county farm adviser.

Second, to obtain pure seed.

Third, to assist in the organization of pure bred stock and in cow testing associations.

Fourth, to offer premiums for exhibits at county fairs.

Fifth, to arrange for corn contests so that there might be one for each township in the state.

In February a bulletin on the growing of alfalfa was distributed, for which there has been a very great demand through the secretary's office. In March the members were urged to write to the representatives in the legislature asking for liberal appropriations for the agricultural college. In April a plan was outlined for the employment of farm advisers. The plan of the corn contest as carried on in Van Buren county was printed. Bankers were urged to have the farmers test their seed corn. Bulletins were sent out on the importance of improvement of Michigan cattle and cow testing associations. In May the plan for the automobile alfalfa campaign was outlined. This in brief has been the work of the committee.

What Has Been Done in the State of Michigan?

The committee of the Bankers Association cannot claim the credit for all that has been accomplished in the past year. Results have been brought about through an awakening of public sentiment. Let us tell you what has been done. We care not for the glory.

First, in the employment of farm advisers.

Dr. Eben Mumford has been appointed state leader for Michigan, acting under the United States department of agriculture. He has under him two superintendents, one having charge of the south central district and the other of the north central district. Farm advisers now are employed and are at work in the counties of Allegan, St. Clair, Iron, Saginaw, Kent, Alpena, Houghton, Newaygo, Kalamazoo, Branch and Genesee. Twelve other counties have organizations formed and are raising some money, viz., Oakland, Van Buren, St. Joseph, Macomb, Berrien, Lenawee, Mecosta, Schoolcraft, Dickinson, Antrim, Mason and Charlevoix.

Thirty-four other counties have applied to the state leader for assistance in gaining and securing the services of county agriculturists, which makes a total of sixty counties out of eighty-three which have made some definite movement toward the development of the agricultural business of our state. In other words, seventy-two per cent of our people have taken decided steps in this line of work where one year ago there was not a farm adviser employed.

In Educational Lines

Last fall, for the first time, elementary agriculture was introduced in every rural school in the state. There are now twenty high schools with agricultural departments in charge of the graduates of our own college, the enrollment varying from twenty to one hundred forty students in each. Next year there will be twenty-six of these schools.

Professor French writes: "The keenest interest is manifested in every case and the practical results which we see are certainly very gratifying. At the same time we find that the introduction of these departments is a source of strength and inspiration to the entire high school."

There has been organized the Junior Agricultural Association of Michigan, or the formation of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs. There are now twenty-five of such clubs which are organized, with definite work in view, and which will be followed by reports next fall with the school exhibits. Last winter there were eighteen one-week short courses for farmers in connection with the high schools teaching agriculture. The attendance at these weekly schools ranged from twenty-five to one hundred twenty-five farmers. The short courses at college last winter were attended by five hundred young men, the largest number in the history of the college. During the past winter there have been eight hundred boys studying agriculture in our high schools and more than one thousand farmers.

It was the good fortune of the committee to have the privilege of being present at the hearing before the committee of ways and means of the house at the last legislature, when the amount of the appropriation for the agricultural college was being considered, and we are all gratified by the fact that before this committee at that time there appeared the best representation of the manufacturing, financial and educational interests of the state which had ever appeared before any committee in the house. It was largely due to the efforts of Mr. Robert D. Graham, president of the state board of agriculture, that such represensation was obtained, and we are pleased to announce that the ways and the means committee reconsidered their decision and reported a largely increased tax for our agricultural college.

Counties Worthy of Mention

Some counties are worthy of special mention for their activity in agricultural matters. In Lenawee county fifteen banks have subscribed one hundred dollars apiece for two years to support the farm bureau. In Allegan county all of the banks united in a guaranty to pay in proportion to their assets whatever deficit might arise in the employment of a farm adviser. In Kalamazoo county the banks have made large individual subscriptions for the same purpose. The First State of South Haven, the Lapeer Savings of Lapeer, and the Farmers Bank of Grass Lake are offering prizes and are conducting corn contests with excellent organization. The banks of Isabella county have raised one hundred dollars for prizes in the corn and sowing contest of the Isabella County Industrial Club. The First National of Sault Ste. Marie, through its president, has been the prime mover in the establishment of a country school of agriculture, and the president of the bank is spending a great deal of time and money in looking after its welfare. The Pompeii State is putting on a corn contest. Newaygo county has a corn crop improvement association. Kent, Barry and Allegan counties have put on automobile alfalfa campaigns. The Northwestern Michigan Bankers Club have undertaken the establishment of a county school of agriculture for that region.

This subject of agricultural improvement is a wonderfully entrancing one if we could only become interested. In the growing of alfalfa it is necessary that the seed be inoculated with the bacteria before the plant can make a successful growth. The committee has searched diligently for bacteria to inoculate the bankers of the state with interest in the subject of agriculture. It is a subject worthy of your attention. In the United States last year the gross income agricultural endeavor was estimated to reach ten billions of dollars, not ten billions worth of timber cut and nothing left in its place; not ten billions of gold, silver and iron taken from the mines and nothing left; not ten billions resulting from a careful manipulation of stocks and bonds, or the judicial financing of business propositions, but ten billions of wealth created by a combination of air, sunshine, moisture and the elements of fertility of the soil. The air, sunshine and moisture are unlimited. The fertility under a wise system of farming may be improved and increased, and instead of there being nothing left in its place there will be more fertility.

Michigan's Agricultural Product

The estimated agricultural product of Michigan is one hundred millions of dollars, and as we look about us and as we study the reports and see what the average yield is per acre we rise to the consciousness of what we are failing to do.

It is no exaggeration when we say that the members of this association, with the expenditure of less than one day apiece during the next year, could increase the crops of Michigan ten per cent. If you could increase the product of your local factories ten per cent by giving one week of your time you would be greatly inclined to do it, especially if the factory were one of your depositors. If you knew that by spending one day on the farm of John Smith, one of your depositors, you could increase his yield ten per cent, you would be inclined to give the time. But it approaches the line of the indefinite when you go about to improve the whole farming community and take the chances of your bank becoming a favored depository. This work is necessarily co-operative in its nature. It is not expected that the banker will have the knowledge and the experience to increase the yield of farmers, but he may co-operate with other bankers and other business men, and through their efforts there may be employed a man who will know how to give the necessary information and to enthuse the farmers to better methods and better work and enable them to get better results.

The committee recommends for the next year's work:

First, that there be gatherings in each county for the discussion of the agricultural situation, to be attended by the bankers, educational and professional men, and the farmers. It is only through discussion that interest will be aroused, and it is only through such cooperation that any great work can be accomplished.

Second, that the bankers offer prizes for agricultural products.

Third, that corn contests in each township in the state be promoted and that the banks finance these contests.

Fourth, to have in each county seat a short agricultural course of a week or two weeks under the direction of the agricultural college.

The bankers of the state of Michigan have the power to create public sentiment. With this power comes responsibility. The banker should be the leader in the creating of public sentiment. The greatest service which you can give to your locality is in inspiring and encouraging men to work for their own good and the good of the community. Your reward will come with the prosperity of the community.

OPINIONS ON CURRENCY BILL

Requests for the opinions of banking correspondents, lawyers and business men regarding the Glass-Owen currency bill have brought responses to the United States Mortgage and Trust Company of New York from forty-two smaller cities in the West and South. Analyzed in a general way, the replies indicate that twenty-two cities favor the main features of the bill and that ten are opposed to it, while sentiment in ten other cities is about evenly divided.

The South generally regards the bill with favor, judging by the opinions expressed. The Northwest is rather evenly divided, but in favor of the bill, if anything. Opinion is largely unfavorable in the North, Central and Middle Western states.

The main objections to the bill are summarized as follows:

1. Inadequacy of banking representation on the federal and district boards and fear of the political control as a result of the proposed appointive arrangement.

2. Scattering rather than concentration of reserve funds through the operation of the regional system.

3. Anticipated curtailment of credits, with its consequent effect upon earnings of individual banks.

4. Objection from the inter-mountain region to the issuance of currency against assets.

5. Anxiety as to possible forced denationalization of institutions now under federal control.

The summary presented includes no replies from New York, Chicago or St. Louis or from any cities in the Eastern and New England states.

THE MONEY SITUATION

Bankers and business men generally are of the opinion that the present high rates for money likely are to continue for the balance of the year. No apprehension is felt, however, that there will be anything like a pronounced stringency and a general feeling of optimism is apparent in most sections of the country. The reports received indicate that the outlook for bountiful crops is good and there is no reason for adopting a pessimistic attitude. A disposition to contract loans is being manifested, due to a desire to be well prepared to take care of the demands which will be made upon the banks during the crop-moving period. Bankers are advising caution and conservatism. It is not expected that there will be any serious difficulty in meeting the demands of the crop-moving period.

RUN ON KENWOOD BANK.

A rumor, born apparently from nothing, but which spread through the community with great rapidity, caused a run on the Kenwood Trust and Savings, Chicago, which continued for over two days. The bank was able to meet every demand and all depositors who feared for their savings were quickly paid. The Kenwood Trust and Savings is backed by some of the strongest men in the stock yards district, and deposits in large sums were made all during the run. Many offers of assistance

WILLIAM P. CONWAY
Assistant Treasurer

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, William P. Conway was elected assistant treasurer and John J. Lewis assistant secretary.

Mr. Conway has been associated with the bond department of the company since February 1, 1911, and will retain his connection with that department.

Mr. Lewis has been with the Guaranty Trust since 1910. Previous to that time he was with the Morton Trust Company and the State Trust Company. Prior to his recent promotion he occupied the position of chief clerk of the company.

were received from the various city banks, but none was needed, and conditions now are again normal.

J. R. Dominick

President J. R. Dominick of the Traders National, Kansas City, wife and niece were in Chicago on Friday en route to their summer home at Duluth. Mr. Dominick is an ex-president of the Missouri Association. He says the Kansas City bankers are spreading themselves for the Chapman Agricultural Conference which will meet there August 26th-27th. The attendance will be very large.

INVESTMENT BANKERS TO MEET

Secretary Fenton has issued a call for a meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America, to be held at the Statler Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio, August 8th and 9th. The board will meet to consider plans for the annual convention to be held in Chicago, October 28th, 29th and 30th, to select the regular ticket of officers and board of governors for the coming year and to discuss legislative matters.

Secretary Fenton states that from the interest shown at this early date the second annual convention promises to far surpass the last one in point of attendance.

F. O. WATTS HEAD OF THIRD NATIONAL.

F. O. Watts has been elected president of the Third National of St. Louis, succeeding the late C. H. Huttig. Mr. Watts formerly was vice-president. He is well known to bankers and formerly was president of the A. B. A.

President Wilson has pardoned T. F. Baker and John Wisherd, convicted at Abilene, Tex., April 13, 1912, of violation of the national bank act and each sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. No portion of the sentences had been served and the president's action was based on the ground of innocence.

WE had a postal from W. O. Jones with the following:

This is the best
 Hot weather rule:
 Whatever else you do
 Keep cool.

"HOW high will beefsteak go?" so far as it is a banking question, is referred to John Fletcher and Melvin A. Traylor, experts on the subject.

L. J. DAVIS, bank examiner in Texas, has advised bankers that the best way to help the farmer and the state is to loan the farmer the money to send his son to a good agricultural school.

THIS is a society item. In publishing its circulation and ownership statement for July 15th the Daily Banker, of New York, gives the address of one of its owners as "Franklin and Center streets."

THE "owner" in question is none other than J. G. Robin, the distinguished bank wrecker and the "Franklin and Center" mentioned is "The Tombs."

THAT was Robin's winter home, but we are under the impression that he is "summering" at that famous metropolitan resort, Blackwell's Island. Glad to make the correction.

UNION NATIONAL at Houston, Tex., has adopted the finger-print method of identification.

THE Pan Handle Bankers Association, covering northwest Texas, met on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at Amarillo. Silos and the currency bill were the chief topics discussed.

LOOKING backward from a twenty-five-thousand-dollar vice-presidency at New York, Ben L. Gill can easily see that "the $3,000 salary of the Texas banking commissioner's job is too small." But it was a good enough step-ladder.

EVERYBODY'S building silos in Texas—Joe Hirsch.

THE Texas Record refers to him as "Joseph Chapman, the man responsible for the banker-farmer movement."

THE Vermont proceedings book, just out, calls him "Joseph Chapman, father of the back-to-the-farm movement."

GEOGRAPHICALLY the Chapman doctrine appears to have spread to the very ends of the A. B. A. jurisdiction. Bully good reason for putting him in the big chair at Boston.

THE final announcement for the Washington convention is out. Bellingham, August 7th, 8th and 9th.

TOPLINERS are J. A. S. Pollard, Lydell Baker and W. G. Edens. J. F. Sears, of Prosser, will have an agricultural number and the A. I. B. chapters from Seattle and Spokane will "joint debate."

REGULATION of the sale of securities and of real estate located outside of Ohio and offered for sale in this state promises a voluminous and complicated task to the state banking superintendent and his assistants on and after August 1st.

THE department already has received a large number of requests for information concerning the operation of the new "Blue Sky" law from organizers and dealers having new projects to place on the market.

THE Ohio law is one of the most radical of the thirty-six or seven now on the statute books. The banking superintendent has to pass on the security as well as on the dealer. Agents are included.

FOUR ex-presidents of the American Bankers Association, Walker Hill, E. F. Swinney, William Livingstone and F. O. Watts, attended the funeral of Charles H. Huttig in St. Louis as a special committee appointed by Vice-President Arthur Reynolds.

THE floral display was the most wonderful ever seen in St. Louis. Emblems and bankers came from every state. It was a remarkable demonstration for a remarkable man.

OMAHA bankers on Friday last entertained their clearing house brethren from Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Denver, Pueblo, Salt Lake City, Des Moines, Sioux City, Cedar Rapids, Dubuque, Lincoln and Omaha. V. B. Caldwell, president of the Omaha Clearing House Association, was the "functus officio."

TWO members of the currency commission, Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines and Luther Drake of Omaha, were in attendance.

THE meeting was called "for the purpose of discussing the new currency bill now before congress, to the end that the representatives of the banks in various cities may formulate for public expression their views upon the present bill and express such opinions as these representatives of the banks attending said conference may at this meeting determine."

THERE was lots of talk and plenty to eat. The bankers unanimously were "agin" government control.

THEY also believed that the federal banks should issue the notes instead of the government, and that the government credit should not be tied up with the notes.

OBJECTION was made to the proposed method of decentralizing reserves, believing it would cause immense contraction of credit throughout the country in order to provide the deposit required with the regional banks, which would in turn materially and unnecessarily increase the rates of interest to borrowers.

ALTOGETHER it was a strong meeting and was well attended. Mr. Caldwell is being congratulated on his original "regional."

RUMOR has it that Vice-President Arthur Reynolds will ask the various ex-presidents who are present on the platform at the Boston convention each to preside at a session, or part of one.

THIS will be a fine tribute to the memory of Mr. Huttig and a high compliment to the honored ex-presidents.

IT will afford additional proof of the unselfish, high-minded character of the Iowa banker, who always does the right thing and does it modestly.

WE are greatly pleased to get the latest copyright edition of the 1913 "Roll of Honor of National Banks" but surprised to find there in good black type the Kuhn banks of Pittsburgh.

IT reminds us that we discovered the Allegheny National almost at the top of the list a few years ago, long after "Billy" Montgomery was doing time for wrecking it.

THIS from the cover page: "A place on the roll of honor is like a man's character—it is something money cannot buy, but is won by merit and worth alone."

SECRETARY WILLIAM SCOTT of Virginia writes: "And while Mr. Law's name was proposed, it was done so by letter and not from any member present at the convention. Mr. Law was not instructed to be voted for by our nominating committee, but the committee was instructed to vote for Col. Thos. B. McAdams, of Richmond, Va."

IT isn't safe in this much-read department to write "Virginia" when you are thinking of "Maryland."

GOOD old Lydell Baker, who publishes the Pacific Banker at Portland when not out delivering classical orations at state conventions, is of the "precise school."

EVERYTHING with Baker must be just so. Last week he took his "iron quill" in hand and wrote a few lines over to Minneapolis to his old friend Chapman.

"WE are being continually importuned," wrote Baker, "to 'endorse' or support a certain estimable Philadelphian for the vice-presidency of the A. B. A."

"WITHOUT 'solicitation' we already have declared that 'the whole West owes its support to Joseph Chapman' for the place if he will take it."

"THEY continue to write us from the East that you will not take it if offered to you. We want to know the truth."

THAT'S Baker everytime. Wants to know the truth and then he sticks to it. Mr. Chapman took his pen in hand and wrote a few lines in reply:

"ANY report that may have reached you," wrote Farmer Joe, "that I have made any statement that I would not take the position if offered is absolutely erroneous. I may have said that I would not take the position if I had to make an active campaign for it and importune my friends to vote for me."

MR. CHAPMAN continues: "I would consider it a great honor to be elected vice-president of the American Bankers Association, providing my friends think that I am the right man for the place. As far as making any campaign myself for that position or any other, would say that such a course is absolutely repugnant to me, as I believe in the office seeking the man and not the man seeking the office. If I could be elected that way, I should consider it an honor and would do my best not to disappoint my friends."

"I HAVE no comments to make whatever on any other candidates, nor the methods they are employing to get the nomination. That is for each man to decide for himself according to his idea of the ethics of the situation."

"I WAS not able to attend our Minnesota bankers' meeting this year, but I understand that the members of the American Bankers Association who were there, without any knowledge on my part, urged me to allow the use of my name for this position, pledging themselves to do everything in their power to get me the place. Coming in the way it did it is a matter of great gratification to me, and endorses my views on the matter of the office seeking the man."

EVERY honest member of the American Bankers Association will endorse Mr. Chapman's declaration on the matter of not seeking the place.

COMING in any other way it would be an empty honor. The future of the A. B. A. depends much upon the type of men at its head.

A Chicago bank man who travels out a lot says that a part of the plan of the "boomers" is to elect their man and to "force Farnsworth out as well as to depose all the present leaders from prominence in A. B. A. counsels."

QUITE an ambitious scheme but not entirely new. Neither is "bank prestige" a very laudable motive.

OUR friend says: "I've been to nearly all state conventions and what you published about the twenty-nine state instructions is true."

"CHAPMAN will get votes in New England, the East, Middle West, and west of the Mississippi. It's simply Good Night, Haas settled that."

THIS particular Indian doesn't give Law more than twelve votes.

WE are trying to keep track of John L. Hamilton for you.

LAST week we had him president of several things, but this is right.

ON July 12th he was elected a director and president of the Equitable Casualty and Bank Depositors Guarantee Company, with home offices in the Columbus Savings and Trust Building, Columbus, Ohio.

THIS company writes bank guaranty of deposits, fidelity and depository bonds and will add burglary and other lines in the near future. It will qualify for business in the adjoining states at once.

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS, of the Illinois Bankers Association, was in Chicago on Tuesday going over the details of the September 25th convention.

THE program will be the ablest possible. President Phillips and Andrew J. Graham were the guests of W. G. Edens at luncheon.

NOW, Lydell Baker wouldn't have said in his paper that John Burianek, Jr., of Cedar Rapids "left for a trip around the world with his complete wardrobe in forty trunks."

THE paragraph to that effect was printed in this column and some kind friend sent it on. It overtook the traveler at Yokohama.

HAD it not been an exaggeration John never would have seen it. At Yokohama the much-sought-for young bachelor is having a fine time.

LIKES Japan and says the girls are "very, very pretty." Has only one small trunk and a hand bag and says "nexttime" there will be only a suitcase, as baggage is the one drawback to a good trip.

NORBORNE PETRONIUS GATLING when he left N'y Yo'k for his old stamping grounds in Virginia didn't know, of course, that they were not going to "endorse" his friend Law of Philadelphia for etc., etc.

THE "dope" which the Pacific banker editor referred to in his letter to Mr. Chapman may have been something like the following:

"WILLIAM A. LAW, vice-president of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, whose popularity has been demonstrated in an exceptional manner by the members of the American Bankers Association in various states, is said to now be assured of the nomination as first vice-president of that organization. It is estimated that a sufficient number of the nominating committee have declared themselves in favor of him to assure his nomination at the Boston convention."

THE quotation is verbatim from the columns of a southern banking paper which comments that "Mr. Law is a southern man, etc."

ON the very next page facing the paragraph quoted, mind you, are reprinted two autograph letters telling ye editor what a great man he is and what a fine "independent" paper he prints.

ONE of the letters is signed by "Wm. A. Law, first vice-president, First National Bank, Philadelphia." The other is signed "H. J. Hass, assistant cashier, First National Bank, Philadelphia."

BANKERS of the South Atlantic states will go by boat from Savannah to New York on their way to the Boston convention.

THE start from Savannah will be on October 2d and will enable the visitors to spend Sunday in the metropolis.

THE Ford Motor Co. money is getting on the nerves of the Detroit bankers. When it got to twenty-six millions they demanded that the company declare a cash dividend which relieved the pressure by ten millions.

FORD doesn't like time certificates even, and demand deposits in such big chunks are touchy subjects.

ONE banker who had six millions of it went out to the factory to see Henry himself about it. Henry was found in a suit of overalls tinkering up a dynamo "too busy to talk about such a little thing as six millions."

ALLAN F. AYERS has retired from the vice-presidency of the Continental Trust at Denver. Probably open to a new connection?

L. L. DRESSER, who formerly conducted the Commerce Monthly at St. Louis, is the secretary of the Continental.

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane says: "The bank which refuses to advertise merely because it is difficult to determine the exact returns which it secures will in all probability soon be the bank which must be content to take care of the business its competitors do not care for, for stagnation will surely result from a policy which does not take into account the value of proper publicity."

"I BELIEVE that the chief value of the printed advertisement is in the way of what might be termed general publicity, that is in keeping the name of the bank and its officers constantly before the public and in keeping that public informed as much as possible as to the service rendered by the bank."

IF you haven't taken a look at Moody's Magazine lately, do so. It is quite likely to have just what you want, in clean, orderly, authoritative style.

THOMAS H. BREWER, president of the Fidelity National at Spokane, writes this pleasant little thing about THE CHICAGO BANKER, which is much appreciated.

"PERMIT me to take this opportunity to congratulate you on the general excellence of your publication. In the mass of banking publications which come to one's desk yours is always read the most carefully."

PRESIDENT JAMES G. CANNON of the Fourth National, N. Y., will be orator of the day at the Kentucky convention, September 17th and 18th, at Louisville.

Proposal For Bonds

Sealed bids addressed to J. W. Wimer, Secretary of School Board, Wallace, Idaho, will be received until August 2nd, 1913, at 7 o'clock, p. m., for bonds to the amount of $55,000.00 to be issued by Independent School District No. 8 of Shoshone County, Idaho. Said Bonds to run not to exceed 20 years, and redeemable at any time after 10 years, interest not to exceed six per cent, payable semi-annually. Bonds to be in denomination of $1000.00. The Board reserves right to reject any and all bids and sell at private sale if deemed for best interests of district.

SECRETARY DAVIS has great hopes that the convention being in "state fair week" the attendance will break all records. All but nineteen banks in the state are in the association. Another good secretary!

SECRETARY MACFADDEN is drilling his members on the requirements of the North Dakota chattel mortgage law. Quite different from the old, and effective since July 1st.

JAMES J. HILL stands in the spot light briefly with the remark that "Wall Street hasn't a friend west of Buffalo."

AND congress seems to have about the same idea. Time was when she dictated everything from the republican party to the government crop report. Alas! "those were the happy days." Now the National City is denied even a spotter in the comptroller's office.

CASHIER CHARLES R. HANNAN of the City National, Council Bluffs, is "at home sick" but not down-hearted. He writes in to reserve on the Boston special "sure."

IF you are not fixed up with all the currency dope your anatomy can absorb, write to U. S. Senator Robert L. Owen for a copy of his bill (S. 2639) and for "Document No. 117," which is Senator Owen's "statement, as chairman of the committee. He will gladly oblige you.

YOUNG GATES declares everything would have been all right had he not tipped off the orchestra to play "My Wife's Gone to the Country." That's what riled father-in-law.

THE "invisible government" isn't a heap to look at when shown up.

PRESIDENT WILSON may get lost, as reported, in those New Hampshire woods but he knows the route through the congressional shrubbery in Washington all right.

THE minister of the interior of Mexico has given to the press the statement that "peace may be considered an accomplished fact."

WE do not know the ("in Mex.") definition of peace.

"A PHILADELPHIA paper has discovered that "the new currency bill puts the government absolutely under the control of the banks."

DO you really think G. M. can safely call off his lecture engagements owing to this discovery?

LAUTERBACH and Lamar put the double ell in aitch—ee—double ell, so far as Wall street is concerned.

THE Kuhns hadn't sufficiently water worked the Pittsburgh Bank for Savings and the First of McKeesport—so they both pulled through.

MRS. CACACACACACACACACACACA is now in Hammond, Ind., and is on her way here to spend the Summer as usual," says the Pennsylvania Advertiser.

WHAT we should like to know is how the lady knows when she is through spelling her name? How about it over the 'phone?

IT should be the can for "Edward Engerud" in the North Dakota Banker. Twelve signed articles in one issue is overworking the typos. He could handle his department "By Edward Engerud" and save his good will.

WORD comes from Boston that Chairman Joseph Chapman of the committee on agriculture and education has landed the two biggest fish in their respective ponds for the session at which he will preside at Boston.

PRESIDENT GEORGE VINCENT of the University of Minnesota will be the "education" and James J. Hill will do a turn at agriculture. Can you even think of anything so good as that morning session on October 9th will be?

L. E. STEVENS, president of the Century at Des Moines, was in Chicago this week telling how Iowa is always doing something "to beat the band."

THIS time it's wheat, oats and a prospective corn crop ahead of all records. It will take lots of currency to carry on business in the big agricultural state this fall.

L. E. HAS heard of four or more candidates for the Iowa presidency at Clinton and as many for treasurer.

FOR the McKee vacancy on the council there are boomers at work for Pollard, for Curtin, for McNider and for John T. Hamilton if he decides to keep out of the governorship race. Kent Ferman has been mentioned also.

SUPPOSE eight or ten state conventions did endorse a candidate for the A. B. A. vice-presidency at Boston?

THE member of the nominating committee in one such state has come out for Chapman. He says the A. B. A. members in his state elected him and he's "for the best man." Convention instructions are not binding. They are bunk.

Andrew Jay Frame Diagnoses Currency Bill

Without going into details a few salient points are sufficient to command our most respectful attention.

In addition to paying 10 per cent of the capital of each bank into a federal reserve bank, the bill provides that 5 per cent of the deposits of each bank be also deposited in such bank, and "shall not be diminished."

I fear as to results; the committee which drafted the bill has not counted the cost. Permit illustrations:

The bank of which I am president would be obliged to pay into the federal reserve bank as follows:

10 per cent of its $150,000 capital is	$ 15,000
5 per cent of its $2,300,000 deposits	115,000

Total cash to be paid to a federal reserve bank	130,000
---	---------

As we now hold in cash an average of about	160,000

This would leave but	$ 30,000

Any prudent banker with our deposits would keep not much less than $160,000 in cash at all times. If so, then that $130,000 must come from our present reserve agencies.

Now mark—our reserve agency balances in Milwaukee, Chicago and New York simply cover our reasonable normal requirements for daily remittances and selling exchange to our customers. Practically every dollar of these balances is turned over, on an average, every ten days. These balances are not superfluous. What is true of this bank is approximately true of all others. Material withdrawals from such balances would precipitate trouble.

Again, let us broaden the view:

As to National Banks

If all national banks were compelled to join, they would pay in cash into the federal reserve banks (in round numbers) as follows:

10 per cent of say—1,000 million dollars capital is	$100,000,000
5 per cent of say—8,000 million dollars deposits is	400,000,000

(including banks with banks)
The federal reserve bank would receive in cash	500,000,000.
As all national banks hold in cash	1,000,000,000

After the above deposits they would have but	$ 500,000,000 cash left, or half present holdings.

How can any statesman justify the forcible taking away of $500,000,000, or one-half of the total capital, from all the national banks, without compensation on the $400,000,000 and only a 5 per cent limit on the $100,000,000 capital, all without recall during the life of each bank, under the plea of aiding them in trouble to prevent cash suspension by banks or of re-lending to these banks their own funds, charg-

Waukesha expert points out some dangerous features. Says statesmen should preserve best and most democratic banking system in the world ing interest therefor with which to replenish their cash reserves?

As banks, other than national, hold less reserves, let us see results:

As to State Banks, Trust Companies, Etc.

10 per cent of say—1,000 million dollars capital is	$100,000,000

5 per cent of say—11,400 million dollars deposits is	570,000,000
--	-------------

Total from state banks, trust companies, etc.	670,000,000
---	-------------

As present cash reserves are about	570,000,000
------------------------------------	-------------

To comply with the suggested bill would leave no cash on hand, and still these banks would owe the reserve banks	$100,000,000
--	---------------

Combination of All Banks

10 per cent of say—2,000 million dollars capital is	$200,000,000
---	---------------

5 per cent of say—19,400 million dollars deposits is	970,000,000
--	-------------

Total to pay into federal reserve banks	1,170,000,000
---	---------------

Total now held by all banks in cash	1,570,000,000
-------------------------------------	---------------

Leaving but	$ 400,000,000
of cash in all banks, which approximates but 2 per cent of total deposits.

This total cash on hand includes subsidiary coins, national bank notes, etc., covering more than $150,000,000, which are not legal reserves. If all banks accepted the provisions of this bill, what would be the result as to cash reserves required?

The federal reserve banks would absorb	$1,170,000,000

The three central reserve city banks would be required to hold 20 per cent on say—$3,500,000,000 individual deposits.	700,000,000
--	-------------

The other reserve city banks 10 per cent on say—$3,500,000,000	350,000,000
---	-------------

Country banks 5 per cent on say—$10,000,000,000 individual deposits	500,000,000
--	-------------

Total required under the bill	$2,720,000,000 figuring on individual deposits alone of $17,-

000,000,000 and not counting reserves required on deposits of banks with banks. All banks now hold in cash reserves the sum of $1,570,000,000, including subsidiary coins, national bank notes, etc., thus leaving a deficiency of $1,150,000,000 in required reserves under this bill. This deficiency must be paid to the federal reserve banks in cash or the banks generally must part with $1,150,000,000 of their choice, interest-bearing securities to liquidate the call.

These facts are astounding and call for serious answers to the following queries:

1st. Will the sponsors of this bill tell us where the banks are going to get even a part of the deficiency of cash reserves required under it and still maintain sufficient city bank balances with which to do business, without calling loans or selling their best securities, as indicated above?

2d. As the only market for the world's standard for reserves is outside of the United States, would not any attempt to obtain even a small part of the required amount abroad seriously aggravate an already overstrained condition the world over?

3d. If even one quarter of the banks in this country should call loans under the operation of this bill, would not the effect be to raise the interest rates generally and to breed instead of prevent or cure a panic?

4th. In all fairness, why should the banks take from their reserves of cash, upon which more or less interest is paid, to the extent of three fourths of the total and deposit these vast sums in federal or other depositories, without interest on four fifths of it, and then in turn borrow on rediscounts from these same deposited funds, paying interest therefor? To turn over interest-bearing securities is the only way to replenish cash reserves. Is that equity? Is that relief in the day of trouble? Is that the true mission of a reserve bank? Sound logic would seem to indicate it is not.

5th. How many state banks or trust companies would voluntarily accept the bill as outlined?

6th. How many national banks would retain their charters if compelled to accept it?

I assert the true mission of a reserve bank is to mobilize an extra quantity of cash, but not to be used in normal periods, and from which banks in abnormal periods can obtain rediscounts for cash, to the end that cash suspension by banks may be avoided, and to the end that aid may be given to legitimate interests when trouble threatens.

An interest rate above normal should be charged for this extra cash, to the end that so soon as the strain ceases the cash will return to its reservoir ready for future troubles, and to the end that currency and credit inflation be avoided.

If the monetary commission bill was modifications relieved the situation in 1907, why should we deposit over $1,100,000,000 of our reserve cash in federal reserve banks, while at the same time these reserve banks are empowered to issue an additional $500,000,000 of government notes under this bill, presumably for relief of banks when trouble threatens?

If the Monetary Commission Bill was monopolistic in character, what must we say of this one?

If the powers that be cannot give the country some simple, effective remedy to prevent cash suspension by banks, which occurs once in a decade or two, why not enlarge the powers of our clearing houses to give us relief through rediscounts, to state as well as national banks, on a uniform form of note, under some plan similar to the Aldrich-Vreeland act, when trouble threatens. Then give us a rest from further agitation and in all human probability, our peaceful progress would soon be restored. If that was accomplished, general cash suspension by banks would be avoided in the future. Of general agitation on revolutionary lines, it would seem that we have already had an oversupply.

As a country banker, who is not influenced by any city banker, I am profoundly impressed that if the powers that be desire a continuance of that power, they will heed the warning that the delicate machinery of credit must not be revolutionized, and that the best and most democratic banking system the world ever knew should be preserved. The responsibility rests with our statesmen. Will they measure up to the occasion?

Rediscount and Acceptance Fallacies

Rarely in past history have more dangerous fallacies been promulgated by certain interests than the cry in normal times for more rediscounting facilities, and also acceptance privileges by banks generally, than today is enjoyed in the United States.

The cry has become so persistent and widespread that even good bankers have fallen by the wayside in commending it under the mistaken belief that it will "create a broader discount market" for the use of bank funds.

With all due respect to the advocates I respectfully challenge any banker or statesman to prove logically the necessity or practicability on broad-gauge grounds of providing any additional facilities to those we now enjoy through the existing channels in normal periods.

Let us see. The loans, discounts, etc., of all banks in the United States are about 18,500 millions of dollars; the rediscounts and money borrowed averages about 150 millions of dollars or less than 1 per cent of the total.

Will any sane man tell me that banks cannot get additional rediscounts from present city correspondents in normal times if entitled to it? If a few banks cannot get their wants supplied, is it not largely because they are short on collateral? And if so, will the advocates of additional facilities tell us how any central organization is to give relief on charitable lines?

Again: The total "loans and discounts, bonds, etc." of all the banks in the United States are divided about as follows:

Bonds of various kinds	$4,500,000,000
Mortgage loans—say	3,500,000,000
Various loans not quickly liquid	6,000,000,000

Total "live paper" paid at maturity $16,500,000,000.

As the last item of $4,500,000,000 "live paper" is but one quarter of the whole and is grasped for first by all the banks, I challenge any banker or statesman to prove logically any necessity for artificially trying to manufacture more live paper. With three fourths of total loans, etc., in other than live paper, this great margin is always ready to be exchanged for legitimate, quick, liquid loans.

Great Britain, France and Germany, as creditor nations, and with nearly one thousand million dollars monthly in foreign trade bills, have an abundance of "live paper" which in our developing stage we cannot command; therefore the only possible legitimate method to obtain a broader discount market here is to enlarge our internal and external commerce; build up international banks and a merchant marine, so that direct connections be made with foreign ports instead of largely through London; continue to accumulate surplus capital to the end that supply exceeds home demands, then interest rates will automatically decline; continue our onward course toward becoming the leading creditor nation of the world, and then a broader discount market will naturally follow. Then, and not till then, will we have the additional "live paper" we seek.

To attempt to create a large legitimate discount market by swapping credits through acceptances or rediscounts or issuing further I. O. U.'s is condemned by all sound political economists. It is pure bubble blowing and not legitimate banking. I pray the doubters will read Hon. Andrew D. White's "Fiat Money in France" as an object lesson from the dear school of experience.

We all concede the necessity to obtain extra cash by discounting in panic periods from some reservoir of extra cash, but in normal times we can take care of ourselves.

The solution is not a difficult one. If our statesmen will provide it and preserve the best and most democratic banking system in the world, the gratitude of the nation will be due them. That is all we need.

VOCATIONAL CONTINUATION SCHOOLS IN WASHINGTON

A bill providing for vocational continuation schools has been introduced in the Washington legislature. It provides for compulsory continuation schooling for six hours weekly, three years for boys and two years for girls, after the age of 15. The plan is somewhat similar to the Cooley proposal in Illinois, but differs in empowering the local school board to appoint the board to have charge of vocational training. In this and other respects it resembles the Wisconsin law enacted in 1911.

WANTS BANKERS TO STUDY CURRENCY

To the Editor:—How can we make an effective appeal to every banker to study the new currency bill? It is highly important to every citizen. The bill proposes a new system of banking; it is the answer of the Wilson administration to the persistent demands of the bankers for remedial legislation. Something is likely to be done. I believe the bankers of the country have it in their power to determine what this shall be and that by arousing interest in the bill and studying it we can eliminate those features which arouse the antagonism of every banker and still retain the excellent features of the bill and secure a system to our liking.

Who can suggest some plan of action which will cause the bankers to study the bill?

Very truly yours,

Waterloo, Iowa, July 22d.

BANKS PROTEST AGAINST TAXES

A representative committee of local bankers appeared before the board of review this week and protested against the increase in assessments placed against them by the board of assessors. The institutions whose representatives appeared are the First National, Illinois Trust and Savings, Merchants Loan, the Corn Exchange National, and the Northern Trust. They represent all of the banks in the city.

"Banks were raised nearly 10 per cent this year," said J. C. Hutchins, attorney for the Illinois Trust and Savings. "They are taxed out of all proportion to all other business institutions. The trouble lies in the manner of making the assessments. None of the assets of a bank is concealed as are those of other corporations, and the result is that the banks are taxed the limit."

CHANGES AT C. AND C. TRUST

The Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings announced the appointment of Walter F. Braun as sales manager of the bond department to succeed George W. Pearsons, who has been transferred to the buying department.

Mr Braun represented the bank in Michigan and Indiana for the past two years.

John A. Shannon, who formerly traveled in Wisconsin and Minnesota, now occupies the position of chief clerk.

GOOD CROPS AHEAD

The United States department of agriculture in its June report estimated the wheat harvest for the crop year at 740,000,000 bushels, the largest, with one or two exceptions, quantitative yield ever produced in this country. There are good prospects for other crops also and no apprehension need exist in regard to a shortage.

It is predicted that the wheat crop of Washington, Oregon and Idaho will amount to something like 68 or 70 million bushels, an increase of about 12 per cent over the heavy yield of last year.

Business interests are feeling much encouraged as a result of the splendid crop outlook, for there is no condition so potential in producing good business for the manufacturer, the jobber and the retailer than the farmers being provided with plenty of money.

SAYS FARMERS ARE NOT HOLDING WINTER WHEAT

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago, says the farmers are not holding winter wheat, and that the crop is moving easily, which lightens the burdens on the banks. Old grain, says Mr. Fenton, also is moving in large volume and farmers are paying loans promptly. Money is a trifle easier here.

RICHMOND CONVENTION PROGRAM

Harry V. Haynes, chairman of the program committee for the Richmond convention of the American Institution of Banking, makes the following tentative announcement concerning the program which will be offered at the annual convention September 17th, 18th and 19th:

"The program committee has been at work for several weeks preparing plans and is prepared to announce that on the basis of assurances already received from various sources this year's convention will equal, if not surpass, all of its predecessors in the number and quality of common sense, practical, everyday questions which will be discussed. For instance, there will be conducted under the direction of O. Howard Wolfe, secretary of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, a symposium on clearing houses and the extension of their functions. There will be addresses by recognized authorities on different phases of this subject. The question of clearing houses and their functions is a live one and the thorough discussion, such as it is proposed to have, no doubt will bring out many new and valuable ideas.

"There will also be a symposium on 'Bank Advertising and Business Building' under the direction of Fred W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. Experts and authorities on the subjects of bank publicity and business getting will discuss these subjects from different angles.

"There will be a debate between representatives of Chicago Chapter and one of the large eastern chapters on some one of the fundamental banking or financial questions. This will be in charge of George H. Keesee of Richmond.

"Men of wide reputation, whose names we are not permitted to divulge at this time, will appear on the program and address the convention on questions of national and international importance."

DALLAS WORKING FOR CONVENTION

A persistent effort is being made by Dallas Chapter to land the 1914 A. I. B. convention. A dinner was given recently at which local bankers were present. Delegates to the Richmond convention from Fort Worth and Dallas have pledged their best efforts toward securing the big meeting for the latter city next year.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to
our readers

Washington, D. C., July 23d.—Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, chairman of the senate committee on banking and currency, has begun a poll of the fifty-one democrats in that body with a view to ascertaining their judgment as to the possibility of currency legislation at this session.

Believes New Bill Will Pass

"I am both surprised and gratified at the unanimity of the sentiment on this subject," said the senator to-day, "and believe this congress will write a new currency law before the snow flies. The house committee will, I understand, be ready to report a currency bill to the democrats in the house within a week or ten days. The bill will be passed by the time the tariff is out of the way and the senate committee on banking and currency will then be ready to report the bill to the senate."

Progress Made in House

At the white house to-day the opinion was expressed that the currency legislation is progressing finely in the house committee and that the seeming opposition of the coterie of democrats, led by Representative Henry of Texas, is, in fact, helping the administration's fight for the Glass bill. Reports from the committee itself indicate that progress is being made, and that unless an unexpected snag is struck the committee may complete its bill for the consideration of the democratic house caucus by Saturday night.

Wilson Takes a Hand

Steps were taken this week by President Wilson to effect a reconciliation among the democratic members of the committee on banking and currency who are warring over the administration banking reform bill.

Through the medium of Representative Henry of Texas, the radical leader, the insurgents, who are showing their teeth to the administration bill, to-day submitted to the president a brief outline of amendments that they believe should be incorporated in the measure.

The insurgents—Representatives Eagle of Texas, Wingo of Arkansas, Ragsdale of South Carolina, and Neeley of Kansas—declare they cannot support the bill in its present form. If the insurgents stand pat in the face of possible refusal of the administration to comply with their demands, it will take many weeks to get the banking bill out of the house. The situation is decidedly interesting, and the outcome is awaited with keen interest by administration officials and leaders in congress.

What Insurgents Ask

Here, briefly, are the amendments the insurgents believe should be made a part of the administration bill:

First. Prohibiting directors of national banks from serving in a like capacity on the boards of interstate industrial or railroad corporations.

Second. A plan for voluntary or compulsory guaranty of bank deposits.

Third. Authority for the government to advance money in case of bank failures to an amount necessary to discharge all obligations equal to the assets in sight, payments to be made immediately, the government to be reimbursed upon the disposal of the assets of a failed bank.

Fourth. To admit to discount notes and bills on cotton and other staple products secured by warehouse certificates.

Henry Shows His Position

By a strange coincidence the fourth proposal was rejected in the house committee by a vote of 9 to 3 just about the time it was submitted to the president by Representative Henry.

It has been suspected for some weeks that Mr. Henry, who was the author of the money trust resolution in the last congress, was in cahoots with the insurgents of the banking and currency committee. Not until this week did Mr. Henry openly show his hand. At the suggestion of the insurgents, it is understood, Mr. Henry presented the case of the opposition to the president.

Glass Expects Agreement

According to a statement made by Chairman Glass there is no reason why an agreement on the banking and currency bill should not be reached early next week. Consideration of the measure has been practically concluded in committee. It will be known in a day or so whether action is soon to be taken on the measure in committee or whether there is to be a fight that may interminably defer a report to the house.

A later dispatch from Washington was as follows:

Washington, July 23d.—“Insurgent” members of the house banking and currency committee succeeded in gaining control and in forcing into the Glass currency bill, tentatively at least, to-day a provision favored by the Pujo committee and forbidding interlocking directorates among banks included in the federal reserve institutions.

This action and the announcement by Representative Bulkeley of Ohio, a member of the committee, that he wants the provision for a federal reserve board as supported by the president to be rediscussed, as he is not yet willing to place the banking interests under such control, were regarded as indications that a final committee action on the bill will be delayed for some time. Chairman Glass confesses he is unable to see that any agreement will be reached.

Want Money Legislation

Mr. Glass and President Wilson are anxious that speedy action be taken so that there may be currency legislation at the present special session. By a vote of 7 to 5 Chairman Glass was instructed to prepare an amendment against interlocking directorates as a separate paragraph of the bill. The instructions were included in a resolution presented by Representative Wingo.

The committee defeated by a vote of 6 to 5 a proposition presented by Representative Wingo providing that the president should summarily dismiss any member of the proposed federal reserve board or any director of the proposed regional reserve banks who should directly or indirectly engage in stock speculation.

Seek Wilson's Help

Members admitted that the differences in the committee were now irreconcilable and that it was high time that the president intervened to save the bill from destruction. Late to-night the president had not indicated what course of action he intends to pursue.

Representatives Neeley, Wingo, Eagle, Ragsdale, Weaver, Bulkeley, and Seldomridge voted for the motion for a provision against interlocking directorates.

The committee again reconsidered its action in regard to the term of maturity of commercial paper rediscountable by the reserve banks and placed the term at sixty days instead of forty-five.

At Monday's conference on the currency bill the house banking and currency committee decided that there should be no limit placed on the amount of the proposed issue of federal reserve treasury notes. It was decided also to establish this new additional currency on a solid and exclusively gold basis. A gold reserve equal to one-third of the amount of the proposed note issue must be held in the vaults of the twelve federal reserve banks at all times. The original bill provided for a reserve fund of gold “or lawful money.”

There were some minor and unimportant changes in the rediscount feature. An attempt to extend the length of maturity on bills offered for rediscount was defeated, it being decided to stand by the original 45-day maturity provision.

Senator Crawford of South Dakota, republican member of the senate banking and currency committee, announced that he was framing an amendment to the Glass-Owen currency bill providing for optional subscription to regional reserve banks and long-time real estate mortgages.

MADE PRESIDENT OF WICHITA BANK

Charles D. Reimold, who has had eighteen years' experience with Oklahoma and Kansas banks; Darcey E. Dunne, one of Wichita's oldest stock and bond dealers, and Roy E. Crummer, formerly with the Fourth National, have bought out the controlling interests of J. W. Dice and George W. Herman in the Merchants State, Wichita, Kan. Mr. Reimold has been chosen president to succeed Mr. Dice and Mr. Crummer cashier. Mr. Dunne was elected vice-president and a director. Mr. Herman will remain with the bank while Mr. Dice will retire from the bank that he may have more time to care for his realty and other business properties.

ENDORSES STAND OF MINNESOTA BANKERS.

E. L. Johnson of the Leavitt-Johnson Trust, Waterloo, Ia., approves of the stand taken by the Minnesota bankers on the proposed currency legislation. He said:

“Minnesota bankers in the Duluth convention have marked the way for the association of other states with regard to the attitude of bankers toward the pending currency bill. Iowa bankers, as a whole, feel as do the Minnesota bankers, that the administration is trying to effect the most important piece of legislation for many years, and although they are opposed to the bill as it stands, they prefer not to take an attitude of hostility, but to give every opportunity for modification before the final draft is ready.”

NEW PRESIDENT FOR WHEELING BANK

Lawrence E. Sands has been elected president of the National Exchange Bank of Wheeling, W. Va., succeeding the late J. N. Vance. Mr. Sands formerly was vice-president.

WILLIAMS FOR COMPTROLLER

Rumor has it that John Skelton Williams, assistant secretary of the treasury, will be the new comptroller.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The crop reports from various parts of the state for the past week or ten days have not been encouraging. It is true that in many parts of the state wheat yields have been fairly average and of exceptionally good quality. Southern Illinois, in the region around Duquoin, Carbondale, Benton, Pinckneyville and other towns, report good wheat yields which are better than last year and of excellent quality. The counties along the Illinois river, where considerable wheat is raised, report good yields and northern and western Illinois, which has enjoyed good rains all through the early part of the growing season, is fortunate this year. Wheat in central Illinois counties also has been fairly good.

In the counties of central Illinois the oats crop has been as near a failure as it has been for many years and the average yield will be only from ten to twenty bushels per acre. Many fields will not be cut at all while many others will be cut with mowing machines. Hay and pasture, especially the latter, have been short, although the yield of clover was fairly good in some localities, and dairymen face a hard proposition in their feeding, as do all owners of live stock.

During the past week the intense heat and the extremely dry weather have injured the corn and abundant rains are needed (July 23d) to make the corn crop of the great corn belt a fair crop. There is no question that the corn already has been injured as it has grown in the dust in many counties and it is now tasseling at a very low height and is without moisture at a critical period. We dislike to give unfavorable reports but there can be no denying that the crop conditions throughout the lower two-thirds of the state and especially in about twenty counties in the heart of the corn belt have been as unsatisfactory this year as they have been for many years.

Bankers have been living in hopes of the corn "pulling through" and with abundant rains many fields will give good returns but the soil has been so dry in many areas that more than local showers will be needed. Farmers have been in general good shape to meet their demands owing to the large surplus of grain which they held over from last year but they have drawn heavily upon their local bankers. Bankers are advising caution and the elimination of unnecessary expense in many cases. The people have been spending money freely, and in spite of small crops general business has been good. Economy may be needed at a later period, however. Meantime, bankers and business men are fortifying themselves for the conditions which prevail in their territory. Fundamental conditions are sound with most farmers, bankers and business men and with a good crop next year conditions will improve rapidly.

New Bank Building at Pekin

The directors of the German-American National of Pekin have closed a deal for the site for a new bank building. The new site is owned by Ehrlicher Brothers and is occupied by mercantile establishments. The store buildings will be torn down and a three story bank building erected.

The German-American National of Pekin began business twenty-six years ago in the Keller building at the corner of North Fourth and Court streets but the business has outgrown its present quarters. The directors wished to purchase the Keller corner but were unable to close the deal and hence took over the Ehrlicher property. The German-American National is one of the substantial banks of Pekin and its friends are glad to note its prosperity.

Merritt and Koplin Start Bank

I. E. Merritt and Mark R. Koplin, president and cashier of the Hoopeston National of Hoopeston, have opened a private bank at Wellington, four miles north of their home city, where the private bank of Alexander Pate failed a few days ago. This will be the third private controlled by Messrs. Merritt and Koplin, as they are now operating banks at Buckley and Danforth, both in Iroquois county, while the Hoopeston National makes the fourth bank under their control.

The failure of the bank of Alexander Pate was attributed to an overdue note of about $20,000 given by Charles U. Gordon, formerly postmaster of Chicago and son-in-law of Mr. Pate, and endorsed by Alexander Pate. Mr. Pate has been a banker, merchant and grain dealer in Wellington for many years and has transacted a large volume of business. The depositors in the closed bank are mostly farmers residing in the vicinity. Mr. Pate is about seventy years of age and is almost prostrated by the shock of his failure. He owns lands in Illinois, Indiana and North Dakota which he will sell and place the proceeds to the credit of the depositors, whom he says will be paid in full. The Pate bank has been unfortunate in having been robbed during the past eight years, yeggmen having visited it twice and one robber is now "doing time" for robbing the Pate bank.

Upon their return to their home, the Fortner family found that their house had been ransacked by burglars and a number of articles of value were missing. The home of Lawrence B. A number of family souvenirs, of no value to others than the families, were found under the Stringer porch. It is believed that the burglars were boys.

North Henderson Bank Gets Cash

The $800 in cash which had been stolen from the vault of the Farmers Bank at North Henderson, near Galesburg, a few months ago and which has been in safe keeping in a Monmouth bank and in the safe of the Monmouth police station, has been returned to President Charles C. Craig of the North Henderson bank, who is also president of the Bank of Galesburg. Mr. Craig went to Monmouth to receive the money, part of which had been taken from the persons of the yeggmen when they were arrested and part of which was found in a satchel near a barn in a near-by town. The two yeggmen, who were in jail in Aledo, county seat of Mercer county, for a number of weeks before being taken to the penitentiary, were likable fellows and made many friends with the city and county officials with whom they came in contact. One of the fellows, especially, was pleasant and it is to be regretted that a man with such agreeable and likable manners has not used his talents in a more honorable and a more substantial way than in cracking bank safes. The North Henderson bank is a prosperous institution and its president, Charles C. Craig, a prominent Galesburg banker, has a host of friends among the Illinois bankers and politicians.

New Brokerage Company Formed

The Mississippi Valley Securities Company, with principal offices in Peoria and with a branch office in St. Louis, has been incorporated. The company will deal in various investment securities and will specialize in farm mortgages. L. E. Fischer of St. Louis, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Illinois Traction System, is president of the new company. Mr. Fischer is the owner of a number of valuable public utility companies in the southwest and is well known to Illinois bankers generally, especially in those cities and towns which are served by the lines of the Illinois Traction System. Mr. Fischer took a prominent part in building up the colossal business controlled by former Congressman Wm. B. McKinley. Col. W. H. Evans, of Lincoln, a large land owner and an expert in judging farm land values, will be in charge of the appraisal department and Chester O. Fischer of Peoria will be in charge of the bond and mortgage department. Burton and Hamilton of Peoria will act as legal advisers and the Dime Savings and Trust Company of Peoria will act as trustee under the mortgages.

The auditor of public accounts has issued a permit to D. Newton Blodgett, Charles Boren and B. F. Towse for the incorporation of the Brighton State Bank of Brighton, Macoupin county, with capital of $25,000.

An echo of the race riots which unfortunately occurred in Springfield in August, 1908, was heard a few days ago when the city of Springfield sold to the R. C. O. Matheny Company, a local brokerage firm, $45,000 worth of riot claims bonds, which had been authorized at a public election held recently.

The Promotion and Construction Company, Limited, of London, has accepted a contract to sell the bonds of the Springfield and Central Illinois Traction Company. This is the news which has been received in Springfield by Secretary A. C. Skillman of the traction company. Isaac H. Smith, president of the company, has been in London for several months seeking financial aid for the project of building an interurban line from Springfield to Duquoin and from St. Louis to Terre Haute.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Final organization of the Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company was effected at a meeting of the incorporators at Madison on Tuesday of this week. E. A. Dow of Plymouth heads the new bankers' deposit insurance company as president. Earl Pease, Grand Rapids, is vice-president and George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee, secretary-treasurer. Directors are as follows: One year, George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee; E. F. Williams, Delevan; W. A. Van Berg, Mosinee; two years, A. E. Bradford, Augusta; C. R. Thompson, Richland Center; F. W. Humphrey, Shawano; three years, E. A. Dow, Plymouth; H. A. Mohlenpah, Clinton; Earle Pease, Grand Rapids. Secretary Bartlett is now receiving applications for insurance with the new corporation according to the terms of the charter. The headquarters of the company are fixed at Madison under the provisions of incorporation, which means that the offices of Secretary-Treasurer Bartlett, who also is secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, will be moved from Milwaukee to Madison unless the present plans are changed. This will not be determined until fall, however, when regular offices will be opened.

Increases Assessment

The board of review on Tuesday increased the assessment on the Second Ward Savings stock from $150 to $225 a share and the bank turned in a burglar alarm. The board met in the morning and reached its decision at noon.

At 2 o'clock the automatic alarm gathered a crowd about the new building and the auto squad of the police department came dashing to the scene, to discover that a flaw in the wonderful alarm mechanism was responsible for the call—not the action of the board of review. The decision to raise the assessment was made by a vote of 19 to 10. As there are 10,000 shares in the bank this means an increase in the assessment of $750,000. Previous to the action on the Second Ward Savings stock, the report of the special committee on banks, recently called for by resolution in the common council, showed interesting figures on the market value of Milwaukee bank stocks as follows: First National, $205 a share; Wisconsin National, $204; Marshall & Ilsley, $235; Marine National $230; National Exchange, $213; Merchants & Manufacturers, $110; Germania National, $150; German-American, $135; West Side, $150; Badger State, $115; Merchants & Framers, $108; Mitchell Street State, $125; Home Savings, $105; North Avenue State, $115; Union, $105; Wisconsin State, $110; Wisconsin State Savings, $105; Wisconsin Trust, $155; Citizens Savings and Trust, $100; First Savings and Trust, $133.

The Wisconsin state tax commission has formally approved the action of the board of review of a year ago in fixing the assessment of the combined stock of the First National Bank and First Savings and Trust Company which was made the basis of one of the impeachment charges brought against Tax Commissioner Louis A. Arnold. Following the decision of the commission, the board of review adopted the opinion of Assistant City Attorney G. S. Canright, upon whose advice Mr. Arnold took action last year, and deducted from the assessment of the First National stock a sum equivalent to the assessment of the First Savings and Trust Company, taking the attitude that the bank was really a holding company for the trust company.

In addition to the action on the bank stock assessment the board of review placed on this year's assessment rolls assessments on stock of local insurance companies for 1910 and 1911 amounting to nearly $13,000,000. The reason advanced by the tax commissioner for placing this stock on the assessment rolls is that the insurance stock is not expressly exempt by law from taxation and therefore must be placed on the rolls and taxes paid upon such stock. Under the 1912 law the board of review has the power to put omitted assessments upon the rolls for three years back and for this reason entered the assessments for 1910 and 1911. The 1912 assessment places all stock in these companies at $6,500,000.

Officials of the Milwaukee road deny the rumored merger with the Kansas City Southern line. It was reported that the Milwaukee road wants to extend its lines to the Gulf by taking over the Kansas City Southern system, and that there has been heavy buying recently of the latter's stock by interests supposed to have been allied with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

Popular bond issues by the city are urged by P. J. Koehler, civil service commissioner and former deputy city comptroller. "City bonds sold direct to the people in small denominations bring out idle money," declared Mr. Koehler. "The banks do not suffer because of these popular bond issues. They are the gainers because the hidden money is placed in circulation."

Thomas Barber, Oshkosh, aged 19 years, has been awarded first prize in the essay contest conducted by the W. B. A. on the subject, "Possibilities of Undeveloped Wisconsin". Barber delivered his essay at the commencement exercises of his high school, according to the provisions of the contest.

The state senate spent most of Tuesday night discussing the Guidice bank bill which places in the hands of the banking commissioner the power to say whether a new bank may be established. Senator Husting, father of the unsuccessful bank deposit guaranty bill, objected to the Guidice measure, claiming it placed too much power in the hands of the commissioner. Several amendments were offered and rejected and the bill laid over until Wednesday.

Mortimer I. Stevens, editor of the Wisconsin Banker, left Milwaukee Thursday for Searsport, Me., where he is to marry Miss Winifred Nichols on August 2d. The honeymoon trip will be taken by automobile through the Green Mountains.

Speaking of automobile trips Secretary Bartlett of the W. B. A. has developed into a regular Gliddennite since the Wisconsin bankers presented him with a car last spring. His vacation in August will be spent in a tour through central and northern Wisconsin with Minneapolis as the destination.

The First State Bank of Fountain City has increased its capital from $10,000 to $20,000.

CLEVER SWINDLING SCHEME

Recently a man claiming to be Jason W. Sherman called on the Vancouver National, Vancouver, Wash., and asked the cashier to recommend some attorney competent to handle some land matters. One was recommended and on calling upon this attorney he stated he had a half interest in an 80-acre tract in Wisconsin as one of the heirs, the other being a half brother residing at Appleton, Wis., and that he was unable to get a settlement or hear anything from his half brother. The attorney wrote the alleged half brother named as James W. Sherman, at Appleton, making an offer of settlement. In due time a letter was received purporting to have been written by James W. Sherman, stating he would have nothing to do with his half brother, Jason W. Sherman, but if he would execute and deliver a power of attorney to the attorney in Vancouver he would give him $3,000 for his half interest, and that he would send the money to any bank named by the Vancouver attorney, together with a quitclaim deed, money to be paid upon execution and delivery of the deed in Vancouver. In due time the bank received instructions, with a draft for $3,000 and quitclaim deed for described tract of land, the draft purporting to have been drawn by the First National of Appleton, Wis., upon the National City of New York City, and appeared to be regular. The draft was deposited for collection, through the Vancouver National, but the National City of New York refused payment and wired that the draft was a forgery, which was also confirmed by wire from the First National of Appleton, Wis. Upon the same day that he called at the Vancouver National the said Jason W. Sherman called at the Washington Exchange in Vancouver and made the same request to be referred to a competent attorney, and was so referred to another attorney, and had the same proceedings with him, showing a systematic attempt at swindling. Fortunately neither scheme worked, as no money was advanced on the drafts. Description of Jason W. Sherman: Age about 50 years; height, 5 ft. 9 in.; weight, about 160; erect carriage; deliberate in action; florid or sandy complexion, so pronounced as to have the appearance of blotches on his face; light or gray sandy hair; general bearing impresses one that he is accustomed to have dealings with men in a business way. He has attempted the same scheme in Portland and may appear at any place.

HUGE SUM FOR ROADS

The State Highway Commission of Minnesota, under authority of the new highway law, has planned a system of highways connecting every county seat town in the state, and calling for an expenditure of about $10,000,000. Under the old law the county board designated the state highways within the borders of their respective counties, and the only authority of the highway commission consisted of approving the survey and building specifications. This method has given the state a great many disconnected roads, constructed without any relation to any general system, and of little value to the general public. Under the new act, the commission hopes within three or four years, through the co-operation of the county boards, to provide a system of highways reaching from every county and every corner of the state.

It is estimated that the state road and bridge tax will yield at least $1,500,000 a year, or about $5,000,000 in three years. In addition the counties are authorized to levy a tax of 3 mills for the county road and bridge fund, and the majority of the counties will levy the maximum. Probably one-half of the county levy will go into the designated state roads, and in that event the funds available for the proposed system will amount to $10,000,000 in three years.

OREGON BANK DEPOSITS UP

According to the statement issued by State Superintendent of Banks Wright for the condition of business at the close of business June 4th, deposits in all banks of Oregon increased $1,188,490 over June 14, 1912. All banks of the state show a healthy condition.

In state, savings, private and foreign banks there was a decrease in deposits of $2,220,116. In national banks there was an increase of $3,408,607. In the Portland banks there was a decrease of $479,260. Loans and discounts increased during the period in all banks $7,913,499. The increase in state, savings, private and foreign banks was $1,227,878; national banks, $6,685,621, and in the Portland banks, $3,684,914.

E. H. Swenson has been elected president of the Union State, Clay Center, Kan., to succeed John McKee, who recently became postmaster.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has been of more than fair proportions, is increasing constantly and is larger than for the corresponding period last year. Rates were firm and ranged from 6 to 7 per cent on call and time loans, with the bulk of the time loans made at 6½ to 7 per cent. Commercial paper was in fair offerings and was discounted by brokers at 7 per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and light demand and was sold between banks at a discount.

New Trust Company Organized

The organization of a new trust company, with a capital of $100,000 and a surplus of $10,000, most of which already has been subscribed, has been announced. The company will do a general banking business in the vicinity of Jefferson Avenue and North Market Street and will open some time in September. William G. Mueller, president of the William G. Mueller Produce Company, will be president. The cashier will be Henry W. Kroeger, who has had twenty years' experience in banking. Among those connected with the organization are William G. Mueller, J. C. Rodenberg, G. R. Cutter, Henry W. Kroeger, Henry H. Oberschelp, Frederick Deibel, Michael Harris, G. F. Stevens, Louis Hencken, Albert Theis, Leonard H. Ballmann, A. H. Donnewald, H. P. Siegel, Eugene H. Oulvey, Albert Eckhardt and John W. Euler. There are more than seventy subscribers.

Bank Fixture Firm Bankrupt

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the United States district court against the St. Louis Bank Fixture Company, 811 Walnut Street, by the Night and Day Bank, the Imperial Clock Company and the Union Sand and Material Company. The bank avers it holds a note of the company for $1,000, on which $995 is due. On another note it alleges $3,000 is due. The fixtures company filed an answer admitting all allegations and agreeing to an immediate hearing, which has been set for July 30th. The petitioners state that the fixtures company has assets of about $35,000.

London Banker Visits St. Louis

E. A. Parsloe, secretary of the Capital and Counties Bank, Limited, London, passed Tuesday of last week in St. Louis, visiting St. Louis bankers. He left at each bank a booklet describing his bank which has its head office at 39 Threadneedle Street, London, E. C., and has two hundred seventy-eight branches and one hundred ninety-two sub-branches. Its deposits are $193,092,085. Mr. Parsloe left for San Francisco after a few hours' stay.

To Refund Capitol Bonds

Refunding bonds, which can be redeemed by the state from year to year, are being issued to persons holding capitol building bonds, and the latter are being called in, according to Governor Major. The capitol bonds are of thirteen year tenure, but may be redeemed after eight years. By the issuance of refunding bonds the state can immediately begin the payment of bonds out of the sinking fund on hand. The capitol bond issue was for $3,500,000, the larger part of which was taken by the Mercantile Trust. A few of the state depositories purchased bonds to put up as security for the state moneys received by them. The people pay a tax of 2 cents on the $100 valuation to provide a fund for the redemption of the capitol bonds.

Hannibal Loan Company to Open

The Hannibal Loan and Investment Company opened for business on Thursday of last week at Main and Center streets, the old location of the Farmers and Merchants Bank. R. B. Goodson, secretary and treasurer, is in charge. The other officers are George W. Dulany, president; J. P. Hinton and John T. Holme, vice-presidents. The members of the company are George W. Dulany, J. P. Hinton, John T. Holme, W. B. Pettibone, F. G. Richards, J. P. Richards, George A. Mahan, Dulany Mahan, Dr. J. N. Baskett and R. B. Goodson. The company is not acting as brokers, but will put its own money into farm loans, which will be offered for sale to investors. It is a strong institution and supplies a long-felt need in northwest Missouri.

Missouri Notes

J. C. Lamkin, vice-president of Wood & Huston Bank, Marshall, Mo., died on Saturday of last week at the age of seventy.

At the regular semiannual meeting of the board of directors of the Bank of El Dorado Springs, which was held on Monday of last week, a dividend of eight per cent was declared and the surplus was increased to $25,000.

A charter has been issued to the Gillam-Jackson Loan and Trust of Maryville, capital $100,000, of which $60,000 is paid up.

W. F. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, Sedalia, was in Kansas City last week attending a session of the agricultural committee of the association.

The Mountain Grove Bank is being remodeled. It is the intention to make it one of the finest bank buildings in the state for its size.

At the semiannual meeting of the board of directors of the National Bank of Rolla, besides paying the semiannual dividend, the directors carried $5,000 to the surplus fund, making their permanent surplus fund $50,000, equal to the capital stock of the bank.

Arkansas Bank Doubles Capital

The England National of Little Rock, which was organized on February 24, 1908, with a capital of $100,000, has increased its capital to $200,000; $100,000 of stock was sold at $120, and the $20,000 thus secured as premium will be added to the surplus of the bank, increasing it to $30,600.

New Arkansas Bank

A charter has been issued to the First National of Morrilton, Ark., with a capital of $50,000. The incorporators are J. M. Scroggins, E. H. Dunaway, J. W. Massey, R. N. Vail, Ben Brontz and others.

Oklahoma Bonds Sold

I. H. Nakdimen of Fort Smith, Ark., who owns a number of banks in Oklahoma, has completed the sale of an entire issue of $1,750,000 Oklahoma public building bonds. The state of Oklahoma will realize about $100,000 on interest on the bonds. The bonds were divided into seventeen series and not a sale was made out of the state. The bonds are especially attractive to Oklahoma bankers on account of the fact that by an act of the legislature the capital stock of any bank in Oklahoma is exempt from taxation to the extent of the amount of the state building bonds it has purchased.

National Bank of Braggs, Okla.

Application has been received by the controller of the currency to organize the First National of Braggs, Okla., with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are S. S. L. Garrett of Fort Gibson; W. L. Duncan, F. C. Hubbard and A. E. Ramsey of Muskogee.

Bankers Honor B. L. Gill

A large banquet in honor of B. L. Gill was given on Saturday evening of last week by Dallas bankers. The banquet was attended by nearly all of the prominent bankers of Texas and many other friends of Mr. Gill. Many prominent speakers appeared on the program and Mr. Gill was given a very hearty farewell. W. F. McCaleb, president of the West Texas Bank and Trust Company, San Antonio, was toastmaster, and Nathan Adams, president of the Texas Bankers Association, gave the address of welcome. Other speakers and their topics were M. W. Raley, president First National, Terrell, "The Personal Side;" E. F. Gossett, state bank examiner, "The Bank Examiner's Loss;" J. G. Wilkinson, president Continental Bank and Trust Company, Fort Worth, "Leaving the Capital for Profit;" Tucker Royal, president Royal National, Palestine, "Texas Bank and Bankers;" and T. B. Butler, president Guaranty State, Tyler, "The Last Call."

Bankers Go on Cruise

A party of twelve bankers of Texas and elsewhere sailed from Galveston on Monday of last week bent on a fishing excursion de luxe and a fortnight's vacation. The party was an impromptu affair, arranged by the bankers who were in Galveston for a week-end's rest and the Nicholaus, one of the largest of the pleasure launches which ply in Galveston water, was chartered. In the party were Joe Hirsch, Corpus Christi (Tex.) National; W. D. Sanders, De Kalb (Tex.) Exchange; J. B. Martindale, Alamo National, San Antonio; D. N. Martindale, Merchants and Planters Bank, Martindale; J. W. Hoopes, City National, Galveston; G. M. Booth, Taylor (Tex.) National; F. Dietze, German-American, New Orleans; S. Chesney, National Reserve, New York; W. B. Taylor, Boatmens Bank, St. Louis; A. T. Kahn, Commercial National, Sherman, Tex.; D. W. Cooley, Union National, Houston; and W. T. Montgomery, San Antonio.

Panhandle Bankers Convention

The annual meeting of the Panhandle Bankers Association was held at the Virginia Theater on Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning of this week. Rev. R. W. Trapnell of Amarillo gave the invocation at the Tuesday session and was followed by Mayor W. E. Gee, who delivered the address of welcome, and G. A. F. Parker, president of the Western National, Hereford, who gave the response. The annual report of the officers was heard, followed by a talk on "Railroad Development in the Panhandle" by F. C. Fox, vice-president and general manager Santa Fe Railway, Amarillo. "The Silo" was the subject of an interesting address by H. M. Bainer of the Santa Fe agricultural department, Amarillo. R. D. Gage, vice-president First National, Fort Worth, reviewed the pending currency legislation. On Wednesday Joe E. Lancaster, Third National, Plainview, spoke on farming irrigation lands. Judge R. Walker Hill had for his subject "The Lawyer and Banker;" J. C. Paul, president Panhandle Bank, "Dairying and Stockfarming." Following each session short discussions were held of practical home questions. On Tuesday evening a lawn party was held at Glenwood Park and on Wednesday there was a barbecue at "the Shetlands," Palo Duro Canyon.

Southwest Notes

The Muskogee County Bankers Association entertained with a banquet on Tuesday night of last week. A program of short talks and a few musical selections were given before the banquet.

Yeggmen wrecked the Citizens State, Delaware, Okla., last week when an attempt was made to blow the safe. The safe was not opened.

T. P. Priddie, Jr., has been elected cashier of the Farmers State at Rogers, Tex. Until recently Mr. Priddie has been with the First State and Trust of Waco.

The Farmers National of Sealy, Tex., has received its charter and will be open for business on or about August 1st. W. F. Viereck is president of the institution.

Charters have been issued to the Guaranty State, Whitesboro, capital $50,000, and the Guaranty State, Merit, capital $10,000, both of Texas.

WANTS "BLUE SKY" LAW IN TEXAS

Austin, Tex., July 23d.—Governor Colquitt to-day sent a message to the special session of the Texas legislature asking for insurance regulations along the Kansas "Blue Sky" line. The governor asserts the state insurance department estimates that during the last three years Texas has been fleeced out of $18,000,000 or $20,000,000 by promoters of spurious and "Blue Sky" corporations, and that washerwomen and servants have been induced to invest their small savings in promotion schemes. He urges the passage of an act making it the duty of the attorney-general to examine and certify to, before being filed, all charters of private corporations and amendments to such charters, and also applications for permits of nonresident corporations to do business in Texas, and requiring private corporations having a capital stock, except railroads, insurance and banking corporations, to make annual and special reports to the attorney-general.

Washington Convention

The eighteenth annual convention of the Washington Bankers Association will be held in the city of Bellingham Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 7th, 8th and 9th. Headquarters will be at the new Hotel Leopold and business sessions held in the assembly room of the Elks Hall.

Bellingham bankers have arranged a novel and delightful entertainment for the delegates and visitors, which includes a beautiful ball and reception for Thursday evening, the 7th. Friday morning a special train will take the visitors to Mt. Vernon, where they will be the guests of the bankers of Skagit county at a picnic lunch.

Saturday morning, the 9th after adjournment of the convention, the visitors will board the steamer Whatcom for a trip through Puget Sound, on the outward way inspecting the raising of some of the fish traps where salmon are impounded by the thousands. The steamer then will proceed to Semiahmoo, where the entire party will be the guests of the Alaska Packers Association at a picnic, salmon bake lunch or dinner, returning to Bellingham in the evening through the islands in the most beautiful part of this great inland sea.

Secretary P. C. Kauffman has sent out a program replete with interesting events. The convention will be called to order at ten o'clock by President W. J. Patterson, cashier Hayes and Hayes, Aberdeen. Address of welcome on behalf of the city will be made by Mayor E. J. Cleary and for the local bankers by F. F. Handschy, vice-president of the Bellingham National. The response will be delivered by George B. Burke, vice-president of the Bankers Trust, Tacoma.

After the president's annual address reports will be presented from Secretary Kauffman, Treasurer C. K. McMillan, Chairman J. E. Chilberg of the executive committee and the protective, legislative and uniform warehouse receipts committees. Delegates to the A. B. A. convention in Detroit also will report, after which there will be an address by Lydell Baker, editor of the Pacific Banker, Portland, Ore., entitled "Old Nick Biddle, the Bank Monster."

Thursday afternoon there will be addresses by J. A. S. Pollard of Fort Madison, Iowa, on "Progress and the Banker;" W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, who will talk on advanced agriculture, education and good roads, and J. F. Sears, cashier of the Prosser (Wash.) State, on "Benton County's Benefits from Diversified Farming."

Friday evening a joint debate will take place between Seattle and Spokane chapters of the A. I. B. on "Resolved. That legislation enacted by the federal government permitting the establishment of land credit banks would be for the best interests of the country," the affirmative being supported by Seattle and the negative by Spokane. Saturday morning's session will be confined to report of the prize essay contest, committee reports and election of officers.

Officers of the association are as follows: President, W. J. Patterson, cashier Hayes and Hayes, Aberdeen; vice-president, W. H. Martin, cashier Pioneer National, Ritzville; treasurer C. K. McMillan, cashier Northwestern National, Bellingham; secretary, P. C. Kauffman, director Fidelity Trust, Tacoma.

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF WASHINGTON BANK

F. E. Davis has been elected president of the Lincoln National of Washington, D. C., succeeding the late Richard A. Walker. Mr. Davis formerly was first vice-president. Robert Callahan has been elected to that position and Patrick T. Moran chosen as second vice-president.

Editorial Comment

CREATING RUNS ON BANKS

On Tuesday and Wednesday Chicago had an example of how easily a run may be started even on the stablest of banks. A woman told the grocer who was pressing her for payment that she had the money in the Kenwood Trust and Savings, at 47th and Grand Boulevard, but that the bank was short of cash and couldn't pay her. The grocer stood for it, and told all his customers on the quiet, as a special favor, so it is said, that the bank was insolvent. Thousands gathered at the busy corner, and the run was on. Most of those who joined the throng thought it was "another automobile smash" and some said a murder had been committed in trying to hold up the bank.

The bank, as is well known, is one of the city's boasted examples of what a neighborhood bank should be. Its stockholders' list is one to be proud of. Experienced bankers are on the board and in the list of officials. All who came were promptly paid and local business houses rushed in their deposits to help quiet the fears of the frightened ones. Large sums were quickly provided from liquid resources and the run was over.

President Brown was determined by the experience to find and punish the culprit who started the rumors. Perhaps an example may be made of him which will make his kind more cautious in the future. The law in many states makes the circulation of rumors against the credit of a bank a penal offence. Such an act should be on the statute books of every state and should be rigorously enforced. It is possible for any malicious or disgruntled person to start a run on any bank. Its standing and solvency are no protection against runs. We hope that President Brown will set his fellow bankers a good example of what ought to be done to the financial scandalmonger.

HOW IT WAS "LAID TO REST"

Ever since the issue of the bulletin by the Illinois Bankers Association, boasting of how it "laid to rest" all anti-banking legislation at Springfield, the papers of the state have taken a turn at the solution of the knotty question. The Gillespie (Ill.) News says:

The fight against the bill doing away with private banks in this state and making them all either state or national banks seems to have come in a great measure from the loan agencies, for under the proposed law all loan agencies, whether they were banks or not, were compelled to publish a statement showing their assets and liabilities and requiring them to be examined. This clause in the law brought forth a howl from the loan agencies and caused the defeat of the law. We are still of the opinion that the bill should have become a law.

It is explained that the "laid to rest" boast was intended to place the private bankers under a feeling of obligation to a certain official at re-election time. In reality it has had the opposite effect, being construed by the press and many bankers of the state as a sort of confession that improper influences were used to improper ends. No one resents the "laid to rest" break more than the honest private banker. He stands staunchly by his rights but he isn't in the putting-to-sleep business when it comes to the Illinois legislature. Ask any intelligent private banker and you'll find this is the exact situation.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

It is doubtful if a more acceptable successor to Charles H. Huttig as president of the Third National, St. Louis, could have been named. In fact he was chosen by Mr. Huttig when he found himself becoming physically incapacitated. In the full possession of his most alert faculties he decided that the popular Tennessean would be to the Third's patrons all that he himself had been. Mr. Watts is young, active, studious and has every southern faculty for courtesy, friendship and hospitality. His sense of justice is an order of genius. The new president is a keen financier and a money making banker, as well as a charming public speaker. He will be a factor in financial affairs in his part of the country and the Third National will take no backward step nor evasive position upon any public or banking question. The whole country wishes continued success to Frank Overton Watts.

IS THE UNITED STATES USING UP ITS WORKING CAPITAL?

This question was recently raised by one of the world's greatest economists. Assuredly he has much to support his contention. Apparently, if we reason from the familiar facts of daily existence, America is using up its working capital. We are spending instead of saving. We must soon come to the day of reckoning, and the cost of reckoning will be heavy. The nation must pay in years of privation and pinching, sordid economy for its violation of the sound rules of private and public economy.

But there is something to be said on both sides. This startling subject is discussed with the utmost frankness by Edward Sherwood Mead, the financial expert, in the August number of Lippincott's. It is a subject of vital importance not only to all financiers, but to every one who has even a small amount of money invested or to invest.

"We are accustomed to regard the future of the United States as a future of assured and increasing prosperity, a prosperity in which even the humblest immigrant laborer will each year have a larger share," says Dr. Mead. "To be plainly told that we, as a nation, have been violating the rules of business conduct, observance of which alone will insure our future prosperity, is to receive an unpleasant shock.

"Are these gloomy prognostications founded on fact, or do they represent merely a flight of scientific fancy, rising far above the ground into the thin air of speculation and hazardous conjecture?

"As soon as attention is directed to our problem, a number of facts of superficial observation tending strongly to support this conclusion immediately emerges. Every one is familiar with the vast increase in personal expenditure during the last decade. It is a poor home which has no sanitary plumbing or which is still half heated by stoves, be it in the country or in the city. Even a humble mechanic expects these conveniences in his twenty-dollar-a-month house. Turkish rugs have taken the place of ingrain and rag carpets. Clothes are now made to measure, and people, especially women, have more clothes than ever before. Men, too, are more careful of their personal appearance. They patronize the haberdasher and the tailor, the barber and the bootblack, to an extent which their fathers would not have ventured, and which their grandfathers would have condemned as wasteful extravagance. The 'servant problem' did not become a problem until the middle class, upper and lower, began to keep domestic servants. The expenditure upon food is far greater than formerly, when an adult could be well fed at a total cost of $1.50 per week for raw materials and fuel. To-day not only have the prices of foodstuffs advanced, but a large number of expensive novelties, which quickly become regarded as necessities, are each year being introduced.

"The automobile is no longer considered a luxury for the man of $2,000 income. He can buy, on time, for $500 or $600, a car that is very good, even compared with the high priced machines; and thousands of these cars are being bought each month. Immediately the owner's expenses increase. Tires, toll, gasoline, oil and general repairs, besides interest and depreciation, represent a large monthly outlay.

"So we could go indefinitely: charity, organizations, clubs, politics, magazines, and newspapers, liquor and tobacco, bridge whist, golf, theaters, moving-picture shows, baseball, education, which costs this generation at least twice as much as it did their fathers; the government service, which does or tries to do so many new things for us—the list of new expenditures and of increased expenditures could be expanded far beyond the space here available."

NEW PORTLAND TRUST COMPANY

The Lumbermens Trust and Savings of Portland, Ore., has been organized with capital stock of half a million and surplus of $100,000. John A. Keating has been elected president. Mr. Keating is vice-president and manager of the Lumbermens National, with which the new trust company is to be affiliated.

The German-American National, Pekin, Ill., has purchased property on which it will erect a handsome new bank building next year.

W. A. READ & CO. PURCHASE NOTES

Wm. A. Read & Company have purchased from the Canadian Northern Railway $3,500,000 one year 6 per cent notes, secured by the deposit of about $5,000,000 Canadian Northern lines sterling debentures, which are guaranteed, principal and interest, by the Dominion of Canada. The notes are redeemable six months after date at 101 and interest on thirty days' notice at the Guaranty Trust Company in New York. They are dated July 15th and interest is payable January 15th and July 15th.

They are the direct obligation of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, secured by the deposit with the trustee of approximately $5,000,000 Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Company and Canadian Northern Alberta Railway Company 3½ per cent 50 year debenture stock issued under separate mortgages and unconditionally guaranteed as to payment of principal and interest by the Dominion of Canada, evidenced on the face of the debenture stock. This debenture stock is thus deposited with the trustees of the notes as collateral at 70. The present London quotation is about 87 to 89 and the range since 1911 has been from 90 to 95½.

The issue has all been privately sold.

TO ENCOURAGE USE OF SILOS

The Rock Island R. R. plans to run during August and two weeks in September a special demonstration train through the Southwest. It is believed that silage is a cure for the high cost of beef and a partial safeguard against crop failures. The train will be in charge of Professor H. M. Cottrell, agricultural commissioner of the Rock Island, who made Kaffir corn a success in the West. It will start from Colorado Springs August 1st and cover eastern Colorado, Kansas, all of Oklahoma, including 112 towns, North Texas and eastern New Mexico.

SOUTH DAKOTA OFFICERS

New officers of the South Dakota Bankers Association are as follows: President, M. P. Beebe, president Bank of Ipswich; vice-president, T. W. PROTESTS B. F. EDWARDS' BOUNTY

St. Louis, July 23d.—A protest against the action of the director of the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis in giving to Benjamin F. Edwards a $50,000 bonus when he retired from the presidency of the bank last April was sent to the comptroller of the currency to-day by J. H. Herrmann, a stockholder.

When Mr. Edwards retired the directors voted to pay him $17,000, his salary to the end of the year, and $33,000 as an inducement not to re-enter the banking business in St. Louis.

Washington, July 23d.—Acting Comptroller Kane has referred J. P. Herrmann's complaint against the directors of the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis to the national bank examiner in that city for investigation.

WANTS CURRENCY ACTION BY AUGUST FIRST

President Wilson has requested the leaders in congress to have the pending currency bill passed by the house and before the senate by August 1st. It is the desire, also, of the president that the senate committee do not delay action on the matter but immediately report it back to the senate. It is said that a plan is being considered whereby the currency bill may be run in during the tariff debate and disposed of in the upper branch with as little delay as possible.

DULUTH SOUVENIR

One of the attractive souvenirs issued during the Minnesota convention was one showing numerous views in the progressive city of Duluth, distributed by J. W. Lyder, cashier of the Northern National of that place. The little book was compiled by C. P. Gibson of St. Anthony Park.

Duluth, the zenith city, has a population of about 80,000. It is the seat of the steel industry and bids fair to rival Pittsburgh.

NEW NEBRASKA BANK

Deposits in Cleveland state and national banks have increased in twenty-two years from $55,876,090 to approximately $309,500,000, or almost 530 per cent, as shown in records compiled by Borton & Borton. In that period aggregate capital and surplus increased from $17,202,719 to almost $46,000,000, a gain of about 270 per cent. Besides the panic of 1907, deposits amounted to $232,788,350 and in 1908 had decreased to $228,240,299. There are now thirty-one banks in Cleveland.

Conditions in Cleveland

J. R. Nutt, vice-president of the Citizens Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland, who was in New York recently attending a directors' meeting, said while there that Cleveland financial affairs were in good condition. "We have been experiencing firm but not tight money conditions in Cleveland," said Mr. Nutt. "Deposits in our institution as well as in other banks of the city have been showing increases. Especially is this true of savings deposits, which have reached a high point. All our banks having savings departments report large gains in the first six months of the year. Industrial conditions are good and our factories are running full time with labor well employed. Crop conditions in northern and northeastern Ohio were never better. From what I can learn Cleveland is probably in better financial condition than many other cities, and we are not apprehensive of the future in our section of the country."

City National of Dayton in New Home

The City National of Dayton occupied its new building on Third near Main for the first time on Thursday of last week. The building is seven stories and has been in process of construction since May of last year. The building work was somewhat delayed, but was almost ready to be turned over to the bank when the flood came. The lower floor, which the bank occupies exclusively, sustained damage that delayed its occupancy for more than two months. In its equipment the new bank possesses several features unknown to any other building in the city. Chief among them is the perfect system of ventilation. As soon as the vacated room has been redecorated and furnished for the use of the City Trust and Savings, it is planned by the bank to hold a formal opening, when its friends will be invited to visit and inspect the new building. The new and the old building will be connected by openings which already have been made. The City National was organized about twenty-six years ago, succeeding the private banking firm of Gebhart, Harman & Company. This private bank succeeded the First National of Dayton; the latter organized more than a half century ago. Two years ago the City Trust and Savings was established to care for a line of business that the parent institution was not permitted by the national banking laws to do. The present officers of the City National are W. B. Gebhart, president; H. E. Talbott, vice-president, and Clarence Kiefer, cashier. The board of directors controlling both the national and trust bank are the same. The City National is capitalized at $200,000 and has earned a surplus of $300,000. The City Trust and Savings is capitalized at $100,000.

Appoints Receiver

Through Special Counsel Robert Black the state banking department will apply in the Greene county common pleas court for a receiver for J. C. Smith, vice-president of the defunct Osborn Bank at Osborn, Ohio. Smith has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy and the action to secure a receiver is taken to hasten the liquidation of the bank. It has also been announced that Black will sue ten of the directors of the Guaranty Banking Company, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, which failed some time ago and is now in the process of liquidation. The directors have notes in banks aggregating $17,000, and it is to collect these that suits will be brought.

Prominent Banker Dies

J. V. Forgy, for more than twenty years president of the New Carlisle Bank, New Carlisle, Ohio, died last week after an illness of two months.

Cox Freed

George B. Cox last week was freed for the second time on charges in connection with alleged illegal loans by the Cincinnati Trust to the Ford & Johnson Chair Company. Cox was president of both institutions. As in his trial on the first indictment, Cox was freed on an instructed verdict by Common Pleas Judge Caldwell before the defense offered any evidence.

Lincoln Trust, Scranton, Adds Directors

Three directors have been added to the board of directors of the Lincoln Trust, Scranton, Pa., which was recently formed. The new directors are Maxwell M. Chapman, C. P. Ford of Marshwood and Homer J. Northup of Dalton. There are fourteen directors in all on the board.

Elected Cashier

Albert B. Carmany, senior clerk of the Valley National, Reading, Pa., has been elected cashier of that institution. Mr. Carmany has been acting cashier for the past three months—since the death of Frank H. Reinoehl, whom he succeeds.

Bank Changes at Corry, Pa.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the National Bank of Corry, Pa., Oscar Andrews unanimously was chosen cashier to succeed the late Clarence J. Smith. Daniel Depew was advanced to assistant cashier. Mr. Andrews has been with the bank since its organization, filling every position up to his present one. Henry Kepple is president.

F. E. Davis President of Washington Bank

Floyd E. Davis, first vice-president of the Lincoln National, Washington, D. C., has been elected president of that institution. He will fill the position made vacant through the death of the former president, Richard A. Walker. Robert Callahan was elected first vice-president and Patrick T. Moran second vice-president. Mr. Davis has been connected with the Lincoln National for several years. He also is a director of the Bank of Commerce and Savings, the Congress Hotel Company, the National Union Insurance Company and is treasurer of the Columbian Permanent Building Association, all of Washington, and a director of the Bank of Nokesville, Va. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and the Commercial Club.

Propose Emergency Currency Association

The prospect in view of the passage of a new currency measure involving the establishment of twelve or more regional reserve banks under federal control has prompted Louisville bankers to set about forming a Federal Emergency Currency Association, with Louisville as the nucleus for all national banks in the state of Kentucky. Recently another association had invited the banks of Lexington to become members of that association and so far two of them have practically closed arrangements for membership. This action was brought to the attention of Louisville bankers, who have now taken action.

New Kentucky Bank

The Whitesburg (Ky.) National has completed organization and began business this week with a capital of $25,000. The officers are John D. Fitzpatrick, president; H. T. Day and S. G. Fairchild, vice-presidents; W. H. Courtney, Winchester, Ky., cashier.

Baltimore Banker Ends His Life

Thomas M. Hulinge, vice-president of the Continental Trust, Baltimore, was found dead in bed in his apartments at Baltimore on Friday morning of last week. The illuminating gas was turned on full and the coroner gave a verdict of suicide. It is believed that ill health prompted the deed. He had been with the Continental Trust about thirteen years.

New Indiana Trust Company

The Bloomfield (Ind.) Trust opened its doors recently. Francis M. Dugger is president; James G. Hart, vice-president.

Central States Notes

The directors of the Farmers and Citizens Banking Co., Monroeville, Ohio, have chosen Clarence L. Powley assistant cashier to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. C. Wilhelm.

The Central National, Portsmouth, Ohio, will move into its new quarters by the first of August. Its newly refitted and remodeled rooms will be among the finest in the city.

The Bank of Steuben, Hornell, N. Y., has let the contract for the construction of a new brick and concrete building with marble trimmings, to cost $50,000. The building will be one story in height and will be occupied exclusively by the bank.

The capital stock of the National Bank of Commerce, Detroit, Mich., has been increased from $750,000 to $1,000,000. The bank has a surplus of $500,000 and undivided profits in excess of $150,000.

The Traders National, Scranton, Pa., has been designated an active depository for United States funds.

Contracts have been let and work has been started for the erection of a new fireproof building that will be occupied by the Peoples National and the Peoples Loan and Trust, Rushville, Ind.

James F. Keach, president of the Brownstown (Ind.) State, died last week.

State Commissioner of Banking Samuel V. Matthews of West Virginia has announced the appointment of B. A. Pyles of Littleton as receiver for the Exchange Bank of Littleton, whose doors were closed by Matthews two weeks ago. Pyles is cashier of the Bank of Littleton.

INDIANAPOLIS BANK STARTS

Capital State of Indianapolis has opened for business with capital stock of $200,000. William F. Churchman is the president; John W. McGinety and H. M. Evans, vice-presidents, and Emmet M. Smith, cashier.

Propose Amendments to Administration Currency Bill

Omaha, Neb., July 21st.—About sixty bankers from clearing house cities between the Mississippi river and the Rockies met at the Commercial Club in conference over the Wilson-Glass currency bill Thursday of last week. They began in the morning at 10 o'clock, discussed it earnestly until 12:30, adjourned for lunch, met again at 3 o'clock to conclude and put recommendations into shape and dined in the evening at the Omaha Club, the visitors as guests of the Omaha and South Omaha bankers.

Among the prominent bankers present were Hon. Alva Adams, president of the Pueblo Savings and Trust Company; F. O. Roof, vice-president Minnequa Bank of Pueblo; W. S. McCornick, president McCornick & Company of Salt Lake City; Frank Knox, president National Bank of the Republic of Salt Lake City; J. F. Downing, president New England National of Kansas City; P. W. Goebel, president Commercial National of Kansas City; J. W. Perry, president S. W. National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City; Geo. S. Hovey, president Inter-State National of Kansas City; C. G. Hutcheson, cashier First National of Kansas City; H. L. Jarboe, Jr., president Drovers National of Kansas City; Chas. E. Waite, president Stock Yards National of Kansas City; P. L. Hall, president Central National of Lincoln, Neb.; H. S. Freeman, vice-president First National of Lincoln; James A. Cline, cashier National Bank of Commerce of Lincoln; L. B. Howey, president City National of Lincoln; Graham G. Lacy, vice-president Tootle-Lemon National of St. Joseph, Mo.; R. T. Forbes, president First National of St. Joseph; Henry Krug, Jr., vice-president German-American National of St. Joseph; Arthur Reynolds, president Des Moines National; J.

Henry W. Yates, president of the Nebraska National and expert on currency, was noticeably absent, but was on his vacation trip to Alaska. He is quoted as being "tremendously opposed" to the bill.

V. B. Caldwell, president of the Omaha clearing house, who called the conference, was chosen chairman and W. B. Hughes secretary.

A committee to report upon the bill was named, it being Luther Drake, Omaha; J. F. Downing, Kansas City; J. G. Berryhill, Des Moines, Frank Knox, Salt Lake City; Graham G. Lacy, St. Joseph.

It was predicted that recommendations would be made upon these four provisions:

Governmental control of federal reserve board.

Outstanding national bank notes.

Treasury note issues.

Redistribution and consolidation of bank issues.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, that we believe that it is the earnest desire of the present congress to so revise the present banking and currency system as to remove the many objections that have been manifest under the present system and to so reconstruct the same as to meet the demands of trade and commerce. We further believe that congress, upon whom rests the responsibility for shaping such legislation, will welcome honest comment on and criticism of the measure.

We suggest that the business of the country would be much better served by a smaller number of federal associations. The reserve would be more concentrated and more at the command of the business community. We commend the endeavor of congress to remove the evils of the subtreasury system and to provide a more elastic currency, but submit that such currency should be issued by the federal reserve banks and its redemption protected by adequate gold reserves, and with such provisions for redemption that the volume of notes in circulation will automatically vary with the needs of commerce.

We further believe that the experience of the world is that it is better to provide for such an organization indirectly rather than put the credit of the government at issue with every note placed in circulation. The security for the redemption of these notes should be so absolute as to render default impossible.

We doubt the wisdom of compelling banks to keep any fixed percentage of their reserves with the federal banks, but believe that the interests of trade and commerce will ultimately influence the deposit of a fair share of the same with the federal banks. If, however, in its wisdom congress determines that a portion of the bank reserves must be kept with the federal banks the transition should be so gradual as not to embarrass the business interests of the country. We feel that the time provided for such transition is inadequate.

The measure, if enacted into law, would cause an immediate withdrawal of ten per cent of bank capital and of an amount equal to ten per cent of bank deposits from business channels to supply capital and resources to the federal reserve banks.

In the matter of redistribution in twelve or more federal reserve banks of practically all of the reserves of national banks and such other banks as may subscribe the capital stock of the twelve or more federal banks, we believe that the present bill presents a very serious menace to the business interests of the country, not alone in the territory between the Mississippi river and the Rocky mountains, but throughout the United States. This bill in its full operation may compel the country banks to deposit ten per cent of their deposits in the federal banks; it compels the national banks in reserve cities to deposit ten per cent of their deposits in the federal banks; it compels the national banks in the central reserve cities to deposit ten per cent of their deposits in the federal banks; it compels the national banks to contribute more than $100,000,000 to the capital stock of the new government banks and a sum greater in the aggregate than $600,000,000, which would have to be given up in cash. It appears to be the theory of this bill that the national banks will have such facilities for borrowing that this disadvantage will be more than offset by the facilities afforded them for rediscounting their customers' notes with the federal banks. Our experience tells us only too clearly that banks doing a commercial business will not borrow money from other banks in order to reloan it, but will only borrow for the purpose of replenishing their reserves or to meet the extraordinary emergency demands of commerce. We believe that the arbitrary storing of such vast amounts of money in the federal banks will cause such drastic curtailment of the general credits of the country as to seriously harm the business interests of the country. Country banks do not carry paper of the character subject to discount under the bill and therefore could not avail themselves of its provisions. They would be forced to transfer their present reserve balances now carried in reserve cities, like Des Moines, Kansas City, Omaha, and Salt Lake, and thereby lessen the power of their correspondents in such cities to discount their paper. Thus a situation would develop that would be disastrous to both.

We do not believe that it would be possible without serious disturbance to business to withdraw from our present reserve agents more than 33 1-3 per cent of the amounts of reserve required to be carried by the various classes of national banks. We believe that this amount would be more than ample for all of the necessities of the federal reserve banks.

We suggest that the plan of organization of the proposed federal reserve banks is faulty for the following reasons:

It proposes a system of banks the capital stock of which will probably be above $100,000,000, and in which the deposits will aggregate over $600,000,000, that will be dominated by seven men who will have no financial interest in the institution and in which the owners of the capital stock will have little or no voice in management. The return to the owners of the capital stock cannot exceed five per cent and may result in loss, while the government, without any investment or liability, will appropriate all profits above five per cent per annum. The stockholders in the proposed banks will be held for double liability while the government will assume no risk whatever. Is this just? The deposits made in these federal reserve banks by the banks of the country do not draw interest while the power is given to the secretary of the treasury to fix an arbitrary rate of interest to be paid by the federal reserve banks on all governmental deposits. No bill conferring such extraordinary powers has ever been proposed before in any legislative assembly in the world. We contend that the system of control devised is inherently wrong in this: that the banks furnishing the capital of the federal reserve banks are practically denied a voice in their management, which will be placed in the hands of a body of men whose relations to the business will be political and possibly partisan.

We believe the business interests of the country will be best served by permitting bankers who are skilled in their particular line of business to manage the federal banks, and that they should have larger representation on the federal board.

Under our present system of bond-secured currency the government has been the principal beneficiary of the low rate of interest at which the bonds have been floated because of their required use by national banks as security for their circulating notes. There is an obligation on the part of the government to protect the banks from loss on the bonds so held.

In view of these considerations we conclude that the passage of the pending bill without removing these objections would aggravate instead of remove the evils of the present system. We therefore earnestly request our senators and representatives to secure amendments to the bill in accordance with these suggestions.

BILLION DOLLARS FOR GOOD ROADS

Ex-Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon is the father of the first systematic and practical bill for federal aid on a large scale in a system of general good road building and maintenance, covering the entire United States, on what appears to be a very equitable plan.

In the proposed bill Senator Bourne who, until March 4th last was chairman of the joint committee on federal aid in the construction of post roads, has worked out in detail a plan of loaning to the various states the superior credit of the United States.

A popular federal bond issue of $1,000,000,000 is proposed in denominations of $50 and multiples, and bearing 3 per cent interest. States accepting this aid would deposit with the United States their own 4 per cent bonds as security for their share of the proceeds of the $1,000,000,000 federal issue. The United States would apply 3 per cent of the interest accruing on these state bonds to the payment of interest on its own bonds and place the remaining 1 per cent in a sinking fund to draw compound interest at 3 per cent. This 1 per cent annually thus compounded would amount to 100 per cent in a little less than 47 years, and when thus matured the United States would return the state bonds as canceled without the payment of any part of the principal.

In other words, this would be equivalent to the various states issuing their 50-year bonds at 4 per cent with complete relief from payment of any part of the principal. It almost seems like magic, yet the plan is simplicity itself. The cheaper credit of the United States and the tireless working of the principle of compound interest will extinguish the principal in 47 years.

Senator Bourne has worked out an interesting basis for the prorating of the $1,000,000,000 among the 48 states. Four factors are employed—area, population, total assessed valuation of all taxable property, and the total mileage of public highways in each of the several states.

The United States highway commission, to be created by the bill, would compute the percentage of the total of each of these four items possessed by each state. "They shall then compute the average of the four percentages for each state, and this average shall be the per cent of the $1,000,000,000 United States highway fund that shall be apportioned and credited to each state."

Mr. Bourne finds that on this basis Washington would be entitled to $16,400,000; Idaho, $11,600,000; Oregon, $16,600,000; Montana, $17,000,000, and California $35,900,000. Only three states would draw a greater sum than California—Illinois, $39,400,000; Pennsylvania, $56,500,000, and Texas $56,600,000.

A frequent and costly mistake in road building has been the failure to provide for maintenance after the roads were built. Mr. Bourne endeavors to guard against this danger by providing an annual maintenance fund equal to 4 per cent of the cost of completed roads, 2 per cent to be appropriated by the United States and 2 per cent by the state.

"The adoption of this comprehensive plan," says Mr. Bourne in a statement to the joint committee on federal aid in the construction of post roads, "insures an opportunity, extending over a period of 50 years, for the expenditure of three billion of dollars in improvement and maintenance of wagon roads in the United States, thus giving useful employment to many people and providing systematic and intelligent highway construction, resulting in the United States securing what would probably be the best and most extensive system of highways in the world, and increasing our national wealth many, many times the amount of the investment."

It is admitted that the government is prepared to take a more advanced stand in the matter of federal aid in a comprehensive system of good road building if the public appears sufficiently interested. Now is the time for newspapers and citizens generally to devote some thought to the good roads proposition—and let your thoughts be known!

Des Moines, July 24th.—Iowa clearing house associations were well represented at the conference at Omaha last week, called to discuss the administration currency measure. Des Moines, Cedar Rapids and Sioux City sent delegates. It is the opinion of Des Moines bankers that much good was done at Omaha, especially in an educational way. Secretary P. W. Hall, of the Iowa Bankers Association, plans to send out to each member a synopsis of the bill, with perhaps an analysis of its main features and a copy of the resolution passed at Omaha. Des Moines delegates to the conference included L. E. Stevens, Century Savings; J. G. Rounds, Citizens National; Simon Casady, Central State; Arthur Reynolds, Des Moines National; R. A. Crawford, Valley National; J. G. Berryhill, Iowa National; Percy W. Hall, secretary I. B. A.; Cliff DePuy, editor Northwestern Banker.

McWaid Will Filed

The last will and testament of the late J. A. McWaid, Atlantic banker, has been filed. To the widow are bequeathed the homestead, carriages, driving horses and cash to the amount of $30,000, although she may take bank stock for any part of the latter. The remainder of the estate goes to the seven children. The widow is executrix of the estate and E. C. Gage of Shenandoah is executor. The estate is valued at $200,000.

Paucity of School Treasurers

Since the last legislature abolished the salary of the school treasurer, that office has been fraught with sorrow. In many sections it has been difficult to find anyone to take the office while in other places school treasurers complain that they cannot find banks which will accept the school funds and pay 2 per cent interest on daily balances. One treasurer returned the money to the county treasurer. The law abolishing the salary of school treasurer was enacted as a compromise to satisfy those who wished to abolish the office entirely and those who favored leaving the job as it has been in the past under the old law.

Changes in Banking Department

Some important changes have been made in the state banking department by State Auditor Bleakly. Bailey Ellis, who has been chief clerk since Frank Roberts retired from that position many months ago, goes on the road as examiner. Elmer Carlson, who has been general clerk in the banking department, also goes on the road as examiner. H. P. Rosser, who has been file clerk in the state insurance department, succeeds Ellis as chief clerk. Roy Alber succeeds Carlson as general clerk. Auditor Bleakly believes that the shift will result in improvement in the work of the state banking department.

as getting more wealthy each month. The state automobile department has been unable to keep up with the new cars purchased this season and has not been able to turn out numbers fast enough to keep up with the procession. There have been two to four hundred applications for number plates each day recently and the total number has gone above 60,000 cars. Bankers report that in many cases homes have been mortgaged by men who desired to buy machines and were shy on the necessary cash. Tariff revision has had no effect upon the purchase of machines by Iowans.

Postal Deposits Down

Postal savings banks in Iowa have taken a decided slump. The departure of Greeks for the Balkan war is ascribed as one reason for the falling off in deposits and in Des Moines the slackening business in the coal mines is given as another. Many miners in and about Des Moines are foreigners who are patrons of the postoffice banks. During the hot weather they have not been working. The postal bank in Des Moines has received for deposit since its genesis about $130,000 and the amount paid out has been practically $75,000, including withdrawals.

County Treasurer in Queer Predicament

Rather an unusual situation has developed in Lyons county, so it has been reported, following an examination of the books of Treasurer George R. Ladd. It appears that when Mr. Ladd assumed the office he was not aware that checks had been issued by a prior incumbent and that these checks had been cashed by the banks. Consequently in assuming the office he receipted for the funds without counting in the checks. Later these turned up and Mr. Ladd has been found short. The people are not blaming Ladd in any way and an early adjustment is expected.

Iowa Notes

T. W. Barhydt, one of the pioneer bankers of southeastern Iowa and for many years prominent in Burlington bank circles, died last week at Delmar, Cal. He was 77 years of age and death was due to apoplexy.

B. J. Wood, cashier of the First National at Logan, has become an aspirant for national bank examiner. Mr. Wood is a hustler and thoroughly understands the banking game. His friends are enthusiastic in his support. J. N. Casady, Jr., of Council Bluffs, and J. F. Hart of Des Moines are other candidates who have splendid support.

J. L. Edwards of Burlington has retired from the race for president of the Iowa Bankers Association next year, so it is stated in Des Moines. This leaves the field with three remaining candidates, G. E. MacKinnon of Des Moines, J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton and W. A. Hopkins of Lamoni.

Gill Bandy, a youth who says he has been a champion hurdler and a participant in the Olympic games, tried to hurdle away from an officer who wanted him for forgery a few days since. Bandy had been passing a couple of bogus checks. The policemen chased him and finally effected his capture. Bandy says his father lives in Tacoma, Wash., and that he formerly lived in Des Moines. The charge against Bandy was later dropped by the firm which caused his arrest.

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, is the only Des Moines banker who attended the funeral of Charles H. Huttig, president of the A. B. A. Mr. Reynolds has become acting president of the A. B. A. because of the death of Mr. Huttig, but this is not expected to affect his selection as president when the convention is called.

The First National of Davenport observed its fiftieth birthday June 29th and now the First National of Iowa City has a similar anniversary. The Iowa City institution was fifty years old July 13th. It was the third institution of its kind in the United States following the passage of the national bank law in 1863. The First National of Davenport was first, the First National of Chicago was second on July 8th, and then came the Iowa City institution.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hart have returned to Des Moines after a pleasant honeymoon trip. Mr. Hart is again on deck as assistant cashier of the Iowa National.

It is stated that the directors of the Citizens Savings at Dallas Center will enlarge the capital stock of the bank to $40,000.

S. A. Mitchell has disposed of his interests in the First National at Rock Valley and has entered the banking field at Hood River, Ore.

The Citizens State at Wyoming is doing business under a capitalization of $50,000 with J. T. Thompson as president and C. J. Ingwersen as cashier. The bank was formerly known as the Citizens Bank.

The Farmers at Elk Horn has let the contract for a new one-story brick bank block. The Farmers was organized only a few weeks ago by William Hoegh, formerly assistant cashier of the Farmers Savings at Atlantic. The capital stock is $10,000.

The Fremont County State at Sidney has begun the construction of its new building. The structure will not be so large as the officials anticipated because they were not able to acquire a lot which they needed. The building will be but one story at present but the bank will add another story later.

Cashier John Hogan of the German Savings is highly commended as treasurer of the Des Moines school board by George Poorman who has inspected Mr. Hogan's books and pronounced them O. K. Mr. Hogan voluntarily put the school funds at interest and has collected $10,522 for the school board from various banks in which the funds were placed.

C. A. Etnire of Berkley has joined the banking force of the Peoples National at Perry. He formerly was in business at Peoria.

John H. Blair of the Des Moines National has gone with his family to Marshalltown and thence to Okoboji for the remainder of the summer.

George E. Lewis has been named assistant cashier of the Hanover National at Hanover.

The Hopkinton State at Hopkinton announces an addition to its structure to include a directors room and a fireproof vault. The bank recently acquired additional ground for the building.

The Alburnett Savings has voted to increase its capital stock from $15,000 to $20,000.

Bankers of Clay county have purchased a very handsome cup which is to be presented each year to the boy or girl raising the best acre of corn. There are fifty aspirants for the trophy this year with prospects of an exciting contest every year.

Chairman C. H. McNider and at least seven of the members of the agricultural committee of the Iowa Bankers Association will attend the agricultural conference at Kansas City in August. Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. is making arrangements for the entertainment of the members of the committee who will attend and is securing their names thus early. The conference at Minneapolis last year was a great success. The Des Moines bankers probably will invite the bankers to come to Des Moines next year.

The First National at Cambridge is starting the alfalfa habit among its patrons by giving free seed to the growers who will raise the crops on the farms in that vicinity.

South Dakota Notes

A controlling interest in the Marvin State has been sold to P. C. Scholberg of Correll, Minn., and J. C. Gans of Odessa, Minn., by H. C. Bachelder. J. C. Gans will be president; K. A. Ramsey, vice-president; P. C. Scholberg, cashier. Mr. Bachelder will return to his old home in Iowa.

J. W. Bryant has been chosen cashier of the Commercial and Savings at Mitchell.

The Farmers State of Veblen has filed articles with the secretary of state at Pierre. C. D. Thompson is president; O. P. Akre, vice-president; A. W. Thompson, cashier. Capital stock is $15,000.

The Bank of Victor has been chartered. N. N. Powell is president; S. E. Oscarson is vice-president; A. G. Molander is cashier. The capital stock is $10,000.

David Williams, president of the Farmers and Merchants at Webster and vice-president of the First National at Duluth was married recently in New York.

P. E. Cooper of Stricknet has bought an interest in the State at Winfred.

The Citizens State at Aneta has been organized with O. N. Brunsvold of Kensett, Iowa, and capitalists from Minnesota and North Dakota.

The Dakota State of Roberts county has filed articles. The capital stock is $10,000. Incorporators are John Gumo of Thunder Hawk; Andrew Narvick, Henry Helvig and J. W. Barrington of Sisseton.

PATRONIZING HOME INDUSTRIES

On Tuesday of this week a conference of the manufacturers of Chicago was held in the Crystal Room of the Hotel Sherman to complete plans for the celebration of Made-in-Chicago week, August 11th to 16th. The purpose of this movement is to promote the consumption of Chicago-made goods by a general display of home products.

A number of speakers were heard, all of whom urged market co-operation. It was pointed out that Chicago is a leading manufacturing center enjoying exceptional transportation facilities and an appeal was made to the civic pride of our citizens to do everything in their power to stimulate interest in goods manufactured here.

It was argued that, while the manufacturer is essentially interested in the matter, the retailer is just as much concerned. If it costs $500,000 a year to manufacture the output of a factory and the goods are made in Chicago, it follows that that money will be spent here, whereas if the goods are made in some other city, just that much money will be lost to the merchants here.

Those present were urged to go out and endeavor to secure windows for the display of home-made products during this market week and to make it the most successful Made-in-Chicago week which yet has been held.

BANKERS FOR BOARD OF CONTROL

To the Editor:—It was to be expected that Mr. Forgan would champion bankers' control of the federal reserve board. The currency bill has not yet reached the public in perfected form and the public has not decided upon its merits in detail.

However, Mr. Forgan may be assured that there exists in the popular mind a widespread distrust of bankers' control, because of the disclosures of all the investigations, from that of the New York Life Insurance Company to that of the Pujo committee, and that distrust has its basis in the general belief that too much of the wealth of the country by devious methods, now becoming generally understood, has been diverted into the pockets of the few who control money and credits, and through them the industrial and transportation interests of the country.

We have tried bankers' control of money and credit, and however satisfactory it may have been to those of the Wall Street inner circle, it is not satisfactory to-day to the banking and business interests in general, nor to the general public, who believe it entirely feasible for the government to create a nonpolitical banking commission which shall control the money changers, even as the interstate commerce commission controls the railroads.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash., July 24th.—Harvesting began in several parts of the Spokane country this week, lending a brighter tone to business conditions generally. In Stevens county, just north of Spokane, several yields of 60 bushels to the acre are reported. The crop is the largest in the history of that section. In some parts of the Big Bend district of Washington, to the west of Spokane, farmers began cutting winter wheat this week. Combined harvesters have begun operating in the Touchet valley and other parts of the Walla Walla district. An increase of 20 per cent over last year's wheat crop of the Spokane country is given out as the estimate of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce. The crop will be the largest in the history of this part of the country. In the Big Bend country the yield is phenomenal, averaging close to 40 bushels, and in many cases running as high as 60 bushels, to the acre. Throughout the famous Palouse country, south and southeast of Spokane, the crops are also above the average. The chamber of commerce statistical department estimates the 1913 crop of the Spokane country as 130,000,000 bushels, against 108,658,000 bushels for 1912. About 4,500,000 acres are in wheat, of which about 2,300,000 are in Washington, which raises nearly as much wheat as the other three Pacific Northwestern states combined. As the wheat belts of these four states all are in the territory known as the Inland Empire, all wheat raised in the Pacific Northwest is in territory tributary to Spokane.

Mortgage and real estate men of Spokane who are heavily interested in agricultural lands of the Big Bend country, immediately west of this city, have combined to increase the productivity of the soil in that rich district by installing a demonstration farm near Cunningham, Wash. The farm will be directed by a farmer of much practical experience, who will conduct experiments with various crops to ascertain what is best suited to Big Bend soil. Preventing "land blows," which occasionally blow seeds away, and the destruction of noxious weeds also, will be attempted. Among the concerns back of the project are Northwestern and Pacific Hypotheekbank, Day-Hansen Security Company, Union Securities Company, Inland Empire Land Company, and representatives of the Northern Pacific, Great Northern, O. W. R. & N., and Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railways.

Contracts aggregating $225,000, and including some of the finest features of the new $2,000,000 Davenport hotel, have been awarded by the Brayton Engineering Company. The contracts are for the interior cabinet finish, interior marble, exterior and interior painting, and plastering and plaster ornament. On a bid of $85,000 J. J. Tinker of Seattle secured the plastering contract. Matthews Brothers of Milwaukee got the $75,000 interior cabinet finish work. The woodwork will be in mahogany and gumwood. As each piece is finished in Milwaukee it will be wrapped in tissue paper for shipment. Interior painting will be done by D. Zelinsky of San Francisco, reported to be one of America's greatest mural decorators. This work will cost $15,000. The marble contract, approximately $50,000, was awarded to the Vermont Marble Company of Tacoma. A large amount of white statuary marble will be brought from Vermont for use on every floor of the 13-story hotel.

Fifty clerks and officials of the Union Trust and Savings, with their wives and families, journeyed to Liberty Lake by a special train July 10th to participate in the annual picnic of the bank, as guests of the management. James C. Cunningham, vice-president and manager of the bank, was host of the occasion, returning in time for the event from a 400-mile automobile trip into the Okanogan country. W. G. Hall, cashier of the bank, arranged the details of the outing.

A financial periodical published by the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, its editor being Conner Malott, manager of the mortgage department of the company, appeared this week. The initial publication has 12 pages, devoted to the mortgage and loan business. The periodical bears the caption: "First Mortgages on Farm and City Property." The paper will be issued bimonthly.

W. L. Clark, auditor of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, has been invited to appear on the convention program of the Montana Bankers Association, to be held at Helena, Mont., August 14th, 15th and 16th. Mr. Clark will deliver a paper on "The Collection of Out-of-Town Items." A number of Spokane bankers are planning to attend the convention and a special car of local and coast bankers probably will be arranged. The Montana convention follows the Washington convention, and many eastern banking men, who will attend the latter, also will go with the Washington delegation to Helena.

Out-of-town bankers in Spokane recently were: A. L. Smith, vice-president National Bank of Montana, Helena; H. J. Skinner, vice-president Commercial Trust and Savings, Great Falls, Mont.; John Peters, president State Bank of Spangle, Wash.; H. M. Gilbert, president Central Bank of Toppenish, Wash.; William Thomson, president Lewiston (Ida.) National; Harmon Wilcox and J. G. Kennedy, owners of the Bank of Entiat, (Wash.), and F.

S. Jacobsen, former vice-president of the Tumwater Savings of Leavenworth, Wash.

F. M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce in Spokane, accompanied by his mother and his two daughters, has gone to his old home at Litchfield, Minn., for a two weeks' rest.

EDMONTON NEWS

Reports from various parts of central Alberta, received in Edmonton in the last few days, indicate that the grain and hay crops will be the largest in the history of the district. This is due to the increased acreage under cultivation and the fact that there has been ample moisture. Much new land has been broken in what is known as the Edmonton district, while in the north country, where more than 7,500 farmers have settled during the last 14 months, thousands of acres of virgin lands have been cleared and put under the plow. C. W. Beals, an implement dealer in Edmonton, and Herbert Baker, manager of the northern Alberta branch of the Massey-Harris Company, report that the grain is of good color. The first named said: "In all my twenty-five years' experience I have never seen better conditions. The 1913 crop will be better than the one last year under normal conditions." Mr. Baker says the crops will be unusually large provided there is no hail and not too much rainfall during the next four or five weeks. Reports received by the banks are in accord with the foregoing.

Wholesale and retail houses in Edmonton report that business of all kinds is holding up well despite the stringency in eastern financial centers. The volume of business is larger than during the similar period a year ago. This is shown by the clearings of the Edmonton banks, which last week reported a gain of $450,926 over the corresponding week in 1912, when realty transactions figured largely. The real estate market is quiet but firm, there being little or no sacrificing even in outside properties. Building operations on large office and store structures are somewhat curtailed, but there is no cessation of activities in house building. Homeseekers from Europe, the United States and eastern Canada continue to pour into central and northern Alberta, and indications are that the fall movement will be unusually large. Most of the newcomers are experienced farmers with some capital.

City commissioners of Edmonton, headed by Mayor William Short, have sent circular letters to the heads of all departments, calling for a curtailment of expenditures, in view of the fact that the banking house of Kleinwort Sons & Company, London, Eng., has officially advised the municipality that war is raging in Europe. The firm recently bought debentures amounting to $10,800,000 from the city, payable in five instalments. Two have been paid. The third is due on August 1st, the fourth in October and the last in December. A "war" clause is incorporated in the contract. It is not known if the bondholders will take advantage of the clause. If they do there will be a revision of the improvement program, which involves a total expenditure of $10,000,000. The city has expended between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000 to date.

announced here on July 12th that engineers are continuing the work of making surveys of the Saskatchewan river between Selkirk, Man., and Edmonton and that it is planned by the federal department of public works to construct locks on the river and deepen the channel to permit navigation by steamcraft between this city and Lake Winnipeg. Major Hubbelt was accompanied to the west by C. E. Miles of Toronto, who has been examining surveys in the neighborhood of Prince Albert and Winnipegosis. They had planned to go as far north as Fort McMurray, but their boat struck a snag and they were unable to get through in the time at Major Hubbelt's disposal, so they returned east.

Reports prepared by L. W. Brockington, secretary of the improvement department of the municipality of Edmonton and forwarded to the council at Mayor Short's request, show that $15,550,000 is urgently required for paving, water, sewer, sidewalk and boulevard work. The amount eventually required for similar work is estimated at $61,317,676, as follows: Paving, $23,081,840; water, $5,828,994; sewer, $10,558,992; sidewalks, plank and concrete, $4,707,880; boulevard, $17,139,970. The gross area of the city limits is given as 43.85 square miles, the length of all streets being 740 miles.

Alderman Gustave H. May has given notice in the city council of Edmonton of a motion, in which he calls for the appointment of C. L. Richardson, now city auditor, as finance commissioner. The duties of this official would be to look after the treasurer's department, keep in touch with the money markets of the world, sell debentures and be a banker generally to all civic departments. Alderman Livingstone has requested the council to reorganize the board of commissioners as follows: Chairman, the mayor, commissioner of finance, commissioner of utilities, commissioner of public works, and commissioner of administration.

Good results have been brought about, it is announced at the city hall, by the appointment of E. W. Bowness, engineer of the municipal efficiency and economy bureau in Edmonton. Mayor Short, who introduced the innovation for civic betterment, has received advices that the new department now has a place in the most progressive of the world's centers of population. The department keeps in close touch with all civic work by means of daily reports by "the man on the job," and in that way it can locate immediately any excessive costs or leaks.

General Manager McLeod, of the Canadian Northern Railway, said at a conference with officials of the municipality, the Board of Trade, the Wholesale Merchants' Association and the cartage companies, on July 12th, that additional freight accommodations will be provided at once, also that the paving of McKenzie Avenue will receive attention. The freight houses, now 300 feet in length, will be extended to 500 feet, which will relieve the present congestion.

Charles S. Hotchkiss, publicity commissioner for the province of Alberta, left Edmonton on July 12th on a tour of Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Kansas and other states in the central west. He will also visit Nashville, Tenn., to invite the International Typographical Congress to hold its next meeting in Calgary.

F. S. Lawrence, manager of the Lawrence financial agency in Edmonton, who also has large sawmill interests in the north country, said on returning home from a trip to Grouard that the country is being developed rapidly and that a record grain crop will be harvested this season.

Heinrich Becker, editor of the Alberta Herold, has received official advices from Frederich Gerstmeyer, of Stuttgart, that a party of 50 German farmers will arrive in Edmonton early in August to take up homesteads north of here, where a colony of a hundred German growers was established last April.

J. F. Weston, of Toronto, general manager of the Imperial Life Assurance Company, was in Edmonton last week on a tour of inspection of the company's agencies from Toronto to Vancouver.

The new branch of the Merchants Bank was opened at West Edmonton last week. E. A. Finn, formerly accountant at the Jasper Avenue branch, is manager.

tion the proverbial key to the city, in a very unique way.

He was accompanied onto the platform by two policemen, who carried the key, which is shown in the photograph. It is a beautiful thing, made by A. Moorman & Company of St. Paul. The key is made of wood, handsomely hand carved, gold leafed, and set with glass jewels. It bears a beautifully engraved plate, with this inscription:

"Duluth Extends Hospitality to the Minnesota Bankers Association, July, 1913."

GOOD ROADS DAYS FOR MISSOURI

Governor Major of Missouri has issued a proclamation setting apart Wednesday and Thursday, August 20th and 21st, as public holidays, to be known as "good roads days."

Every able-bodied man in the rural districts and cities of the state is expected to devote these days to working upon the highways. The governor asks that all ordinary business be suspended.

Governor Major estimates that work approximating in value a million and a half dollars will result.

WANT PUJO PLAN

The democrats of the house banking and currency committee continued work on the administration currency bill this week. So-called "insurgent" members of the committee prepared to present a substitute measure more in conformity with some of the recommendations of the Pujo "money trust" committee.

Representative Henry of Texas called on President Wilson at the White House and presented the changes proposed in the substitute. The president did not go over the amendments in detail, but it is understood that he will review them and later will confer with Representative Henry and those members of the committee who have manifested opposition to the Glass measure.

The committee members rejected by a vote of 9 to 4 a proposition presented by Representative Ragsdale which would have made cotton warehouse receipts rediscountable in the federal reserve banks to be created under the new law.

NEW VICE-PRESIDENT FOR OAKLAND BANK

A. N. Morris, for the past fifteen years in the United States government service, in the banking department, has been appointed first vice-president of the Central National of Oakland, Cal., and will assume his new duties August 1st. The position carries the same title and functions in the Central Savings as well. For the past two or three years the directors of the Central National have been seeking a man of wide experience and intimate knowledge of banking to assist President J. F. Carlston. R. M. Fitzgerald, of the firm of Fitzgerald & Abbott, has held the position of first vice-president, but his immense legal practice has made it impossible for him to keep in close touch with the affairs of the bank. He will assume the place of second vice-president at his own request. In the past five years the business of the Central National has doubled and the prosperity of the institution promises to continue to increase at the same rate. The bank does more commercial business than any other commercial bank in Oakland.

BANK CHANGE AT HUTCHINSON

Announcement has been made of an increase in capital stock of the Reno State, Hutchinson, Kan., from $25,000 to $50,000. H. W. Hedges, cashier, has disposed of his stock to H. K. McLeod of Ellis and George T. McCandless of Hutchinson and has been superseded as cashier by Mr. McCandless, while Mr. McLeod is now vice-president. Fred J. Altswager remains as president of the institution. During his incumbency the deposits have grown from $30,000 to $100,000 and the business has grown steadily. He has been president three years.

PROMINENT BANKER DIES

John Sailer, a retired banker of Philadelphia, died recently at his summer home, Prouts Neck, Me. Mr. Sailer was best known as the senior member of the old banking house of Sailer & Stevenson, which was organized in 1866. At the close of 1910 both the original partners withdrew from business, but their sons, taking with them Charles S. Patton as a partner, continued the business under the old name. Mr. Sailer was a director of the Girard National, Northern Trust, Franklin Fire Insurance, Academy of Music, Geographical Society of Pennsylvania and other institutions. For a number of years he was a director of the Union League and chairman of the house committee. He was a member of the League at the time of his death and also of the Merion Cricket Club and Philadelphia County Club.

What Is Wrong With Our Agricultural System

Bradford Knapp, special agent in charge farmers' co-operative demonstration work, bureau of plant industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, believes there is something radically wrong with our agricultural system. A few of his ideas on the subject follow:

Through a system of advances or credit farming instead of cash farming, without any fault on the part of its people, there has grown up in some sections an economic system against highest agricultural development. The credit system of farming is based generally upon the production of a single cash crop, and is therefore against modern scientific agricultural production and favorable in the extreme to a soil-robbing system that doesn't give the farmer a square deal or a fair chance in the battle for a living.

If you will go into the most prosperous sections of the United States you will find almost invariably that, bad as their market system is, where diversified farming has been thoroughly established there is a cash market for every product of the soil. If the farmer takes to the nearest railway station his grain, his cattle, his hogs, dairy products, his chickens, his eggs, his fruit and his vegetables, he may exchange the same immediately for cash. In many sections there are only certain crops that bring cash on the market. The others do not mean cash simply because we have not gotten into diversified farming and because the advance system has given these things out through credit to renters and credit farmers. There are sections where if a man produce hay to-day there is some difficulty in selling it for cash; if he produce corn, there is some difficulty in disposing of it in large quantities for cash. And so it is with many products produced in the same way.

Not only this. We have not established any system by which scientific marketing has kept pace with scientific farming. All over the country the products of the soil are dumped upon the market haphazard and without system. The system requires the farmer to settle his debts at a certain period of the year. That has necessitated the marketing of the entire crop immediately at the close of the season, when the supply was great, the demand relatively small, and therefore the market not favorable for the farmer. Within a short period of time after the completion of any crop a large part of it generally passes out of the hands of the farmer, is concentrated by great traffic systems into centers, and redistributed at great cost.

The economic system also has necessitated the expenditure of large sums for fertilizers in an endeavor to maintain production on depleted soils for the simple reason that the advance upon which the farmer is living is based upon the production of the one crop and not upon the doing of good farming. A large part of this expense might be saved by adopting modern methods of building up soil fertility through rotation of crops and the keeping of livestock.

Another difficulty has been the insidious inroads upon the family savings or family earnings by high rates of interest, due largely to no fault of his own. It has recently been shown by an eminent authority in this country that the farmer pays on an average more than twice the rate of interest on loans that the big corporate interests of the country pay. Examining conditions in various parts of the country, you will find that where agriculture is most prosperous interest on lands and agricultural property is lowest. Where agriculture is conducted on a cash basis, the interest on farm lands is lower than where on the credit basis.

What has been the result of these conditions? A great growth of absentee ownership and an alarming increase of short-term tenancy and therefore low production and a low degree of efficiency of work and decreasing power of the soil to produce. The proportion of tenant farmers is lowest where most men farm on a cash basis, while credit farming is necessarily most prevalent where tenancy predominates. There is no greater menace to the agriculture of this country; no greater menace, I may say, to the business interests of this country than this alarming increase of tenant farming. I would say that the one best answer to the problems of American agriculture to-day is the doing away with all short-term tenancy and the establishment of an ownership agriculture or small farmers living on the land that they own and tilling it themselves. Look to any part of the United States, or indeed to any part of the world where this system of small farmer owning and tilling their own land exists, and you will find a prosperous and permanent agriculture.

To sum up the conditions, there are six great things the trouble with the agricultural system:

(1) Too low an average income for the farmer.

(2) A failure to practice universally the best methods of agriculture.

(3) An alarming lack of appreciation of the value of soil fertility and failure to conserve it.

(4) A wasteful and unprofitable marketing system.

(5) An injudicious and unwise economic system, militating against good farming.

(6) A lack of rural credits which will carry and develop the farmers' instrumentalities for production to the highest point.

A better agriculture means the actual practice by the average farmer of those things which are being done by the best farmer. What a tremendous difference it would make in five years if every farmer was doing as good work on his farm as the best farmer in that county!

We need:

(1) To disseminate knowledge of better farming and secure its adoption.

(2) To institute a system of farming which will maintain soil fertility and render crop production more certain and uniform.

(3) To institute such a farm system as will enable us to produce at home as much as possible of the meat and other food we use, feed and forage for a much larger livestock industry, and a livestock industry necessary to till the land profitably and furnish the necessary horse power and to produce manure necessary to maintain soil fertility.

(4) To feed much more of the grain and other feed crops produced on the farm to livestock and to sell our soil fertility in the highly concentrated form of dairy and livestock products, because in this way we can retain a large per cent of the elements of the plant food taken out of the soil by the crop if the manure is returned to the soil. To use legumes and rotation of crops to replace most of our expenses for fertilizers.

(5) To gradually establish an economic system that will enable the farmer to farm on a cash basis instead of on the credit basis.

(6) Every means within our power must be used to do away entirely with short-term tenancy and to establish, so far as possible, ownership agriculture, where the owner lives upon the farm and works it himself. All such tenancy as is necessary should be on that high standard of long-term tenancy so conducive to better agriculture.

(7) We need to establish a better business system by which the farmers can get cash for all products of the farm. We need to establish co-operative marketing and distribution so that the crops may be economically and efficiently handled so as to avoid waste and over-supply in some sections and under-supply in others, and all losses incident to overhandling or mere middlemen profits. Speculations in futures, which amount to a gambling in the products of the soil, should be prohibited by law.

(8) We need a system of finance which will provide the farmer with money at low rates of interest for two purposes: first, temporary loans at certain times of the year to enable him properly to handle and judiciously market his crop; and secondly, loans for permanent improvements on the farm at low rates of interest for long periods of time, with proper amortization efforts whereby interest and a ratable small per cent of the principal be paid annually for periods of from ten to fifty years.

You see that the problem is only half agricultural and half of it is business. Dr. S. A. Knapp once said that farming is composed of one-eighth science, three-eighths the art of knowing how, and one-half of it is business. In the solution of these problems I do not think it is necessary that we pursue a selfish policy. It seems to me that it would be short sighted and foolish to develop one side without developing the other. The finest economic and business system that brains could devise or administration execute would not avail us anything in establishing a permanent successful agricultural condition if we continued to do poor farming, to deplete soil fertility and depend upon gouging the other fellow for our profits. At the same time, the people of this country have no right to ask the farmer to improve his farming methods unless they are willing also to see that the business and economic system is so reorganized as to give that farmer a square deal for the labor he puts in. Economic and efficient production must be met by economic marketing and finance; in other words, economic and efficient business. The constructive thinker and worker will strive to work and build up both unselfishly. The contrary policy means greed and failure. The farmers are asking nothing except a square, fair chance and the establishment of such good business methods as will enable them to get a fair deal. I thoroughly believe that they may be depended upon to adopt the better method of farming necessary to carry their needs and purposes.

What forces have we at work, what energies in the field, which will help in the establishment of right conditions? The reason men have left the country and gone to the cities, the reason why one out of every three now is engaged in agriculture where formerly two out of every three were so engaged, is because agriculture has become unprofitable. The country conditions have not kept pace with city conditions. The attractiveness of the country must be re-established or the "back to the farm" movement will be a stalking spectre of necessity rather than the attractive invitation to a freer and better life.

In the widest acceptance of that term, education is the principal and the best solution of every one of these great problems. A great many centuries ago Aristotle, the great philosopher, said that the only way that a democratic form of government could be made permanent was by the education of its people. Not only is this true in the political maintenance of our constitutional forms of government, but it is true in the solution of our economic problems. If the people can be educated to understand their difficulties, their problems, and what steps are necessary in order to meet them, it will be found to be the best method of the solution of the problem.

We need good roads and means of communication for business purposes. One of the greatest taxes the farmer pays is the tax he pays upon poor roads so that the good roads problem will help in this solution not only on the business side but on the social side of country life.

The agricultural colleges and the work in the agricultural department and the great agricultural press will help in the dissemination of knowledge and the encouragement of the farmer along right lines.

Bankers should see that the agricultural colleges and the schools of agriculture within the state are properly supported and financed. A campaign should be inaugurated to secure scholarships from every county for bright young men from the country to attend the agricultural college and receive a complete education in agriculture. An average of five to ten from each county is not too many to supply the needs in the way of teachers, demonstration agents, and practical, successful leaders upon the farm. When we get to the point where more of your agricultural college graduates are able to go into farming and make it profitable, you will see the great benefits of this institution. One of the great needs of the present is that our agricultural colleges and our general college training should not train young men and women away from the farm. Sometimes I have a strong feeling that there is some shortcoming on the part of our colleges in impressing upon the young men and young women the dignity of labor, and especially have I felt at times that our agricultural colleges have not sufficiently impressed upon the young men the dignity of the profession they are studying. The highest ambition of these men ought to be to practice their profession upon the farm. In some sections of the United States I know of agricultural colleges where it is difficult for us to get the graduates to go into teaching and scientific research because they have discovered what independent incomes may be secured by practicing on the farm the things that they have learned in college. Agriculture is a highly organized combination of sciences, requiring rare ability and great business organization. The young man who brings to it the same brain power and the same enthusiasm and training that the successful business man puts into his venture is bound to make a success.

In North Carolina we have another organization within the state working in co-operation with the schools, in co-operation with the state department of agriculture and agricultural colleges for the upbuilding of agriculture, and that is the farm demonstration work. This is a work carried on jointly by the United States Department of Agriculture through my office, the agricultural department of the state, and the agricultural and mechanical college of the state. It is an educational activity, having for its object the taking of the information about good farming from the agricultural colleges and the department of agriculture of the state to the farmer and illustrating it by practical demonstrations which convince him of the value of the better methods. It has for its object the making of every farmer a good farmer, the bringing up of those who pull down the average, so that they will equal the one who is helping the average. The farmers' co-operative demonstration work is sometimes misunderstood and classed as a work that fosters production merely. That is not its object. It doesn't seek to increase the aggregate production of crops. It seeks to bring about more efficient production. If a bale of cotton can be produced on one acre with the same labor that produced two-fifths of a bale, why not produce the bale per acre and do it upon less acres? It will give the farmer an opportunity to produce some of those $60,000,000 worth of food products that are being shipped into the state from other states and sending the cotton money away to pay for. The cotton crop for the year 1911 probably did not bring the farmers of the state much more than that $60,000,000 that was spent for other purposes. If you can produce 75 bushels of corn per acre, why not do it on one acre rather than on four acres as the average farmer does in North Carolina? The farmers' co-operative demonstration work seeks also to show the farmer how to build up soil fertility. The fertility of the farmer's soil is his bank account. He cannot draw on that bank account continually unless he is willing to deposit occasionally, or he will find he is due for an overdraft and his checks will no longer be honored by nature. It is false economy for him to make all his deposits by adding fertilizers. Utilize nature itself by rotation of crops, by saving the erosion of soils, the use of cover crops and proper system of terracing, by the use of legumes which restore nitrogen to the soil by taking it from the atmosphere. Farm demonstration agents seek to teach farmers these facts through actual demonstrations. We have established in the past nine years that this work can be most effectively done, just like any other educational work, by contact between the one being instructed and the instructor. The machinery for doing this work ought to be developed logically and constructively. The idea that you can bring about better farming by having a roll-top desk and a card-index in a city office and advise farmers in that way will not succeed. It is necessary to have a practical, resourceful man as a demonstration agent. I should prefer a man of as high an agricultural education as possible but the agricultural education will not be of value unless he has had practical experience as well. Such a man needs to go out among the farmers, understand their problems, work with them, create centers of influence by instructing a large number of farmers in the county in doing some better thing on their own farms. In that way he will, within a few years, lead up to the point where he can be doing a tremendous amount of work through his regular demonstrations and the amount of business advice and counsel that he gives farmers in his rounds in the country.

Let us see what sort of efficiency comes from this kind of work. Last year in North Carolina we had reports from 1,435 farmers who raised corn under the instructions of the agents, which represented all types of soil and all conditions, as they were scattered all over the state. Their average was 42.6 bushels of corn to the acre on over 4,000 acres. The average of the state is 18.2 bushels. The full measure of the instruction given is indicated when I say that 8,075 farmers in the state received direct instructions, 3,083 of these received regular visits from agents, 4,992 consulted the agents and carried on some definite work upon their farms, visited occasionally by these agents. Three thousand two hundred boys in the state were in boys' corn clubs and 520 girls in the canning clubs. The work is supported by funds furnished to the United States Department of Agriculture and by funds devoted to this purpose by the state board of agriculture. There are 100 counties in the state, 54 of which are receiving some service through this organization in regular demonstration work and almost all of them receiving some service from the boys' corn club work. It might be interesting to you to know that the average salaries of these local agents is only about $500, the highest being $1,300 per annum. The legislature, about two years ago, passed a law permitting each county board to appropriate certain sums of money. Under this plan every county in which the work is being conducted at the present time contributes at least half of the salary of the local agent. We find by experience that a low salaried agent will do splendid work for a few years, because he is self-sacrificing, public-spirited, and hard-working. As the work progresses the man develops. Often he becomes worthy of a much larger salary. Within the limits of the means at hand we have been trying to take care of these worthy men. One of the greatest needs of this work at the present time is adequate financial support. I have been able to increase the funds from my office for the next fiscal year, and the state department of agriculture has come forward with a very magnificent increase from their funds. This total sum, I estimate, will give us about $500 per county for from 65 to 75 counties of the state. If the county will come forward with an equal sum, or an organization within the county will contribute an equal portion, we will be able to employ more efficient men for longer time and do a better service. Eventually these local men must receive salaries of from $1,200 to $1,800 per annum, in order to command the highest standard of efficiency.

The experience and wide opportunities for observation of these agents become one of their greatest assets. They grow with the work. They become more valuable as their years of service increase and hence command more salary and are worth more to the people they serve. Their duties and responsibilities enlarge and grow as the work grows. They have to keep themselves posted upon the latest experimental work in agriculture. They have to keep up to date in much the same way that the physician or surgeon keeps up to date on the latest methods in his profession. They must be far-seeing men, able to lead from the simple demonstrations on one acre into the rotation of crops and the reorganization of the farm on a business basis by continued instruction, advice and counsel with the farmer. We need more to develop the farmer than we do to develop the farm. If the farmer can have an educational service of the state through an organization of this sort, conscientiously and carefully handled, the farms will take care of themselves. It is much better to have a system that is co-ordinated, that has some headship, that systematically supervises the work over the entire state and co-ordinates it with the sources of information at the agricultural college, the department of agriculture and federal government for most efficient work. Demonstration work is of service both ways. It brings to the investigator the problems of the farm for solution. It takes to the farmer the solved problems as they are worked out by the investigator. It vitalizes the work of the institute, renders more abundant the opportunity for the expert along special lines to serve a larger number of farmers in a helpful way. We do not expect the local agent to be an expert along all lines. He must be a practical expert in agriculture, but we have specialists in the department of agriculture and in the colleges of agriculture who devote a lifetime to the study of one special branch of agriculture. They are very helpful to the local agent in solving local problems.

This is not the work of a year, but of many years. The average farmer changes methods slowly. He is conservative. Tillers of the soil have been among the most independent people of this country. Their individualism has asserted itself and has been one of the chief bulworks of our free institutions. It is hard to break down prejudices, hard to alter customs of the people, and agricultural practices are in the nature of customs. Our experience is that a live, wide-awake agent, in the course of from three to five years, commences to get hold of the people of his county and a change gradually takes place. Not all of it is directly traceable to the work of this man, because the moment he begins to influence a considerable number of farmers in a county they become centers of influence as well. Working in co-operation with existing organizations within the county within a reasonable length of time he will be able to impress the farmers.

Another branch of the demonstration work is that branch of it wherein we have started a work for the women upon the farm. We know it as the girls' canning and poultry club work. Too many of us are apt to think that the whole thing upon the farm is the field, the crop production, the animal husbandry. By no means. Economically speaking, that is only one-half of the farm economy. The home, from an economic standpoint, is at least one-half of the farm organization just as it is one-half of the organization of any man's business, but in the true sense of civilization, in the true sense of its influence for the future and the good of the state, it is much more than half of the problem of rural life. We need efficiency within the home as much as we need efficiency upon the farm. We need to give an opportunity to the one who has charge of the burden of conducting the home as fully as we give that opportunity to the man who is producing upon the farm. As a step in the direction, and to introduce the people to this great thought, girls' canning and poultry club work was organized by the late Dr. S. A. Knapp. Through this organization nearly 25,000 homes were reached in the South last year, on each of which a definite concrete example was carried out in the production of home supplies by the production on one-tenth of an acre and the canning of the products for family use and for sale. Its great value is not only the economical side but is also the great mental and moral stimulus that comes to the home through the power of knowing how to do something that will bring in an income. It would be a great help to the economy of the state if every farm home produced its own food supply and preserved that food supply for winter use in cans, with a surplus for sale, so that the town dweller might live from the land nearby. There are great possibilities in this line of work.

These forces that work in the state can also educate the farmer along co-operative lines. Every step in our change from individualism into co-operation must come from experience and education. I do not believe it is the province of the government to undertake to do the farmer's farming for him. The government and the state should give instructions, should furnish the educational forces that can help the farmer along these lines. They should make the pathway clear. They should try out and discover the best methods. They should cut away the obstacles. But they should not destroy the individual effort of the farmer, properly educated, to act collectively for the common good.

How can the banker help in the solution of these problems? First, he should understand the principles and necessity of better farming. He should be brought to understand that one of the great elements of business is the personal credit of the man because of what that man is doing. You know in your business that you lend to some men without security on the faith of their efficiency and character as men, where you will not loan to others even if they have some security, because of a lack of these things. The one is a good business proposition because character and efficiency are business assets. The other is a bad business venture because lack of character and lack of efficiency will lose money even to the man who has material assets. Credit to the farmer should be based and can be based on better and more successful farming, rather than upon the number of acres of cotton that he plants or acres of ground that he owns. The banker can also be brought to understand the value of the cash system of farming and the serious economic wrong of the credit system of farming. With his greater business experience he can well understand the ready independence of the man who farms for a profit and not for the purpose of paying a debt. (Alabama example.)

The banker can also exert a most powerful influence toward better farming by insisting upon those who seek loans pursuing the best system of farming possible. In boll weevil sections of the South we have had considerable experience for the last eight or nine years, and you may be interested to know that we have been able to get bankers to agree to advance money only to those who have followed the directions of demonstration agents in the production of their crops. These advances are made on the basis of the man following directions on the entire farm and not on the basis of so many acres of cotton. The ease with which these agreements are made with the bankers is understood when I say that those who follow directions have succeeded year in and year out, while those who have refused to follow have generally failed. The moneyed interests of the country like to depend upon success. Failures get no discounts.

With his intimate knowledge of business principles the banker can be of great assistance to farmers by helping to advise them against wasteful and unwise investments and unprofitable undertakings. It is not wise to advise the farmer who approaches the banker for a loan to borrow money for purposes which will not fit his farm for economic production. It is unwise for that farmer to invest in that which will not bring a net income in the long run. I hope you will come to believe therefore that it is your duty to advise farmers against going into debt for any other purpose than one which will be productive, which will be safe. The success of your business as bankers is founded upon the success of other business in your community. You can, and no doubt many of you do, exert a powerful influence toward the guiding of men in business and farming on safe business principles.

The banker can be of great assistance in creating a better understanding between business people and farmers and among farmers themselves. The selfishness of the individualistic civilization that we have been going through must, in my judgment, be overthrown while the unselfishness of the co-operative civilization that would help so much in the solution of many problems approaches. The banker need not fear these things. He should better throw himself into them and understand the great underlying movements that are in progress in the country.

Until a proper basis for financing demonstration work is obtained, the banker can be of great assistance in influencing the appropriations from counties and local organizations to employ competent county workers. The building up of the agriculture of a county means increased business to the banker and increased values in real estate and increased opportunities for investment. This I can prove by numerous instances. Just let me give one: In a certain parish in Louisiana in the last seven years they have suffered two disastrous floods which covered the entire parish or county with water from 30 to 60 days. During that period they have had six years of boll weevil and their cotton crop went down from 25,000 bales of cotton per year to about 1,000 bales of cotton per year. In 1907 the parish, as well as all other sections of the country, suffered from a slight financial panic. Nevertheless, there has been a demonstration agent working in that parish for the last six years, very quietly, without much advertising, but persistently working on the problem of better farming, the raising of home supplies, diversification and building up of soil fertility. What is the result? They used to ship in hogs; now they ship them out. They used to ship in hay; now they ship it out. They have gone into many lines of agriculture that they never went into before. In 1905 there were four banks in the parish, with deposits of $425,000. To-day there are twelve banks in the parish with deposits of one million and a quarter dollars. When I say that there is not a city or even a very large town in the parish you will understand what this means.

Above all the banker needs to study these great questions of rural finance and co-operative marketing. He needs to understand that there are constructive problems and not destructive problems. The program of co-operative marketing will not injure the legitimate activities of any man. We will always need certain middlemen. There must always be those who serve in the capacity of collecting from the producers and expediting to the consumers. It is the unnecessary middlemen that co-operative marketing seeks to eliminate. The necessary and useful middleman will be in existence for many years. The question of rural credits is being studied by many men in this country now for the purpose of bringing to the service of our people any system that will be helpful to agriculture. I had an opportunity of attending the American Bankers Association at Detroit last September and I was delighted to see that great association—the great, thinking, moneyed men of the country—deeply interested in rural finance, in rural co-operative credit, not in the selfish, critical way of regarding it as an infringement upon their business but with that broad-minded and unselfish motive of being posted about every good move that was for the general upbuilding of the country. I believe this association will take an equally high-minded position. Upon this great question of co-operation which brings into country life that social interest, that unselfishness, that efficiency which are greatly to be desired, this country is far behind its European competitors. The progress of agriculture in Europe for the last twenty-five years has been marvelous. We have been wont to brag of our extensive agriculture, when a critical examination leads us to see that our extensive agriculture has been a wasteful agriculture and we must turn over a new leaf and introduce intensive agriculture. Intensive agriculture means that a man must utilize things to their fullest capacity. Farm life ought to have the advantage of having labor-saving machinery to solve its labor problems, comfort and convenience of house building arrangements, stock necessary to carry on a thrifty business upon the farm. Working without means, that is, without capital, it would take a lifetime to gain these things for the average man. Why not supply them through capital, just as we do in manufacturing industries, and let the long years that go by pay back out of dividends from the farmer. It has in it, it seems to me, the elements of the better civilization for the present generation. Let us welcome it and study it. These three things go hand in hand—the better farming, the better marketing, the better finance, and education stands under and supports each one. It is said that Sir Horace Plunkett tried fifty-one times before he finally established a successful Irish co-operative association. The only reason for his success was that he did not know what it meant to fail. The word "failure" was unknown to him. Recognizing the necessity of reorganization of the country life of this country, recognizing the great need of our agriculture, recognizing that the farmer has not been served as he could be and should be served, let us see that we serve farm life as it should be served, to the end that the institutions of government be supported and maintained by a successful policy, a permanent agriculture. To this problem the best we have can well be dedicated. We have been wont to call upon the farmer's name and pat him on the back in time of political power and consistently to ignore him and his problems after the office has been landed. The time has come when the entire country is recognizing the greatness of this problem and the fact that it calls for more hard thinking, more earnest work, more application than any other problem we have.

National Organization to Defend "Blue Sky" Law

A national organization to extend and defend the famous "Blue Sky" law has been formed in Topeka, Kan., with J. N. Dolley, ex-bank commissioner and author of the statute, as its head. The primary purpose of the organization is to defend the "Blue Sky" law in states where its constitutionality is attacked. Information also will be given to any states or persons interested in its workings. The executive committee of the Kansas State Bankers Association, launchers of the protective association, adopted resolutions declaring the Kansas law to be one of the best ever placed on the statute books.

It is planned to hold a national convention sometime before the meeting of the state legislatures to arrange to have "Blue Sky" laws passed in all states of the Union which have not already enacted such legislation.

Mr. Dolley said:

"The Kansas 'Blue Sky Law' was enacted by our legislature because its members were convinced that thousands of our people were being sold worthless mining stocks, irrigating schemes, banana stocks, lands under water and on mountain tops, etc., and that they should be protected by law. The law is designed to give the promoter with a genuine and meritorious proposition a fair chance to offer his stocks and absolutely to bar the fraudulent 'Blue Sky' proposition. The legislature thought the law properly safeguarded so that no sound business proposition could be discriminated against, and I agree with them as it has been fully exemplified in the administration of the law. If the parties representing a business proposition cannot convince the bank commissioner, secretary of state and attorney-general, who are the commission named in the bill, that it is sound and good enough to offer the citizens of our state, it is quite certain that it is not worth anything, and its promoters should not be allowed to defraud our people.

"I am no longer an officer of the state of Kansas and have no more power or authority to assist in defending this law than any other citizen of Kansas and the United States. It is now up to the people to defend this law. I am ready and prepared and anxious to render any service possible, free of charge, in your behalf. I believe we should organize a national organization for the defense of the law so that we may be at all times in a strong position to defend the law in any state in which it may be attacked.

"The suggestion has come to me from several well-known Kansans who are deeply interested in the success of this law that there are many people in this state who would be willing to subscribe to a fund for its defense. I believe this is a good suggestion. I have discussed this with Mr. William Macferran, president of the Kansas State

Bankers Association, and also president of the State Savings Bank of Topeka, who cordially endorses the plan and has kindly offered to act as treasurer of such a fund. Proper statements will be made at different times of all receipts and disbursements in connection with this work. Appeals have been made to the enemies of this law for assistance in destroying and defeating it, and I believe that the suggestion that we now appeal to the friends of the law for assistance in conserving it in the interest of the public is worthy of your earnest consideration.

"Any information or suggestions that may be furnished by the friends of the law in its defense may be sent direct to me at Topeka, or to my attorneys, Hon. F. S. Jackson and Hon. E. D. McKeever of Topeka.

"The attack on me is for the general purpose of discrediting the law and myself as the author of it. As the fight is centered largely upon me as the author and defender of this statute, the co-operation of all friends of the law with me at this time in resisting the assault of the enemies of the "Blue Sky" law will be greatly appreciated and will render the public a valuable service."

Across the purple hills into God's glow,
How bravely did he face the failing days,
Before the twilight hastened to abide,
Nor was he fearful of the silent ways.
Life is worth living to have had one friend
Whose loyalty was certain as the sun;
The misty blue of one long afternoon
And then—his race was run.
It is not ours to trace the scattered thread,
The rose of death reposes on his breast;
But this we know, while he was here on earth
He gained the love of men who knew him best.

WOULD PENALIZE FOR DEPRESSING GOVERNMENT SECURITIES

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois introduced a resolution this week designed to penalize banks which attempt to influence legislation by depressing government securities. The Senator expects the support of the administration in this regard.

Secretary McAdoo this week issued a charge in which he said there was a conspiracy among bankers to depreciate the value of government bonds. This was strenuously denied by the bankers.

This resolution was induced by the above statement of the secretary of the treasury. It declares such conduct an offense against patriotism and the prosperity of the people and authorizes the secretary of the treasury when such conditions are alleged to exist to make a thorough investigation.

When it has been established to the secretary's satisfaction that banks have, by agreement or otherwise, caused the depression of the market price of government securities the resolution authorizes him to withdraw from such institutions government deposits and deprive them of further privileges from the government.

BANKERS' BOARD IN VIEW

The currency bill probably will be amended to create an advisory board composed of bankers to work in co-operation with the federal reserve board, according to an announcement made by Chairman Glass of the house banking committee this week.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States and many bankers have suggested this means of recognizing the banks. The proposed board would exercise no governing power, but its members would act as expert advisers to the federal reserve board, which would remain distinctly a government body.

NEW NATIONAL BANKS

Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane, received applications to organize the State National of Decatur, Tex., capital $50,000, and the West Point National, West Point, Va., capital $25,000. He approved the application to organize the First National of Granville, Ill., capital $50,000, to succeed the Granville Bank.

The First National of Mounds, Ill.; capital $25,000. R. A. Royall, correspondent, Mounds, Ill.; W. H. Spaulding, W. C. Rife, G. M. Scruggs, and A. M. Wood.

The First National of New Castle, Texas; capital $25,000. R. D. Mugg, correspondent, New Castle, Texas; J. W. Davis, W. B. Ewalt, R. H. Helm, R. J. Johnson, and G. Whaley.

Secretaries Announce Convention Dates

PAUL HARDEY
DENVER, COLORADO

WILLIAM B. HUGHES
OMAHA, NEBRASKA

SECRETARIES Paul Hardey and William B. Hughes, respectively of the Colorado and Nebraska Bankers Associations, have sent out announcements of the dates of their annual conventions this year. The Colorado bankers will meet in Denver, August 27th and 28th, and the Nebraskans in Lincoln, September 25th and 26th. Attractive programs and a fine line of entertainment are being prepared for both meetings.

Both secretaries are top-notchers and have done much to build up the influence of the bankers' organizations which they represent. Mr. Hardey also is cashier of the Interstate Savings at Denver. This is his first year as secretary of the Colorado bankers; that he has more than made good is the unanimous opinion of those acquainted with his work. Secretary Hughes is a "live wire" and is an official "who does things."

PHILADELPHIA MAN FOR COMPTROLLER

The name of George W. Norris of Philadelphia has been submitted to President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo as a candidate for comptroller of the currency.

RETURNS FROM VACATION

John W. Thomas, assistant cashier of the Central Trust, is back from his four weeks vacation spent in Colorado.

BRIGHTON BANK INCORPORATED

The Brighton (Ill.) State has been incorporated with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are D. Newton Blodget, Charles Boren and B. F. Towse.

SAYS MONEY IS EASIER

P. I. Cooper, cashier of the Illinois Trust & Saving Bank, said conditions are strong and money easier. The minimum rate, however, is 6 per cent.

WISCONSIN, which leads every organized state in the world in the wisdom of its laws, has passed a law to sterilize the feeble-minded, epileptic and criminal insane in state and county institutions.

WISCONSIN also passed a bill requiring a certificate of health from both parties to a nuptial agreement as a preliminary to the granting of a marriage license. Examinations by physicians are required.

ILLINOIS must follow suit to save the future. She is now caring for nineteen thousand in her hospitals for the insane.

FOUR hundred new cases are added per year. The cost is increasing at the rate of $400,000 per year.

EXCESSIVE alcoholism is the chief cause. Sterilization in many cases restores a useful mental balance and it stops the birth of mentally deficient children.

WT. MEFFORD of Chicago says "insanity is on the increase and must be stopped if we are to have a safe and sane country. Legislation is the only way in which this can be accomplished."

JC. PING of Atlanta declared that cases of insanity are multiplying among women, owing to several causes, among which are loss of sleep, too much attention to dress and social affairs, too much dancing and too much card-playing.

NOTHING can stop the growth of insanity except sterilization. Help it along wherever you can.

THE Nineteen Sixteen Club of Chicago has begun the publication of "The Reflector" with a view to solidifying the republican party for the next national contest. It appears to be anti-administration to beat the band.

NEITHER Wilson, Bryan, the currency bill, the tariff bill, "nor anything that is, etc.," seems to suit it.

SENATOR SHERMAN has a signed article in the current issue on the Owen bill. It's good, but belongs to the type known as special pleading. Ninety per cent of it could be used quite as well against supervision of private banks.

THERE is a suspicion that the senator merely has revamped one of his former attempts along that line.

THE real estate exchanges of the United States and Canada held an international meeting at Winnipeg three days of this week. They imported Joseph Chapman to talk on agricultural education and made him a topline on the program.

NOT any of the big issues dug up by Chapman has spread so rapidly. He evolved the chapters of the A. I. B., the money orders, the fight on the express companies and other things, but keeping the boy on the farm was the hit.

GEORGE WOODRUFF writes from Dublin, "Everybody is doing it. All the lords, ladies, knights, nobles and even the common people over here are yelling for agriculture."

"HAD Chapman pulled off the stunt over here he'd be a baronet by now along with Sir 'Tommy' Lipton, Sir Rud. Kipling and the Three Star brandy man."

MR. WOODRUFF "went about" with the American Agricultural Commission. He will very likely bring in a "minority report" at Boston much as he did at Detroit.

ATTLANTA has a booklet ready to spring on the A. B. A. at Boston. "Atlanta in 1914" is the title and the subtitle is "We have the hotel and the auditorium."

THE booklet shows a strong hand. Some of the hotels pictured are not very high and some are not very wide, but they look fine. The boomers will make a strong pull for the 1914 convention.

R. E. GAMBLE, who travels for the Drovers National of this city, has just returned from Portland and Seattle and reports a beautiful trip. He was up to Vancouver and Victoria and took a look at the parliament buildings; dropped down to Seattle, witnessed the "Potlatchee," or "Harvest Feast," and saw the sailors do up the town.

IN Portland he says he feasted on fish, cherries and peaches (the kinds that grow on trees), and caught several salmon weighing two pounds each (or more) and some speckled trout. Incidentally he had his eye out for business with his usual success.

W. J. BAYERSDORFFER, vice-president and cashier of the First National, Shreveport, La., was in Chicago this week and reported conditions in Shreveport and its tributary territories excellent, and they have prospects of good business for that section.

E. HOBBY of the Guaranty State, Dallas, Tex., spent his vacation in the East, and on his way home spent several days in Chicago.

DOWN at the Beach Hotel you will find E. O. Tennison and family, also from Dallas. Mr. Tennison was president of the former City National and is well known in his state.

JOSEPH RICE was up for the week end from Mt. Morris, this state. He has been dodging a congressional nomination which may yet land him.

IT was good to see H. P. Hilliard, head of the big Central National, St. Louis. He was bent upon inspecting a big northern Illinois stock farm. He's some farmer (or planter?) himself down in Louisiana.

OTHERS in the city were George H. Althouse, Marshall, Mo.; J. T. McCarthy, Tyler, Tex., and J. P. Smith of Dallas. Texans have lots of business up this way in the good old summer time. Can you blame them?

THE Library of Congress has issued "A Select List of References on the Monetary Question" and every man who cares should get a copy.

THE "List" is a stickler for full names, so you will find George McClelland Reynolds down in several places, not as head of the big Continental, but as "author."

HE'S there with the goods, too, when it comes to currency and banking questions.

THEN there is James Berwick Forgan, author also. And Oliver Clyde Fuller prepares you for Frank Overton Watts.

JAMES GRAHAM CANNON is the full name of the talented head of the Fourth of New York.

NO one has more "references" than Andrew Jay Frame, not even Nelson Wilmarth Aldrich.

THE list failed on A. A. Crane and he still remains "Double A" to his friends.

AST. PAUL paper says that the agitation of H. A. Wheeler of Chicago, that business men must band together to present their own side of matters on which there is popular prejudice, would have had a warmer reception but for the Mulhall revelations of how a similar association dabbled in politics, bribery and dirt.

FROM the same paper we learn that Joseph Chapman of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, has been reappointed a commissioner upon the board of charities and corrections of Minneapolis. Mr. Chapman has been a member for over six years and sought to re-

T HE Highland Park State is Henry Ford's new bank, out by his factory at Detroit. It opened with about three millions in deposits, the deposits being "petty cash" from the office and a little change Henry had in his trousers.

S UPPOSE he should open one at every Ford branch (and he could make them pay), wouldn't he be some banker?

T HEY could start with a million deposits each, out of surplus, and then if the Ford owners came in there would be rapid growth. He may do it?

M R. LAUTERBACH comes to the stand and avers that before there was any panic Mr. Morgan held an option on stock of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company and could have secured control of it at any time."

T HIS is kicking over the official version, represented at the time and since then endorsed by the high Bull Moose, that the purchase was solely an altruistic expedient to rescue New York banks from the panic.

T HOSE going to Boston on the big Chicago Special are advised that a round trip fare of $39.50 has been secured from this point.

T HE expiration limit has not been fixed as yet, but likely will be liberal. Chairman Van Vechten, of the train committee, began going after the "rate" as soon as he took charge.

RAIN is all right upon occasion but it takes the rich, strong, yellow sunshine to make the corn pop or to bring out all the beauties of the diaphanous skirt.

MANY requests come in for suggestions for side-trips from Boston during the big A. B. A. convention in October. Here are a few just off-hand. Literature will be sent out later on the subject.

HISTORIC CAMBRIDGE with Harvard University, Charlestown Navy Yard and Bunker Hill are within a five-cent-fare limit. Concord and Lexington are well within an hour's ride. Plymouth and many other historic points on the South Shore are within two hours' ride of the city. The White Mountains are reached in half a day's travel and Portland, a center of historic interest and beautiful Casco Bay are but three hours' distant from Boston.

"THE bill introduced by the administration for the reform of the currency, instead of meeting with popular approval seems to be viewed with considerable alarm by bankers."

ABOVE quotation is from an editorial in a republican paper. Read it again and see if you catch the idea.

PERHAPS you've noticed that the fellow who shouts the loudest about the government "not paying any interest on deposits" under the Glass bill was lots quieter than an oyster for the fifty years that the banks paid no interest on government deposits?

A CHICAGO joy rider who took out his employer's car and killed a man with it has been sentenced to 14 years in the penitentiary. Two of the jurors who found him guilty owned cars and recognized that the joy rider is the greatest menace to motorists as well as pedestrians.

AMERICA now holds world's honors in yachting, tennis, polo, boxing and wrestling. We are backing young Allis to pull down the golf title.

THE coroner's jury in the New Haven road cases overlooked an opportunity. They could have censured the victims for riding on such a road.

HOWEVER, Howard Elliott will change that if they give him a chance.

W. H. PRATT, Jr., president of the Brule National at Chamberlain, S. D., is some farmer also. A photo taken by a truthful camera shows corn raised on his farm easily twice as tall as Mr. Pratt.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL dividend was cut from seven to five per cent on Wednesday. Stock fell six points in first hour.

SENATOR OWEN'S committee is sending out in pamphlet form "Criticisms and Suggestions" and "Miscellaneous Suggestions" made on the currency problem.

THE "bugs" and "fans" are all there and the diversity of opinion is bewildering. You can get copies by writing for them.

ANDREW JAY FRAME is there with a few kind words for "our independent banking system" and it's good stuff.

THE National Lumber Association of America asks the committee to read an address (enclosed) by George M. Reynolds. The association cracked up the "wisdom" of Mr. R.'s talk and predicts that it would simplify the whole matter.

JOHN P. BRANCH, the veteran president of the Merchants at Baltimore, takes three whole pages for his "few lines."

GEORGE M. COFFIN of New York wrote five different letters in an attempt to beat the waste basket. He did!

D. C. PRYOR of Oklahoma City wrote direct to President Wilson. He'd been sidetracked by the National Citizens League when he asked for a speaking date, so he told his story, including a chapter on "dry farming," to the big chief. It was a long, long letter.

PATRICK YORKE of Washington, Pa., wanted Senator Owen to make sure of a bill which would give government control and insure a flat 4 per cent rate to borrowers in every state in the Union.

PATRICK RAYMOND of Denver is of the same mind, and against the "money power" being in control.

M. F. SNYDER of Clarksburg, W. Va., advised the senator "to find out what is going on among the bankers and circumvent them if you can."

ALFRED C. SCHMITT of Albany, Ore., wants "a flexible currency based upon our convertible resources."

LOTS of letters from Oklahoma. Everybody down there with a two cent stamp took some of the senator's time.

SEVERAL warm little "touches" for funds "to conduct a campaign for sound legislation." Such openings are seldom overlooked in Washington.

OUR old college chum, Henry W. Yates of Omaha, submitted a bill of his own, full copy of which is in the pamphlet.

MR. YATES has been "fifty years a banker" and is "a democrat of the old school" but in "perfect accord with the administration." All he wants is "a sound financial measure."

D. H. BURRELL is the president of the Herkimer National at Little Falls, N. Y., the place where the cheese comes from. He's for the bill in the main.

B. P. WAGGENER of Atchison, Kan., sent a "guaranty of deposits" plan which has been on the fire and simmering ever since the days when C. N. Fowler was in charge of the trouble department at Washington.

J. E. HILL of Oklahoma City had a lot to say and is "sure that the postal savings banks is a scheme of the banks to get more interest-bearing currency," whatever that is.

EVIDENTLY J. E. didn't read the Lucius Teter talks so vigorously handed out while the postals were an issue.

GOOD old Horace Boies of Waterloo, Iowa, sent in a ready-to-wear "plan," all his own.

OF course C. H. Church of Muncie, Ind., landed with a "plan" and got it printed in full. Beats the band how many ways there are of curing all existing currency and banking evils!

WHARTON BARKER, the distinguished Philadelphian, "boiled" all he had to say down to just three propositions:

BANKERS

112 So. La Salle St. :: CHICAGO

1. AN act to require national banks to withdraw their reserves from central reserve banks and to hold these moneys in their own vaults.

2. AN act to prohibit national banks from making loans upon securities (bonds and stocks) that have not paid dividends or interest of not less than 3 per cent per annum for three consecutive years prior to date of loan and to limit amount of loans to 60 per cent of the average market price for the three calendar years preceding the date of loan.

3. AN act authorizing national banks to establish two classes of accounts, one payable in actual money when money has been deposited and one payable by credit on the bank books when a credit has been deposited or a note discounted.

A. A. GRAHAM of Topeka would make the railroads "a basis for currency issue." He explains at length.

J. S. MCGINNIS, New York, says, "You might as well ask the brewers to prepare prohibition legislation as to ask bankers to fix up a currency plan."

WILLIAM H. WHITE of Silver City, N. Mex., has "a market price dollar" plan which is quite ingenuous.

HENRY RAWIE of Indianapolis sent a plan which he modestly describes as "the correct solution of the currency problem." Everybody's doing it.

CHARLES A. CONANT, a semi-pro of New York, would have "currency notes issued by the government."

CARL VROOMAN of Illinois wants "public control" and so do a lot of the writers who are not bankers.

THOS. P. BEAL of Boston believes that "the banks should furnish the currency under government control."

WILLIAM A. TUCKER of New York gets one over the plate with a letter he once wrote to Theodore the First.

ONE Oregon banker hoped that "others than Reynolds and Hulbert—although very good men—would be called." He sent "hisn" by mail.

THE country has a number of "Monetary Statists" and they all registered. They are a sort of financial landscape gardeners, knowing all of the long but none of the short routes to the objective point.

"PREVENTION of panics" is such a simple thing, say many of them, that one is surprised we ever had one.

HERBERT MYRICK, editor of a string of farm papers, sent in his "Standard Bill for Farm Finance." It's in the book and about as long as the Santa Fe road.

SECRETARY GEORGE D. BARTLETT of Wisconsin handed the senator the "tentative plan for insurance of bank deposits" in his state. Reads fine.

AMONG the scores of "plans" we do not find that by John L. Hamilton, one of the best of the lot. It was such a good chance, too!

EVERYONE will be sorry to know that Col. R. E. James of Easton, Pa., is "down again." It will be remembered he was taken quite ill at the Pittsburgh convention.

HE recovered rapidly upon reaching home but at present must remain away from the bank.
CASHIER.

ASKS RECEIVER FOR BANKING FIRM

Boston, July 28.—In a bill filed in the superior court a receiver is asked to take charge of the affairs of Blanchard & Co., Inc., a banking concern having offices at 15 Congress Street. The plaintiff, Orville F. Rogers, sets forth that he is a creditor on a note for $5,000. According to the bill, the company was dissolved on March 12th and reported its assets at that time as consisting of $244,092 stocks and bonds and $63,440 cash and bills receivable. It is claimed that the company has been for some time insolvent and has been wasting its assets.

It is said that the holdings of the company consist in large part of more than 50,000 shares of the capital stock of the Potosi Mines Company and the St. Francois Lead Company.

NEW BANK COMMISSIONER FOR TEXAS

W. W. Collier has been made commissioner of insurance and banking for Texas, succeeding B. L. Gill who resigned to accept the vice-presidency of a New York bank. Mr. Collier is well-known and has had a valuable banking experience.

Analysis of Glass Banking and Currency Bill

Curtis L. Mosher, secretary of the Citizens League of Minnesota, addressed a conference of representative bankers of the Northwestern states held at the Hotel Radisson in Minneapolis, July 17th, taking for his subject an analysis of the Glass Bill for banking and currency reform. Mr. Mosher said in part:

In presenting an analysis of the new banking and currency bill, it is not the purpose of the organization I represent to assume a capricious, hostile, or supercritical attitude. We respect the work of the committee which had in charge and has presented the new Glass bill and appreciate how great a task confronted them in preparing a measure to provide for a new, scientific and a well-founded banking system for a country as great in extent and resources and as rapidly developing as this.

We feel that the new measure is open to criticism, and believe those who have its success at heart will welcome such criticism, if it is sincere, and founded upon facts. We realize that this bill has already undergone many very important changes, some occurring while it was still in the hands of the committee and before it was made public, others occurring after it had been made public and before it was introduced in congress, and still others since it was introduced on June 26th last. It is altogether probable that still other changes will be made in it before it is finally adopted in congress. To assume that the party in power and the present administration will not consent to such reasonable change and modification as the best economic, business and banking experience of the country indicates is vital and necessary, would be to gratuitously call into question the character and principles of those at the head of our government. We have no such purpose in approaching this discussion.

This criticism and analysis is necessarily founded upon the bill as it now stands. In all that is said of it it should be kept in mind that as the measure is amended and improved the grounds for these criticisms may disappear.

It is not apparent that the bill as it now stands is a workable measure. It is doubtful whether country national banks—which are the great majority numerically of our 7,440 national banking associations—would enter the proposed regional reserve system if compelled to comply with the present provisions of the bill. We may disregard any reports that reserve and central reserve city banks would prefer state charters. It is not upon these banks that the new system must depend for success, and where a few institutions of the latter class might retire from the national system many would unquestionably prefer to remain, even under an unsatisfactory system, because of old associations and the prestige built up through many years of successful business as national banks. Of all the national banks of the country those in reserve and central reserve cities number but 368, of which 53 are in central reserve cities. It is upon the other 7,072 that any new system must depend for success, for they hold the bulk of the national bank deposits and represent the greater part of the national banking capital of the United States.

It seems unquestionably true that the new bill will need searching amendment at several points if this result—that of obtaining the support and hearty co-operation of the smaller banks of the country, and the state banks and trust companies—is to be accomplished. It is equally true that similarly important amendment must be had to prevent a severe shock to business through the contraction in credit resulting from the proposed system, and from the violent disturbance of business relations and customs which have been built up gradually and have continued for sixty years.

After the bill was made public, and before it was formally introduced in congress, a number of important changes were made in its provisions. Of these the following are important:

1. Sections 18, 19 and 20 of the bill as it originally stood, which had been eliminated, were restored and are now a part of the measure. These sections provide for the retirement of the circulating notes of national banks and the re-funding of the government 2 per cent bonds, which now have the circulation privilege, into 3 per cent bonds without the circulation privilege. The retirement and re-funding process is to be completed in 20 years, but not exceeding 5 per cent of the outstanding bonds shall be exchanged in any one year. No more than 5 per cent, therefore, of the outstanding notes would be retired in any one year. The press reports state that since the introduction of the bill, the house committee has decided to make the re-funding provisions wholly permissive, and to create out of earnings of the federal reserve banks a fund to retire the 2 per cent bonds remaining outstanding at the end of 20 years at par and accrued interest.

2. As a result of the reintroduction of this provision the limitation of $500,000,000 on the issue of federal treasury reserve notes has been altered so that as the bill stands the note issue may exceed $500,000,000 to the extent of the amount of national bank notes retired each year. The effect is to replace the note circulation retired with an equal amount in federal treasury reserve notes.

3. The making of the discount rate is transferred from the federal reserve board to the federal reserve banks in each of the twelve districts, but is made subject to the review and determination of the federal reserve board.

4. Discretionary power is granted the federal reserve board to permit country banks to carry the third part of their reserve with reserve agents as at present. Such deposit of reserves, however, can only be made as permission is granted by the federal reserve board.

The other changes are of minor importance in this territory, except as they broaden and strengthen the already extensive powers of the federal reserve board.

It may be fairly said that the new bill lacks clearness. As compared with the bill presented by the monetary commission, its language seems unnecessarily involved and its provisions to some extent confused. This would be the natural result of a hurried process of preparation, and of lack of sufficient careful study and revision.

It may be said that the groundwork of the bill bears evidence of influences originating doubtless in the work of the monetary commission, and various provisions are clearly the result of the report of that body. To many persons who have followed this movement, the new measure will not seem as clear-cut, as easily understood, or as perfectly adjusted to the banking and business needs of the country as its predecessor, the monetary commission bill (miscalled the "Aldrich" bill). It should be remembered that the monetary commission bill was the product of four years of exhaustive investigation in every part of the world. This bill has had the benefit of no such period of investigation and study.

Good Points of the New Bill

The points in which the bill meets the demand for remedies for the defects of the present system are as follows:

1. The provisions for banking co-operation are good.

2. The provisions for the establishment of American banks abroad are adequate and necessary.

3. It provides an effective method of retiring national bank issues and refunding the 2 per cent bonds.

4. The federal treasury operations in control of the flow of gold are needed and appear to be adequate.

5. It provides for the vitally important re-discount system, but the details of its plan of rediscount are poorly worked out.

6. It grants to the regional reserve banks the necessary power of setting the discount rate for their respective districts, but this power is subject to the review and decision of the federal reserve board, which is not made up of stockholders of banks, or of experienced bank executives, but may easily be largely composed of men without an intimate knowledge of the banking business or of financial conditions in the United States.

To create a single system of banking for the United States, sound in its conception, scientific in its provisions, thoroughly efficient in meeting the demands of business and adequate to the needs of a very prosperous and rapidly growing country, which has enjoyed a marvelous advance under the present law, with all its defects, was admittedly the purpose behind the creation of the monetary commission bill, and the new Glass bill, which is put forward as the successor to the bill of the previous administration. Unless state and national banks alike will gladly come under the proposed new plan, with a feeling that it adequately remedies the defects of the present system, and affords the new and better method that has been sought, it cannot hope for a successful existence. In view of this necessity, which may properly be considered the foundation on which a successful system must rest, it is interesting to consider such of its provisions and requirements as are manifestly open to objection:

Two points are of so vital necessity to any adequate reform of the banking and currency system that all other features may be regarded as of comparatively little importance. One is that there be established a sound system of rediscount. The second is a collateral of the first, without which a rediscount system would be greatly limited in its serviceability to business, and that is a scientific and automatically elastic currency, that will rise and fall with the expansion and contraction of legitimate business in this country, and will have this quality of elasticity as its normal characteristic—not through the intervention of governmental authority, or the official decisions of any board or tribunal.

It may be said of the Glass bill that these two points are not adequately covered. The system of rediscount, as proposed, would be of no great value to the average country bank. The proposals are, however, of such a character that they might easily be simplified by amendment and made thoroughly satisfactory.

The currency provisions of the bill present a more difficult problem. The currency contemplated by the measure is not an automatically elastic currency. It is limited in amount, and can have no natural relation to the rise and fall of commercial exchanges in the country at large. To give it expansion it will require the formal act of the federal reserve board. Instead of flowing to meet the normal demands of business, its flow is first to a federal reserve bank, and through such banks into the channels of business. An adequate currency would issue as the direct result of a rediscount into the course of trade. With the maturity of the paper on which the rediscount that brought it into circulation was founded, it would automatically retire because there would be no further use for it.

The federal reserve board is given specific power in Sec. 12 to have authority and control at all times over the issue and retirement of the currency contemplated.

Objectionable Features

There are other objectionable features, as follows:

1. It may be said in general terms that the bill compels banks and bankers to capitalize the new system under a double liability, to provide it with the great bulk of all the business it may do, and to become responsive to its provisions and responsible under them in a very serious and important degree, but practically denies them any rights of management or control. This denial will extend not only to the institution they will build up, but will have a new expression in limitations on the authority of bank executives and directorates each in their own institutions.

2. The system of control built up by the bill is political, extending under the terms of succession through the administration of five presidents, each of whom will, in turn, assume, to all practical intent and purpose, the management of banking in the United States.

The same political control will extend to each regional reserve institution, because of the denial of the right to institute a system of self-government and the imposition of the rule of an executive chosen in Washington over each of the twelve institutions.

A further extension of such control is provided for by allowing the federal reserve board, every member of which will be an appointee of the president, to name one-third of the directors of each regional reserve bank, and in giving it removal power over an additional one-third.

3. The bill is autocratic to a degree not previously reached in federal legislation. The commerce commission exercises control, but has never hinted at taking over the actual management of American railroads. The extension of federal authority over national banks has heretofore stopped short at limits of reasonable supervision and control. The new measure goes into entirely new territory and is based on a theory of benevolent tyranny and paternalism which is repugnant to American institutions and American public sentiment.

4. The limit of $500,000,000 on note issues forbids elasticity except within these limits, and there is no provision for additional currency under some form of rising tax. The currency provision therefore does not differ greatly from a pure emergency currency of $500,000,000.

5. Rediscount should be confined to commercial paper, presented through member banks, and to paper founded on agricultural or industrial transactions.

6. The bill requires no proportion of gold in reserve against its contemplated note issues.

7. There is no provision that a proportion of the reserve holdings of federal reserve banks must be gold.

8. The present system of depositing reserves with reserve agents is destroyed by the arbitrary transfer of such funds to the new federal reserve banks. Such a transfer will inevitably reduce the loaning power of the banks. The contraction of credit will be proportionate to the amounts withdrawn and placed in reserve banks. The total of these amounts is $552,493,927.

9. The power granted the secretary of the

W. T. FENTON ON THE SITUATION

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, Chicago, said:

"While firm money is likely to continue through 1913 I believe we have passed the peak. The foreign outlook is better and the volume of borrowing in this country has declined. The range of 6 to 7 per cent for money in Chicago has had its effect. Furthermore, there had been a good deal of borrowing in excess of the current needs as a precaution against a possible squeeze. Large corporations now carry unusually heavy loans at the banks, which have been no more in evidence as buyers of commercial paper than the manufacturers and merchants were as sellers. It was a case of precaution on both sides. It is surprising under the circumstances that business has continued so active. We hear a good deal about curtailment and recession, but our customers with few exceptions report more business than last year, their banner year. The basic cause no doubt is the wonderful crop, which may exceed the bumper crop of 1912.

"Collections throughout the West as a whole are very fair and in the agricultural sections as a rule they are good. Naturally there will be rather slow collections for about ten days in those localities where new crops are being moved, the subsequent effect being ease. Grain is moving freely with no abnormal pressure upon the money centers. I do not expect any greater strain next autumn than a year ago. Money in Chicago was 6 per cent then. Bank deposits here are steady, slightly below the level of six months ago and considerably below the level of a year ago, and loans are held in normal relation to the deposits. The percentage of reserve is higher than it was June 4th, when the banks made their last official statements of condition.

"The character of business is excellent and conditions seem to be quite sound. Big borrowers who anticipated their needs got their money the cheapest, but they pay about 1 per cent more than usual."

TEXAS BANKERS TO URGE CHANGES IN CURRENCY BILL

Nathan Adams, president of the Texas Bankers Association, has announced changes which leading bankers of Texas will recommend in the Owen-Glass currency bill now pending in congress. These changes are the result of a meeting of Texas bankers in Dallas.

A committee was appointed to go to Washington with a view of getting the recommendations before congress. These changes will be recommended:

1. The member banks of the country should have a representation on the governing board of the federal reserve banks.

2. On account of the large amount of reserve required by the Owen-Glass bill, we recommend that the reserve of all member banks be as follows: One-half of the amount now carried as legal reserve in cash in bank to be carried on hand; one-half to be deposited with federal reserve banks; the balance with reserve agents as heretofore, thus mobilizing the reserves that are now unavailable and without interference with commercial requirements for balances at commercial centers.

3. The prescribed limit of $500,000,000 of circulation, as proposed, should be eliminated.

4. To avoid inflation we recommend that only paper growing out of agricultural, industrial or commercial transactions should be eligible for discount.

5. We are opposed to the clearing of individual checks on member banks, and believe this function should be exercised for the transfer of bank balances.

6. It is our opinion that stock subscriptions to the capital of federal reserve banks should be limited to 10 per cent of the capital of subscribing banks instead of 20 per cent as now proposed.

7. We believe the government in withdrawing circulating privileges from 2 per cent banks is morally obligated to redeem them without loss to the banks.

8. We do not believe that federal reserve banks should be permitted to enter the open market for the purchase of bills of exchange or commercial paper; their transactions should be limited to member banks exclusively.

In voicing the above objections to the present bill it was the opinion of bankers present that this country needs a flexible currency system. They did not believe, however, that federal reserve banks should be organized for the purpose of coming in competition with the member banks of this country, which are required to furnish their capital.

REPORTS IRELAND PROSPEROUS

The governor of the Bank of Ireland, addressing a stockholders' meeting, declared that the 106 branches of the bank throughout Ireland report that the deposits are larger than ever before.

"Profits exceed all records for a long time back," said the governor. "We have had one unvarying tale of the prosperity of the farmers due to the land purchase acts, which made the tenants the owners of their holdings."

The same tale of success is chronicled by the Provincial Bank of Ireland, the National Bank of Munster and the Leinster Bank.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department
matters interesting to
our readers

The administration currency bill will be submitted to a democratic caucus August 11th. There it is to meet a drawn issue with the Henry substitute, which has been advanced by a small group of radical democrats. This was the ultimate outcome of a conference of the democratic members of the house banking and currency committee, and it is understood to be directly due to a plan devised at the White House in a conference between the president and Chairman Glass.

It is understood that the president is displeased with the undue publicity given the differences in the committee during the past week and that it is the opinion that it has resulted only in weakening the program of the party. Consequently each member of the conference was sworn to secrecy upon his honor and hereafter this rule is to be enforced. Following the meeting of the democratic members Chairman Glass said:

"The chairman of the democratic conferees of the banking and currency committee is authorized to say to the gentlemen of the press that the conferees have voted to ask for a party caucus to be held on August 11th for the consideration of such a report as may then be made on the pending currency bill and that further than this the chairman is not authorized to speak of what transpired at the meeting."

President Wilson indicated that the administration is clearly behind the bill and that it is to be pushed through the house just as it stands. The president said that the administration would not submit to any amendments to the basic principles of the bill as originally introduced in the house and senate.

Wilson Firm in Attitude

It was rumored that Representative Henry has been instructed by the White House not to make his fight on the pending measure so severe. It was hinted that it would be well to withdraw entirely from the field and instruct his lieutenants on the house committee to stop their opposition to the pending measure. That there is the greatest sincerity on the part of the president on insisting that the currency measure shall be passed was exhibited in cancelling an engagement with Representative Ragsdale.

Mr. Ragsdale has been the one particular member of the committee who has threatened to disrupt things in order to force the amending of the bill in line with the Henry substitute. He was successful in making an engagement with the president. Mr. Ragsdale was called up from the White House and informed that the president could not see him.

The insurgent democrat failed to comment on his failure to see the president and there was no explanation as to how or why it occurred. It was evident the intent was to cast the inference that the engagement was cancelled because the president was busy on Mexican matters, notwithstanding the fact that the subject was not to be taken up at the White House before afternoon.

Mr. Ragsdale presented himself at the office of the committee at least thirty minutes before the time scheduled for the conference. He indicated that it is his determination to fight for the amendments he has offered to the last. If this committee insists that the bill pending here shall be accompanied by a report, he said, then there shall be two reports.

Will Take Fight to Caucus

Mr. Ragsdale said that it is his full intention to take his fight to the caucus. If the caucus defeats him, he said he has not yet decided what he will do. If the president is willing to make a definite promise to recommend rural credits at the next session of congress it is possible that Mr. Ragsdale would consent to desert the Henry amendments and support the pending bill.

"I am not going to give up," said Mr. Ragsdale, "until I am certain of what I am going to get in return."

system by an enlarged government board with a "federal reserve council," representing the bankers acting in an advisory capacity, is proposed by the currency and banking committee of the national chamber of commerce.

The report of the committee, addressed to President Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, has been made public in a document issued by the senate banking committee. The document also contains the views of many Middle West banks and business men on the Owen-Glass currency measure.

The verdict of the chamber of commerce on the Owen-Glass bill is that it is "a piece of constructive legislation" and that it "embodies in a large degree elements necessary to provide the nation with a safe currency and banking system."

Plans for Federal Reserve Board

The recommendations regarding the federal reserve board follow:

"The bill provides for a board of seven, of whom at least one shall have had banking experience. This element of banking experience can be strengthened without weakening the element of public control. We therefore suggest that the federal reserve board be increased to nine; that the original seven shall choose two additional members, subject to the approval of the president, and that the board thus constituted shall elect the governor and the vice-governor of the federal reserve board.

"The members of the federal reserve board should be the equals, in point of character, ability, and experience, of the principal banking officers of this country and Europe. The question of compensation should therefore have the serious consideration of congress. The compensation of the governor and the vice-governor should be fixed by the board. While men of requisite qualifications might be found who would be satisfied with a moderate salary in such positions, what is wanted is the highest quality of service."

Wants Board Given Dignity

"In dignity the federal reserve board should rank with the supreme court, and it should be equally free from any suspicion of political control. This is also in accordance with the best banking experience and practice in all parts of the world.

"There should be most definite and well developed methods of voicing, for the consideration of the federal reserve board, the judgment of the banking and business interests of the country, in order that the board may be kept in constant touch with business conditions and trade requirements everywhere. We therefore suggest the organization of a federal reserve council, elected by and representing the directors of the federal reserve banks and serving in an advisory capacity. This council should meet at stated periods in conference with the federal reserve board. Its president and vice-president should reside in Washington and sit at the meetings of the board, but without vote. The compensation of the officers and members of the council should be fixed and paid by the federal reserve banks."

Would Create System Gradually

The committee fears that some of the federal reserve banks might prove inferior to existing local banks and pleads for a gradual creation of the system. The arguments follow:

1. There is danger of confusion and possible disaster as the result of the sudden shifting of credit balances and reserves which would occur with the establishment of an arbitrary increase in the number of reserve centers at any one time.

2. It is important that the clearing principle provided in the proposed measure should be gradually and judiciously developed.

3. In the creation of a system of federal reserve banks a beginning should be made with the present central reserve cities, additions to be made by the federal reserve board gradually as in their judgment conditions warrant them. Meanwhile the facilities required by other centers could, in our judgment, be adequately supplied by branches.

Urges Redemption of Demand

The assumption of the obligation to redeem the federal reserve notes might embarrass the treasury in critical times, the committee says. It regards this provision as unnecessary, as the requirement of payment on demand at all reserve banks is ample provision for redemption.

As to the $500,000,000 limitation on reserve notes plus the amount of national bank notes retired the report says:

"It seems to the committee that such a limitation is unnecessary and undesirable; unnecessary because if the notes be issued against commercial paper only and their automatic redemption be provided for there can be no danger of redundancy and inflation, to prevent which this limitation obviously was imposed; and undesirable because at the present rate of increase of our population and production the additional $500,000,000 of currency would be absorbed into permanent circulation in a few years and the elasticity which it is the purpose of this measure to secure would be rendered impossible."

Objects to Interest on Notes

The power of the reserve board to charge interest on notes supplied to the reserve banks "copies the unfortunate idea of the Aldrich-Vreeland act of 1908." The tax, says the committee, would fall heaviest on those who must meet pay-rolls and on country districts where more currency is used than in large financial centers. But the power to control the interest rate on loans by the reserve banks the committee regards as necessary to the prevention of the inflation of credit at its source.

Instead of turning the surplus earnings of the reserve banks into the treasury the committee suggests that "it would be desirable to use these surplus earnings, first, for the establishment of a safety fund to take the place of the government's guaranty of the notes, the excess after providing for the establishment and maintenance of such fund to be devoted to the gradual liquidation of the existing demand obligations of the United States."

Among the signers of this report are John V. Farwell, E. D. Hulbert, and Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin of Chicago.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

In our letter to the THE CHICAGO BANKER last week we noted the unsatisfactory conditions of crops in many counties in the central and southern parts of the state which are in sharp contrast to the area of better crops in western and northern Illinois. We cannot add much in the way of encouragement in the conditions now prevailing in the central part of the state except to state that the entire situation is more serious than it has been in many years before. Corn is not doing well, owing to the fact that the only rainfall in many counties has been limited to a few showers and moisture is needed immediately. Corn is firing and is now in a most critical stage of its growth.

The harvest of oats has given a yield of from ten to twenty bushels per acre while many fields were not cut. Wheat has been much better and in general the wheat yields have been fairly satisfactory. Pastures and hay have been most conspicuous by their absence.

The area of the state generally known as the "corn belt" has suffered the most prolonged and severe drought in the memory of the "oldest inhabitant." North of a line drawn across the state near Bloomington conditions are much better. Farmers and bankers in the dry counties are complaining loudly over their misfortunes this year as they have been "spoiled" by many years of bountiful crops. The short crop is only temporary and seems in no way to injure land values or faith in the abiding wealth of Illinois soil.

U. of I. Buys Land Worth $256,000.

One of the largest real estate deals handled recently in central Illinois was the purchase by the trustees of the University of Illinois of land adjoining the experimental farms of the institution for $256,000. Of the land purchased 160 acres were owned by the heirs of the late S. H. Busey, one of the founders of Busey's Bank of Urbana, which was taken over at the rate of $1000 an acre, or $160,000. Four bank presidents, sons of S. H. Busey and heads of banks in Champaign county, will sign the deed. These men are Matthew W., John W., George W., and James B. Busey, presidents of banks in Urbana, Penfield, Fisher and Mahomet.

The University purchased also a tract of land from James S. McCollough for $600 an acre, as it is located farther from the University than the Busey land. Mr. McCollough was for sixteen years auditor of public accounts in this state and is well known to Illinois state bankers especially. He owns about 600 acres of land near Urbana, where he now resides. The land purchased by the University is located south of Urbana and adjoins the University experimental farms upon the east. Part of the land will be devoted to horticulture and part to dairying. The trustees of the institution are thus providing extended opportunities for agricultural study in the future.

Collier Written up in "Collier's"

The work of the Soil and Crop Improvement Association of Kankakee county has assumed so much importance that Collier's Weekly, in a recent issue, has given a two-page discussion to the work of the association and of its director, J. C. Collier, in improving the soil and the country life of Kankakee county. Mr. Collier is kept "fairly busy," as he already has been booked for 216 visits to farms, at the rate of twenty a week, which will take his time up to September 20th, besides answering letters some weeks at the rate of 700 letters per week. But he is said "to rejoice in work." He prizes especially a letter from a prominent citizen of Kankakee county which closes as follows:

"I am writing this to make it the occasion for expressing to you my growing belief that the work you are doing is of inestimable value to our county. And the value of it will not be limited to larger crop yields. In the future it will be measured in the greater attractiveness of country life for our boys and girls and the better citizenship that inevitably will follow improvement in agriculture."

B. F. Harris Writes for "World's Work"

In the August number of the World's Work, B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign, former president of the Illinois Bankers Association and prominently identified with the movement generally known as the "banker-farmer" movement, has written an article discussing the growth of the great plan from its beginning up to the present time. Bankers who are interested in the now national topics of the conservation of the soil, the improvement of rural life, the advancement of country schools, the making of better roads and the demand for improved rural credit will find this article to be timely and helpful. Mr. Harris is one of the group of American bankers who have caught a vision of the better rural life of the future and they are bending every effort to promote the welfare of the "essential and the final source of American prosperity," which is the soil and its tillers.

Stable Investments

It is an undoubted fact that the most truly conservative investment is the one which never fluctuates in price or depreciates in value, but remains fixed and secure at par under any and all conditions. The more nearly an investment approaches perfect stability in value, the more completely is it free from any trace of speculative element. By its very nature, a carefully chosen First Mortgage Loan on improved real estate is a non-fluctuating investment. When divided up into a series of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, the investment loses none of the conservative features of the mortgage. The investor who purchases this class of security rests secure in the knowledge that his investment is free from influence by adverse business or financial conditions, or political or tariff changes. We own and offer a great variety of First Mortgages secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago real estate, maturing serially in two to ten years. We have purchased these bonds with our own funds after careful investigation, and recommend them in the highest terms as safe and attractive investments for income. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000.

of the Illinois group meetings in May. The Chicago boys were indeed a lively bunch but not so lively but that any one or all can "come back" to any city visited and receive an open-arm welcome. "The Rainbow Party" made many friends among down-state bankers. The Chicago boys have sent out this booklet "as an appreciation of the hospitality and good fellowship extended to them on their trip" and down-state bankers consider the "Greetings" as a pleasant reminder of pleasant days spent at the Illinois group meetings of 1913 held in Galva, Peoria, Rochelle, Crystal Lake, Bloomington, Mattoon, Pana, Quincy and Alton.

J. M. Allen Manages Large Estate

J. M. Allen, formerly assistant cashier of the National Bank of Decatur and more recently secretary of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, has retired from the latter position to become manager of the estate of the late David S. Shellabarger, a former president of the National Bank of Decatur and its largest stockholder. Having been closely connected with the banking interests of the late Mr. Shellabarger, Mr. Allen will be ably prepared to take charge of his large estate.

Farmers Organize County Congress

The farmers of Sangamon county recently assembled at the St. Nicholas Hotel in Springfield for their first banquet and "get-together." The Sangamon County Farmers' Congress is the name of the organization. "Co-operation and advancement were the war-cries" and banker-farmers note with pleasure the progress of the farmer as a business man and as a social being. The "rube" type, so often the subject of a jest in metropolitan newspapers, is hardly to be found in Illinois to-day and in his place is a business man keenly alert to the real progress of the day. The city newspaper writer, with an urban point of view only, who attempts to place the Illinois farmer in a ludicrous position, should take a vacation trip to some good country town and talk carburetor, inner tubes, silo or commercial fertilizer with the farmers and he will find that the old county-fair type of farmers of years ago has passed away, that the Illinois farmer is rapidly becoming a business man of a high type, is well known by good observers, especially in those parts of the state where farmers occupy their own farms and where tenant conditions do not so largely prevail.

Illinois Notes

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit for the organization of the Peoples State of Marengo with capital stock of $25,000, the permit being given to D. M. Wright, Ernest C. Robb and David R. Joslyn.

J. E. Reese, vice-president of the H. N. Schuyler State Bank of Pana, has just returned with his wife from an automobile trip to Winona Lake, Ind. George A. DeLong, president of the Bank of Foosland, and C. B. DeLong, president of the First Bank of Fithian, his brother, have taken extensive automobile trips to eastern points.

John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston announces that he will become the president of the Equitable Casualty and Bank Deposit Guaranty Company of Columbus, Ohio. The company is a new one and makes a business of insuring banks against burglary and hold-up. He will soon go to Columbus but his family will continue to live in Hoopeston.

Earl W. Butler, the "boy banker" whose youthful antics caused the ruin of three small banks in Fulton and Peoria counties in the autumn of 1910 and who has been residing in the Joliet penitentiary since, is making a determined effort to secure his release by legal technicalities.

The Havana National of Havana is occupying temporary quarters while the new building which it is now erecting is being completed.

The trustees of the Blue Mound Bank, which failed last September, have announced in letters to the creditors of the bank that obligations will be met in full.

D. Newton Blodgett, Charles L. Boren and B. F. Towse have received a permit to incorporate the Brighton State of Brighton with the customary capital in towns of that class of $25,000.

The burial vault of the Belt family in the cemetery at Bunker Hill was broken into, the thieves cutting through the bars on the windows in a manner showing expert use of tools. The apartments containing the bodies of Mrs. Helen N. Belt and of J. H. Belt, the latter the head of a bank which recently failed, were broken into and the caskets were exposed. Other apartments were broken into, screws in caskets were removed and other vandalism committed. It is not known whether there is any connection between the incident of the closed bank and the attack upon the burial vaults.

Russell Atwood Morrow, aged seventeen years and son of H. C. Morrow, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company of St. Louis and president of the Whitehall Sewer Company of Whitehall, Ill., was killed under a trailer street car in St. Louis. The lad's home was in Whitehall.

Willis Evans, executive secretary of the Peoria Association of Commerce, and Mrs. Evans have returned home from Chicago where Mr. Evans conferred with Eldridge F. Ferguson, chairman of the committee on co-operation with down-state cities and with Herbert F. Miller, business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Preparations are being made for a large convention of executive secretaries of Illinois commercial bodies in Chicago in November.

FIRST TRUST TAKES MORE SPACE

The First Trust and Savings of Chicago has taken over the corner space, formerly occupied by Beachey & Lawlor, and will occupy enlarged quarters about September 1st. The new section will be used by the bond department with an entrance from the Dearborn Street quarter of the building. The addition gives all the frontage on both streets, excepting a twenty-foot store space and the building entrances.

MORE POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS

Additional postoffices in Illinois and adjoining states which will receive postal savings after September 2d have been announced by Postmaster-General Burleson. They are:

Illinois—Cicero, North Chicago, Brookport, Riverside, Melvin, Rutland, Scales Mound, Sherrard, Tiskilwa.

Indiana—Notre Dame, Duggar, Mentone, Petersburg.

Iowa—Cedar Falls, Corning, Bayard, Breda, Chelsea, Hospers, Kalona, Lewis, Lineville, Zearing.

Michigan—St. Clair Heights, Sheridan.

Wisconsin—Friendship, Shiocton.

When this action goes into effect all postoffices of the first three classes will receive postal savings deposits.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

President A. J. Frame of the Waukesha National projected six posers at President Wilson, Senator R. L. Owen, and Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the senate and house finance committees in a communication concerning the currency bill which he sent to the three this week. The following are Mr. Frame's questions anent the bill:

"First. Will the sponsors of this bill tell us where the banks are going to get even a part of the deficiency of cash reserves required under this bill and still maintain sufficient city bank balances with which to do business, without calling loans or selling their best securities?"

"Second. As the only market for the world's standard of reserves is outside the United States, would not any attempt to obtain even a small part of the required amount abroad seriously aggravate an already overstrained condition the world over?"

"Third. If even one-quarter of the bank of this country should call loans under the operation of this bill, would not the effect be to raise interest rates generally and to breed instead of prevent or cure a panic?"

"Fourth. In all fairness why should the banks take from their reserves of cash, upon which more or less interest is paid, to the extent of three-fourths of the total and deposit these vast sums in federal or other depositories, without interest on four-fifths of it, and then in turn borrow on rediscounts from these same deposited funds, paying interest therefor? To turn over interest-bearing securities is the only way to replenish cash reserves. Is that equity? Is that relief in the day of trouble? Is that the true mission of a reserve bank? Sound logic would seem to indicate that it is not.

"Fifth. How many state banks or trust companies would voluntarily accept the bill as outlined?"

"Sixth. How many national banks would retain their charters if compelled to accept it?"

Mr. Frame continues: "I assert the true mission of a reserve bank is to mobilize an extra quantity of cash, but not to be used in normal periods, and from which banks in abnormal periods can obtain rediscounts for cash, to the end that cash suspension by banks may be avoided, and to the end that aid may be given to legitimate interests when trouble threatens.

"An interest rate above normal should be charged to this extra cash, to the end that as soon as the strain ceases the cash will return to its reservoir ready for future troubles, and to the end that currency and credit inflation be avoided.

"If less than $300,000,000 clearing house certificates relieved the situation in 1907, why should we deposit over $1,100,000 of our reserve cash in federal reserve banks while at the same time these reserve banks are empowered to issue an additional $500,000,000 of government notes under this bill, presumably for relief of banks when trouble threatens?"

"If the monetary commission bill was monopolistic in character, what must we say of this one? If the powers that be cannot give the country some staple, effective remedy to prevent cash suspension by banks, which occurs once in a decade or two, through some central agency with limited powers in normal times, then why not enlarge the powers of our clearing houses to give us relief through rediscounts, to state as well as national banks, on a uniform form of note, under some plan similar to the Aldrich-Vreeland act, when trouble threatens; then give us a rest from further agitation, and in all human probability our peaceful progress would soon be restored. If that was accomplished general cash suspension by banks would be avoided in the future. Of general agitation on revolutionary lines it would seem that we already had an oversupply.

"As a country banker who is not influenced by any city banker I am profoundly impressed that if the powers that be desire a continuance of that power they will heed the warning that the delicate machinery of the credit must not be revolutionized, and that the best and most democratic banking system the world ever knew should be preserved. The responsibility rests with our statesmen. Will they measure up to the occasion?"

versy was reopened this week after several sessions last week at which very little was accomplished. President Joseph Uihlein, who returned from New York to appear at the hearing, deplored the fact that the bank had been drawn into what he characterized as a "political squabble" over an office that happens to be occupied by a socialist," referring to Tax Commissioner Arnold, whose assessment of the Second Ward Savings stock last year was the basis of one of the charges upon which impeachment was ordered by the special council committee.

Announce Prizes in Essay Contest

Complete reports of the verdicts of judges in the Wisconsin Bankers Association prize essay contest on "Possibilities of Undeveloped Wisconsin" were announced this week, as follows: First, $60, to Thomas Barker, Oshkosh; second, $40, to H. W. Johnson, Superior; third, $25, to Walter Brown, Marinette; fourth, $15, to Laura Greening, West Allis; fifth, $10, to Vera Ritchie, Lancaster. According to Secretary George D. Bartlett of the association many essays that might have been prize winners were disqualified by noncompliance with the rules, which stipulated that the essays be read at the school commencements of the respective contestants.

Wisconsin Notes

Thirty-nine directors of the three fire insurance companies of Milwaukee have been formally notified of the board of review's action of last week in assessing against them stock amounting to $6,000,000 for the last two years. No further action will be taken by the board until the directors make formal complaint. Thirty-nine are all residents of Milwaukee, non-residents being beyond the jurisdiction of the board.

The following officers were elected at the annual meeting of the Farmers State Bank of Minong: President, A. E. Sawnsen; vice-president, L. C. Stadler; cashier, Fred Jenks.

The capital stock of $25,000 has been subscribed for a new bank to be located a Ridgeland. The stock is all taken by local men and will be strictly a local enterprise. Work will soon be commenced on a new banking building and it is planned to have the organization perfected and ready for business in time to take care of the fall and holiday trade.

Ridgeland is making substantial improvements this year and is going to be a mightily lively town in another year or two.

Commissioner C. N. O'Hare of the Superior finance department, announced that $65,000 worth of general bonds would be placed on sale by the city of Superior on August 1st. The bonds will be in $100 denominations and will be sold direct to the public.

TO KEEP FARMERS POSTED.

Washington, July 23d.—Secretary Houston announced to-day that hereafter the department of agriculture would send a weekly letter to its 35,000 township and 2,800 county correspondents of the department, giving the latest agricultural information of value to the farmer. The letters will treat of crop conditions and prices, the discovery of new plant or animal pests, pure food decisions and those which affect users of irrigated land and the national forests, and any other work of the department which can benefit the farmer.

The letter is to be sent weekly, the secretary said, so that the news may reach the farmers promptly. The Crop Reporter, a monthly publication which has been issued by the department for some years, is to be discontinued, Secretary Houston having decided that it reached the farmers too late to be of any practical use.

As the correspondents who gather crop news for the department are in constant contact with the farmers in their communities, the secretary decided they would be the best medium for the dissemination of the official weekly information.

TO STUDY ALDRICH PLAN IN BRAZIL

Prominent parties in Brazil are inquiring for copies of the Aldrich plan of banking reform. They regard the subject as certain to become prominent in that country in the near future. Recent high money rates there, by which commerce and manufacturing have been handicapped, owing to the heavy demands for agriculture and public improvements, have given a stimulus to public interest in the banking and currency question.

Ira L. Woodward, cashier First National, Staunton, Ill., dropped dead at the bank on Friday of last week. Heart trouble is given as the cause.

BANK STARTS FORECLOSURE PROCEEDINGS

Foreclosure proceedings against the Denver Reservoir & Irrigation Company for $3,200,000 have been begun in the United States District Court by the Continental and Commercial Trust & Savings Bank. The company was organized in 1907. Bonds to the amount of $3,200,000 were sold to 4,650 persons throughout the country. They were to bear 6 per cent interest, due May 1st of each year after 1910. The Continental and Commercial Trust & Savings, was chosen trustee by the bondholders.

A mortgage was given on the holdings of the company in Colorado as surety for the payment of the bonds and the interest. No interest was paid in 1910, 1911 or 1912. In July, 1912, the company became insolvent, and Arthur Day of Denver was chosen receiver. The company was unable to pay the interest due May 1st of this year.

CURRENCY BILL DUE FOR ACTION AUGUST ELEVENTH

Washington, July 28th.—Pledged to secrecy as to further action on the Glass-Owen currency bill, the democrats of the house banking and currency committee announced to-day a harmonious session and an agreement to send a currency bill to a democratic caucus August 11th. Republican members of the committee will be permitted to study the completed work of their democratic colleagues early next week, the majority of the democrats having determined to end their bickerings and dissensions with a final vote on the approval of the bill by the end of the present week.

WHEAT YIELDS ON UNIVERSITY FARM

The wheat on the University farm at Champaign, Ill., has been harvested. The yields this year are unusually irregular, due chiefly to the drought, to injuries by the Hessian fly, and to soil treatment. The soil treatment has shown marked effects. These three factors, combined with varietal influences, have produced the greatest variations ever before observed on the farm. The yields of wheat varied from 11 bushels to 61.4 bushels per acre, an actual difference of a little over fifty bushels.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money continued quite fair during the past week and again came from all classes of customers. Rates were firm at 6 to 7 per cent in extreme on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by brokers at 6½ to 7 per cent.

Hawes Urges Larger Clearing House

Richard S. Hawes of the Third National, St. Louis, is urging the establishment of a country clearing house in New Orleans. The New Orleans clearing house has taken up the suggestion with the idea of procuring relief for the transit departments, which are said to be operating at a loss. The clearing house has decided to defer action on the matter pending the enactment of currency reform legislation in congress, as assurance was received that a provision would be made for country clearances.

Urge Retirement of Bonds

A statement of what form, in the opinion of the members of the St. Louis clearing house association, the pending currency legislation ought to take was issued Monday by a committee representing St. Louis banks. The statement says the banking and currency bill now before congress has commendable features and "some serious defects." Demanding immediate purchase and retirement of $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of government 2 per cent bonds as a means of restoring these bonds to par, was the recommendation made to the two banking and currency committees of congress. It also was suggested that the government should forego interest on government deposits secured by 2 per cent bonds. St. Louis bankers favored immediate currency legislation, but suggested a number of modifications to the administration bill. They objected to the federal control feature, saying it was taxation of contribution without representation. They recommended that the reserve board be increased from seven to eleven members, the four additional members to be chosen from a list of nominees, each reserve bank in the twelve sections of the country being entitled to submit the name of one eligible candidate. They also held the government should not issue currency. Notes, they said, should be issued by reserve agents for all other bank members in their respective localities. Objection also was made to the bill in that it would increase the reserve to be carried by central banks.

St. Louis banks favored limiting the number of reserve banks to the minimum. They also favored that provision of the bill that would permit foreign branches rediscounts, deposit of government moneys and the mobilization of reserves.

International Life Absorbs New Firm

Absorption of the California National Life Insurance Company of San Diego has been approved by officers and directors of the International Life Insurance Company of St. Louis. The California Life has insurance in force of about $2,000,000, which will increase the insurance in force of the International Life to about $37,000,000. With the taking over of the California National, the capital stock of the International Life will be increased to about $387,500, its surplus to about $360,000 and its assets to about $3,100,000. The International now is licensed to do business in twenty-five states and gives to St. Louis one of the largest life insurance companies in the West.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

Perryville Banker in Europe

R. L. Gurney, manager of the savings department of the Commonwealth Trust, St. Louis, has received a post card from J. H. Kiesler, cashier of the Perry County Bank, Perryville, Mo., who is touring Europe with his wife. The view was of pupils going home from school in Meyhausen, Germany, where the people still dress as they did hundreds of years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Kiesler will soon start for home.

Jeanette Investment Company Formed

The Jeanette Investment Company, composed of Eugene H. Angert, Harry R. Hawes, Lon O. Hocker and Edward Labitzke, has applied for articles of incorporation to deal in stocks, bonds and commercial paper. The capital is $15,000 and all except three shares is held by Mr. Angert.

Begin Work on New Building

The Farmers and Merchants Trust, St. Louis, has begun work on the site of its new building at the southeast corner of Grand and Gravois avenues. It is to be a three-story banking and office building. The lower floor will be adapted to banking purposes and the upper floors will be divided into offices for rent. The building will have elevator service and all the modern appointments. It is expected to be completed by the first of next year.

Russell Morrow Killed

Russell A. Morrow, son of H. C. Morrow, vice-president of the Bankers Trust, St. Louis, was killed under the wheels of a trailer car in St. Louis on Wednesday of last week. He was soon to have been awarded a Carnegie hero medal for bravery in rescuing a boy companion from drowning six weeks ago at Whitehall, Ill.

Laclede Gas Earnings Show Increase

The Laclede Gas Light Company reports for the six months ended June 30th as follows: Gross earnings, $2,282,263, an increase of $79,- 184; operating expenses, including maintenance and taxes, $1,115,807, an increase of $39,643; net income, $1,166,454, an increase of $39,457; depreciation, $137,976, an increase of $5,582; net earnings, $1,028,478, an increase of $33,965.

New Risk Concern Formed

The Missouri National Fire Insurance Company of Joplin with an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000, received its charter Monday and will begin the immediate sale of stock. This is the second large stock company to organize in Missouri since the foreign stock companies quit business. The company will sell its stock at $200 a share, thus creating a $1,000,000 surplus, less 10 per cent commissions permitted for sale of stock. The stockholders are: Clarence Mathews, Maysville, Ky.; J. H. Pollock, James E. Nugent, Donald W. Johnson, L. Newton Wylder, James A. Aylward, Stanley Watson of Kansas City; A. Braithwaite, W. S. Watson and B. F. Tatem of Joplin; Roy Wilhoft of Louisville and Ben B. Hointz of Maysville, Ky.

New Missouri Bank

A new bank is being established at Cardwell, Mo., to be called the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Cardwell. Its capital is $12,500. The incorporators, all of whom live in Cardwell, are G. F. Miller, J. G. Birchett, P. A. Fitzgerald, J. G. Williamson, Charles Riggs, N. H. Summitt, James F. Bishop, C. C. Redman and James D. Hicklin. F. C. Parks, formerly cashier of the Bank of Holcomb, Holcomb, Mo., started the new institution.

Bankers Pass Through Warrensburg

J. T. M. Johnston, president of the National Reserve Bank, Kansas City, with W. L. Schell of the Glasgow Savings and John Holloway of the Boone County National of Columbia, passed through Warrensburg and many other cities last week on their way by automobile from Columbia to Kansas City. "The East may view the coming of autumn with alarm," said Mr. Holloway. "Missouri doesn't. Its corn crop and its wheat crop are too large for tariffs, adverse legislation, insurance laws or the unsettled money conditions of a few of the eastern cities to affect them. We have talked with bankers. They expect the farmers will pour in deposits to them this summer and fall surpassing that of any previous year. The farmers have put by a wheat crop that is a record breaker. It is not uncommon to hear of yields of thirty to thirty-five bushels to the acre and few fields will fall below twenty bushels to the acre. The corn crop went through the early drought with but little damage and the present heat is making early corn. The late corn, however, may suffer unless soaking rains fall within the next week or two. But nobody is complaining of the corn conditions. Clover, hay and oats conditions are rather poor, it is true, and this may cause many farmers to attempt the growth of alfalfa next year. Cattle and all live stock prices are high. Unfortunately there is a shortage in stock. But many farmers will not dispose of their corn. They will feed it to cattle which they will sell early next spring."

T. B. Holland's Condition Unchanged

The condition of T. B. Holland, president of the Holland Banking Company, Springfield, who has been ill for two weeks, remains practically unchanged. He is suffering from no disease but rather from a general decline and breakdown. While his condition is serious, unless there is a development now unforeseen his death is not immediately expected, although little hope of his final recovery is given.

Missouri Bank Deposits Swell

Deposits aggregating $464,655,630.93 were piled up in the state and national banks and trust companies of Missouri on June 14, 1913, according to figures obtained from State Bank Commissioner Mitchell. This is enough to give to every man, woman and child in Missouri, $141.08. Between June 14, 1912, and June 14, 1913, the people of Missouri increased their deposits in the banking institutions $20,529,784.46. This increase amounts to more than $6 for every person in Missouri if evenly divided.

The total resources of Missouri banks on June 14th were $846,919,682.95. The total resources of St. Louis financial institutions on that date were $204,555,404.46, and of those of Kansas City, $39,602,721.45.

The heavy disparity between the amount of money on deposit in the banks and trust companies and the amount returned for taxation is indicated by the fact that the state board of equalization fixed the total valuation of money, notes, bonds, etc., for this year's taxes at only $106,521,905.

The total valuation for taxes of all personal property, including live stock, corporate property, the capital stock of banks, and all money, notes and bonds, household furniture, etc., for this year is but $355,430,270. There was on deposit in the thirty-seven banks and trust companies of St. Louis on June 14th, a total of $143,248,483.40; in the nineteen of Kansas City, $26,495,616.12; in the 1,227 of the state at large outside of the two cities, $146,900,922.09. These deposits included individual, time, demand and savings deposits. The people had on deposit in the 58 trust companies of Missouri $112,133,142.74; in the incorporated state banks, $208,758,475.51; in the national banks, $141,308,346.68, and in private banks, $2,454,666. The total number of banks and trust companies in Missouri on June 14th was 1,283, an increase of 53 since June 14, 1912.

Comparative figures compiled by the bank commissioner indicate a slight falling off in the business of the national banks of Missouri. The gains in loans and deposits are upon the side of the state banks and trust companies. Commissioner Mitchell's figures show that upon June 14th the increase in the loans of state banks and trust companies amounted to $23,769,069.43, while the increase of state banks and trust companies and national banks together amounted to $22,455,125.24. The gain in the volume of deposits of state banks and trust companies for the year was $22,762,555.79. This increase is reduced to $20,529,784.46 when national banks are counted in. The state banks and trust companies show an increase amounting to $1,098,742 in surpluses and undivided profits over June 14, 1912, while for state banks, trust companies and national banks a decrease of $4,852,779.33 is indicated.

Missouri Notes

The Peoples Bank, the third bank for Ava, Mo., opened for business recently. It has a capital of $15,000. C. H. Burdett, is president; J. F. Holstine, vice-president; V. A. Dobyms, cashier, and Marshall Campbell, secretary.

The Home Savings Bank, Fulton, is putting in a new white enameled brick front.

J. N. Magruder, has resigned his position as assistant cashier of the Paris (Mo.) National on account of failing health.

Sue Helena Bankers

The first action on the part of the depositors of the Bank of Helena, to place the blame in connection with the failure of the bank was taken recently when two suits were filed against E. C. Horner, president, and J. S. Horner, cashier of the bank. The suits were filed by H. P. Grant and J. H. Grant for $41,891.95 and by G. M. Worthy and Miss Alice Worthy for $3,167. These depositors seek to hold the officers of the bank personally liable for the amount of their deposits. They allege mismanagement of the affairs of the bank.

Oklahoma Bank Deposits Smaller

While the number of national banks in Oklahoma increased from 314 at the close of business April 4th to 325 at the close of business June 4th, the deposits did not increase in a corresponding way. The report of the banks in the state for June 4th show deposits of $67,423,993.81, only about $100,000 more than the report of April 4th. On the same date state banks showed individual deposits of $39,732,834.93, about $5,000,000 more than in 1912. State banks show a capital stock of nearly $9,000,000 while nationals show more than $14,000,000. The average per cent reserve held by state banks was 36.2 while that of the nationals was 36.7.

Changes in Oklahoma Bank

Frank J. Wikoff, president of the Tradesmen State of Oklahoma City, has purchased stock in the Citizens State of Lawton, Okla., and has been elected president of the bank to succeed J. Connor, who has been president for the past three years. The other officers of the bank are: Riley S. Smith, vice-president; W. F. Barber, cashier, and T. R. Keegan, assistant cashier, all of whom have been connected with the bank for several years.

Bank Case in Court

The failure of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Sapulpa, Okla., is again brought up in a suit filed in the Oklahoma county district court by the Portland Cement Company, asking judgment against the state banking board for $960.23. It is claimed by the plaintiff that it deposited this amount with the bank before it was taken in charge by the banking board, and although demands have been made for it, the board has never paid it over to the cement company.

Bankers Favor More Salary

To boost the salary of the state commissioner of banking and insurance is the proposal of Texas bankers and a resolution calling on all Texas bankers to use their influence to secure action by the state legislature looking to a salary of not less than $6,000 for the state commissioner and not less than $2,500 for state bank examiners was adopted at the banquet tendered in Dallas by Texas bankers to B. L. Gill, who recently resigned. At the close of the banquet Mr. Gill was presented with a set of cuff buttons.

Texas Cotton to Set Mark

There now seems to be little question of Texas producing a record-breaking cotton crop this year. Some of the revised estimates place the prospective yield as high as 5,500,000 bales. If it should reach 5,000,000 bales, it will be larger by several hundred thousand bales than last year's crop, which was the biggest the state ever produced. The increase of acreage in Texas last year was 395,000 acres over that of the preceding year, while the increase this year is approximately 850,000 acres over 1912. The total cotton production in the United States last year was 14,090,863 bales, at $920,630,000. It is claimed by men who are familiar with the condition of the Texas crop at this time that it will not be surprising if the state's yield of the staple this season amounts to one-third of the total production in the United States. If the recommendation of Gov. O. B. Colquitt to the legislature is carried out the 4,000 convicts in the two penitentiaries of the state will be set to raising cotton. It is proposed by Gov. Colquitt that the state sell its 30,000 acres of sugar cane plantations in South Texas and invest the money derived therefrom in cotton farms in what is known as the "black land" belt of north Texas. He believes the convicts may bring more money to the state raising cotton than they have been doing growing sugar cane.

BUSINESS ORGANIZATION AND COMBINATION

Every business man and every banker who caters to business men should study the latest Macmillan book on economics. It is entitled "Business Organization and Combination" and primarily is intended for use in colleges and universities. Yet its author, Lewis H. Haney, professor of economics in the University of Texas, has had a large experience in such authorships as well as in teaching the subject and has not written over the heads of the public. He has a string of successful books to his credit and in this one has put forth an effort to analyze the evolution and nature of business organization in the United States and to give a tentative solution of the corporation and trust problems. This field is almost as new to the revellers in economic thought as the continent was to Columbus in 1492. It is a new, strong development of American business instinct lead by such geniuses as the world had not previously known. Numerous concrete illustrations of business formations are given, such as the U. S. Steel Company, which took over 170 corporations.

The reorganization of the Rock Island, the Alton and other examples of "how it has been done" are given clearly and instructively. You couldn't collect the actual proofs and illustrations found in this book for one thousand times its cost.

Real study has been given by Dr. Haney to try to make the corporation a more desirable citizen that at present it is rated. He shows that a new form of organization is greatly needed before this can happen. The author believes a limited-liability association would neatly fill the present large gap between partnership and corporation. This is a strong and interesting feature of the splendid work. The "trust" is handed the carbolic in full doses. The "trusts" are styled as among the evils of combination. Their workings are shown plainly and if the university students are being taught these evils in all the states the end is soon. Such thinkers as Dr. Haney are molding the public opinion of the next generation. He is much more definite and concrete than most writers have been upon the subject. There is proof as well as argument. The general scheme of the work is as follows: First comes a series of chapters describing and analyzing the various forms of business organization in such a way as to bring out the centuries-long evolution which has molded them. Then the corporate form, being clearly dominant, the life history of a corporation is set forth in a series of chapters which describe in some detail the main events: promotion, underwriting, reorganization, and the like. Finally, great evils having appeared in corporate organization, the question of public policy is raised, and an attempt at a comprehensive and scientific solution of that question is made. For two general reasons a wide range of topics has been covered: First such a treatment meets the needs of the general reader; second, it should make the book available to a greater number of instructors. Instructors differ in the scope of the work done in their courses in business organization and allied topics; and, in using this book, one instructor can omit the part which deals with public policy; another, the discussion of the simpler forms of organization; a third, the account of internal organization, promotion, etc.

It is a book for the live banker, especially if he have a son with opinions in the formative state. When bankers get a little further along with good roads, good schools and better farming they can take up corporation abuses and eliminate them. If any one can bankers can. If any one should they should.

A GOVERNMENT UNIVERSITY FOR FARMERS

Congressman Mann is sending the agricultural bulletins issued by the government, such as he thinks will help them, to his Hyde Park constituents in this city. Those already received are very helpful, for the congressman himself is an expert gardener and landscape artist. Since the bankers got into the game and gave the department its needed publicity its scope has been enlarged greatly. A leading Washington daily, taking note of what the press of the country is saying about it, was lead to remark:

No other class of citizens receives equal assistance. The department of agriculture is virtually a university conducted for the farmer's benefit. * * * He can learn how to get the most out of his land, how to keep his hogs from disease, and how to care for his crops. Incidentally, the government is now about to teach him how to market his crops, Secretary Houston having established a division of markets for that purpose.

And it all leads to more intelligent, progressive farming. If it can keep the young men on the farm the result will be grand. Now the boy rushes to the city, goes with the railroad company or into a factory. Some go into banking even, or into business, and many into the overcrowded professions. Thousands are digging upon the city streets amidst offensive smells and poisonous gases rather than to work in the open, free air of the country on a farm.

Enhancing the production and increasing the soil fertility is not all. The country life instinct must be cultivated. Homes must be improved and surroundings made more beautiful. The foolish style and society papers and the useless finishing school get in their work on the girls. They make them discontented and at war with their surroundings. They, too, rush to the city and in thousands of cases come upon evil ways. Whatever it is that drives the farmer, the farmer boy, and the farmer's daughter into the city is the real aim of the department of agriculture. Let that "ceaseless longing" for the overcrowded cities be put in a class with the boll weevil and other pests and the true uplift of country life will be under way.

BANKERS TAKE ACTION

At Minneapolis, Omaha, St. Louis, and at other points, the bankers have held meetings to discuss the currency bill. In most cases formal reports have been drawn up and forwarded to the committees of congress. Good-tempered, helpful criticism, taking the form of comment or resolutions, in the main fully describes the memorials. There were those who wanted to use strong language, and a few who thought personalities in order. At Omaha those distinguished peace-makers—McHugh, Goebel and Hamilton—toned down the final result and similar wise counsel prevailed elsewhere. From the points named went no harsh language, no personal reflections. The full ethics in the case were preserved intact. The spirit of the bankers has been without a falter, as has been so splendidly advised in the Chicago Tribune in the case of Mexico. The editorial was captioned, "Trust the President."

The policy of the administration respecting Mexico has had the approval of public opinion. Jingoism and selfish interest have tried to discredit it without success. As tension grows and critical events once more loom up, there is only one rule the level-headed American public can afford to follow.

Trust the president.

The president is better informed as to all factors of the situation than any editor or politician. He has the fullest knowledge, the fullest powers, and the fullest responsibilities. His will, his intelligence, and his patriotism can be relied upon. He is on the bridge. He is in command.

Trust the president.

This is good public policy and will get better results than carping fault-finding or bitter personalities. Do all you can for a wise, helpful banking law, based upon economic truths and patriotism. Details in the end are likely to be entirely satisfactory.

GEORGE WOODRUFF RETURNS

George Woodruff of Joliet, who was a member of the American commission on agricultural co-operation and finance, has returned from abroad after having traveled with the commission and studying European methods. The commission has made public a letter detailing some of the conditions discovered in its investigation. Portions of this letter are as follows:

Land Mortgage Credits Firm

"Land mortgage credit has been organized so as to place a collective security back of bonds issued by land mortgage societies, in contrast with the system of marketing individual loans upon individual mortgages.

"Without discussing the form of organization employed for this purpose, it may be stated that these land mortgage institutions bring to European farmers low interest rates, the privilege of repaying loans in small fixed annual installments extending over a term of years—in some cases as long as seventy-five years under the amortization plan, although provision for earlier payment is made if the borrower so desires—protection from advance in interest rates, and the practical elimination of commission charges.

Government and Societies

"Many of these personal credit societies and land meeting associations are fostered by government grants, loans, or special provisions of law. Mortgage bonds issued by commercial banks and by private joint stock land mortgage banks sell substantially on the same basis, with like securities issued by government favored institutions, and both classes of banks are recognized as needful in the development and conservation of agricultural resources.

"In many instances private and commercial banks purchase the securities of land mortgage associations. Experience has demonstrated that such land mortgage bonds are liquid assets.

"Savings and trust funds are frequently invested in the securities of such mortgage institutions under sanction of law. Loans up to 50 or even 75 per cent are made on lands of dependable value and are considered safe and conservative and compare favorably with provincial and government bonds.

"The organizations for production and distribution of farm products follow co-operative lines. Farm products are sold by the producer at a relatively higher price and are bought by the consumer at a relatively lower price because the cost of distribution is considerably lowered by co-operative marketing, which results also in improving the quality and uniformity of farm products and in promoting more business-like methods in farm operation."

In letters to the governors of their respective states the members say that short-time personal credit, and long-time land mortgages are the two features by which the European farmers get capital. Short-term paper bears from 4 to 5½ per cent interest. The personal credit organizations are co-operative.

The cost of distribution of products is lowered by co-operative marketing. Larger co-operative efforts on the part of American farmers are recommended. European systems, to become available for American practice, will have to be adjusted to local conditions.

TO HEAD LAW REVISION COMMITTEE

Announcement was made at the New York state banking department that the Van Tuyl commission appointed under a law passed by the last legislature to revise the state banking laws was completed by the acceptance of an appointment to the commission by Hon. A. Barton Hepburn, chairman of the board of directors of the Chase National.

When Superintendent Van Tuyl asked Mr. Hepburn to accept appointment to the vacancy caused by the resignation of John Clafin, president of the New York Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Hepburn was undecided as to what he should do. Upon reflection he wrote Mr. Van Tuyl that he was willing to undertake the labor involved because he regarded the subject matter of the commission's work as most important at this time. When Mr. Clafin found pressure of personal business would not permit him to serve on the Van Tuyl commission, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, upon request from Superintendent Van Tuyl, submitted four names of men to serve on the commission as the representative of the chamber in his place. The name of Mr. Hepburn stood at the head of this list.

Mr. Hepburn was state superintendent of banks from 1880-83 and afterward served as comptroller of the currency, and his most valuable experience will vastly aid the Van Tuyl commission in the preparation of a comprehensive revision of the laws which must be submitted for the consideration of the legislature of 1914.

The commission as completed includes fifteen members with George W. Morgan and John De Witt Warner as counsel. The commissioners are: A. Barton Hepburn, Henry Morgenthau, Herbert H. Lehman, John Harsen Rhoades, Frank M. Patterson, Prof. Joseph French Johnson, Leopold Stern, Charles L. Bernheimer, of New York City;

Charles A. Miller, of Utica; Elliott C. McDougal, of Buffalo; Edwin B. Maynard, Louis Goldstein, of Brooklyn; Randall J. Le Boeuf, of Albany; Frank E. Howe, of Troy, and John H. Gregory, of Rochester.

Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., is serving as temporary chairman and Secretary Willard E. McHarg of the state banking department as acting secretary of the commission.

Because several members of the commission are abroad or had made advance plans for August vacations the more active work upon the revision is not to be undertaken for some weeks.

REVIEWS NEW CURRENCY BILL

Charles G. Dawes, former comptroller of the currency, and president of the Central Trust, has prepared a review of the administration currency bill, which, he says, proposes "the organization of a number of large central banks of great power, to be established in competition with the present system of independent banks. As distinguished from the Aldrich bill, this bill is a departure from the present independent banking system of the United States and not a development of it. It tends to destroy and lessen the importance of the present system of independent competing banks.

"While it is so constructed as to appear less radical in its grant of centralized power than the Aldrich bill, it is, in fact, much more radical in its grants of such power. Such of the advantages of the Aldrich bill as, for instance, the provisions for elasticity in our currency and for the mobilization of bank reserves, which it seeks to retain, it offsets by other provisions which will entail greater evils than the ones from which we now suffer."

Mr. Dawes declares the bill requires the national banks to furnish both capital and business to the federal reserve banks. He objects to the provision for retiring national bank circulation and the government 2 per cent bonds and declares that "the real reason why no adequate protection against the fall of the price of the 2's, due to the withdrawal of the currency privilege, is given to outside holders of them seems to be to make it more expensive for national banks having a large circulation to join the exodus from the national system which will occur if this bill passes into law in its present form."

WADE ON SOUTHWEST CONDITIONS

Festus J. Wade of St. Louis says crop and business conditions in the Southwest are fine and that banks expect no trouble in moving the 1913 crops.

Herman Schwerdtfeger, president First National of Altamont, Ill., died recently.

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

A proposition to sell municipal bonds of Cleveland at department stores in denominations of $5, $10 and $25 has been made to Mayor Baker by Victor Sincere, manager of the Bailey Company. The scheme has worked well in other cities, particularly in St. Paul, and has been endorsed by many financial authorities. The scheme would dispose of over $4,000,000 in securities and also heighten public interest in municipal matters.

Boom Cleveland Banker

Cleveland chapter, American Institute of Banking, has decided to boom Peter J. Slach, treasurer of the Broadway Savings and Trust Company, for president of the national institute at the convention to be held in Richmond, Va., September 17th-20th. Mr. Slach was president of the Cleveland chapter last year.

Banker Obtains Warrant

Dan S. Boulton, a bookkeeper for the National City, Cleveland, has obtained a warrant for the arrest of Fred R. Mathers, now being held by the Buffalo (N. Y.) police. Mathers is charged with having obtained $176.27 from the bank under false pretenses about five weeks ago. The warrant alleges that Mathers obtained the money by claiming to have an account with the Citizens National of Wellsville, N. Y. Burns' detectives located Mathers in Buffalo Friday. Extradition papers are being prepared so that Mathers may be brought back to Cleveland.

Group 5 at Columbus

While finding many commendable features in the currency bill, the members of Group Five, of the Ohio Bankers Association, which met at Columbus on Wednesday of last week, also discovered many clauses of the general provisions which merited the severest criticisms. The chief objection was aimed at political control of the government board. Next came the objection to the fact that while the banks are required to furnish capital for the new regional reserve banks, they are to have only a small minority voice in the direction of their business affairs. It was also protested that a politically controlled board sitting at Washington would have the power to order a bank to discount paper for another or to transfer its funds for use in another section of the country. The bill was discussed section by section, a stenographer taking notes for the benefit of a special committee made up of John G. Deshler and Louis F. Keisewetter of Columbus, and W. W. Gard of Newark, who will draft a communication to President Wilson, setting forth the attitude of the association. It was the consensus among the bankers that because of the reserve features provided under the pending measure and the limitations in notes to be issued, the proposed system will prove as rigid in operation as the present system. It was held that there was little inducement for state or private banks to come under the proposed scheme, and several expressed doubt as to whether this class of institutions could become associated with the regional banks even if they desired to do so. The provision for making regional reserve banks clearing houses for their members was regarded as intended to do away with the present clearing house associations and have clearances made through the regional banks. The bill, it is held, is little more than a start in the direction of remedying the ills of the present system.

Definition of the bill enacted by the general assembly last winter for the supervision and control of private banking institutions was made in an address by Representative R. R. Kennedy of Allen county. He explained that the comparatively few cases of failure among private banks was due to the unlimited liability of the owners of the same. Insistence was had that the same rules applying to national and state banks would not fit private banking without destruction of the business of many small communities. Private banks were necessities in small communities that did not justify the investment of the large amounts of capital required for the other classes of banking institutions. Limiting of loans, as was practiced under the state and national laws, would be totally impracticable because of the conditions to be met.

H. B. Peters, president of the Fairfield National, Lancaster, was re-elected chairman of the groups. Secretary-Treasurer W. W. Gard, cashier of the Park National, Newark, was also re-elected. L. F. Kieseewetter was re-elected chairman of the executive committee. E. R. Winger of Springfield was elected member of the executive committee, succeeding R. W. Boyd of London. H. J. Southard, Marysville, was elected to the executive committee, succeeding E. T. Pollock, Delaware. C. B. Slack, Granville, and F. S. Sperry, Utica, were re-elected.

Canton Bankers May Enter Protest

Bankers of Group Eight of the Ohio Bankers Association, in which Canton, Massillon, Alliance and other near-by cities are located, probably will make strenuous protests against the passage of the pending congressional currency legislation, according to Canton bankers. Individual protests are being considered in Canton's financial circles and will probably be sent to Washington before the association group meets at Cadiz August 14th, when formal action is expected. Sentiment against certain features of the measure is very general among bankers and financial men of that section and ever since the measure was introduced they have been working against its adoption. "The bill is very unpopular," said W. G. Saxton, cashier of the First National. "Practically all of the bankers express themselves as opposing at least certain features of it. It is being discussed and individual protests probably will be sent to Washington. Probable action by the group will come at the regular meeting August 14th at Cadiz."

Bank Change at Vienna

The directors of the new Vienna bank have elected W. A. Polk president of the bank to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ellis Good, who was connected with the institution for many years. Mr. Polk has been a director and vice-president for some time. Frank W. Hadley, a prominent merchant of the town, was chosen vice-president.

Claim Bankruptcy

Voluntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed in the United States court Saturday by John H. Barkman, president of the Osborn, Ohio, bank, and Charles C. Jackson, cashier of the same institution. Barkman names his liabilities as $104,813.90 and his assets as $74,759.93. He claims that $47,387.65 is for accommodation paper. Jackson gives his liabilities as $77,367.05 and his assets as $39,345.73.

Ohio Notes

The work of remodeling the quarters of the Ohio Savings and Trust at New Philadelphia has been completed and the institution is now occupying its new home. The new quarters are said to be the most attractive in that part of the state.

Directors of the First National of Hicksville are planning extensive remodeling of their banking quarters.

S. P. McCollum of London, who is organizing a new bank at Gambier, has announced that the institution will be opened August 1st. Practically all of the stock has been subscribed by residents of that community.

W. E. Nelson has been chosen a director and Adelbert Martz cashier of the Greenville National, Greenville. Mr. Martz succeeds the late F. T. Conkling. A. E. Marker has been chosen assistant cashier.

The American Banking and Trust Company of Sandusky has been established in its new home. New vaults, fixtures and equipment have been purchased throughout.

The City Savings of Youngstown has changed its name to the City Savings and Trust Company and increased its capital from $100,000 to $150,000.

William A. Miller, formerly cashier of the Farmers and Merchants of Millersburg, has been elected president of that institution.

The contract for the construction of the new building of the Second National of Warren has been awarded to a Cleveland firm.

The Citizens Savings and Loan Association, Akron, will after August 15th occupy more commodious quarters at the southwest corner of the intersection of Market and Broadway. The building is now being remodeled.

Central States Notes

After two unsuccessful attempts the Washington (Pa.) county commissioners have sold $100,000 worth of bonds to cover the county's share of the expense of building the Brownsville bridge to the Mellon National of Pittsburgh. The bonds will pay four and one-half per cent interest and are free from tax. They were sold at $50 premium.

I. Cary Carver, former cashier of the National of Chester county, West Chester, Pa., died recently of heart failure. He was seventy-five years old and had been connected with the bank for more than fifty years.

Alanson Osborn, assistant cashier of the First National, Eaton Rapids, Mich., died recently at the age of sixty-five years. He entered the services of the First National as assistant cashier in 1880.

The Peoples State, Caro, Mich., is erecting a handsome new bank building which it will occupy December 1st. The Peoples State is a new institution, having been organized in December, 1912, with a capital of $40,000 and opened January 15, 1913, in its present temporary quarters.

STATE BANK AT PIPER CITY

The organization of the State Bank of Piper City has been completed and the new bank will open with a capital stock of $25,000.00 and a surplus of $6,250.00. The directors are: H. M. Hawthorne, A. E. Burger, William Opperman, James Walsh and J. C. Culbertson; president, James Walsh; vice-president, H. M. Hawthorne; cashier, J. C. Culbertson; assistant cashier, E. B. Funk. The building for the new bank is now in progress and will be ready for occupancy by October 1st.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Secretary George H. Richards of the Minnesota Bankers Association has announced the names of appointees to membership on the enlarged committee on agricultural development and education. The decision to enlarge the committee and increase its activities was reached at the recent annual convention in Duluth. The appointees for the first, second and third congressional districts are D. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea; W. H. Gold, Redwood Falls, and O. W. Lundsten, Hutchinson. For the fourth and fifth districts, which embrace St. Paul and Minneapolis, J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul, and Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis, were named. C. P. De Laittre, Aiken, was named for the sixth district; F. L. Stone, Benson, for the seventh; J. G. Williams, Duluth, eighth; J. P. Foote, Crookston, ninth, and Victor L. Johnson, Center City, tenth. The committee held a meeting on Wednesday, after the return of Mr. Chapman from Winnipeg, where he went to speak to the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges.

Money Aid for Settlers

A plan similar to that of building and loan associations, for financing the development of northern Minnesota land by poor but enterprising settlers, probably will be worked out in Beltrami county. Fred Sherman, commissioner of immigration, returned on Monday from a land clearing meeting in Bemidji, where he addressed the farmers. Mr. Sherman said that the first outline of such a plan was suggested to him by Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, and that it is the most practical and feasible he has ever heard. He said it was so favorably received at Bemidji that he expected it to be recommended by the committee appointed to work out a system. The plan calls for a sort of revolving fund to be loaned out for the purpose of clearing stumps from the land and buying live stock.

State Bonds Over Counter

The state board of control probably will begin next Monday to sell state certificates of indebtedness over the counter. L. A. Smith, attorney-general, has sent an opinion to the board, holding that its plan of disposing of $700,000 worth of certificates by such a plan is valid. These certificates will be sold in denominations of from $10 to $100 and will bear interest at 5 per cent and are redeemable in five years. The money is to be used improving the educational institutions of the state. The attorney-general also ruled that certificates are not taxable. These bonds are long term securities, not redeemable with interest on demand, as are the certificates which St. Paul is selling, which accounts for the slightly higher rate of interest the state will pay.

Begin Work on New Building

Excavation has been begun on the new Minneapolis Trust Company building, which is to surround the new home of the First National at Fifth Street and Marquette Avenue. The trust company building will be of concrete, reinforced with railroad iron, and lined with the newest type of steel lining. This lining will be made up of alternate layers of soft and hard metal, which is said to make it absolutely burglar-proof. The building will have a floor space of 8,000 square feet, besides the spacious basement floor, to be used mostly for storage. The safety deposit vaults will extend under the new bank building and will contain more than 3,000 cubic feet of storage space, to be used entirely for boxes. The door to the vaults is to be proof against fire, water and burglars. The building will have entrances from Marquette Avenue through the new bank building and from Second Avenue through the New York Life building.

Addressed Realty Men at Winnipeg

Harry W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants National, St. Paul, addressed the National Real Estate Men's convention at Winnipeg this week. About twenty-five St. Paul real estate men attended the meeting. A number of eastern real estate men arrived in St. Paul Saturday and Sunday and were entertained by the local exchange. The program included breakfast and luncheon at the University Club and an automobile tour of the city.

Cash and Credits Increase

The 1913 assessment for moneys and credits exceeds the 1912 assessment by $8,622,910, according to figures given out by County Assessor Frank L. Powers. The total assessment this year is $33,607,581 as against $24,984,671 last year. The tax on this amount is $3 on a $1,000. There were 3,599 names on this year's moneys and credits assessment list as against 3,060 last year. The assessment figures mean that 3,599 citizens of St. Paul have at least $50 in cash, bank deposits, promissory notes other than those secured by Minnesota mortgages, bonds other than municipal, and book accounts. Minneapolis also showed a considerable gain, the moneys and credits assessment this year being $39,182,305.

interest is proving far more successful than had been expected. The sale opened July 1st, not quite four weeks ago, yet the people of St. Paul and vicinity—the savers and small investors, principally—have already bought more than $450,000 worth. Although purchasers of the city bond certificates are entitled to withdraw their deposits at par and accrued interest any day on demand, the total withdrawals to date are only about $2,500. This is regarded as a remarkable record, considering that the total purchases have amounted to nearly half a million dollars. Mayor Keller, S. A. Farnsworth, city treasurer, and W. C. Handy, city comptroller, the three members of the sinking fund committee who are in charge of the sale and who have the authority to buy city bonds as security for the certificates, are more than pleased with the results. They are confident that a way has been opened whereby St. Paul people can finance the city, bonds, interest and all, with the added benefit of having the interest remain at home.

Bank Clearings Increase

An increase of $1,007,890.73 was shown in Duluth bank clearings for the week ending July 24th, the amount being reported at $4,118,303.38, compared with $3,110,412.65 last year. The betterment is ascribed by bankers to a general expansion in commercial and industrial activities in this district supplemented by the continued heavy grain movement. Last week's clearings, which were swelled by the putting through of checks covering pay-rolls on the ranges, reached $9,955,454, a gain of $1,854,238.98 over last year.

Easier Tone in Money Market

"An easier tone in the money market was noted by Duluth bankers last week," says S. J. Schulte in the Duluth Tribune. "That was explained in a measure in the curtailment of funds for ventures of a speculative nature, leaving a larger volume available for commercial purposes. From the outlook now bankers do not think that any serious stringency will arise during the crop moving period. They are of the opinion in fact that with loans limited by the banks to the actual current requirements of their customers the money situation will gradually get back to a normal basis. Bankers' advices from over the Northwest regarding crop conditions afford grounds for gratification, telling of generally improved prospects. Maintenance of present local conditions over a couple of weeks, they say, will lead to greater readiness on the part of financial men to extend credits. Local demand for funds is said to be better than normal at present, and it is coming well distributed through the various commercial and industrial channels. Savings bank deposits are steadily growing in volume."

New Crookston Bank

The Polk County State, Crookston, Minn., will open some time in September. The incorporators and directors of the new institution are P. M. Ringdal, L. W. Larsen, G. O. Hage, G. A. Aubol and A. J. Peterson, with P. M. Ringdal as president; L. W. Larsen, vice-president, and G. O. Hage, cashier.

Locates at Willow River

C. M. Erickson has purchased the bank stock held by L. Redding of Lamberton, Dr. Schock of New Ulm, and Peter Praxel of Lamberton, in the State Bank of Willow River, and has also been elected cashier of the bank to succeed Mr. Praxel. The bank is capitalized at $10,000, with $4,000 surplus fund. Mr. Erickson will be succeeded in his position as cashier of the First State, Comfrey, by H. D. Reed.

Northwest Notes

The State Bank of Redwood Falls, Redwood Falls, Minn., has increased its capital stock to $50,000 with a surplus of $10,000.

The Merchants Bank, Winona, Minn., has established a new department to deal in farm mortgages, stocks and bonds. This is a new departure in Winona banks.

L. M. Olson has resigned his position as cashier of the Swedish-American State, Warren, Minn., to devote his entire time to real estate. August A. Johnson has been promoted to the position of cashier and Frank C. Wittensten will now be assistant cashier.

Oronoco, Minn., is to have a bank, the founders being E. A. Knowlton, T. L. Phelps, W. W. Churchill, P. G. Heintz of Rochester, George Olson, and L. J. Fifield of Oronoco. The bank will be capitalized at $10,000.

On August 19th bids will be opened for the sale of Winona county bonds in the amount of $70,000, the money from the sale to be applied in the erection of the new county jail here. The bonds will carry interest at the rate of 5 per cent and run from five to ten years.

John A. Nelson, a retired business man and banker who for several years has made his home at the Minneapolis Club, died recently of heart failure. Mr. Nelson formerly had charge of a bank at Barnesville, Minn.

The First National at Bismarck, N. D., which is the oldest financial institution of that city, is having a practically new building erected this summer. The old building is being almost torn down and a new structure covering twice as much ground space is being constructed in its place.

In circuit court at Sturgis, N. D., D. A. McPherson, president of the defaulted Meade county bank of Sturgis, pleaded guilty to permitting shareholders to become indebted to the bank in excess of 50 per cent of the capital stock of the institution and was fined $500. All other indictments against him were dismissed.

The Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings Association, capital stock $25,000, with W. E. Abbott, J. James, E. H. Abbott, Louis D. Torrey and Wm. T. Torrey, all of Sioux Falls, as incorporators, has been chartered to do business in Sioux Falls.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Farmers Savings of Sherman (S. D.) with a capital of $10,000. A. K. Hansen, president; Adolph Koch, vice-president; J. M. Hauge, cashier.

Work has been commenced on the First National and the Lewistown, Mont., electric power building, which will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000 when completed. It is not expected the building will be completed for occupancy before next year.

James W. Rogers of Helena, Mont., has accepted the position of cashier of the Martinsdale (Mont.) State.

H. G. Anderson, vice-president of the Farmer State, Medicine Lake, Mont., was married on July 1st to Miss Esther Lorene of Carver, Minn.

The Security State has been established at Banks, N. D.

FORESEES SPLENDID HARVEST

John F. Trumbo, cashier Farmers State, Bridger, Mont., was in Billings recently just after a trip through Yellowstone Park. In speaking of the crops in the Clark Fork valley, Mr. Trumbo declared it as his belief that the farmers of that district would realize the greatest returns from their crops this year of any in the history of the valley. "Everything has worked for the benefit of the farmer so far this year," said Mr. Trumbo, "and unless there should occur something unforeseen between this date and the time for harvesting the grain crops and the delivering of the sugar beets to the dumps, unprecedented results will obtain. The Clark Fork valley is coming to the front as a producer of high class farm products, both in the agricultural and horticultural line and the returns received per acre are the largest of any district in eastern Montana. Our farmers have taken advantage of every modern method adaptable to their use and find that they receive returns in proportion to the care given the fields. Sugar beet fields look fine, the grain is about ready to harvest, and the alfalfa grown in the vicinity of Bridger will be of excellent quality and large yield. With Yellowstone county and Carbon county coming to the front in such great strides in the agricultural development of their acres it will be but a short time until a big proportion of the state's wealth will come from eastern Montana through her farming industry."

DO NOT LIKE PLAN FOR INSURANCE OF DEPOSITS

Some skepticism as to the benefits to be derived from the new Bank Deposit Limited Mutual Insurance Company, organized by the Wisconsin Bankers Association, having for its object the protection of deposits in the banks of its members, has developed among the bankers of Superior.

According to several Superior financial men the premium required for membership is out of proportion to the benefits derived.

"If we become members of this company we would be liable for the failure of banks, in the management of which we have no voice," said one. "Our investments are sound and we know we can pay our deposits. Why, then, should we assume the responsibility of paying some one else's deposits, which we would be doing if we took out a membership?"

A. J. Wentzel, vice-president of the United States National, stated that he had not yet fully read the requirements of members and was only cognizant of what he had heard. "There is no reason why the United States National should become a member as it is at present established, so far as I have gone into it," said he.

The matter of joining the company is conditional with Wisconsin banks and those of this city prefer to continue the policy pursued prior to organization of the society.

NORTHWEST CROP CONDITIONS

Minneapolis—Spotted conditions prevail throughout the three spring wheat states as a result of lack of moisture until late in June, according to the correspondents of the Wells & Dickey Co., who do an extensive bond business with farming districts in this territory. "The acreage in wheat is about 10 per cent less than last year and the average yield will fall 20 per cent to 30 per cent under last season." Their reports declare, in some sections the best farmed land will yield a crop of the bumper proportions of last year.

Montana, on these returns will have the best for six years according to predictions and the largely increased acreage will make the Montana wheat a record breaker. Throughout the whole territory there is less flax sown, the decrease from last year being about 40 per cent.

There has been a tremendous increase in stock raising and diversified farming in the four northwestern states and the result has been largely in an increased acreage in oats, barley and corn.

The farmers and their bankers look with favor upon dairying. The report is that the farmer who is milking cows instead of sticking to grain farming is the man who is making the money.

Most sections now report sufficient moisture to carry them through the harvest which is already on in South Dakota. The first crop of alfalfa has been cut in the Red River Valley and the Big Range are hastening the second cutting. The rye harvest has begun in practically every section.

Philander Brown of Des Moines was the principal in a habeas corpus case in which it was attempted to show that he was being detained in a private sanitarium for the insane against his will. One of the evidences of his insanity was his alleged attempt to pass a check for a million dollars on the bank at Carlisle. Brown was removed from the sanitarium, however.

Although the Iowa and Minnesota bankers have been asked to go to the A. B. A. meeting at Boston along with the Wisconsin bankers, it is probable that most of the Iowans will go to Chicago and straight through to Boston with the Chicago bunch. The Wisconsin bankers propose two trips, one taking in New York, Philadelphia and Washington and the other taking in Quebec. Most of the bankers in Iowa will have had their vacations by the time the A. B. A. rolls around and it is probable they will prefer the straight shoot to the convention city.

Alleged Check Raiser Caught

Ed Nelson of Iowa Falls gave a stranger who was "broke" a check for $1 last March. A few days later the check turned up. It had been raised to $100 and the State National at Iowa Falls had cashed it. Since then Nelson has been up in arms. Last week the long search was successful. The chap, who said his name was Williams, was arrested at Mason City, taken to Algona for a preliminary hearing and bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $1,000. Nelson is smiling once more.

Banker Gets Black Hand Letters

George Naeve, well known banker at Denison, has been getting a series of Black Hand letters that have proved puzzling to the authorities. Mr. Naeve turned the letters over to the United States inspectors and is expecting results. The letters have been almost identical in wording and handwriting. They demanded that the banker place $385 at the foot of a large tree just south of the Boyer river on the Manila bridge. If he failed to do as commanded, dire things would certainly happen. One Andrew Bowling was taken into custody charged with writing the epistles but while he was at Council Bluffs letter number 3 reached the banker, mailed from a rural route in the southern part of the county.

Des Moines Visitors

Many bankers are arriving in Des Moines these days. Among the visitors seen here in the past few days were noticed the following bankers: Cashier T. W. Rawson, Farmers Savings at Slater; Assistant Cashier O. W. Burchinall, State Savings, Monroe; Cashier W. A. Hopkins, State Savings, Lamoni; Cashier L. H. Busselle, Lucas County National; Cashier J. W. Phillips, Davis County Savings, Bloomfield; President D. M. Anderson, Peoples National, Albia; Cashier D. L. Ross, Commercial Savings, Washington; President D. Banks Agree to Take School Funds

According to information emanating from the office of the state superintendent of schools, the banks of Des Moines have "busted a trust." This "trust" consisted mainly in the agreement of banks in some counties of Iowa not to accept school funds and pay interest at the rate of 2 per cent on daily balances. The Des Moines institutions hearing of this refusal signified their willingness to take care of all of the money lying around loose at this rate. Whereupon, according to the state superintendent's office, the banks in the country districts climbed down and agreed to take the money at the rate specified by law. Deputy State Superintendent Joseph is quoted as saying that the "banks and school treasurers are going to get together by fall."

Iowa Notes

Eva Stream, the 17-year-old girl forger arrested in Des Moines, was ordered to the Anamosa reformatory for an indeterminate term by Judge Brennan, who immediately suspended the sentence and ordered the girl placed in the Home of the Good Shepherd at Dubuque. The girl was indicted on two counts, but it is said that she passed over two dozen bogus checks on various stores in Des Moines. Church people have taken a great interest in the case and have claimed that the girl did not realize the seriousness of her offense.

Henry L. Bousquet, formerly of Pella and Knoxville but for some years connected with the office of the clerk of the supreme court of Des Moines, died last week of stomach trouble at the age of 73 years. Mr. Bousquet was connected with a bank at Pella before his entrance into the political arena. He was well known over the entire state.

John T. George, wealthy financier from Texas, died at Waterloo, Iowa, some days ago. Mr. George was spending the summer at his summer home. Three years ago he was stricken with apoplexy and had not been in good health since. The deceased was a director in banks at Spur, Benjamin and Jayton, Tex.

Grinnell is to have a fine new building for the Grinnell Savings. The contract has been let and work is under way. The building will be 40 feet front and 75 deep. It will be two stories high. Brick and terra cotta with granite base will make the front unusually attractive and the bank will occupy the entire lower floor. Furnishings in keeping with the building are to be installed.

Leo H. Stevens president of the Century Savings engineered his motor across country to Crescent with Mrs. Stevens and little Mary Grace as passengers. The parents of Mr. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stevens are residents of Crescent and an enjoyable visit followed.

The First National at Elliott declared a 12 per cent dividend and added $2,000 to the surplus fund besides.

Mrs. G. E. MacKinnon and children, Ronald and Jean, are enjoying a month's outing at Moraine Park, Colo., while "Mack" holds down his job as president of the Mechanics Savings, Des Moines.

W. A. North, formerly of Des Moines, has been put in charge of the real estate department of the Lincoln Trust Company at Spokane.

The Farmers Savings at Harper has been organized with V. P. Hartman, president; Matts Biewen, Sr., vice-president; John Allen, cashier; V. White, assistant cashier.

The Lost Nation Savings has been organized with Simon Gish, president; Silas Scott, vice-president; W. L. Bell, cashier.

C. E. Leffingwell has resigned as assistant cashier of the Citizens Exchange at Oxford.

Reuben Core has been made vice-president of the First National at Pleasantville.

The Fremont County State at Fremont has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $20,000. The incorporators include W. E. Fellers, J. S. Reeves, L. R. Skidmore, L. A. Combe, C. A. Eastburn, C. W. Fellers, N. C. McDonald.

Louis Visha, cashier of the Bank of Dallas, Dallas, S. D., was a business visitor to Des Moines last week.

C. Cater of Woodbine has been chosen cashier of the Farmers of Silver City, succeeding C. H. Patterson, resigned. No successor has been named as yet to F. H. Plumer, who resigned as president.

Work is progressing on the new structure which the Andrew Savings Bank at Andrew is erecting. The building will be a beauty.

Claude Spicher has succeeded A. T. Wherry, who resigned as cashier of the First National at Swea City.

South Dakota Notes

George Beedle who has been connected with the Leeds bank at Sioux City has become cashier of the new bank which E. E. Halstead opened at Burbank.

A change has been made in the ownership of the Citizens National at Woonsocket. N. Noble of Centerville has purchased an interest. E. B. Soper remains as president and G. W. Hanson remains as cashier.

Joseph E. Kurka has resigned his position with the First National at Rapid City to become identified with the First National at Custer.

The Farmers State has been organized at Tabor. The capital stock is $10,000.

B. E. Cooper has been chosen cashier of the State at Winfred.

COLORADO CONVENTION

Secretary Paul Hardey of the Colorado Bankers Association announces that the annual convention will be held this year in Denver August 27th and 28th.

The Union National, Neodesha, Kan., has been granted a charter. It is capitalized at $35,000.

SAYS FARMERS HAVE BEEN NEGLECTED.

Dean H. L. Russell of the College of Agriculture, University of Wisconsin, said in an address before the Minnesota bankers at their Duluth Convention:

"The rising tide of prices that has been in progress for the last decade has caused a country-wide attention to be directed toward the condition of the food producer and his products. As never before, the farmer (using the term in its broadest sense to include all phases of food production) is being made the recipient of attentions that are unusual for him. It has always been true that the politician, especially prior to election, has lavished upon his rural constituency a degree of forethought that he deemed sufficient to secure the needed support, but broadly speaking the interests of the rural classes have not received the attention, either in the hall of state or in the market place, that the industry warrants.

"But conditions are radically changed today. On all sides, from all sources, the farmer is being showered with advice. On the one hand he is being told how poorly he farms and how well the other fellow does it; how improvident and wasteful he is, how utterly lacking in business foresight and method; how much behind the procession he and his colleagues are. This information is designed to show how 'Mr. Average Farmer' lives, but how superior is the condition of his cousin, 'Mr. Scientific Agriculturist.'

"Just now much attention is being paid to the matter of rural credit. There are those who think we have got to import some method 'made in Germany' or elsewhere and graft it onto our American conditions before we can take up the question of improved rural finance.

"In several of our northern towns where industrial conditions are changing from lumbering to agriculture, the local banks and business men have developed a home made plan that is being effectively pushed this year. This consists in the banks loaning money at current rates of interest to farmers for the purchase of grade dairy cattle. In some cases the banks have done this on chattel security and in other cases the business interests of the town have guaranteed the loan. At Ashland a $10,000 guarantee fund was thus provided. The college aided in the purchase of high grade animals. These were turned over to the farmer by lot at cost, plus shipping expenses. The farmer is to liquidate his loan by payment of $3.00 per month, or one half of his monthly cream check.

"This plan has been put into operation at Ashland, Mellen, and Iron River this spring. Already 100 cows have been purchased at Mellen, over 30 at Iron River, and three carloads at Ashland. The farmers purchasing these animals agree to breed this stock only to pure-bred sires. Already community breeding centers in Holsteins and Guernseys have been established and the whole community stimulated to the possibilities of improvement. When we consider what this means to these communities, to start right when they begin to develop in dairying, the feeling of community success in the enterprise that has been gotten under way, the inauguration of a practical plan of rural finance that does not need legislative fiat, but has been the outgrowth of common sense ideas, you can begin to appreciate the significance of the movement. In such a movement as this no one can be of more assistance than the banking profession, and in no way can the general welfare of the community be more rapidly advanced."

FINANCIAL SESSION AT ROAD CONGRESS

Vice-President Arthur Reynolds has given his consent to the holding of a financial session at the Detroit convention of the American Road Congress under the auspices of the A. B. A. committee on agriculture. W. G. Edens has been selected to preside at the session and among those who will speak, it is expected, are J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul; B. F. Harris, Champaign; W. D. Vincent, Spokane; Kent C. Ferman, Cedar Rapids, and perhaps Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis.

TITLE AND TRUST MAKES GOOD SHOWING.

Business of the Chicago Title & Trust Company in the first six months of the current year shows a fair increase over the corresponding month in 1912, a gain of between 8 and 10 per cent in the real estate department being principally responsible for the betterment that has been shown. Other departments also have made a good exhibit, and earnings on the capital stock of the company are ahead of those of the first half of last year, when they were at the rate of 15 per cent for the fiscal period. In the full year 1912 Title and Trust earned net for dividends $884,956, or an amount equal to 15.80 per cent on the $5,600,000 capital stock.

TO OPEN NEW LINE TO SPOKANE

Announcement has been made by the management of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway that its new short line between Chicago and Spokane will be opened Monday, September 1st. This route, which will be the shortest between the two cities, has been made possible by the construction of a branch extending from Plummer, Ida., on the main line of the St. Paul to Spokane. Arrangements have been completed whereby the St. Paul will use the lines of the Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company from Spokane to Seattle and also to Portland. These lines are now in process of construction.

CONDITION OF MONTANA BANKS

Helena, Mont., July 7th.—Resources of 177 state banks, trust companies and private banks as of June 4th, were $56,208,875, an increase of $120,603 over April 4th when the report involved 167 institutions. The average reserve was 31.8 per cent. Loans showed an increase over those outstanding April 4th of $781,967; undivided profits increased $46,363, and surplus $92,300.

WEST IOWA WHEAT CROP LARGE

Council Bluffs, Iowa, July 30th.—Production of wheat in western Iowa is the heaviest this year ever known. Quality is also the finest and the railroads are being taxed to haul the grain, for most of it is being marketed from the field. Yields of as high as forty-seven bushels an acre are reported.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Out of a conference of apple growers at the National Apple Show in Spokane last November has been evolved a co-operative marketing organization just launched on a continent-wide basis, with exclusive agencies in 150 leading centers of North America extending from Montreal to Texas and from Florida to eastern Montana. Through these agencies most of the great apple crop of the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana will be marketed co-operatively under one central selling agency. The organization of Pacific Northwest fruit growers is considered by bankers and business men to be the most important economic development of the present decade, and they are freely asserting that this co-operative movement will mean the salvation of the apple industry of these states, which last year produced 16,000 carloads.

Carload shipments commenced this week under direction of General Manager J. H. Robbins at the Spokane headquarters of the distributors. While apples perhaps will constitute the bulk of the corporation's shipments, all deciduous fruits and vegetables of the four states will be distributed. In addition to 150 exclusive agents, the North Pacific Fruit Distributors will have representatives covering the middle western gateways at Omaha and Minneapolis, as well as at Chicago and New York headquarters, two in the territory of Montana and the Dakotas and three in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. H. F. Davidson, a large grower of Hood River, Ore., president of the distributors, will go to New York August 1st, and H. E. Smith, sales manager from southern Idaho, to Chicago to perfect organizations at these headquarters.

Thirty per cent reductions in freight rates from Spokane to Montana points, which have been ordered in by the interstate commerce commission to become effective September 1st, will extend Spokane's jobbing field from 100 to 150 miles farther eastward. Under the new rates Spokane jobbers say they will be given distinct advantage in western Montana trade over Chicago, St. Paul, Seattle and Portland, all of which had the advantage of Spokane under the old rates. The new rates will enable Spokane jobbers to extend their territory to Kalispell on the Great Northern and to Missoula on the Northern Pacific, giving them control of the business of the rich Flathead and Bitter Root valleys and Tobacco Plains. A number of Spokane jobbing houses will place additional salesmen in the field in the near future.

Commissioner of Public Utilities Charles M. Fassett has a corps of engineers investigating the possibility of a municipal power plant for Spokane. He says two power sites on the Spokane river are being looked over with a view to furnishing cheap heat and light to consumers. In order to ascertain the legal status of the municipal power plant proposition, the city council has instructed corporation counsel H. M. Stephens to make a complete examination. Commissioner D. C. Coates, who recently made an examination of a municipal power plant at Tacoma, Wash., says certain supreme court decisions give cities in the United States special privileges in the acquisition of water power rights for municipal purposes. The abundance of power sites in the Spokane country, where the available horsepower is estimated as 400,000, affords a variety for selection.

That a new farming spirit has taken root in the central Washington district, presaging farming of smaller areas by better methods, is stated by former Governor M. E. Hay, who has just returned to his home in Spokane from a five days' trip through that district. "I have never seen a year," said Mr. Hay, "when good farming has paid so well and poor farming so poorly as this year. Those who have been able to keep their land clear of weeds and have farmed in a proper manner will harvest from 20 to 40 bushels per acre, while those who have not farmed properly will not fare very well. I talked with many farmers and find that they all realize they have been farming too large areas, and most of them are going to cut down their acreage and farm less land but farm it much better. This will leave much land available for new people. So far as the wheat crop is concerned, the farmers in central Washington certainly are doing their share to increase the prosperity of this section."

In gross postal receipts for the year ended June 30, 1913, Spokane made a gain of $13,998, or 3.4 per cent, over those of the preceding year, according to the official report of C. L. Wayland, postoffice inspector for the Spokane division. For the year ended June 30, 1913, the receipts were $490,100, and for the year ended June 30, 1912, they were 476,102.

Pacific Builder and Engineer, published at Seattle, puts Spokane in fourteenth place among the largest 138 American cities in point of building permits for May of this year. The permits in this city that month totaled $1,340,990.

EDMONTON NEWS

John Alexander Reid, financial commissioner of the city of Regina, Sask., was appointed by the lieutenant-governor in council on July 23d to be agent-general for the province of Alberta, with offices at No. 1 Charing Cross, London, arranged for by Premier Sifton during his recent visit to England. He was formerly deputy treasurer and clerk of the executive council of the provincial government of Saskatchewan. Mr. Reid is a native of England, born in Liverpool in 1862. He came to Canada in 1883 and joined the Royal North West Mounted Police, being attached to the post at Battleford, the heart of military operations during the Riel rebellion. He was at one time owner and editor of the Calgary Tribune now the Morning Albertan, and afterward a member of the editorial staff of the Calgary Herald. He went to Regina eighteen years ago.

Thomas Walker, city assessor of Edmonton says in a report to the council that the net municipal assessment this year totals $187,941,920. Of this amount $20,108,350 represents assessments on properties that were exempted from all except school taxes prior to 1913. The assessment on property taken into the city limits recently amounts to $18,050,680. The municipal assessment for 1912 was $109,756,330. The school assessment was $127,781,800. On this assessment there was a general tax levy of 6.74 mills; the debenture rate, 3.06, and for schools 2.20, a total of 12 mills.

By-laws to authorize the issuance of debentures for municipal expenditures amounting to $2,340,400.69, and the consolidation of of two former debenture issues into one for $451,000, were passed finally by the city council of Edmonton on July 22d. The debentures for waterworks will take $516,760, for sewers $1,692,149, for sewer extensions to be assessed to local improvements, $98,492, for land purchase, $30,000. The consolidation by-law concerns the London loan of $11,000,000. It consolidates two issues, one of $30,000 eight-year debentures and one of $421,000 ten-year debentures into one of $451,000 for ten years.

Theodore H. Wilson of the Metropolitan Bank of England and Wales said in Edmonton recently that conditions in England are better now than in years also that money is much easier. "From information gleaned in a business capacity," he added. "I have formed the opinion that many weeks will not elapse before the strings are loosened on the world's money bags."

Samuel A. Hall, who came to Edmonton from Butte, Mont., a year ago, to engage in the real estate business, was released from the penitentiary of Montana, where he was serving a ten-year term for the embezzlement of $100,000. The governor of Montana has issued a pardon on condition that he reimburse the creditors of the amount of his defalcation within the next five years. At the end of that time if he has not paid every cent of his shortage he is to go back to prison and serve out his term. Hall was $100,000 short in his accounts at the close of a big mining boom in Montana. He was tried and although his contention that the money had been taken by his subordinates was sustained by witnesses he was adjudged guilty and sentenced to prison. Pending a new trial he was released on bonds, and came to Edmonton and was doing flourishing real estate business until a year ago when his new trial came up for hearing. He was again adjudged guilty and sent to prison for ten years.

W. F. McCool, traveling passenger agent for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway, who is touring western Canada, reported in Edmonton on July 23d that a large number of farmers from the Central West are moving to the prairie provinces. He predicts that at least 500,000 settlers from the United States will enter Canada during the next fourteen months.

A. P. Berzelius, assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York in Edmonton, has been transferred to Jamestown, N. Y., to a similar position. He was well and favorably known in this district. When the question about petitioning for a Swedish vice-consul in Edmonton arose his name was placed on the petition. More than 500 signatures have been received for this purpose. His friends are hopeful he will return in the event the appointment is made by the Swedish government.

William Matthews, manager in Edmonton for the Mutual Life Insurance Company, sustained severe injuries while rescuing two women when their horse ran away at the Country Club grounds on July 20th. Mr. Matthews leaped at the horse's head as it passed him, and succeeded in bringing the frightened animal to a standstill.

SAN FRANCISCO BANK ON THE SITUATION

American National of San Francisco says in its July financial letter:

"It is noteworthy that an increase in bank clearings for the six months' period is shown by every important city on the Pacific coast. During the past sixty days, however, the currents of trade have moved a trifle more slowly, and the usual midsummer period of quiet is at hand. The slowness of collections in some quarters can be traced to the difficulty experienced by certain of the large corporations in financing their development work, making it necessary for the moment to use current funds for purposes of permanent improvement rather than suspend or delay operations.

"Money is still in great demand, and borrowers are bidding exceptional rates for funds. Banks increased their loans about 41 million dollars between June 4, 1912, and June 4, 1913, while deposits increased only 34 millions, and there was a decrease of nearly six millions in cash resources. Moreover, of the 41 millions additional loans, 33 millions were real estate loans, which by their nature could not be liquidated quickly. A remarkable feature of the bank reports is the fact that the 548 banks were patronized by a total of 1,155,362 depositors, as compared with 875,774 depositors on June 14, 1912. If the number of depositors in national banks could be ascertained, it probably would be found that 50 per cent of the entire population of California are bank customers."

The bank submits figures to show that the capitalized strength of the San Francisco banks exceeds that of all the other cities of the Pacific coast combined; and that the ratio of capital to deposit liabilities is greater in San Francisco than in any of the neighboring cities.

"Fairly good reports are heard from the agricultural districts, the grain harvest in the Sacramento valley being somewhat larger than was anticipated. Shipments of fresh deciduous fruits to July 23d were 3,034½ cars, as compared with 2,229½ to the same date a year ago. The output of cherries and apricots was below that of last year; peaches, pears and plums are the varieties now going forward. Grapes suffered by reason of hot weather in the interior early in the month, and the crop will be smaller than last year's. About 3,500 cars of cantaloupes will be shipped this season from the Imperial valley. As an illustration of the diversity of California's agricultural products, it is cited that Butte county, in the northern end of the Sacramento valley, will this year harvest about 15,000,000 pounds of rice; also, the cotton crop of the Imperial valley, near the Mexican line, will be about double that of last year.

"The July report of the department of agriculture gives an excellent account of the crop prospects in the leading cereals, although not up to last year's high mark. The estimated yield of wheat is 1,402 million bushels, as compared with 1,459 millions in 1912; corn is expected to reach 2,976 million bushels as against 3,124 millions last year; oats, 1,061 million bushels, and barley 165 million bushels, compare with 1,418 millions and 223 millions, respectively, for these grains in 1912. Intensely hot weather throughout the grain belt early in July may have operated to affect these crops adversely. Nevertheless, the hope of a large harvest is one of the most gratifying factors in the business outlook.

"In other respects the general situation has undergone few material changes during the month. The Balkan trouble seems still far from settlement, and has developed phases that are apparently beyond the control of the great powers of Europe. The fear of a general war, however, has all but disappeared, and the adjustment of the situation is not likely to lead to serious complications. Financial conditions in Europe continue strained, and shipments of gold from America have been resumed. Interest rates are high in all money markets, whether for long or short-term borrowings. Fully three-fourths of the financing done by railroads and industrial corporations is upon short-time notes; it being considered undesirable to put out bonds of distant maturity in the present state of the investment market.

"The currency measure prepared by the administration has been amended in some important particulars, and contains many excellent features. It is still far from being acceptable to bankers, however, and probably will be amended further before its final enactment. As originally proposed, the plan would work hardship and loss upon every national bank in the country, a result which doubtless is far from the intention of its framers. The debates upon the bill are likely to consume much time, and it may be questioned whether definite action is to be reached at this session of congress."

THIRD NATIONAL DESIGNATED RESERVE AGENT

Third National of St. Louis has been designated as reserve agent for the following banks: Gadsden, Ala., First National; Talladega, Ala., Isbell National; Tuscaloosa, Ala., First National; Berryville, Ark., First National; Helena, Ark., First National; Columbus, Ga., Fourth National; Columbia, Ill., First National; East St. Louis, Ill., Drovers National; Paducah, Ky., City National; Princeton, Ky., First National; Kansas City, Mo., Stockyards National; Columbus, Ohio, Ohio National; Ardmore, Okla., State National; Muldrow, Okla., First National; Clarksville, Tenn., Clarksville National; Crossville, Tenn., First National; Fayetteville, Tenn., Elk National; Jackson, Tenn., Security National; Kenton, Tenn., First National; Petersburg, Tenn., First National; Crockett, Tex., First National; Malakoff, Tex., First National; Sonora, Tex., First National.

ANALYSIS OF THE GLASS BANKING AND CURRENCY BILL

treasury to determine what shall be the apportionment of funds of the government among federal reserve banks, and what rate they shall pay on such deposits, is out of harmony with the sections which define the power of the federal reserve board, and is incongruous and objectionable.

10. The limits as to amounts of reserves are left much the same as at present. It is probably a sound argument that under a perfect system of rediscount the present requirements as to reserves are high. The redemption of treasury reserve notes on presentation at any divisional institution in gold affords a new avenue through which banks could very rapidly build up their gold. Whether congress will permit a reduction of the present reserve requirements is not yet clear. In a scientific readjustment of the banking and currency system these limits should not be higher than good judgment and conservatism indicate.

11. The power given the federal reserve board to compel one reserve bank to discount for another is objectionable.

12. In operation, the new plan will be unnecessarily costly to both large and small banks. All banks except those in central reserve cities will lose what to them will be substantial sums in interest on reserve deposits with reserve agents, and large banks will be deprived of their balances with reserve agents, while business necessity will at the same time compel them to maintain balances in reserve, central reserve and other cities on which the differences in interest received and interest obtainable at home will be considerable.

13. The rediscount privileges extended would not be adequate to the needs of the Northwest. The probabilities are that most northwestern banks would have little or no commercial paper to rediscount, and little if any paper available for rediscount, coming within the requirement that it shall be within 45 days of maturity.

14. Section 15 permits reserve banks to compete in the open market with other banks and financial institutions.

15. Section 17 appears to transfer the exchange and collection business of the banks to the new federal reserve banks.

16. As regards the northwestern states at least, the farm loan provisions of Sec. 27 are not workable and could not be made of any service without radical amendment.

17. From the viewpoint of the 7,072 national banks outside reserve and central reserve cities, the advantages of the system proposed do not sufficiently offset the disadvantages and losses arising from it to make it an object to them to enter it. This at least would be the view of such banks in northwestern territory.

Is the Bill Workable?

Aside from the question whether congress can compel the national banks to enter the new system, or whether national banks would evade the federal power by relinquishing their charters in favor of incorporation under state law, the test of the bill will be whether it is workable. It is difficult to see how so vast and powerful a financial system as this can be made to operate successfully unless banks and bankers throughout the country believe in it, are anxious to embrace its advantages and will assume a friendly and co-operative relation. From this viewpoint it is evident that the bill in its present condition is only a working basis on which to construct a more perfect and more scientific system. As such it presents advantages, and it is well within the range of probability that congress, after learning the sentiments of the country, will be glad to join with bankers and business men in such reconstruction of the bill as will perfectly adapt it to the needs of the country and bring it into harmony with the best economic, financial and business judgment.

By far the most important and serious contingency arising under the proposed system is that of a very widespread and dangerous contraction of credit, as indicated in objection 8, previously referred to. Banks and bankers can get along without banking reform better than any other class of business institutions or business men. The origin of a definite banking reform movement, nearly three years ago, was not with bankers, but with the business men of Chicago, and the movement was given form and substance by the powerful Chicago Association of Commerce, which is essentially a business, rather than a banking, organization. The hope of banking reform has been a hope that credit facilities to those who need them most—to the young man in business, to the growing institution, to the units of business in developing sections of the United States—might be made more stable. To eliminate panics was the first consideration. To so direct credit facilities as to give them their maximum usefulness to sound business was the second. Underlying all of this was the thought that the defects of an unsound system press hardest, not upon the well established, prosperous and wealthy business men and institutions of the United States, but upon those who can least afford to suffer. Every farmer, every salaried man and every wage-earner feels the brunt of financial stress first of all. Reduced pay-rolls are the first step, in industry, toward weathering a financial storm. So it is in business, and men out of jobs are the first sign of a depression. A fall in prices of farm products, such as a drop in the price of barley on the Minneapolis market in 1907 totaling 26 cents, indicates how the farmer feels the pressure. A contraction of credit, whether from natural movements in the money markets of the world, or as the result of some sudden crash or catastrophe, is the element that gives a panic its danger.

Adequate banking reform cannot be built upon a substructure that of itself causes contraction of credit. This measure, any analysis shows, must inevitably reduce the loaning power of banks in an unprecedented degree. It is true that this contraction, due to the forced withdrawal from commercial banks of large deposits on which they base their present loaning power, would not be completed for a period of three years from the enactment of the bill. This does not relieve the danger, for it means that severely contracted credit will not be the incident of sixty or ninety days, as in 1907, but a grueling process of three years' duration, from which there is no apparent relief. When it is considered that the sum of this contraction will be in direct proportion to a reduction of the basis of the present loaning power of banks amounting to more than a half-billion of dollars, the danger involved becomes very real, and the causes of keen apprehension become very sound and well founded.

It is not sufficient to say that banks, through the exercise of the privilege of rediscount, will save business from this danger. It is true that they will do the best they can, but no law can force them to become heavy borrowers through the process of rediscount, and banking and business judgment certainly would not justify these institutions in assuming a line of rediscounts sufficient to meet such a condition as is here involved.

The speaker next discussed the effect of the system proposed, upon the banking business of the country, as applied to the national banks of the United States as a whole; to the probable regional reserve territory in the Northwest; as applied to the operations of typical national banks (a) a country bank in the Northwest, (b) a northwestern reserve city bank; and in respect to the contraction of credit in the country at large and in some of the northwestern states. Exhaustive figures were submitted showing that the general effect of the bill would be unsatisfactory.

General Comments

Many able bankers and economists have already pointed out the objectionable features of the requirement that one federal reserve bank must at the direction of the federal reserve board discount for another federal reserve bank. This power is equivalent to a power to force the regional institution in the Northwest to rediscount for a regional bank in the South or far West, whether it wished to or not and whether or not it regarded the collateral submitted as ample. It is hard to escape the conclusion that the power, in simple terms, is simply one to force one institution to lend to another, whether the lending institution wishes or not, or has faith in the security offered.

The principle is vicious and should not be recognized. The provision was unquestionably the outcome of an effort to create a mobilization of the resources of the various institutions, that their power might readily be directed at the will of the central controlling board, to any point where danger threatened. A mobilization of bank reserves is desirable and necessary, but nothing approaching a perfect system of gathering the reserves of the country into a common reservoir, where by reason of their mass and mobility they will stand as a protection against sudden financial stress, is contained in this bill as it now stands. It has been well observed that we now have three reserve cities and that under this plan we shall have twelve, each regional bank being a repository for immense sums of reserve deposits. There is every probability that all the relief or safety that is sought in this provision could be obtained through the purely voluntary co-operation of one regional institution with another in times of exceptional stress. National banks have freely lent aid, one to another, times without number. There is no reason to suppose that the same broad views would not prevail among the managements of the twelve proposed regional banks.

In discussing the controlling board, and the political character of appointments, both to membership on the federal reserve boards, and upon the boards of the twelve regional institutions, a highly experienced and able American banker recently said:

"Banking and politics are like oil and water. They do not mix. If the former is to be kept sound and good, it must be kept separate from the latter. The principles underlying sound banking are diametrically opposed to those which rightly or wrongly seem to control politics. In their fiduciary capacity bankers, if they want to succeed and remain faithful to their trust, must be constantly on their guard against the influences of such virtues even as friendship and human sympathy and they must officially eschew the insidious influence of reciprocal personal favors. Such influences seem to be the essence of politics and to control political activities."

The duty that now confronts bankers and business men is that of at once making a careful and thorough study of the proposed legislation. It would be unjust and unfair to believe that congress will not listen to the best judgment of the country. On the contrary there is every assurance that the administration, and the members of the house and senate, will be willing to see this new measure amended in such respects as business men, bankers and economists demand. We learn that Mr. Glass is willing to concede the value of the suggestion recently made that there should be a small advisory board, without vote, to act continuously with the federal reserve board in the management of the new system, and that such a body should be made up through some representative system of choice, of business men and bankers. We learn that those most concerned with the success of the new measure will probably be willing to give the banking interests a reasonable minority representation upon the federal reserve board. This and other evidence from Washington indicates a desire that the measure, when enacted, shall represent the best collective judgment of the country.

It is manifest, therefore, that the responsibility for the proper amendment and modification of the bill rests with the business men and bankers of the country, and that this responsibility has been put squarely upon their shoulders by the evident desire of both the administration and congress to receive and act upon every carefully thought out, sound, and constructive suggestion.

It is the judgment of the organization I represent that, except in the one point of government control, suitable amendments can be introduced into this measure. The administration will still insist that a clear majority of the governing board shall be the direct representatives of the government. This many bankers are willing to concede, and they should concur, so long as such government control does not exceed the limits of thorough and reasonable control and supervision, and does not cross the dividing line into the field of actual management and authority over the details of the banking business of the country. Reasonable control is beneficial and desirable. Actual management and authority could not be made successful, and would inevitably result in danger and disaster.

Position of St. Louis Bankers

It was reported from Washington this week that St. Louis bankers had demanded immediate purchase and retirement of from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of government 2 per cent bonds as a means of restoring these bonds to par. This was the recommendation made by the St. Louis Clearing House Association to the two banking and currency committees of congress. It was also suggested that the government should forego interest on government deposits secured by 2 per cent bonds. The St. Louis bankers favored immediate currency legislation, but suggested a number of modifications to the administration bill.

They object to the federal control feature, saying it was taxation or contribution without representation. Also it was said that the government should not issue currency, but notes should be issued by the reserve banks in each locality. The pending bill, it was said, failed to allow state banks and trust companies to be recognized as reserve agents for all other member banks in their respective localities.

WESTERN TRADE CONDITIONS

Bradstreets, in reporting general trade conditions in the West (July 26th) say:

"Good scattered rains and cooler weather arrested damage to the corn crop west of the Mississippi river, but there was little rain in Illinois, although states east have had precipitations. Corn prospects on the whole have been somewhat reduced, especially in Kansas and Nebraska. Cutting of oats is general over the leading states, with light yields. Cutting of velvet chaff wheat in the Northwest is under way. Reports of discovery of black rust are not taken seriously, as the crop is too well advanced and too thin on the ground for it to do extensive damage. Drying up of pastures and scarcity of stock water are complained of in Kansas, Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, although those sections had good rains on July 23d and 24th. The movement of new wheat is heavy, and railroad traffic is larger than usual at this season. Idle car surplus increased 5,540 cars, and is 76,280 against 75,389 cars last year. Business with jobbers and manufacturers is seasonable, the turnover being as large or slightly larger than last year's. There is a decided disposition toward conservatism. Interior retail dealers have not been able to dispose of their stocks as fast as expected. Road salesmen are doing an average business, and the outlook is regarded as favoring good business during the fall and winter. This aspect of affairs is based on average crops and the fact that stocks generally are not large. Retail trade is fair, though some lines show a decrease. Light buying but liberal specifications feature iron and steel. The tone, however, is better, and more business is looked for later. Equipment plants are running at about 80 per cent of full capacity. Railroad shops are in full operation and large purchases of supplies are necessary. The coal trade is unsettled. Butter and poultry are lower, with eggs firm and potatoes higher. Hogs and sheep are higher, while cattle are slightly lower and lambs are off sharply. Receipts of cattle and hogs increased; those of sheep decreased. Money is in less demand, as large interests have prepared for future wants. The undertone is easier."

CONDITIONS GROWING BETTER

President Forgan of the First came over from Harbor Point this week long enough to look into the business situation and gave it as his opinion that "the situation has turned easier." A few minor companies have cut or suspended dividends but the percentage of business failures is not increasing. In a few cases dividends have been cut off "to keep the money in the business" owing to the restrictions the banks have been obliged to put upon borrowers for capital uses. In all, more than fifty companies have increased their dividend rates this year. Of these increases thirty-three were made by public utility companies. The only important railroad dividend increases were made by the New York, Chicago and St. Louis and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. Among the other important companies that increased their dividend rates were American Tobacco, United States Rubber, Colorado Fuel and Mexican Petroleum.

Not less than fourteen prominent companies have declared stock dividends. Thirty-seven new companies began dividends this year. Some of them of course are the subsidiary oil companies made necessary by the Standard's dissolution. A few large extra cash dividends have been paid during the year, the principal payments being 24 per cent of the accumulated dividend on American Can preferred, 35 per cent of the accumulated dividend on Colorado Fuel and Iron preferred, 15 per cent on American tobacco, $40 a share on Standard Oil of New York and $11 a share on Standard Oil of Indiana. All of which goes to prove that Mr. Forgan is right and that "the situation has turned easier."

BIG APPLE CROP FOR ILLINOIS

Alto Pass, Ill.—Union county is now harvesting one of the largest crops of early apples in its history. From Alto Pass alone there have already been shipped over seventy-five carloads, and it is only the middle of the season. Such varieties as Duchess, saps of wine, Benoni and red June are coming in. The greater part of the crop is handled by St. Louis and Chicago commission men.

The price on track here has ranged from $3 to $5 per barrel. At these figures the growers have been realizing a handsome profit. The shipping season began June 2d and will continue through August.

MONEY TIGHT IN ALBERTA

Calgary, Alta., July 30.—With the biggest crops in history, ready for harvesting in two weeks, money is tighter than ever known here.

Automatically Subtracts Checks Adds Deposits Gives New Balance Marks Overdrafts

When these bank statements were made out, the machine automatically subtracted Checks, added Deposits, gave New Balance, and automatically marked Overdrafts.

All the operator had to do was put down the amounts—the machine knew when to subtract, when to add, and when to mark Overdrafts.

They were made on the new Burroughs Adding-Subtracting Machine, which is as far ahead of ordinary adding machines as ordinary machines are ahead of hand work.

For instance, the National City Bank say this New Burroughs has effected a 50 per cent saving over their former methods.

Our New System Bulletin, "Bank Statements," shows statement forms in actual use in large and small banks all over the country.

It doesn't theorize. It shows only the work actually being done. Banks in Chicago, Richmond, Va., Canton, O., Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Birmingham, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Ga., Albion, N. Y., Pittsburg, Nashville, Tenn., and other cities are represented.

A copy of this new Bulletin will be sent to any bank man, free.

The image displays three sample bank statements. The top statement is from 'The Fourth Street National Bank, Philadelphia' for 'GEO. A. HERRICH, 839 CHESTNUT ST. PHILADELPHIA, PA.' It shows a list of checks and deposits, with a final balance of $1,000.00. The middle statement is from 'The National City Bank of Chicago' for 'JOHN DOE & COMPANY' for the month of January. It shows a list of checks and deposits, with a final balance of $1,000.00. The bottom statement is from 'Merchants National Bank, Richmond, Va.' for 'RICHARD ROE' for the month of January. It shows a list of checks and deposits, with a final balance of $1,000.00. Arrows point to specific calculations on each statement, illustrating the machine's automatic subtraction of checks and addition of deposits to arrive at the new balance.

Newspapers are urging the dominion government to loan $10,000,000 in Alberta either to farmers or by taking up provincial or city bond issues.

WILL PAY IN FULL

According to the report of the trustees of the Blue Mound bank J. W. Brown & Company will pay in full and it is estimated from the assets on hand that there will be something left. The report shows that the amount owed depositors when the bank closed September 28, 1912, was something over $173,000, of which there was $18,000 set off on account of indebtedness due the bank by depositors, leaving $155,000 to be paid depositors, of which a dividend of 20 per cent, or something over $31,000, has already been paid. This leaves the net amount now due depositors a little over $124,000.

Conditions in Texas Panhandle Region

Address by President Slaton of the Panhandle Bankers Association at annual convention

Since our last meeting another year has passed, with its hopes, its regrets, its successes and its failures, and altogether it has been a very satisfactory year. For the past several years the most of the Panhandle country has been affected by the protracted drought which has covered the whole state. The periods of good and bad crop years, and the series of years with much rainfall followed by a series of dry years, form a cycle in Texas as they did in Egypt in the days of the Pharaohs, when Joseph sat in judgment. We have just about passed through the cycle of drought, and are now expecting to enter upon the period of plentiful rain and I predict that the next few years will be the most prosperous we have ever seen in the Panhandle.

Good Roads

One of the very important, I might say vital conditions, necessary to the prosperity of any community is its means of communication. Rome's greatness was enhanced by reason of its numerous and splendid highways, which not only afforded, for that day, a quick and safe route for its armies, but also provided for the transportation of its vast commerce to the interior. In our Panhandle country we have no water power, or cheap fuel, therefore, no manufacturing, no mines or minerals, but we are blessed with one of the most fertile agricultural regions in the state, and the wealth of our people must be drawn from the soil through farming and stock raising, and I know of no one thing that will do more toward fostering those industries than good roads.

Any community from whose center radiate numerous good roads, will grow in numbers, in wealth, in intelligence and in contentment. If for no other than a selfish reason, it behooves the Panhandle bankers to encourage the building of more and better roads. While material for macadamizing may be scarce in some places, the level country and easy grading will offset the cost of bringing in material from a distance.

The cost of hauling farm products over inferior roads in Texas will average about 42 cents per ton-mile, while in Massachusetts it is only about 11 cents; owing to the bad roads of Texas, our farmers and business men are annually losing several million dollars. Mr. Radford, president of the Farmers' Union, very aptly says that "farm products are increased in value by getting them where needed at the proper time" that "good roads annihilate distance, and cancel space. They bring the farmer nearer the market, and place the city man in closer touch with nature." We feel sure that nothing will aid the growth of the Panhandle country, and increase its wealth producing class more rapidly and more substantially, than the building of good roads. The banker should advise and encourage such work.

High Cost of Living

As one passes on from youth to manhood and old age, it is pleasing to retrospect, because we have forgotten the harsh words and petty hardships of long ago, and only remember the pleasant things and the good times. And who would have it otherwise? We do not wish to look back upon an ugly picture; it is the true, the good and the beautiful that we wish to remember. The barefooted boy of yesterday, whose stonebruises were a distinction, now has a son whose heel never knocked the fire from flint rocks, but whose ties cost more than his father's whole wardrobe formerly cost. And the mother who rode horseback behind her sweetheart to church, has a daughter who will not go out unless it be in an auto.

Is it the high cost of living or the cost of high living that makes the change in this day from our boyhood days? Every home has its library; magazines and newspapers come in each mail; your table is laden with delicacies that formerly you could not obtain, and you have discarded the homespun clothes, the wool hat and brogan shoes, for better and neater apparel.

It is true that nearly every commodity costs more now than ever before. That the luxuries of yesterday become the necessities of to-day, and that while our living costs more than formerly, we live better and earn more than formerly.

"The law of the world is progress along the line of spiritual evolution. The life of the world is better to-day than it has ever been in the past." I would not go back to the methods of the good old days and live as they lived if I could, nor would you.

Crop Conditions

The prosperity of this district depends largely upon the amount of rainfall we receive. When the farmer has large yields and the stockman fat cattle, all business is flourishing. Our farmers are each year using more scientific methods in the cultivation of their soil, and the conservation of the moisture. I have seen a luxuriant crop growing upon the farm of a man who used his brain as well as his muscle in his business, while his neighbor, who used little else than muscle, made a failure. It is a lesson that cannot help being learned and taken advantage of. All farm products are bringing good prices, and farmers who are using good judgment in marketing, as well as raising their crops, are showing the results by the increase of their bank accounts, by their better homes and more comfortable surroundings. The stockman has nothing to complain of, unless it be that the scarcity of cattle cause the numerous purchasers to annoy him. The Panhandle country is pretty well stocked, the prices are satisfactory, and likely to remain so for some time. The total value of meats and food animals in international trade is, according to the latest figures of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, department of commerce, approximately $450,000,000 per annum, of which about one-third is from the United States, and consists chiefly of pork and pork products.

While the total value of meat products and food animals exported from the United States in the year which ends with last month will be but about $150,000,000 against approximately $250,000,000 in 1906, this reduced total far exceeds that of any other country. Meats and food animals exported from Argentina in 1912 amount to but $67,000,000 in value; from Australia in 1911, $31,000,000; from New Zealand, $21,000,000; from Canada, $14,000,000 and from Uruguay, $11,000,000. These six countries, the United States, Argentina, New Zealand, Canada and Uruguay, are the chief meat exporting countries of the world. It will be seen from these figures that our meat exports are not only larger than those of any other country, but actually exceed the aggregate of our five principal rivals. The fall of our exports of meats and food animals which has characterized recent years has occurred chiefly in beef; pork products, always an important factor in the meat exports, show but a slight reduction.

The United States still has, despite the reduction in her live stock in recent years, a larger number of food animals than any other country in the world. Of cattle alone, the number in the United States is 56,000,000, the only country having a larger number being India, with 113,000,000, while Russia in Europe and Asia has 51,000,000, Argentina 29,000,000, Brazil 25,000,000, Germany 21,000,000, and the United Kingdom 12,000,000. These figures are in round terms and for the latest available year. Of sheep the United States has 54,000,000, Australia 92,000,000, Russia 85,000,000, Argentina 67,000,000, the United Kingdom 30,000,000, India 26,000,000, Uruguay 26,000,000, and New Zealand 24,000,000. Of swine the United States has 61,000,000, Russia 13,000,000, and Germany 22,000,000. The total number of food animals (including in this term merely cattle, sheep and hogs) was, at the latest available date, in the United States 169,000,000, Russia in Europe and Asia 149,000,000, India 140,000,000, Australia 104,000,000, Argentina 98,000,000, Germany 51,000,000, the United Kingdom 46,000,000 and France 39,000,000.

Thus we see that the shortage in food animals is almost wholly in cattle, and this shortage will likely continue for many years, with good prices and opportunity for our stockmen to reap large returns awaiting them.

With such conditions prevailing it only remains for the farmer and stockman to go into copartnership and finish the cattle, sheep and hogs at home, and reap the full value of the gain, the forage and the flesh. The oil mill and the silo are the factors that will bind this union, when every farmer is a stockman and every stockman a farmer, our country will prosper almost beyond measure.

Currency

For some years past there has been a nationwide demand for a change in our currency laws. We have a shortage of actual money at crop moving time each year, and this shortage affects business to such an extent that it often results seriously. The panic of 1907 has shown the country banker that no matter how prosperous the country may be, he is perfectly helpless when the city bankers decide to shut off credit. We have been taught to look to Wall Street instead of to the federal government as the source of our money supply, and when Wall Street takes snuff, all the country bankers sneeze. This is a condition that should not exist, but how to remedy this condition is a subject that is beyond my ken. I do believe, however, that the Aldrich bill would, if enacted into law, strengthen the hold of the big fellow and make the little fellows more dependent than ever, and I am glad to see that the proposed Glass bill is an improvement over the Aldrich bill, and I hope that in the wisdom of much discussion, and from the fact that many of our wisest statesmen have devoted some years to the study of this most intricate subject, they will evolve a law that will protect the people from panics caused by too much prosperity. But will they do it? Will the proposed bill give relief to the country banks? Our people are wealth producers; they raise cattle, hogs, sheep, horses and the various agricultural products. This is the fountain head of the stream of wealth, and the collateral from such a source is, and of right should be, the very best to back up the country banks, and it seems to me ought to be sufficient to enable them to get needed help from the government, and for a long enough time to allow the farmers and stockmen to mature and market their products. But they can't do it in either 45 or 60 days. Neither can they change the times nor the seasons, and produce a quick developing crop. Therefore, the Panhandle banks will receive but little direct benefit from any currency legislation now in sight. If the Glass bill becomes law, we may not be able to expand our loans to such an extent as we now do, and depend upon our ever ready correspondents to supply us when we are short, by just sending in our good cattle paper, but if we had a "National Blue Sky Law" the small banks in the Panhandle might be protected from taking stock in the regional reserve banks, but we can curtail our loans, do less developing and helping to build up the country, and still have sound and strong little banks all over this country that will eventually be a credit to Texas and to the nation.

BIG GRAIN YIELD FOR MONTANA

More than 54,000,000 bushels of grain is the estimated production for Montana for the year 1913, according to preliminary figures on the crop yield prepared yesterday by J. M. Kennedy, commissioner of agriculture and publicity. The estimated acreage is nearly 1,000,000. A comparison with the actual yield for the year 1912 is interesting, and shows that the production this year will exceed that of last by nearly 5,000,000 bushels. In 1912 something over 49,000,000 bushels of grain were harvested. With the exception of barley, the yield this year as estimated is much greater than that of 1912 in all grains. In 1912 the barley yield was 1,424,000 bushels, while this year it is estimated at 9,328,000, a difference of over 400,000 acres. The oat crop is estimated to be the biggest this year, and Mr. Kennedy in his preliminary figures places the yield at 24,672,000 bushels, with an estimated acreage made by the bureau of statistics of the United States department of agriculture of 514,000 acres. Wheat comes second on the list with an acreage according to government estimate of 879,000 acres and a yield of 21,614,000 bushels. In 1912, 476,000 acres were sown to oats and the yield was 22,848,000 bushels. In the same year 803,000 acres were planted to wheat while the yield was 19,346,000 bushels. The flax this year will yield 6,370,000 bushels with an acreage of 490,000, as against 5,520,000 bushels last year on 460,000 acres.

NEBRASKA CONVENTION

Secretary William B. Hughes announces that the 1913 convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association will be held in Lincoln Thursday and Friday, September 25th and 26th. Preparations for the meeting are well under way.

Invitations have been extended to a number of prominent speakers outside the state, as well as to a number within the state. A good program is assured.

O. W. Moore has accepted a position as cashier for the State Bank at Allerton, Ill.

CONDITION OF NORTH CAROLINA BANKS

Raleigh, N. C., July 28.—The 400 state banks, including 16 branch banks, doing business in North Carolina subject to the supervision of the state corporation commission have an aggregate of $82,642,067 assets, a gain of $11,535,102 for the past year, according to the summary of the condition of banks issued by the corporation commission. The summary is based on reports of condition of individual banks at the close of business June 4th last, as compared with reports of condition June 14, 1912. The summary shows an increase in deposits for the past year of $7,608,856, the deposits being $58,734,821, against $51,225,963 a year ago. Time certificates of deposit increased $1,579,242; deposits subject to check increased $3,405,688; demand certificates of deposit $478,470, and savings deposits $2,045,456.

The aggregate capital stock is $10,828,968, a gain of $873,258 for the year. Loans and discounts aggregate $61,089,867, a gain of $9,332,039 for the year. The item of banking houses, furniture and fixtures shows a gain of $293,867. It is a notable fact that the holdings of the North Carolina bonds by the state banks show a decrease for the year of $26,520, the total holdings at this time being $350,521. Demand loans outstanding aggregate $2,378,439, a gain of $489,337 for the year. Amounts due from banks and bankers show an increase of $633,589, the total at the last accounting being $9,923,142.

PRESIDENT PARDONS BANKER

President Wilson decided to grant a full and unconditional pardon to Isaac B. Walker, convicted at Dallas, Tex., May 29, 1912, of misapplication of the funds of the Union National of Dallas, of which he was vice-president, and of making false reports to the comptroller of the currency. His five-year sentence was commuted by President Wilson May 21, 1913, to one year and a day. The president advised Attorney-General McReynolds that upon a further consideration of the case he had decided to pardon the prisoner.

DISCUSS PLAN FOR DISTRIBUTION OF GOVERNMENT DEPOSITS

At a conference this week between Southern bankers and the treasury department the conditions under which banks will be allowed to share in the distribution of the $50,000,000 which the government proposes to deposit were discussed. The secretary proposes to accept as security government bonds and high class state, municipal and other bonds of unquestioned standing and prime commercial paper.

Government bonds will be accepted at par. Other bonds when approved by the secretary will be accepted at 75 per cent of their market value. Commercial paper must be passed upon by a committee of six in each city, composed of five members of the clearing house association and a special representative of the department. Accepted commercial paper is to be deposited in selected banks, which will be required to give satisfactory bond for its safe keeping.

Half the amount allotted to each bank will be deposited during August, the other half in September. Of the funds deposited 25 per cent shall be returned by December 15th, 25 per cent by January 15th, 25 per cent by February 15th and the remaining 25 per cent by March 1st.

The representatives of the banks which are to be the immediate receivers of the government deposits that they would be expected by ment deposits were given to understand that ment willingly to redeposit or rather to make loans of these government deposits to the smaller banks at nominal interest rates.

James M. McIntosh of Indianapolis, who arrived with the western bankers, indorsed the currency bill warmly. In commenting on McAdoo's crop plan, he said:

"Right at the psychological time Secretary McAdoo announces a new policy whereby the treasury department deals directly with the banks of the great crop producing regions, and I do not have the slightest doubt that the hold of Wall Street on the country is permanently broken. While men of less capacity and more limited vision are debating what ought to be done McAdoo acts. He does things, and so far he has made no mistakes."

LOCAL CLEARING HOUSE SENDS REPRESENTATIVES TO CAPITAL

In response to the invitation issued by Secretary McAdoo to the clearing house associations in fifty-nine cities in the West, South and Pacific West, to send representatives to Washington in order to confer relative to plans for placing $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 in the national banks of those sections, the Chicago clearing house designated George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental, and W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, as its representatives.

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE AT OMAHA

The state commission on agriculture, Carson Hildreth, chairman, has called a conference of the commercial interests of Nebraska, to meet at Omaha August 20th, at 2 P. M. at the Commercial Club. Getting farm demonstrators at work in each county is the object.

TACOMA

W. J. Patterson, president of the Washington Bankers Association the last year, is cashier of Hayes and Hayes, Aberdeen. At the convention held this week in Bellingham he ran things in his customary efficient manner and wound up his administration in a successful way.

Secretary P. C. Kauffman reported practically every bank in the state as a member of the association. Mr. Kauffman has served the Washington bankers as their secretary for many years and is a seasoned veteran when it comes to association matters. He always works along progressive, up-to-date lines.

ARKANSAS BANK FAILS

The Bank of Forrest City, Forrest City, Ark., capitalized at $40,000 with deposits of $460,000 and a surplus of $60,000 closed its doors on Saturday. It is said that a number of other business concerns are involved. The officers are Judge E. A. Rolfe, president; J. D. Baugh, vice-president; Eugene Williams, cashier, and C. L. Summers, assistant cashier. The inability of the St. Francis Levee Board to float a $750,000 bond issue authorized at a recent session of the legislature, is stated to be the cause of the failure. The Levee Board and the bank were closely associated and the bank, it is stated, carried practically all the Levee Board funds. According to a report of the bank in March, the assets were listed as follows: loans and discounts, $475,000; due from other banks, $85,000; cash on hand and exchange $15,000.

Texas Bank Commissioner Named

Governor Colquitt has appointed W. W. Collier of San Antonio state commissioner of banking and insurance to fill the vacancy caused by the recent resignation of B. L. Gill, who has accepted the vice-presidency of the Seaboard National, New York.

THE CHICAGO CONFERENCE

Secretary F. E. Farnsworth sends out word that those invited to the Chicago conference by the A. B. A. currency commission include 47 presidents of state bankers Associations 188 clearing house presidents and the members of the commission. The date will be "soon after August 11th, if the currency bill is agreed upon by the democratic caucus in Washington."

ELECTED PRESIDENT OF NEW YORK BANK

Sidney H. Herman has been elected president of the Union Exchange National of New York, to succeed his father, the late Henry S. Herman. Mr. Herman has been a director of the bank for a number of years, and its attorney since its organization.

The Granite City National, First National and Granite City Trust and Savings, all of Granite City, Ill., hereafter will close at 12 o'clock on Saturday in order to conform with the St. Louis Clearing House of which they are members.

READ "Joe" Pollard's great speech at Bellingham on "Progress and the Banker" (mostly new) and be delighted.

"JOE" is broken hearted. He couldn't go at the last moment, and his paper was read by a "pinch hitter."

FOR ten years the scintillating Iowan has been invited annually by the hopeful Mr.
 Kauffman. Unfortunately both wife and mother are ill and Mr. Pollard had to cancel.

THERE are other disappointments. "Joe" had intended to make a killing with his "new John Jay Abbott tie and collar" and to
 "hobnob with Edens."

YOU can see the new "haberdasherie" by referring to the new Pollard half-tone in another column. Takes a very handsome man to get away with it.

J. EDWARDS SMITH in retiring from the contributing editor's post in the Twin Cities says: "I have never had a correspondent so absolutely on the square and reliable and have never done similar work for a paper that has the merit back of it to demand a large circulation as has THE CHICAGO BANKER, and I shall continue to do a tout when occasion presents itself."

SEVERAL Minneapolis banks are interested in the new Marquette Avenue association.
 Marquette is the name of former First Avenue
 S, on which are situated the Northwestern National, Hennepin County Savings, First National and Union State banks and the State
 Institution for Savings.

THE First is about to build a twenty-story building. The association will work for improvement of this financial street. A. V.
 Ostrom, cashier of Northwestern, is secretary-treasurer. H. L. Moore of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, and O. E. Naegele, formerly of the Metropolitan National, are among the directors.

THAT postal savings has not knocked the savings bank business gally west may be deduced from a statement by Governor A. O.
 Eberhart of Minnesota to the Outlook magazine by telegraph, in which he showed an increase in two years in the savings deposits of $11,717,105. Totals compared were 1911, $28,- 703,149 and 1913, $40,420,254.

CLEARINGS for Minneapolis for the six months show an increase of $111,779,125 over last year. The total for July was $97,435,- 219, a gain of $16,000,000 and for the six months was $582,968,060.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN, vice-president of the Northwestern National, on August 1st completed his twenty-fifth year of advance from messengership. Looking backward Mr.
 Chapman philosophizes as to changes and rapid strides of Minneapolis, yet says: "This old town has just begun to grow."

 ally become $200,000,000, increased $2,000,000

BOND SALE

The Commissioners of Street Improvement District
 Number Ten, Jonesboro, Arkansas, will on September 7th, 1913, receive and open bids for thirty thousand dollars of six per cent, ten year street improvement bonds.
 Certified check for $2000.00 must accompany each bid. For full particulars write

B. H. BERGER, Secretary
JONESBORO - ARKANSAS

in the fiscal year just ended and amount to $31,734,284. The increase is from sale of state timber and lands and royalties from iron lands. The state deficit for the year is more than $1,000,000. Expenditures were $18,959,- 762. The cash balance at the close of the year was $1,842,368.

COUNTER sales of $100,000 out of $700,- 000 authorized educational state bonds are to begin at 10 a. m. August 11th. The denomination is $100 and the rate 5 per cent. The bonds are redeemable at the end of three years.
 Receipts will be issued and the bonds mailed later.

A TRIPLE alliance has been made by the president and cashier of the State Bank at Mohall, N. D. They have married. Meeting satisfactorily in a business way and socially President S. H. Sleeper decided to make the bond closer and was accepted by Cashier (Miss) A. L. Shattuck. The bank's official announcement of the wedding is a new feature in financial paper.

WILLIAM E. LEE, Long Prairie banker, formerly president of the Minnesota
 Bankers Association, has written to Washington against the short-term provision in the new banking law. He said it would not be any advantage to farmers to have loans for a short time, as most farm loans are for five years.

PRACTICALLY every secretary in the West will bulletin the Chicago-Boston special to his member banks. Many states have specials of their own.

BUT the bankers of the larger cities do not have time nor the inclination to spend a week en route each way on sight-seeing tours.

SECRETARY GEORGE D. BARTLETT has just such a plan for his country bankers, recognizing that those in the larger cities are not attracted.

HIS "tour" to Boston will pass through Chicago September 30th to catch the low summer rates.

HE is planning to go via Pennsylvania lines through Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, stopping for sight-seeing at each of these cities. This will fill up the week prior to the Boston convention and in returning the trip will be made to include Montreal, Quebec, Niagara Falls and Buffalo.

THE Chicago-Boston special will leave five days later, October 4th, and will travel east at the heels of the Twentieth Century
 Limited—twenty-four hours to Boston.

WE get a reduced fare also and the finest train in the world. Literature has been sent out. If you fail to get it write us a postal.

WE can fix you up on Bartlett's train if you like the longer ride.

SECRETARY BROWN of Michigan likes the joint-state train idea and will send out full literature for the big Chicago special.
 Emory W. Clark is on the committee and his crowd will get on at Toledo.

SECRETARY WM. B. HUGHES already has sent out a reminder of the Chicago-Boston train. Will want a full car at least.

THE First National at Canton, Mo., has been keeping open house all week in its new bank building.

THE "Home Paper" puts it at the top of the list for towns the size of Canton.
 The "ladies' department" is new and made a hit.

IT isn't considered either profane or offensive in Keokuk to refer to excursionists through the new locks as Dam-Seers.

SEPTEMBER 1st is labor day this year.

IF the "witty" paragraphers on the republican dailies think they are helping things out in a party way slamming at Bryan and his lecture engagements they should drop into a genuine Chautauqua town and "wise up."

E. J. WRIGHTMAN of York, Neb., is just raising Cain out there. He's going to remove to California for good.

EVERYBODY'S opposing it! Mr. Wightman is president of three banks, director or officer in three more and treasurer of a whole string of things, such as loan associations, Sunday schools, Y. M. C. A's., etc.

BEEN the wheel horse in York for a quarter of a century. You bet they are mad about it!

EDWIN F. ROREBECK, former national bank examiner, and Philip Tillinghast, a former receiver of national banks, have formed a copartnership to engage in the business of bank and commercial auditing, their New York office being located in the American Exchange National Bank Building, 128 Broadway.

CALUMET Trust & Savings of Morgan Park, Ill., increased its capital stock on August 1st from $25,000 to $50,000.

THE officers of this bank are Frank Nay, president (Mr. Nay is comptroller of the C. R. I. & P. R. R.); H. R. Clissold, vice-president; Fred Bateman, cashier, and the directors are Henry R. Baldwin, Chas. G. Blake, W. D. Hurlbut, E. J. Price and Ira M. Price.

THE bank owns its own building and is managed on very conservative lines.

THE Mechanics-American, under the careful hand of J. S. Calfee, gets out one of the strongest financial letters issued in the West.

IT fails to find any recession of business locally and declares the people of Missouri "are not worrying about the future."

YOU can get on the mailing list by addressing a polite postal to Mr. Calfee.

EVERYBODY will be glad to know that Mrs. Fred Hoopes, wife of the popular Texas banker, is recovering rapidly after undergoing a severe surgical operation.

WHAT do you think the first women's jury ever impaneled in Illinois did to the woman defendant in the case? Yep, you guessed it the first time. She was convicted.

YOU'VE noticed that all the tourist advertising in the St. Louis papers of late has been illustrated with snow scenes?

"JIM" WAKEFIELD and Fred Hoopes are back from that tarpon fishing jaunt entered into by about a dozen good fellows. Each in turn had a postal photo showing his monster catch. Some fish all the time.

THE Texas bankers joined in a farewell present to B. L. Gill. They decided upon cuff-buttons, it being rumored that in New York, where Mr. Gill is to live, the bankers wear such things.

NEBRASKA at Omaha and Illinois at Chicago will hold state conventions on the same dates, September 25th-26th.

SECRETARY McADOO seems to have run out of invitation cards for his crop moving conference just before he reached New York. Too far down in the alphabet.

FIRST the government two per cents went down. Then straw hats took a slide. Blame it on the New York conspirators!

"PLAN proposed is most practical and will do great good, and I believe will safeguard the situation. Please accept my sincere congratulations." Telegram from Mr. Reynolds to Secretary McAdoo.

"THE money outlook has been more favorable, but the prospects of easy money conditions have now become more pronounced through the announcement that the treasury department is prepared to deposit government funds on usual bank security with western banks to facilitate crop movements. This would seem to eliminate fears of money tension in the future from speculative situation." —Ware & Leland.

HERE'S a Boston society item: "Hagop Barasyjian of Fitchburg and Menad Estaboborakamasian of Lowell went fishing yesterday in Lake Chargoggagoggmauchaugagoggchaubliagungamaug, near Worcester, with their cousin, Hajjoman Saralaneroparanian, whom they are visiting for the week-end."

"A NUMBER of eastern bankers are putting forth their best efforts to elect at least one officer in the American Bankers Association from among the eastern bankers."

"AS it has been twenty years since Pennsylvania has held any office, the friends of Mr. William A. Law, first vice-president of the First National of Philadelphia, Pa., are putting forth their best efforts to elect him vice-president of the association."

BOTH of these "putting forth their best efforts" paragraphs are extracts from a "notice" in the good old American Banker.

THE same notice tells us that Mr. Law finding himself in the banking business in South Carolina and not holding any outside honorary position, "became the organizer and first president of the South Carolina Bankers Association."

HE hadn't been long in Pennsylvania until he secured the presidency of that state association.

WE join the writer in believing that "he (Mr. Law) is well qualified to hold such a prominent office," without regard to which of the three offices named it refers.

HAD the American Banker said "well entitled" to the office instead of "well qualified," and then had quoted at length the services performed in the interests of the A. B. A. in the past years it would have been a stronger recommendation.

HOWEVER it may have been "putting forth its best efforts" with the material at hand.

SECRETARY SKINNER of Montana, at Great Falls, will make reservations on the Boston-Chicago special for any of his member bankers.

HE will call special attention to it in his next official bulletin.

GEORGE F. ORDE will round up the Twin-City delegation and expects a large attendance.

GEORGE and F. W. WOODRUFF of Joliet are among the early compartment reservations.

IOWA doesn't want "all in the same car" for the reason that her delegation will require several cars.

SECRETARY ARCH B. DAVIS is "fathering" a delegation to Boston but will advise his members by bulletin of the big Chicago-Boston special.

HIS convention will be held in Louisville, September 17th and 18th, just in time to let the "flying squadron" off to Secretary Andrew Smith's meet at Indianapolis. Then on to Chicago for the Illinois meet.

PUTTING H. P. Humason of St. Paul on the invitation committee for the Boston train was a hit.

HE will call on all St. Paul bankers "to see who are going." That's what we call the real goods.

M. HUMASON has had a two weeks Great Lakes trip to Buffalo and return and "feels fine."

W. E. STONE and Mrs. Stone of Peoria are "on the list" for the Boston special. Are you?

KANSAS has 30,000 motor cars, or one for every thirty-two of population. Chasing grasshoppers in motor cars is the great Kansas sport, next to shanghaiing help for the wheat harvest.

ANDREW J. GRAHAM says "the most logical security for the Chicago investor is a sound, six per cent Chicago mortgage."

TO prove it Banker Graham cites the record of his own banking house—Graham & Sons—for fifty-six years.

"IN all that time," said he, "no one has lost a cent of principal or interest on bonds or mortgages bought of us."

"NO, they didn't have to take property either, nor did they wait for their money beyond the due dates."

UNCLE HENRY WOODROW, of Ohio, denied appointment to lucrative office because his nephew happens to be president of the United States, will subscribe to the sentiment that there is such a thing as being too all-fired particular in politics.

MISSOURI gained a little over twenty millions in bank deposits the last year.

AMONG the articles of the August Home Progress are "The Play Hours of Country Children" by Lisbeth G. Fish, "The Fairies of Pontefract Forest" by Mary Willard Keyes, "Comfort for Mother and Boy" by Christina H. Baker, "Educational Wall Paper" by Felix J. Koch, "The Daily Vacation Bible School" by Dorothy Black, "Keeping the Baby Well in Summer" by Leonard Keene Hirshberg, "From Twelve to Fifteen" by Alice Perkins Coville, and "The Friendship of Books" by Mary A. Laselle.

W. G. EDENS who went via San Francisco to the Washington convention found himself in good company on the "Shasta Limited."

FROM the Golden Gate there were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. F. O'Brien, C. L. Smith of the Anglo; Francis W. Wolf of the Bank of California; P. B. Dean for the Crocker, and George A. Kennedy of the First.

ALL Californians will travel on the big Chicago Special to Boston in October. Don't get crowded out.

FURTHERMORE the coast bankers are "yelling for Chapman" and say they will keep it up until he's seated in the chair at Boston.

H. S. FLETCHER of Watsonville, Cal., regretted he could not join the hikers to the Washington meet but he sent a characteristic telegram to Edens and others on the train:

Notice of Receiving Bids for Jackson County Hard Surfaced Road Bonds

Notice is hereby given that the Board of County Commissioners in and for Jackson County, Florida, at an adjourned meeting to be had and held in the court house at the Clerk's office in Marianna, Florida, on the 16th day of August, A. D., 1913, will receive sealed bids for the purchase of hard surfaced road bonds in the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars issued by said county; said bonds to bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum, interest payable annually on the first day of October, each and every year until maturity, and will mature on the first day of October, A. D. 1951. The issuance of said bonds having been duly authorized by an election held for that purpose and said bonds duly validated under decree of court.

All bids must be accompanied by a certified check in the sum of Twenty-Five Hundred Dollars, payable to order of W. J. Singletary, as Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, as a guarantee of good faith, and that the bidder will comply with contract if his bid be accepted.

All bids must comply in form to the provisions of Section 794, General Statutes of the State of Florida.

IF you've not heard Brother Fletcher do one of his Scotch dialect stunts there is a treat in store. He has Harry Lauder backed off the stage.

HE knows Burns by heart and lots that you never will see in the library editions. Just ask him when you see him on the way to Boston.

MR. and MRS. EDWARD CHAMBERLAIN of San Antonio were with the party to Portland. Mr. Chamberlain started with the members of the Sierra Club and had a splendid time. His two sons were along enroute to National Park.

WE see by the esteemed "Record-Herald" that two Chicago bankers were delegated by the clearing house to go on to Washington to help McAdoo split up that fifty millions crop moving money.

OF the two named, W. T. Fenton we know well, but who is "George M. McReynolds" whom the Record-Herald says went along?

DOWN at Jonesboro, Ark., on September 7th, they will receive bids for $30,000 6 per cent improvement bonds, to run ten years. For particulars write B. H. Berger, secretary of the district.

THE Boston convention program isn't "out" yet. It is taking shape rapidly, however, under the masterful hands at the helm.

THIS year all the sections will hold sessions on Tuesday, the first official day of the convention. Formerly they were sandwiched in between the two A. B. A. days.

THAT plan prolonged the visit of the busy banker who only wanted to attend the association meeting.

TRUST company section probably will hear an address from Prof. W. H. Taft of Yale.

WEDNESDAY forenoon Dr. Butler likely will be the one big gun to fire, with the necessary routine of the opening day. His will be fine talk.

ON the afternoon of Wednesday will be the agricultural and educational section at which Chairman Joseph Chapman will preside.

HE has promised a huge "Double Bill" in James J. Hill, made up as a farmer, and Dr. George H. Vincent will be the "Education." Could you beat it?

HILL is one of his country's biggest men and Vincent is a real treat. You'll not miss it, not even for a clam bake.

ON Thursday A. M. Finance Minister White of Canada, who made such a hit at Ottawa before the New York bankers, will be in the limelight.

HE will be followed immediately by "The New Constitution," a one-act sketch prepared by R. E. James of Pennsylvania and his gentlemanly assistants on the committee.

THAT'S another session you will not want to miss—not for two clam bakes.

WE hear that section chairmen will be on the council for the year they serve. Each section thus will have one spokesman and not three as now.

EX-PRESIDENTS probably will be restricted to one year on the council, or, if the convention wills it, for three years as now.

THE afternoon of Thursday will be a sort of "Field Day" for the new currency bill. The powers that be, at Washington, will not be in it.

MEMBERS of the currency commission will, however. There may be short talks by Wade, Wexler, Talbert, Reynolds, Forgan, Rue and perhaps (note the perhaps) by Swinney.

THAT will open it up and anyone present can have a look in. No cut-and-dried program as at New Orleans.

AMONG the "Boy Scouts" who are expected to participate are Yates, Frame, Fowler, Church and other authors of "plans" or "critiques" on the subject.

REALLY the Boston convention is to be an innovation. No printed committee reports nor reports of officers will be read. No responses to the address of welcome. Business from the word go.

EX-PRESIDENTS will preside at some of the sessions and that is something.

DON'T forget your reservation on the big train. The walking will be dusty.

J. A. S. Pollard on Progress and the Banker

Washington Bankers Convention at Bellingham. The eloquent Iowan is at his best in paying tribute to the glories of the Northwest Empire

Washington Bankers Association, August 8, 1913—I can assure you that a traveler coming from the Garden of Eden—otherwise known as Iowa—who looks over this reservoir of productiveness, this land rich in natural resources, its valleys and plains blossoming under the touch of husbandry, its hills filled with mineral wealth, emoluments to man's industry and skill; its forest crowned mountains and its magic cities—I can assure that such a sojourner, should he upon his return find that some big, two fisted angel was guarding the portals of bank, home and native commonwealth, on account of some irregularity such as contributing $4 to a campaign fund or being branded a lobbyist by criticism of the tariff schedules, might realize that not all of paradise was lost, that he could cheerfully retrace his footsteps, and when safely out of the reach of the flaming sword sing mockingly; "I don't care if I never come back!"

Iowa has a deep interest in this northwest country, for many of our citizens, our sons and our dollars are taking up their abode in this land of enterprise, prosperity and plenty; some of our bankers are finding a rich and profitable field for investment, and they too are taking interest—a shade better rate than their local customers are satisfied to pay.

You of the northwest country have likewise an interest in Iowa and in every state from which you are drawing the men and the capital which you need to develop your boundless resources.

So have the citizens of every commonwealth in this great Republic a deep interest in the prosperity and progress of every other commonwealth, for our country has become impregnated with the great principle of human brotherhood, that doctrine which teaches us that what is good for one state or section is beneficial to all. The federation of our sovereign states, whose people are imbued with this principle, has firmly established this nation as a great world power whose flag is respected and loved where other flags are respected and feared; and the inspiration of the gospel that we are "members of one another" has let perish for all time every trace of sectional prejudice.

But the doctrine is broader, for it teaches us that the misfortune of one state or section is likewise the misfortune of all and entails upon all a binding obligation. Let the shadow of a great calamity such as befell California when her proud castles by the Golden Gate were wrecked by a convulsion of nature, fall across the golden sands of the Pacific; let the devastation of flood or storm in the valleys of the Ohio or Missouri awake a nation's sympathy, and we see that obligation fulfilled and proven in a most emphatic and practical manner. From the great Middle West where the rich soil of the corn belt yields its plenteous harvest, from the East where the hum of the spindle and melody of the anvil make harmony which chords with "the busy hum of men," from the mighty domains across the great divide where your mountain streams have been harnessed to make the desert clothe in verdure, and from the land of the Cavalier where the cotton blossoms whiten the plains of the southland, from all over this broad land where the light of progress and civilization shines upon a nation blessed by the Creator of all things, the response of the great Republic then comes at seventy miles an hour and a clear track ahead!

It takes an emergency to show the real greatness of the American character and whenever a crisis is to be faced evidence is plentifully apparent that all life holds for the people of these United States is not indexed in market quotations; that the warp and woof of our national fabric is built of a stronger stuff than balance sheets and stock certificates.

In the serious commercial crises through which this country has passed, the banker has never failed to arise to the emergency and prove himself loyal, patriotic and even great. There is no time when the bankers appear so necessary to this country as in the trying days of unsettled credit, the hour of some financial cataclysm. In those times of commercial and financial distress for weeks and months the only light amid general gloom has been some courageous expedient adopted by the bankers in a broad spirit of co-operation, and they have never failed to work and plan until the rift appeared in the clouds and the sun of confidence began to dissipate the shadows of depression.

As citizens of the Republic having come to such a practical application of the doctrine of human brotherhood that we stand in any crisis one people, one country, and under one flag, so it should be with the banking fraternity.

We need less co-operation in the restrictive, competition suppressing sense, by which banks become mere links in the chain of concentration, and we need more of the spirit of co-operation in the maintenance of a high professional standard in the business, and united strength for the preservation of credit in the time of uncertainty and doubt.

To describe progress, to do the thing thoroughly, I should perhaps take you back to the nebular hypothesis—something which was akin to modern clearing house certificates,—and carry you gently forward from chaos to cosmos, from scrip to real money; and then trace the banker from protoplasm down to the Aldrich plan and Dollar Diplomacy, but time forbids, besides you have a living illustration before you that some of the gas from the nebula still survives in the profession, so with your kind permission, which I know will be granted most heartily, we will jump a few billion decades and deal with progress simply as it covers the history of the human race;—that's all,—and so I show you, if you have the imagination of a futurist and the faith of a religious scientist, the formation and downfall of empires and kingdoms, the birth and growth of Republics, the achievements of intelligence and its wonders applied to mechanical skill and in the development of literature and art; the dissipation of superstition and dogmatic creed in the light of pure and undefiled religion, the gradual elevation of mankind toward the highest civilization.

Having thus so concisely evolved order from embryo, with nothing up my sleeve, without the aid of a net, a tank of liquid air, or a bottle of radium, we have the earth established for the banker, but not yet controlled by him, and we will as rapidly trace the evolution of the banker in the material sense. We will again gracefully leap a few eons of time and contemplate the first bank—the one "whereon the wild thyme blows." Here the mineral, mud and salt water of antiquity form a substance, the substance through the centuries gradually developing into something resembling a crude and bashful oyster, the oyster acquiring the rudiments of intelligence, growing a tail, passing progressively through the tadpole and polywog state of existence, finally by watery stages reaching land,—the bank—a higher form of life, until in the progressive course of events recorded within the cycles of ages, we find the fowls of the air, the beasts of the field, then the gorilla, chimpanzee, loan shark, —and finally the banker.

And so we have the bank, a recognized need of every business center, great or small. It does not exist by government patronage, is not forced on the people, it asks no favors and could not exist at all if the people did not demand it.

And so progress has brought us the modern banker, for better, for worse, for good or for evil he is wedded to commercial and industrial progress.

All the world's a bank,
And all the men and women merely customers.
They have their credits and their overdrafts,
And one man in his time draws many checks,—
His wisdom gained by stages; At first the infant

Pushing a penny in his new toy bank,
Then the rude school boy with his bended wire
And gleeful, unwashed face, swiping the coin
To purchase cigarettes; And then the lover
Sighing that twelve per week give woeful prospects

Of early matrimony. Then a plunger,
Full of wild schemes, and shear-ed like the lamb

Smoking the dopeful pipe—a prey to get-rich-quick plans,

Chasing the bubble corporation,
Into the maw of Wall Street; then the City Dad

In fair round paunch, lined with good turtle soup

Wise to sure things and sundry liquid stocks
He learns a thing or two. The sixth stage shifts

Into the keen experienced business man,
With specks on nose and asking only for
The current rate and berth on easy street,
Turning again to childhood's toy in memory
He banks his surplus funds at three per cent,
Seeks but investments sound. Last scene of all

He wills his loving heirs, executors, assigns,
Sans debt, sans loss, sans costs, sans "litigate!"

The highest function of the banker, I like to think, is to fulfill his obligations as the Most Trusted Public Servant. Legislators have regarded him as such. He gains no special privileges from the state, but is subject to every restriction which experience has taught for the protection of his customers—the people. And wherever he has performed his duty as a public servant he has been a power for good in every community. He has been ready to help sustain the credit of the Republic and municipality alike, and every banker of experience has known sleepless nights trying to work out the salvation of his customer and at the same time fulfill his duty in the preservation of his sacred trust as a public custodian.

Trust is a sacred, a shining thing, and the highest compliment which can be paid,—a sincere tribute to the ability and probity of man, for "To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved." The banner of his calling has the sheen of burnished gold, for it is the emblem of Confidence and Sacred Credit. History tells of inequitable deeds, when with special powers used for oppression its luster has been dimmed, but a long record of honorable dealings, sacrifice and patriotism has restored its resplendent glory; but even in this day of independent banking, without special privilege, an occasional betrayal of trust, a mis-step through speculation, vice or extravagance, warns us in bold headlines that the weak, venturesome, the vicious, may enter the ranks and bring reproach upon the Standard.

After all the inner qualities of fidelity and honor are the real assets of the banker; assets not listed in published reports, but proven by a record of duty well performed and under the supervision of that persistent examiner whose voice is "small and still."

The wrong man in the bank hurts the banking business. He reflects upon every member of the profession, just as the dishonest banker brings a curse not alone upon himself, his family and immediate customers, but upon the conservator of trust funds wherever he may be, and his honorable vocation. His misdeeds destroy confidence and disturb the principle of faith in humanity, that credit which is the basic principle of that grand action we call business—the scientific direction of profitable human energy.

The banking institution is the heart of industry and to its throbs the energy of man is stimulated and the boundless resources of our country are made available to mankind when to that heart with confidence and trust untrammelled flow the capital and savings of the community, to be again projected through the channels of industry to build anew the tissues of commerce.

Here we are in the year of grace 1913, living in a marvelous period of business progress. The soil last year yielded over nine billion dollars added wealth. There appears to be an abundance of everything essential to prosperity and the only scarce commodity labor. Our financial and banking system while unscientific and illy adapted to the requirements of trade and commerce under strain, is yet upon a sound and safe basis. We recently came through a great political change and upheaval with no consequent disturbance to business, the only echoes of the storm being the growling of some crusty stand-patter jeering at an insurgent Bull Moose over how it all happened. Some of the great issues over which we argued nine months ago and which divided us as friends and families perhaps, are to be practically tested out and business has recognized that certain re-adjustments will have to be made for some industries. There is no painless method of tariff revision but the people have spoken and those who do not favor it at least have the advantage of knowing what, from their point of view, they may regard as the worst. I have noticed in the Court Journals of Wall Street some questioning as to the attitude of the new administration as to railroad and industrial combinations and mergers, but such legislation as has already been enforced against monopoly does not appear to have

DEATH OF FREDERICK KASTEN

Milwaukee, August 6th.—Frederick Kasten, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, Milwaukee, died at his home, 780 Marshall Street, to-day after a lingering illness of several months. Mr. Kasten's death, although anticipated, came as a shock to the bankers and business men of the city and state, among whom he held a place of high esteem, both as a banker and a citizen.

Mr. Kasten was born in Milwaukee in 1855. He received his early education in a public school and later attended the German-English Academy, after which he entered the National Exchange, soon becoming assistant cashier. He became cashier of the Wisconsin National when that institution was organized twenty years ago and had since risen to the position of vice-president and member of the board of directors. He became vice-president on August 9, 1899, succeeding Charles Best upon the death of the latter.

Mr. Kasten went to Germany in 1880 with the Milwaukee Turners Society and there won national honors for gymnastic feats.

He is survived by two sons, Walter, cashier of the Wisconsin National, and Frederick, Jr., who recently graduated from Culver Military Academy, a daughter, Mrs. Samuel Tallmadge, and five grand children. He also leaves two brothers, Oscar, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, and Charles J., of the Alsted-Kasten Company.

The funeral was held Friday afternoon at the residence, interment being in Forest Home Cemetery. The pall bearers were: L. J. Petit, president of the Wisconsin National, Franz Siemens, James M. Hays, Ralph Miller, Frank Griswold, and Lyman G. Bournique, vice-president of the bank.

MADE-IN-CHICAGO WEEK

More than twice the number of merchants and manufacturers which participated in Made-in-Chicago week one year ago will take part in the third annual window display of Chicago manufactured products which will be made throughout the city next week, August 11-16.

Requests for 20,000 window display cards announcing this event have been supplied by the Chicago Association of Commerce, under whose auspices the Made-in-Chicago week exhibit will be held. The original edition and subsequent editions have been exhausted and the demands during the past few days have anticipated further editions of the official

On next Monday morning every Chicagoan will discover—if the fact has not been brought to his attention before—that Chicago is one of the great manufacturing cities of the world.

McADOO INVITES CONFERENCES ON CROP FUND PLAN

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo issued invitations to the presidents of fifty-nine of the clearing house associations located in the South and West and on the Pacific Coast to send representatives to Washington for the purpose of discussing with him arrangements relative to the proposed plan of depositing from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of the government's money in the national banks of those sections, in order to assist in moving the crops this fall. The representatives from the South met the secretary Thursday and those from the West on Friday of this week; those from the Pacific Coast will confer with Secretary McAdoo August 14th.

The plan of the government with respect to facilitating the crop movement has met with universal commendation, particularly among the bankers of the country, and Secretary McAdoo has received numerous congratulatory messages. It is believed that the attitude of the government in thus evincing a willingness to aid in relieving the strain incident to the crop-moving period, and the acceptance of prime commercial paper as security for the federal deposits in lieu of government bonds, will improve the situation materially and have a tendency to dispel any feeling of pessimism or apprehensiveness which may have been apparent prior to the announcement.

James B. Forgan

James B. Forgan, president of the First National, approves the McAdoo plan of depositing government funds in the banks to assist in moving the crops. In a statement given out he says:

"I have no adverse criticism whatever to make of Secretary McAdoo's proposed action in regard to depositing $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 of the government's idle money with the national banks in the West and South.

"By taking commercial paper as security for such deposits he is, of course, establishing a new precedent, but the words of the act, 'government bonds and otherwise,' seem broad to warrant his so doing. The precedent for accepting other bonds 'such as are available for New England savings banks,' was established by a previous administration, and it is not therefore much of a stretch to established precedent to add to the list of acceptable securities prime commercial paper, approved by clearing house committees, at 65 per cent of its face value. The distribution of so much money among the banks in the West and South at the present time will, I am sure, be very acceptable to the banks and at the same time beneficial to the situation. The deposits being in legal reserve money, will form a cash reserve basis for an extension of banking credit considerably in excess of the amount deposited. The limiting of the benefits of the deposits to such banks as have taken out at least 40 per cent of their authorized circulation is in the interest of the market for government bonds."

The First National, with a capital of $50,000, is being organized at Stevensville, Mont.

SAYS CURRENCY BILL WILL BENEFIT BOND BUSINESS

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan, is of the opinion that the new currency bill, if it pass, will have a tendency to benefit the business of dealers in bonds. Mr. Hulbert said:

"If the Glass-Owen bill is passed, it will provide an elastic currency system. Banks, therefore, will feel more assurance in investing in long-term bonds, because under the rediscount system, which the bill proposes to establish, the banks will be able to take care of seasonal borrowing without having to dispose of their bonds.

"Under our present system, banks hesitate to tie up more than a comparatively small amount of their assets in long-term securities, no matter how meritorious those securities may be. But with an elastic currency system, a larger proportion of bank assets may safely be invested in bonds.

"Bond dealers, of course, were disappointed when the framers of the currency bill eliminated the original provision that notes or bills drawn for the purpose of carrying or trading in bonds should be eligible for rediscount. If that provision had been left in, and notes arising from bond transactions were eligible for rediscount, it would be very beneficial to the bond business.

"But as I have explained, banks all over the country will be better customers than ever for bond dealers, if we get an elastic currency system."

A new savings bank, to be known as the Alexandria Fairfax Savings, Incorporated, is being organized at Alexandria, Va. It will have a capital stock of at least $50,000.

George M. Reynolds

In speaking of the McAdoo plan Mr. Reynolds said:

"It is the best method which has been adopted in recent years to finance the crop movement, and I am perfectly willing to go on record as saying that I believe it will go far toward relieving what money stringency there is at the present time. To my mind the big function of the treasury department of the government is to assist in the free distribution of money in times when the money is required, and I do not know of a better way, under the present existing conditions, for the government to get the money into circulation. That the secretary has decided to loan the money to the western banks, instead of the eastern banks, is, I think, a wise move, at this time, though under different conditions the eastern banks should be entitled to their pro rata. So far as the granting of this relief to the west is concerned, I am heartily in favor of it, and our bank will be one of those, which, under the terms of the plan as outlined, will very likely receive its share of the money."

The Illinois Central is the only road running out of Chicago which operates its trains through East St. Louis, all other roads going via the new merchants bridge, five miles north of East St. Louis.

Rome C. Stephenson, chairman of the savings bank section, has asked that the big Boston special stop at South Bend for a party which he is going to "round up." Of course it will stop.

Senator Owen to His National City Bank Critic

Dear Sir.—I am pleased to receive your comments on the proposed banking and currency bill and have given the matter careful consideration.

I knew, of course, that you agreed with the importance of "mobilizing the reserves," providing "elastic currency," and establishing a "discount market for short-time, self-liquidating, commercial credits" growing out of trade transactions, and your approval of these principles which are found in the banking and currency bill introduced by me (S. 2639) is gratifying.

While the reserves are put in 12 reservoirs (of the 12 federal reserve banks), the reservoirs are piped together by the provisions of the bill, under the control of the federal reserve board, who can cause the reserve superabundant in one section to be transferred to another section needing temporary assistance by requiring one federal reserve bank to loan to another, where the security offered by the borrowing bank is satisfactory to the directors of the lending bank.

The power of the reserve banks to obtain currency from the United States against short-time self-liquidating commercial paper will furnish all of the accommodation any member bank may be expected to require. The power to occasionally use investment securities as a basis for borrowing such currency, I think, would be bad if it should fix a regular custom, but its occasional use might be sometimes very serviceable.

The federal reserve board should no more be stigmatized by the epithet "political appointees" than the supreme court of the United States, whose members are also "political appointees." It is in either case a governmental body of the highest dignity and character—not a partisan machine.

System In England

I remind you that the Bank of England has not on its directory a single banker, broker, or bill discounter, but it is controlled by public opinion as a great national agency and as a safeguard for the commercial and industrial interests of the British Empire.

Your plea that the bankers should control

Sends his reply to Joseph T. Talbert direct and furnishes a very interesting addition to the currency and banking literature of the day. His letter in part the federal reserve board and the proposed reserve system would violate the experience of England, France, and Germany and is contrary to common sense, for the obvious reason that these reserve banks are not created to enable you to make more money but are established to safeguard the commerce and industry (including the banks) of the people of the United States and to put an end to the periodic sinister expansion and contraction of credits leading to the so-called "bull markets" and "bear markets," in which banks like your own have been used as a means of promoting private interests at the public expense.

The bankers have no more right to ask to take charge of the governing functions of the United States proposed to be exercised by the federal reserve board than the railroads would have a right to demand control of the interstate commerce commission, which is intended to regulate them in the interest of public justice. The bankers have no more right to ask control of the federal reserve board than the beef packers of Chicago to demand the right to administer the pure-food act, which is intended to regulate beef packing in the public interest.

I confess that the bankers understand the banking business, that the railroad men understand the railroad business, that the packers understand the beef business, but their point of view is money-making out of their business. Their point of view is not the point of view of the public interest, except so far as an individual may be moved against his own interest by patriotic considerations. And, patriotic considerations have not, in the past, been found sufficient to safeguard the public against the local, sectional, or selfish interests of such private persons, moved by their own natural desire to promote their private fortunes at public expense.

Would Politicians Control

I trust you will not deem it discourteous if I suggest that I appreciate your point of view better than you appreciate the public point of view.

You urge that a "politically controlled bank" can not be kept permanently "out of politics." My answer is that the proposed bank is a governmentally controlled bank, but that if the banks themselves were permitted to control the federal reserve board, the National City Bank would head the list in its political activities to get control of this federal reserve board, and would not be moved altogether by altruistic purposes. We should then have financial politics in control of the board with selfish interests behind it. We must make our choice between protecting the people by the government and protecting the people by the political bankers and, being obliged to make that choice, by the experience of the past, I am in favor of protecting the people through their own chosen representatives.

You would greatly misunderstand my letter if you fancied for one moment that I have any other than a friendly disposition to the big banks of the country. I am in favor of serving them well by giving them a system which would safeguard them against harm, against panic, against each other, for sometimes they eat each other up.

Your protest "against the unwise proposal to concentrate the regulation and control of credits * * * in the hands of a few politicians," and evidently favoring the policy of retaining such regulation and control in your own hands, is a very ingenious admission on your part of a fact which is thoroughly well understood by the country, but obviously not well understood by you. The people of the United States are not going to permit, any longer, a few men, not responsible to the people of the United States, to continue "to concentrate the regulation and control of credits in their own hands."

Yours very respectfully,

ROBT. L. OWEN, Chairman.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The Illinois drought situation has been relieved by only local showers in a comparatively few localities and heavy damages to the corn crop are now admitted by all candid observers in the state. Widespread damage is now being reported from western and northern Illinois in regions of the state where the rainfall was more plentiful in the earlier growing season and where good crops of wheat, oats, hay and garden produce were raised.

Towns in the western part of the state, such as Canton, Bushnell, Galva, La Harpe, Farmington and Macomb report heavy corn damage, while the counties north of Peoria and Bloomington, where better conditions have prevailed heretofore, are now reporting poor corn conditions. Central and southern Illinois, with almost no rain of satisfactory amount during the entire growing season, will raise a much smaller corn crop than normal. In spite of severe crop losses general business has been good and there is a tendency among Illinois farmers and bankers to consider the present shortage as only temporary and to hope for better crops next year. Illinois land and financial conditions rest upon such a sound basis that there is no reason for alarm. However, business must naturally proceed this fall and winter upon more conservative lines than formerly.

General Business Good This Year

The summer, while warm and dry over much of the state, and especially dry in the lower two-thirds of the state, has been nevertheless a good season for general business. The roads have been excellent and travel, especially in automobiles, has been easy, making the opportunities for shopping very good. People have been investing freely in automobiles and while there has been a noticeable check in the purchase of cars in the very dry sections of the state in the past few weeks, yet the sale of automobiles over the state generally has been nothing short of phenomenal. It may be urged that the automobile is an extravagance and that its initial expense and later upkeep is a drain upon the country, yet the coming of the motor car has made life in the country town and upon the farm more attractive than has any other one factor. Upon the other hand, many bankers find the purchase of cars to be a severe tax upon the resources of their customers. The writer was in a country town of 1800 people one Saturday evening during a heated season and noted the activity of the town and country people. The "main street" in this particular town was about as busy as a down-town street in Chicago and automobiles and buggies filled the driving space. Many farmers had come for miles over the perfect roads and money was being spent freely. In this way the merchants of the average town, and this town was only an average town, were reaping the reward of good roads and automobile traffic.

Building lines of all kinds have been especially busy during the entire spring and summer and labor has been fully employed. However, it is believed that with the short crops which were harvested in many parts of the state and with the present active demand for money at banks, some sharp economies will have to be made by many people. However this may be, it is possibly true that many citizens even of the smaller cities and towns have been spending money too freely and that some more conservative action may be desirable. The people of Illinois have enjoyed most wonderful agricultural and business prosperity during the past fifteen years and are well prepared to tide over a period of shorter crops. Banks have been very busy during the summer months and have been almost "checked to death" in some localities. The large increase in the clearings in Chicago for the month of July over July, 1912, was expected by out-in-state bankers as the season has been a most busy one, with none of the midsummer dullness which usually prevails.

New Banks in Illinois

The Aetna State of Chicago, with capital of $200,000, has been given a permit to organize by State Auditor Brady. James Maltman, E. S. Maltman and Charles B. Little were given the permit.

A permit has been issued to Frank H. Novak, Charles Novak and Tillie Novak to organize the Calumet State of Chicago, with capital of $200,000.

The business of the private bank of E. Litchfield & Company of Flanagan, Livingston county, will be taken over by the Farmers State of Flanagan. The permit to organize the state institution was issued to E. Litchfield, W. W. Twist and J. W. Parker and the capital will be $35,000. The Litchfield bank has been one of the substantial private banks of the state but it is believed that the business can be better conducted under state supervision.

A new private bank will be established at Graymont, Livingston county, under the unlimited joint-stock partnership plan with capital of $25,000. O. P. Bourland and C. R. Tombaugh, both officers of the National Bank of Pontiac, are interested in the movement.

Stable Investments

It is an undoubted fact that the most truly conservative investment is the one which never fluctuates in price or depreciates in value, but remains fixed and secure at par under any and all conditions. The more nearly an investment approaches perfect stability in value, the more completely is it free from any trace of speculative element. By its very nature, a carefully chosen First Mortgage Loan on improved real estate is a non-fluctuating investment. When divided up into a series of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, the investment loses none of the conservative features of the mortgage. The investor who purchases this class of security rests secure in the knowledge that his investment is free from influence by adverse business or financial conditions, or political or tariff changes. We own and offer a great variety of First Mortgages secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago real estate, maturing serially in two to ten years. We have purchased these bonds with our own funds after careful investigation, and recommend them in the highest terms as safe and attractive investments for income. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000.

nois banking circles are highly pleased with his appointment as federal subtreasurer at Chicago. Mr. Shuman comes from Sullivan, where he and his father have been active in the affairs of the First National of that city for many years, the father being president and Irving Shuman cashier. As a former chairman of Group Seven of the Illinois Bankers Association and a member of the association's committee on agricultural development and vocational education, Irving Shuman is well known to the bankers of the state and outside generally. His membership on the agricultural committee was most fitting, as he has been an extensive farmer and dairyman for years and has resided on his pleasant farm just outside of Sullivan. He has understood thoroughly the problems of the Illinois farmer. Mr. Shuman is prominent in Illinois Masonic circles, serving as master of the third veil in the Illinois grand lodge of Royal Arch Masons. He has been a prominent democratic worker and early became an earnest advocate of the nomination of Woodrow Wilson for president. He attended the Baltimore convention last year as a delegate. His appointment carries heavy responsibilities, for which he is well fitted, and his down-state friends congratulate him.

S. E. Bradt Named on State Board

Bankers throughout the state feel a peculiar interest in the appointment by Governor Dunne of S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National of DeKalb and a pioneer and hard-working advocate of good roads in Illinois, to serve a term of four years as a member of the state highway commission. Mr. Bradt is a republican and his appointment comes as a result of his fitness for the position combined with an intimate knowledge of Illinois highway conditions and a view of improved rural conditions for the commonwealth which few men possess. Mr. Bradt advocated good roads for Illinois when few men were doing so and early took a most decided stand on the then unpopular side of a question which has caused more discussion in this state recently than almost any other one topic. He has spoken at a number of bank and agricultural meetings and has given freely of his time and talents to the great work of helping "to pull Illinois out of the mud." The many friends of the popular DeKalb banker are highly pleased with his appointment.

Death of Mrs. James Millikin

Mrs. James Millikin, widow of the late James Millikin, pioneer Decatur banker and founder of the Millikin National of Decatur, died at her home in that city recently. Mrs. Millikin was reared in Pennsylvania, where she met James Millikin, although they were married in this state. Mr. Millikin had three sisters in Washington Seminary in Washington, Pa., where Miss Aston, his future wife, was also a student and through these three sisters he became acquainted with Miss Aston. They were married on New Year's Day, 1857. The Astons came to Illinois in 1855 and James Millikin had preceded them in 1852. Mrs. Millikin had been prominent in church, charity and club work in Decatur and had a wide circle of friends in that city, where she had resided for sixty years. Mr. and Mrs. Millikin had no children and the most of their estate was left by the will of Mr. Millikin to educational and charitable work in Decatur and especially to the James Millikin University.

Illinois Notes

One of the largest yields of oats recorded this year was at Hoopeston, where 630 acres belonging to the Hoopeston Canning Company yielded 25,800 bushels, an average of forty-one bushels to the acre. This yield in an exceptional short oats year is more than an average crop. J. S. McFerren, president of the First National of Hoopeston, is president of the Hoopeston Canning Company.

Professor William J. Morrison gave an address before the summer session of the Illinois State Normal University at Normal upon "The New York Clearing House." This is the first address in a series upon "How the World's Work is Done." The summer students at the Normal institution are mostly teachers and in this way they can receive some idea of the practical business life of the nation.

Edward B. Rogers, of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign, has been named by Governor Dunne as a member of the board of trustees of the Eastern Illinois State Normal School at Charleston.

Arthur G. Brown has been named secretary of the Moline chamber of commerce. He previously has served the Rockford Business Men's Association as secretary and refused propositions in Columbus, Ohio, and Mobile, Ala., in order to remain in Illinois. He has many friends in Illinois business circles and is well trained to do professional secretarial work.

R. A. Cruzan, a director of the First National of Paxton, former mayor of that city and a prominent business man, is dead.

Champaign has voted a bond issue of $17,000 for the purchase of motor fire apparatus and for an addition to the fire station. The women of the city voted in large numbers and carried the proposition. At a previous election voting on the same subject last winter the matter was defeated. The influence of women in voting bond issues in Illinois cities under the new law may present some interesting financial situations.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER

BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo's plan of distributing government deposits in banks of the South and West to finance the crop movement is praised by Arthur H. Lindsay, vice-president of the Marine National.

"Besides being an important innovation the plan is well devised and should prove a success," said M. Lindsay. "The admission of paper as security for these deposits is in line with the plans proposed in the new currency bill. It will give an opportunity to try out this policy."

"In that connection it should be noted that the commercial paper must be passed on by a clearing house, and since the smaller cities and towns have no clearing houses they will be effectually barred from getting these deposits. Of course bonds as securities for deposits will still be available to the smaller banks, and besides correspondent banks in the larger cities, having obtained part of these deposits, will be able to extend accommodations to the former, so that these will after all eventually benefit by the plan.

"As for the report that the country banks in the South and West will use 2½ per cent government money and pay off 6 per cent loans in New York, thus shifting the money back to New York again and nullifying the McAdoo plan, this is ridiculous, because if a bank owes $100,000 for rediscounting accommodation in New York and pays this debt it will be in a position to ask for more accommodations in New York and thus take care of the demand for the crop movement."

Says Guaranty Plan is a Failure

The absence of a deposit guaranty plank in the Owen-Glass bill is taken by Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association to indicate that the men behind the bill recognize the ineffectiveness of compulsory guarantee of bank deposits.

"If the Oklahoma guaranty plan was successful, as some seem to think, we might naturally expect that the currency bill framed by Senator Owen of Oklahoma would contain some similar provisions," said Mr. Bartlett. "Its absence indicates that the plan is not worthy of adoption by the government. If the legislators at the national capitol should desire to probe further into the guaranty of deposits schemes they might apply the government profit from coinage to remedy the situation. This profit to the government during the last forty years has been more than $200,000,000, or more than four times the total losses from all failures of national banks in the entire country during the last fifty years."

Returns from Europe

After a two months' sojourn in Europe Robert Camp, president of the First Savings and Trust Company, returned to Milwaukee this week. Through a banker acquaintance in London he was accorded the unusual privilege of visiting parliament while in session and later drank tea with the British legislators at the usual hour for this refreshment. Through the same friend he made a visit to the Bank of England without the necessity for the two weeks' notice and customary red tape.

Lombard to Represent Milwaukee Bankers

J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange, will represent the Milwaukee bankers at the hearing on Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo's plan for the disposition of the proposed government grain moving fund. Milwaukee has been designated as one of the cities where the government will place a portion of the grain loan and members of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association, of which Mr. Lombard is president, met Tuesday and appointed him delegate, notifying him by wire of the appointment, as he was about to return from a business trip in the East.

Reports Lack of Confidence

Decreasing confidence abroad in American investments is reported by George H. Russell, of George H. Russell & Company, Insurance, upon his return this week from an extended European trip. "It seems as if the general opinion of foreigners of to-day is that our government is too much in the hands of people who are not practical business men," said Mr. Russell. He added that tariff revision was one of the principal causes of uneasiness in this quarter and that the Balkan war had affected European business conditions adversely.

Governor Vetoes Bill

Governor McGovern has vetoed the bill authorizing the city of Milwaukee to issue fifty-year bonds for the purchase of land for any purpose. Attorney-General Owen held the bill to be unconstitutional in that the measure, in providing for bonds which are to run for fifty years, aims to provide for bonds which are to run for a longer period than is contemplated under the constitution and that in providing for the purchase of lands to be sold to citizens the bill provides for the use of the proceeds of the bonds for a purpose not contemplated under the constitution.

Wisconsin Notes

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt attended the meeting of the Loan and Building Association League of Wisconsin in Milwaukee this week, taking the place of Governor McGovern on the program Thursday night.

The board of review has refused to deduct the assessment of the Marshall & Ilsley bank's land on East Water Street and its branch building and land on the south side from the capital stock assessment of the institution, as sought in a petition submitted by the bank this week. The bank is now assessed for 5,000 shares at $235 each, making a total of $1,175,000, from which is deducted the new main building on East Water Street, costing $300,000, leaving the net value of the stock $171. Cashier John H. Puelicher of the bank argues that the terms of the ninety-nine-year leasehold are such that it practically amounts to indefinite ownership by the bank. The city officials are awaiting a supreme court decision upon points similar to those involved in the Marshall & Ilsley controversy.

The board of review this week raised the assessment of the Second Ward Savings Bank stock from $150 a share, as fixed by the assessors, to $170 a share. This makes a total increase on the 10,000 shares of $200,000. The result may be regarded as a victory for the bank because the board a week ago adopted a resolution declaring its intention of fixing the assessment at $225 a share, which would have meant a total increase of $750,000. Following the hearing President Joseph Uihlein substantiated the statement made before the board that the bank would not appeal from the $170 assessment.

Organization of new banks in Wisconsin has been made more difficult under the new banking law passed by the last legislature. Under the measure at least five adult residents of the state must make application, stating their occupation and financial standing. The commissioner of banking is given power to reject the application, in which case the applicants have the right to appeal to a board composed of the governor, secretary of state, and attorney-general. The following points will be considered by the banking commissioner:

Whether any organizers have been officers of another bank which has become insolvent while they held position; whether they have been convicted of crime against state or federal banking laws; whether the proposed institution will be under control of persons having control of several banks. The law permits state banks to deposit with the United States treasurer as much of their assets as may be necessary to qualify as a depository for postal savings funds, a privilege formerly denied state banks by the state law. State banks are restricted from borrowing for temporary purposes. The law has the backing of all the bankers of the state.

Alexander Chromak of Kenosha started a savings bank account Monday with the proceeds of a robbery of a meat market Sunday night by himself and two companions. The account was opened with $23.36 obtained from the cash register of the looted market. Chromak is ten years old. Both he and his juvenile accomplices are under parole.

Members of the Wisconsin Police Chiefs Association were presented at the recent convention in Neenah with souvenir "black jacks" by the Wisconsin Bankers Association.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The gain in bank clearings for the month of July over those of the corresponding month last year was nearly 2 per cent. The gain, while slight, showed that business at the financial institutions has been a little better than last year. The demand for money during the past week has been quite fair, with rates holding firm at 6 to 7 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted at $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 7 per cent.

St. Louis Bankers Like Plan

The announcement that the treasury department would distribute between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 among the national banks of the South and Middle West and would accept government, state and municipal bonds, as well as commercial paper approved by the clearing house, in order to facilitate the movement of the crops, meets with the approbation of St. Louis bankers. They think that this money should be disbursed in the Middle West and South, as it requires millions of dollars to handle the cotton crops of Arkansas, Texas and other Southern states. The cotton estimate for Texas this year is 5,500,000 bales, which, if averaged conservatively at $35 a bale, would amount to $192,500,000. Thousands of dollars have already been expended by St. Louis banks to till the soil and pick the cotton, but the great burden of expense comes in the near future, when the cotton is to be shipped and purchased.

Secretary McAdoo's willingness to accept prime commercial paper on a 65 per cent valuation is an innovation in government financiering and will relieve any possible financial congestion in this territory if the bulk of the money to be distributed under this plan comes to the St. Louis market.

The bankers think that the McAdoo plan will be most helpful to the planter and farmer, as much negotiable paper, after being approved by the clearing house, will be carried during the late summer and fall by the government.

John A. Lewis, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, thinks that the bulk of the money to be distributed, according to the plan outlined by Secretary McAdoo, should come to the banks in St. Louis, Chicago and Kansas City, as these are the cities from which the Southern planter and farmer secures his finances. Every banker in the country will approve of the government accepting prime commercial paper, and if this plan would be expanded by the United States treasury it would be almost impossible for us to have any financial stringencies.

Optimist on Outlook

St. Louis bankers are optimistic and full of confidence on the situation and outlook. Following are reviews given out by two St. Louis banks:

The Mechanics-American National says: "If there has been any appreciable falling off in business activity in the country as a whole, there is little trace of such a recession in this city. On the contrary, the wholesale trade is ahead of last year, and in most lines of business it may be said that prevailing conditions are as favorable, if not better than they were 12 months ago. Throughout this section money is in active demand. Merchants are borrowing heavily, and, while applications are scaled down to cover only actual requirements, the aggregate inquiry is sufficient to employ most of the money that the banks of this section have to lend. The banks of the Southwest are well prepared for the drain, and, while the requirements of the crop-moving period will be large, there is reason to believe that the withdrawals of currency for the agricultural districts will not be unduly burdensome. Because of the large business being done in most industries there is reason to expect fairly firm money rates during the balance of the year. Nothing approaching acute stringency has developed as yet, and it is not believed that any such conditions will develop. But the banks have a good healthy demand for money, with an inquiry broad enough to employ around 6 per cent about all of the funds that they have to offer. There have been heavy direct borrowing by firms and corporations which ordinarily finance a considerable portion of their requirements through sales of paper to brokers. Sentiment in this section is cheerful. There is no undue pessimism here. On the contrary, the tendency is to look for better times before the year is over, with more comfortable money market conditions and greater courage about the future."

The National Bank of Commerce says: "The usual midsummer dullness has laid its hold upon business generally, and things have quieted down considerably. The decline in business which has taken place during the past three weeks is not, however, the same sort of decline which was in evidence during the several weeks previous. For a time, uncertainty about tariff and currency legislation, the upset condition of Europe and the threatening labor situations in this country, coupled with an abnormally tight money market, caused a nervousness and unsettlement in business which had a threatening aspect. Business continued to decline through this period. That the more recent falling off in business is the usual midsummer quieting is evidenced by the improvement in sentiment, the slight upturn in both stock exchange and board of trade circles, and the somewhat increasing activity in financial dealings. Money remains tight but there is no real pinch and the quieting influences now affecting business will probably continue in a measure until the early fall. Europe has begun quietly annexing a few of our securities, as she is usually wise enough to do when they have just about touched the low mark. She will have them to sell back to us later on when prices are what they should be. She bought them from us at low prices in 1893 and sold them back to us at high prices later, repeated the operation in 1896 and again in 1903 and 1907.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

"During the past fiscal year we have created a tremendous favorable balance with Europe through both excess exports of merchandise and gold. It is not possible to say just what portion of this balance still remains to our credit on the other side, but that portion must soon be paid to us in gold, as it is not probable that European holders will dump any more of their American securities at present prices. They will rather be on the buying side and in this way increase their debt to us, which should send gold shipments this way in the near future.

"One of the causes of the recent tight money market which has received but little consideration is the very large marketing of last year's grain crops. A good percentage of the entire crop was held for better prices and nearly all of this has been marketed within two months. As the old grain has now been sold and the money returned to circulation, it will be easier to finance the new crop as it comes. Money will probably be close, however, until the late fall or early winter. In the meantime, sufficient money will be available for the legitimate needs of business and to take care of some increase in stock exchange transactions."

Held as Bank Desperado

Harry Cassell, who escaped from jail in Hennepin, Ill., January 30th, after he had tried to hold up the Bank of Putnam County in Hennepin, December 18th, and shot the cashier, Robert Patterson, has been arrested in St. Louis and is being held at police headquarters pending the arrival of an Illinois officer. A reward of $300 has been offered for his capture. Cassell admits shooting the cashier but said he was intoxicated at the time. He does not know whether or not he tried to rob the bank.

T. B. Holland Dead

T. B. Holland, pioneer and banker of Springfield, Mo., died on Wednesday of last week. He had been in failing health for some time. Mr. Holland was born in Springfield, Tenn., in 1836 and came to Springfield, Mo., with his parent in 1841. He served in the Civil War, refusing an officer's commission, and was a member of the Springfield Chapter of the Sons of the Revolution. In 1875 a private bank under the name C. B. Holland & Son was established and continued until 1896, when it was incorporated as the Holland Banking Company. Mr. Holland was president.

Laclede Gets Big Building

Work has started on the finest business building ever erected in Laclede, Mo., a two-story brick structure covering two entire lots, each 40 by 140 feet in size, the first floor of which will be occupied by the Benson Bank.

Form Credits Like Loan Associations

That the European system of rural credits are an extension to the forms of the building and loan association plans in vogue in hundreds of American cities, and that similar systems carried into the country in the United States would fail of the purpose desired, is the opinion of Col. W. I. Diffenderffer, cashier of the Bank of Lebanon, Mo., who represented Missouri on the committee sent by the Southern Commercial Congress to Europe to study farm credits. Aside from studying the methods by which Italian, Hungarian and German farmers are enabled to secure farm loans at from 3 to 4½ per cent, the delegation inquired into social conditions in the communities visited. The Americans were entertained at various places by ambassadors, consuls and members of the nobility.

"We were in Europe 90 days, visiting eight countries," said Col. Diffenderffer. "The bank system whereby the continental farmer is enabled to procure money at a lower rate of interest than from the commercial bank is virtually the same as the American building and loan association plan, in vogue in thousands of communities. By banding themselves together and accepting long-time loans, in some instances as long as 30 years, the farmers of Italy, Germany and Austria are able to get money at 4 and 4½ per cent. The American farmer has a free and independent spirit which would not submit to such a plan. I found one European farm that had been handed down to succeeding generations for 800 years. The commercial banks in Europe loan money to farmers at virtually the American rate, which averages 7 per cent. Our longest loans, however, are eight and ten years."

Bank Clearings Record

All records for July bank clearings in Kansas City have been broken this year according to an announcement made by Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association. The total for July this year was $231,000,000 which was a gain of 12 per cent over last year. During the month 7,711 cars of wheat were received in Kansas City, also a record breaker for July, and 20 per cent more than were received during the same month last year. Movements in live stock showed a 6 per cent gain over 1912.

Missouri Notes

John C. Hall, president of the New England Securities Company, Kansas City, died last week.

The officers of the Bank of Saline, at Marshall, since the reorganization, on account of the retirement of R. E. Holloway, are as follows: G. A. Radford, president; H. C. Francisco, cashier; Joseph Swisher, assistant cashier.

A charter has been issued to the Farmers Trust of Maryville, capitalized at $200,000, all paid up. The directors are George T. Wilsley, Wm. G. Pierce, Charles D. Bellows, S. H. Kemp and Geo. R. Ellison.

The Union Bank of Sedalia has been opened with Dr. M. Ehlers as cashier.

The Farmers and Merchants, Lebanon, opened its doors for business July 29th.

The state bank commissioner has issued a charter to the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Chillicothe, which has a capital of $30,000. The directors are Chris Boehner, Allen Moore, Seymour Wigely, George Hoge, J. D. Brookshier.

The engagement of Miss Sallie Daniel, daughter of C. G. Daniel, vice-president of the Vandalia Banking Association, to Will Almfahr has been announced.

Texas Banks Consolidate

The Farmers State and the Southern National, both of Merkel, Tex., have consolidated under the name of the former. The capital has been increased from $15,000 to $35,000. The officers are J. S. Swan, president; Jno. Sears, vice-president; R. O. Anderson, cashier; B. C. Moore, assistant cashier. The directors are John Sears, J. S. Swan, Dr. M. Armstrong, B. C. Moore, and R. O. Anderson.

Resigns From Bankers Trust

Burke Baker, bonding officer of the Bankers Trust, Houston, Tex., has resigned to become associated with his father in railroad construction work.

Bank Assessments Reduced

Tax assessments on the banks and trust companies of Houston will be figured for 1913-14 on a basis of 70 instead of 80 per cent of the combined capital, surplus and profits of each institution. This reduction came as a result of the action of the county commissioners when representatives of seven banking institutions appeared before the board and declared that the 1912-13 basis of assessment of 80 per cent was too high. Under the 80 per cent assessment of 1912-13, the banks and trust companies paid $68,323.20 in taxes on a combined valuation of $8,137,130. This year the combined valuation on a 70 per cent basis will be approximately $9,910,644. The bankers who came before the board were J. T. Scott, First National; George Hamman, Union National; B. D. Harris and J. E. McAshan, South Texas Commercial National; Clarence Malone, Bankers Trust; Guy M. Bryan, Lumbermans National; G. C. Street, National Bank of Commerce; Henry S. Fox, Houston National Exchange.

Texas Bank Closed

The Farmers and Merchants State at Winters, Tex., has been closed by the state bank examiners. The bank statement shows deposits amounting to $55,000 and assets totaling approximately $80,000. According to the state banking department, it is believed the shortage can be covered by liquidation through other banks without the assistance of the guaranty fund of the bank. The failure was caused by a defalcation which the department states amounts to approximately ten thousand dollars. Cashier F. W. Merrick has been gone since July 17th.

Southwest Notes

H. E. Hulen, formerly of the First State of Wagoner, Okla., is the new president of the State Bank of Collinsville, through his purchase of the holdings of J. S. Hopping, O. S. Hopping and T. J. Hartman.

The First National of Chelsea, Okla., and the Union Bank and Trust Company of Chelsea, have consolidated under the former name and will henceforth do business in the building occupied by the Union Bank and Trust Company.

T. C. Pike of the Bartlesville (Okla.) National Bank is suffering from a badly bruised knee as a result of a fall from his motor cycle.

The Guaranty State Bank of Waxahachie, Tex., has been organized with a capital stock of $150,000. The institution will open for business September 1st.

The comptroller of the currency has received an application to organize the State National of Decatur, Tex., with a capital of $50,000. The applicants are Guinn Williams, E. P. Gibson, J. A. Simmons, A. Y. Leslie and W. B. Harrison.

The state banking board has issued a certificate of authority to do business to the Blanket State of Blanket, Tex.; capital stock, $13,000. The guaranty fund plan was adopted.

Bank Cashier Held

Boone D. Hite, former cashier of the defunct Anadarko (Okla.) State was arrested here on Monday on information furnished by the state banking department. It is charged that he received deposits when he knew the bank was in a failing condition. Hite gave $2,000 bond. His preliminary hearing was set for August 6th. Hite was for many years one of the best-known financiers in Oklahoma and at one time controlled a large string of banks in the state. The Anadarko Bank failed June 5th and was taken in charge by the state banking department.

The American State of Wichita, Kan., has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $150,000. The increase is made from the bank's surplus.

Editorial Comment

ADJUSTING FINANCIAL CONDITIONS

In years gone by the government has dumped millions in New York to stop stock and credit panics. This year it is going to dump millions, if needed, in the West to prevent a stringency getting under way. Western bankers feel flattered for it is a new experience. Also it is a new experience in the East, but without the flattery. To get a line on how the press looks at it read from the Chicago Tribune:

Secretary McAdoo's decision to make deposits for crop moving with the western banks instead of in New York may be resented in the latter center, but is both just and sensible, and Mr. McAdoo is to be congratulated on setting so good a precedent. If the crops are to be moved from the west to east, the entirely reliable banking facilities of the great harvest region should be utilized directly. The still more important innovation, that of accepting prime commercial paper, is but an anticipation of pending currency legislation, which action the secretary's broad powers seem to justify fully. The announcement is timely, practical, and beneficial.

The special deposit plan gives a big boost to commercial paper the chief western security. Listed stuff isn't manufactured here. The secretary will accept such commercial paper as is referred to in the Owen-Glass currency bill as security for deposits. The bankers like this. Some of them said so plainly. E. D. Hulbert, one of the conservatives said that "of course it unusual for the government to accept the commercial paper as security for its deposits, but I assume that Mr. McAdoo knows what he is doing in making this proposal. I believe it is the right thing to do and that it will be a help to the situation." George M. Reynolds, called the McAdoo proposal "the best method that has been adopted in recent years to finance the crop movement," and added that it would go far toward relieving the present pressure in the money market. James B. Forgan, said while Secretary McAdoo was establishing a precedent in accepting commercial paper as security for government deposits, the propositions as made would undoubtedly be a benefit to the situation. And thus it went. Everybody in the West likes it.

The strong, independent paper, the Chicago Daily News, makes a plea for fairness toward the new currency bill. In a leading editorial that paper, in part, says:

"There has been much discussion of the currency bill of a political nature that is very unfair because the impression it would give is a false one. The bill is not a Bryan bill. And if it is to be condemned inferentially because a party name may attach to it what would its conservative Progressive critics say to the currency plank of the Progressive party's platform, which declared that the issue of currency was fundamentally a government function, that the control should be lodged with the government, that the Aldrich bill was unacceptable because it would place our currency and credit system in private banks, not subject to effective public control?"

It will not be defeated by calling it a Bryan bill, although the Aldrich plan suffered by being charged with Standard Oil ancestry. Really the bill is neither better nor worse for such changes for its only function is to reform acceptably the currency and banking laws of the country.

AID IN THE FIGHT ON DISTILLED LIQUOR

Senator John D. Works of California has introduced a joint resolution in congress proposing an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the sale, manufacture and importation of distilled liquor containing alcohol, except for mechanical, scientific and medicinal purposes.

The objection raised as to the loss which necessarily would fall upon the government as an incident to the adoption of such amendment has been met by its proponent with the suggestion that this deficiency be taken care of by the imposition of an increased tax on fermented liquors. The resolution contemplates that this amendment shall become effective three years after its ratification by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states.

That the plan of an additional tax upon fermented liquors is feasible is evidenced by statistics furnished by Senator Works. The figures which were submitted were compiled with the idea that the problem presented by the distilled liquor traffic is one of economics rather than of morality. It is pointed out that the consumption of whiskey is increasing at an appalling rate. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912 there were produced in the United States 178,249,985 taxable gallons of distilled spirits, not counting brandy and other liquors produced from fruit. This is the largest in the history of the country and exceeds all previous productions by 2,847,590 gallons. The population in the United States under dry territory is about 39,812,000 and the total population is approximately 95,000,000. It is argued that with the increase in consumption of whiskey and the increase of prohibition states and local option territory, it seems that prohibition in the states does not prohibit; that the states and local government are impotent to enforce the law, and that if this country is to be saved from alcoholism, the remedy must be applied to the root of the evil, and that is to abolish the distilleries and the importation of spirituous liquors.

This is a movement in which all good citizens should aid. The whiskey habit is one of the most peniculous which one can acquire, and is, without doubt, directly responsible for many wrecked lives. It isn't a moral problem, but a question vitally affecting our economic welfare and therefore entitled to intelligent thought and consideration. Every public-spirited citizen should enlist himself in the movement to eliminate this curse and thereby insure the efficiency and intelligence of our future citizens as well as diminish the number of cases of insanity and suicide and make of this nation of ours a race of clean, strong and vigorous people.

SQUARE DEAL ON CURRENCY BILL

The New York Times recently gave George Woodruff a full column editorial on his famous advice to bankers who were considering the currency bill. George said: "Don't get mad." He continued: "Out West we never get mad. That's a mistake. You can't trade if you get mad. Now in this bill at Washington there may be a lot of things that nobody expects to keep in at last. They were put in only to be traded off. That's my idea. When the trading is all finished it may not be such a bad bill. We don't know. Let's wait around to see, and not get mad. Always keep something back to trade with. And don't get mad."

Of the scores of resolutions passed by bankers many could not escape giving offence in Washington. Many of the worst were mere copies of each other or of a furnished original. In a few cases they were not intended to help the situation to a happy and equitable solution, but as a thinly veiled slap at Bryan, or at McAdoo, or at President Wilson himself. All such were wrongly conceived and did certain harm. The National Citizens League, formed to study the currency and banking question and to promote sound legislation, has set a better example of how to do it. It is composed of the ablest business and professional men in the country and has been liberally supported by bankers and directed by able economists.

It is non-partisan and at times was charged with being committed to the "Aldrich plan." Its officers have been in Washington consulting with the administration forces and with the members of the banking and currency committees of both houses. President John V. Farwell of the league made public his conclusions. He said in part:

"Adverse criticism of the administration efforts," the statement continued, "seems to have been based rather on a misapprehension of intentions and a fear of radical innovations than on facts warranted by the bill as it stands. The league is of the opinion that in regard to many details snap judgment has been rendered. Those working to develop the measure should be given encouragement, support and assistance by bankers as well as by business men."

The press of the country say this is the most promising interview yet and gives hope for the passage of a sound banking law. The league didn't get mad. It had better sense than to file a set of forty resolutions, as one group meeting did, all beginning "We object, etc."

The delegation suggested during the conference that there would be less difficulty in starting the proposed system with a smaller number of federal reserve banks than twelve, as contemplated. The fear of some bankers that the reserve requirement of the bill would prove burdensome was discussed, and it was suggested that the total reserve for country banks be reduced from 15 to 12 per cent, including the 5 per cent redemption fund against national bank notes, and that the total reserve for reserve cities be reduced from 20 to 18 per cent.

Secretary McAdoo has called to Washington leading bankers of fifty-nine western and southern cities to discuss crop moving. It is hoped this occasion will be taken to discuss the main features of the Owen-Glass measure, to the end that it may be made not merely useful to the country at large but attractive to legitimate banking interests of all sections. The clearing houses of the fifty-nine cities are sending their best men and the outcome must be hopeful.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN FOR VICE-PRESIDENT A. B. A.

Chapman of Minneapolis looks upon the vice-presidency of the A. B. A. as Blaine of Maine looked upon another presidency, when the latter said, "The office of president of the United States is one to be neither sought nor declined." It would be a very high honor indeed, but Joe has made up his mind that he will not "gum shoe" for it. There's his record; it speaks for itself, and his friends say, "Watch him come down the line with votes enough and to spare." Privately speaking, unless we miss our guess, before this thing is over there will be such an enthusiasm developed for the scholarly looking banker of the Twin-Cities, who does things, that other Richmonds-in-the-Field will throw up their hands and say, "Oh, what's the use?" In fact, the Chapman cohorts will heed the call,

Come as the winds come when forests are rended,

Come as the waves come when navies are

WOULD HAVE MORE SAVINGS BANKS IN KANSAS

Charles M. Sawyer, Kansas state bank commissioner, expects to see a large number of savings banks established in Kansas within the next few years. Kansas is too young a state for many savings banks and her citizens have been too anxious to make money fast to allow their cash to pile up slowly in savings institutions.

"The Kansas man is a chap that wants to turn his money over very quickly," said Mr. Sawyer. "He wants to keep the money moving all the time. That is true of every comparatively new country and it is not until a state gets to be sixty to seventy years old that savings banks become common. There are only three or four in Kansas at the present time. Some banks have savings departments but they devote most of their business to the ordinary commercial business of the town.

"But as the state grows older the citizens become more conservative and are more content to make their money slowly. There are banks in the New England states where the deposits have been away up in the millions for years and there is hardly a variation in the deposits from one year to another.

"In Kansas the bank deposits jump and skip around very rapidly because the owners of the money are using the cash to make money rapidly. In the older sections of the country the people are content to put their money in a savings bank and draw three or four per cent interest and allow the interest to accumulate. In Kansas people don't invest their money in such low interest-bearing securities as bonds and savings banks. They want to make money pay ten or twenty per cent.

"There is nothing in this against Kansas. It is true of all new countries. It has been true of the eastern part of the country, but as the states grow older the people become more conservative and they are willing to take lower interest rates. Ten years ago Kansas did not have any savings banks. Now it has several and many savings departments of commercial banks. New savings banks are now being planned in several of the older towns of the state and within a few years there will be dozens of these savings institutions."

PEOPLES BANK OF BLOOMINGTON

The Peoples Bank of Bloomington, a full-page view of whose magnificent cash vault and book vault was shown in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, is doing some excellent publicity work in the Bloomington papers and the savings department and the gospel of thrift are especially urged. The Peoples Bank building, a seven-story bank and office building, is one of the best structures in a city known for its excellent business district. The bank makes a specialty of out-of-town business and is the clearing house for a wide territory of central Illinois. F. D. Marquis is the president and W. L. Moore is the cashier.

The Farmers Savings, Sherman, S. D., capitalized at $10,000, has received a charter. The directors are J. M. Haug of Sherman, who will be cashier; C. A. Hanson, Adolph Koch, vice-presidents; A. K. Hanson, president, and Martin J. Johnson.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Plans are progressing rapidly on the program of the Ohio Bankers Association annual convention to be held in Cleveland September 11th and 12th. On Thursday, the first day, there will be morning and afternoon business sessions and in the evening there will be a dinner at the Euclid Club and a dance and social there. Friday morning there will be a business session and in the afternoon a cruise on the Seeandbee. Senator Owen of Oklahoma will be a leading speaker.

Rebuilding Banking Home

The Union Savings and Trust, Warren, Ohio is making extensive improvements to its present banking home. The first story of the building will be refinished in cut stone and a handsome entrance will be built and the interior will be enlarged to double its former size. The main banking room will be new throughout.

Bank Clearings Record

Lima (Ohio) bank clearings for July broke all records with a total of $2,286,007. The month with the largest previous aggregate was January, when the figures were $2,201,476. July of last year had a total of $1,915,489. With the exception of February and March, every month of this year has exceeded the $2,000,000 mark, a point which never had been reached prior to 1913.

State Receives Big Interest

The total amount of interest received by Ohio on funds loaned to banks during the past four and one-half years amount to $790,809.08, of which $162,643.52 was collected by State Treasurer John P. Brennan since he took the office in January. Cleveland banks gave upwards of $75,000. The interest income this year will amount to about $200,000. Before the state depository law was passed the state received no interest on its funds.

Ohio Notes

The Toledo Savings Association has leased the ground floor corner room in the Nasby building and will take possession of the new quarters on August 15th.

W. A. Polk, who has been vice-president of the New Vienna (Ohio) Bank for a number of years, has been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ellis Good. Frank W. Hadley has been elected vice-president to succeed Mr. Polk.

The City National, Dayton, has moved into its new building, which is said to be one of the most attractive in the city. W. N. Gebhart is president of the institution and Clarence Keifer cashier.

Clarence L. Powley has been chosen assistant cashier of the Farmers and Citizens Banking Company, Monroeville, Ohio, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. C. Wilhelm.

Walter English, cashier of the Citizens Trust and Savings, Columbus, has returned from a vacation spent with his family at Asbury Park, N. J.

Wm. B. Green, formerly secretary of the American Bankers Association, died recently at his home in Avon Lake, Ohio, of heart failure.

Buffalo Bank Merger

It is reported that the Marine National and the Columbia National of Buffalo, N. Y., will merge some time before the first of the year. The institution will be known as the Marine Bank of Buffalo. The Marine National will increase the capital stock from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 by selling $500,000 new stock. This will bring the capital, surplus and undivided profits to the same figures as those of the Columbia Bank—namely, capital, $2,500,000; surplus, $2,500,000 and undivided profits $200,000. At the time of the merger it is expected to further increase the capital stock $5,000,000 through exchanging share for share of Columbia Bank stock for a like amount of Marine National stock, thus giving the shareholders of the Columbia Bank a like interest in the Marine National. S. H. Knox, president of the Marine National, is vice-president of the Columbia National, while George F. Rand, vice-president of the Marine National, is president.

Elected Head of Brooklyn Savings

Crowell Hadden, for many years first vice-president and a member of the funding committee of the Brooklyn Savings, at a meeting of the board of trustees held recently was induced to reconsider his previous refusal to accept the presidency of that institution and unanimously was elected president of the bank. He will assume office immediately.

Big Increase in Bank Deposits

J. Dukes Downes, state banking commissioner for Maryland, has completed a compilation of the resources and liabilities of the banks, trust companies and other state incorporated institutions whose affairs come under his jurisdiction. He is greatly gratified at the excellent showing made by the banks, their sound condition, safe management and solid investments. He is also gratified at the increase in the deposits, which he says are the best mirrors of business. During the past twelve months there was only one embarrassment in a Maryland incorporated bank. In this case the depositors were paid in full. Stockholders will not lose all of their investments. One of the benefits of the new law is the great saving effected in settling affairs of banking institutions.

The total increase in demand deposits of 1913 over those of 1912 is $1,129,884.46. These deposits, according to the latest figures submitted, are $49,166,385.49. In time deposits the increase has been large, from $22,714,398.12 in 1912 to $26,151,088.27 in 1913, a total increase of $4,446,690.17. The total increase in demand and time deposits for the year has been $5,576,574.63. The total capital stock of the Maryland banks and trust companies is $515,366,544.77. The surplus fund is $12,982,692.14. The total resources of the banks and trust companies is $188,321,440.68. These accounts are exclusive of those of national and of Baltimore city savings banks. With those added the deposits will far exceed half a billion dollars.

New Bank for Louisville, Ky.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the United Bank and Trust Company, Louisville, Ky., which purposes to begin business September 1st. O. L. Ballinger, now of Lancaster, Ohio, is to be president. In addition to Mr. Ballinger the directorate will include Clarence Lebus, J. L. Riehm, C. de Ritter, Wallace Embry, W. O. Seelbach, George C. Turner, E. J. O'Brien, Jr., Judge Ed. C. Orear, Henry Besten, Clarence Dallam, E. A. Hail, C. C. Patrick and David Keller. The capital stock is $250,000.

Law Question Cleared Up

In order to prevent possible confusion and difficulty owing to changes in business methods made necessary by the act of the last legislature relative to negotiable papers, the Indianapolis Clearing House Association is sending out a notice to business men as follows:

"At its last session the Indiana legislature enacted what is known as the negotiable instruments law, which is a codification of the law relating to checks, drafts and notes. This act makes some important changes in the law as it previously existed in Indiana. Your especial attention is called to one such change effected by Article VI, Section 87, which follows:

"When the instrument (promissory note or acceptance) is made payable at a bank, it is equivalent to an order to the bank to pay the same for the account of the principal debtor thereon."

"The attorney-general gives it as his opinion, as have other lawyers who have been consulted, that under this law, when a note or acceptance is made payable at a bank and the bank has sufficient funds of the maker or acceptor on deposit, it must pay the obligation on demand at maturity unless it has specific instructions from the maker or acceptor to withhold payment. Thus, in its legal effect, a note or acceptance payable at bank becomes at maturity practically a check on the bank where it is payable, and in the absence of positive instructions to the contrary (as in the case of a check on which payment has been stopped) the bank must pay it on proper demand if the maker or acceptor has funds on deposit sufficient for the purpose. This law became effective on its promulgation April 30, 1913, and therefore controls all notes or acceptances executed on that or a subsequent date.

Heretofore notes payable at banks have not been paid by the banks from the funds of the persons who gave the notes, except on specific instruction. The reversal of this order, it is feared, will cause annoyance to business houses with possible overdrafts and resulting confusion, unless the intent of the new law is thoroughly understood. Banks are notifying the drawers of notes payable at the banks of the date."

Central State Notes

Ontario, N. Y., soon is to have a state bank with a capital of $30,000 and a surplus of $3,000. The officers are: President, C. C. Young; directors, Stanley Albright, James Colwell, William Tummonds, T. P. Craven, M. F. Mahar, Arthur Pratt. The bank will be opened for business about January 1, 1914.

The $85,000 issue of Eastwood sewer bonds was bought by the Trust and Deposit Company of Onondaga, Syracuse, N. Y. They bear interest of 5 per cent.

Dighton D. Brace, formerly a director and vice-president of the First National of Troy, N. Y., died at his home on Tuesday of last week.

Ground has been broken for the new Wilson (N. Y.) State. The building will be of pressed brick construction, two stories high.

At a meeting of the directors of the Savings, Loan and Trust, Auburn, Ind., Frank E. Eckhart, who is president of the Eckhart Carriage Company and vice-president of the Auburn Auto Company, was elected president of the bank to succeed Mr. West, who died a few weeks ago. Jonas Schloss, president of the De Kalb State of Auburn, was chosen vice-president and executive officer and will be in charge of the loan department.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

Minneapolis bank clearings for the first seven months in 1913 were $111,779,124.84 ahead of last year, the total bank exchanges for the seven months having reached $680,403,908.98, the highest record ever made in the first seven months in any year in the history of the city. The clearings for the first six months were $95,216,899.49 over those of the similar period in 1912. July, with $97,435,218.80, compared with $81,872,991.45 in July, 1912, added $15,562,227.35. St. Paul clearings for the last week in July were $10,471,653.61, which compares with $9,609,875.15 a year ago. The showing for the entire month does not equal that of a year ago in figures, but the financial activities were larger. Recent bank consolidations account for the reduction in clearings.

To Confer on Bill

Representatives of five state bankers' associations met in the office of Secretary Richards of the Minnesota Bankers Association yesterday (Friday) to consider the proposed currency legislation pending in congress. Those who attended were: J. S. Pomeroy, Security National, Minneapolis; N. F. Banfield, First National, Austin; J. W. Wheeler, Capital Trust, St. Paul, all of Minnesota; E. C. Kennedy, Sioux Falls (S. D.) Savings; James Halley, First National, Rapid City, S. D.; J. C. Bassett, Aberdeen (S. D.) National; M. F. Murphy, Grand Forks, N. D.; P. C. Remington, Bismarck (N. D.) City National; R. S. Adams, First National, Lisbon, N. D.; F. S. Lusk, First National, Missoula, Mont.; A. W. Warr, Bank of Fergus County, Lewiston, Mont.; A. C. Johnson, American National,

Will Discuss Credits for Farmers

The committee of eleven on agricultural development and education of the Minnesota Bankers Association will meet September 2d during the state fair with a hundred or more submembers for the purpose of discussing the subject of the rating of farmers as borrowers at the banks. Secretary Richards says that they want to find the best means of extending wider credit to the agriculturists. An endeavor will be made to have county agricultural superintendents at the meeting and to arrange to secure from them reports on the methods used by the farmers.

Security National Optimistic

The Security National, Minneapolis, in its monthly trade letter says that money tightness is rapidly passing, that by winter there will be a distinct change for the better and that the nervous and unsettled condition caused by the currency bill, the tariff and labor troubles and turmoil in Europe have readjusted themselves.

Europe, the letter says, is quietly annexing American securities, as she wisely does when they have reached a low water mark. One of the causes of the tight money market, which has received little attention, is the large marketing of last year's crops. A good percentage was held for better prices and has been marketed within the last two months. The money is returned to circulation. This makes financing of the new crops easier. The letter goes on:

"June bank clearings exceeded those of June, 1912, but exchanges for the first half of July dropped below last year's figures. The number of business failures during the month of June was 1,145, which is a less number than has been shown by any previous month this year. The liabilities were nearly 21 million dollars, however, as 28 of the failures were for more than $100,000 and account for 11 million dollars of the total liabilities. Failures are decreasing.

"Final figures for the month of May show that the gain in gross earnings of all railroads has continued, the May report showing an increase of nearly 31 million dollars over last year, or over 13 per cent. At the same time net earnings made a gain of 7 million dollars, or nearly 11 per cent. This continued improvement in the railroad situation is gratifying, especially as it covers the entire country. The roads in all sections of the country made a May increase in gross earnings, but the New England group, the southern group and the Pacific Coast group showed a decline in net income. Recent wage advances and the demand now made by the employees of eastern roads are the two handicaps to railroad prosperity. Wage demands and unusual expenses are more than keeping pace with the growth in earnings.

"The number of idle cars has been increasing recently, there being at the present time about 65,000 usable cars which are without loads. A year ago the number idle was 124,000, two years ago 168,000, three years ago 115,000 and four years ago 382,000. The present number of idle cars is not sufficient to insure the prompt handling of the crops and an annoying car shortage is expected during the early fall, although the roads have added materially this year to their car equipment."

Savings Deposits Increased

two years. The figures show that the deposit totals in June, 1911, were $28,703,149.13 as compared with $40,420,253.90 in June, 1913.

Prince Sees Good Times

"The more I see of the cities in the East and West the more convinced I become that St. Paul is one of the most staple towns in the United States," declared George H. Prince, chairman of the board of directors, Merchants National, St. Paul, who returned home recently after a month's absence. "We do not have the ups and downs that other cities have, and we are progressing steadily and sanely. We are so much better off than so many of the large eastern cities all the time that it is good to get back. The basic conditions of this country at the present time were never sounder than they are now. The crop condition is good and we are in for a stretch of good times."

Biggest Increase in Twenty Years

Figures from the assessment rolls made public by County Assessor F. L. Powers disclose the most remarkable growth in St. Paul realty and personal property values in the last twenty years. The total increase in values over last year is nearly six million dollars. Causes for the increase are given as the addition of 33,000 people to the population of St. Paul during the past year and the unusual activity in building circles. Personal property shows an increase of $3,051,508 over 1912. The total value of assessed personal property now is $34,199,668. Last year it was $31,148,160.

Richest State in Union

In permanent trust funds, which include school, university internal improvements and swamp lands, Minnesota now is the richest state in the Union, the total invested fund being $31,734,283.93. A year ago the amount credited to the funds named was $29,743,768.39. The increase represents the sale of agricultural lands, iron ore royalties on pine and other timber sales. During the year the state auditor disposed of 136,557 acres of agricultural land, which brought an average of $7.87 an acre. The total income from this source, all of which went to swell the permanent trust fund, was $1,074,900.87. Iron ore lands paid the state nearly $600,000. The sale of pine and other timber brought in nearly $400,000. During the fiscal year from August 1, 1912, to July 31, 1913, Minnesota received $17,809,401.76 into her treasury and disbursed $18,959,762.01. The state has been compelled to borrow $4,173,198 from banks to conduct the state's business pending the payment of taxes. These loans were for short periods and the state paid 5 per cent interest, the total being $57,854.66.

Duluth Bankers on Currency Bill

Bankers of Duluth, while many of them oppose the currency bill as it now stands, hope that some modifications will be made in it before a vote is taken. Following are some of the opinions of Duluth financiers: W. G. Hegardt, vice-president of the American Exchange, regards as unfair the basis of representation as provided in the bill. He declared, however, that if some of the more radical features are toned down by amendments, the measure will not be a detrimental one. J. E. Horak, first assistant cashier of the Northern National, is opposed to the bill because of the possibility that control of the reserve banks may fall into the hands of politicians.

James P. Roach, representing the American Exchange National of New York, now on a trip through the West, believes if the bill becomes a law many national banks will go under state charters. He said:

"There are so few advantages and so many disadvantages under the bill that it would not pay the banks to operate under it. I am of the opinion, however, that it will be radically amended before final passage."

Bank of Commerce to Have New Home

Plans for the new home of the Bank of Commerce, Superior, Wis., to be erected at 1117 Tower Avenue, have been completed and have been submitted to several contractors for preliminary bids. The structure is to be completed by January 1, 1914, but it is not settled when construction will be started. The building will cost approximately $50,000 including fixtures. It will be one and a half stories and along modern lines of banking institutions. Terra cotta will be used.

St. Cloud Bank Doubles Capital

The capital stock of the Zapp State, St. Cloud, Minn., has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The bank is erecting a handsome building which will be paid for from the undivided profits. John Zapp is president and Edward Zapp cashier.

Minnesota Notes

Minnesota on August 1st started a new financial system through the abandonment of all standing appropriations. This system was done away with by the last legislature, and the new plan became effective Friday, when the appropriations for the coming year became available.

St. Paul's new plan of financing its improvements by selling its securities to its own citizens through the sinking fund committee's bond certificates has been greatly commended by Harry E. Storberrry and Wm. E. Miller, two of the three commissioners of Mason City, Iowa, who came to St. Paul recently to investigate the plan.

The new Polk County State, Crookston, soon is to erect a two-story building.

E. J. Feldman, who has purchased the interests of Wm. Frost and W. C. Briggs in the First National, Pipestone, probably will be elected president to succeed Mr. Briggs.

Emil Manger, teller at the Merchants and Miners of Calumet, and Miss Marie Huntsman were married recently at Menominee, the bride's home.

The State Bank of Becker has installed a new set of steel fixtures in its vault.

A new bank soon will be established at Holt, to open about September 1st.

The Tamarack State will open for business August 15th with Marcus Nelson as president; E. L. Douglas, vice-president; John P. Brenner, cashier; Edward Brenner, assistant cashier.

The First State of Oak Park, capitalized at $10,000, will be ready for business soon with the following officers: Ferdinand Peters, president; M. Peters, vice-president; Frank Pallanch, cashier.

The Farmers State, Holdingford, now is in its handsome new home.

The State Bank of Trail has been authorized to do business with a capital of $12,000. Nels E. Rulien is president and Joseph A. Dahl cashier.

Braham is to have a new bank in the near future with a capital of $12,500 and surplus of $2,500.

Minnesota state banks have $16,275,652 more deposits than they had a year ago. The total deposits now are $138,662,218 and the resources $160,737,675.

The Farmers and Merchants State, Montevideo, opened for business on Friday of last week. R. S. Bacon is president; F. H. Lund, vice-president; J. H. Skogroud, cashier; Albert C. Erickson, assistant cashier. This gives Montevideo four banking institutions.

Changes in North Dakota Bank

W. M. Youmans, who has been president of the Savings Deposit, Minot, N. D., has resigned and will be succeeded by Grant S. Youmans, who has been cashier. Newell R. Olson will be cashier. Mr. Olson has had experience in a number of country banks and before coming to Minot was cashier of the First State, Winger.

Bank Merger

The Lidgerwood National and the Farmers State of Lakota, N. D., have consolidated under the name of the Farmers National. Cashier Stiteler of the Lidgerwood National has been promoted and Assistant Cashier Mashek of the Farmers will be cashier. J. H. Matthes, formerly president of the Lidgerwood National, will live in Minneapolis and Cashier Maas of the Farmers will make his future residence in Montana.

Cash in South Dakota Banks

Deposits in South Dakota state banks on June 4th were $54,023,055.98, while the national banks in the state showed $30,010,746.51 at the same date, a total of more than eighty million dollars deposits. The national banks show time certificates of fully half their deposits and a million and a half of savings deposits. The state banks show a decrease of over six hundred thousand dollars in deposits from the date of the April call, but that is a natural condition for the season of the year when farmers are drawing out to meet spring farm expenses. Assets of state banks show a slight decrease, the total being at the date of the call $67,354,413.88. Loans had decreased practically two hundred thousand dollars, standing at $44,926,819. The item of cash due from other banks showed a slight reduction, being $16,385,993. The percentage of reserve came down from 31 1-2 per cent to 30 3-10 per cent. These reductions will be more than covered when the fall marketing begins.

Arranging for Convention

Committees to arrange for the state convention of the Montana Bankers Association, August 14th, 15th and 16th, are busy holding meetings and arranging for the session. One of the principal events of the entertainment program will be an automobile ride through the valley followed by a boat ride on Hauser lake. Then there will be a dance, an entertainment at the Broadwater, and several other delightful features. Following are the committees in charge: General reception committee—A. C. Johnson, A. L. Smith, P. B. Bartley, N. J. Gould, S. McKennan, F. J. Lange, O. M. Lanstrum and H. R. Cunningham; hotel committee—E. W. Prosser, Frank Bogart and Dr. L. M. Rheem; Hauser Lake-Valley trip committee—T. A. Marlow, P. B. Bartley and Dr. L. M. Rheem; dance and reception committee—R. O. Kaufman, E. W. Prosser and N. J. Gould; Broadwater entertainment committee—W. T. Hull, Lester Booker, C. R. Clarke, F. J. Lange, Merlin Power and C. B. Pfeiffer; automobile committee—Dr. L. M. Rheem.

Northwest Notes

The Farmers State is to be established at Halliday, N. D. The incorporators are Adam Hannah of Minneapolis, P. L. Arms of Golden Valley and R. N. Harmson of Krem.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the First State of Buffalo, N. D. Capital stock, $10,000. President, F. F. Fuller; vice-president, W. R. Gardner, both of Buffalo; cashier, Wm. F. Schroeder, Jr., Murchison.

Arthur Reynolds was appointed by the Des Moines clearing house as its representative at the conference called by Secretary McAdoo in regard to the proposed distribution of federal funds in order to assist in moving the crops this fall. Homer Miller also was expected to go over from New York and attend the meeting.

Des Moines, August 7th.—The call by the state banking department for conditions on June 28th caught the Iowa bankers in an off season. Consequently the report to the state department does not show up so well as have preceding reports in recent months. The amount due depositors has decreased since the call of April 17th, $366,777.35. The deposits in the year from June 29th last year to June 28th this year showed a handsome increase, however, of $26,033,490.54, which is sufficiently satisfying to offset whatever disappointment bankers may have felt over the decrease since April. The report shows that overdrafts have decreased $268,109.17 since the April report. The surplus shows an increase of $159,177.65. Undivided profits have increased $360,829.23. Total liabilities have decreased $93,000.32. There have been seven new state and savings banks and trust companies in Iowa since the April report while the increase in the year preceding this last report was 52. The average reserve in all banks June 28, 1913, was 19.3 per cent.

The report indicates that the Iowa banks are doing an immense credit business, for the 1,078 financial institutions under the state laws have on deposit $304,794,000 and they have loaned out $296,923,000. The report shows that the banks have on hand legal tender notes of $6,914,580; gold coin $2,339,338; silver coin $969,883. Undoubtedly the tight money market has affected the Iowa banks but there are reasons for believing that this fall will see a loosening, so Des Moines bankers say, after an investigation of conditions in the state.

Bank Robbers Increasing

The harvest season is on and the bank robbers are increasing in Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska and Minnesota. There are evidences that the gangs which have frequented these four states in the past seasons are going to be on the job again this fall. Cracksmen are said to be accompanying the harvest hands into the South Dakota fields.

Criticises Currency Bill

In the course of his address on the Wilson currency bill to the Des Moines Bankers Club a few days ago, James G. Berryhill stated that the proposed currency measure would deplete the cash in the four national banks of Des Moines $2,291,058. These institutions would be compelled to contribute 10 per cent of their capital stocks with 10 per cent subject to call and 10 per cent of deposits placed as reserve. These requirements would extract from the Iowa National, $984,923; Des Moines National $737,000; Valley National, $304,575; Citizens National, $264,560. Mr. Berryhill discussed the measure in fullest detail and the applause which greeted his remarks was sufficient to show that his hearers were with him in assailing the measure as detrimental to the best financial interests of the country.

Unusual Security for Loan

the Mechanics National at Burlington had one that is unique even for bankers. A well dressed young woman hastened into the bank and inquired for the loan clerk. Smith was pointed out to her. She laid a package on the counter and declared that she lacked $1.22 of having enough to buy her ticket for New York. "Couldn't you advance me $1.22 and keep this package for security?" she asked.

Smith looked at the package. Then he looked at the woman. She seemed in trouble and Smith is always touched by beauty in distress.

"Why, yes, I believe I could," he said, willing to take a chance. He loaned the woman the $1.22 and she hurried forth. Then Smith decided to see what he had in his box. The precious package was opened. It contained two corsets. One was wrapped in pink ribbon. The other was tied with a lavender string. The price marks indicated that the corsets had just been purchased for $6.50. Smith believes that the stranger will send for the corsets and return the $1.22 within a short time.

Cashier's Disappearance Explained

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Louis Bourquin, formerly cashier of the New Hartford State at New Hartford, two years ago, has been solved. Bourquin's departure from New Hartford occurred about the same time that Mrs. Frank Huffman left for parts unknown. The other day, George Dennis, clerk of the Butler county courts, received a letter from Bourquin. The latter is at Vancouver. Mrs. Huffman and he are running a boarding house, so he said in the letter. Bourquin has been going under the name of L. E. Brown, so the letter stated. Since the disappearance of the pair, Mrs. Bourquin has obtained a divorce from Bourquin and Huffman has obtained a decree from Mrs. Huffman. At the time of Bourquin's disappearance there was considerable excitement at New Hartford and the state bank department was notified. The books and accounts were found correct in every detail. Bourquin requested the papers in the divorce cases so that it would be possible for him to remarry.

Des Moines Visitors.

Among out of the city bankers seen in Des Moines recently were the following: Cashier

R. D. Aitchison, First National, Colfax; Cashier H. F. Smith, Abram Rutt National, Casey; Cashier W. E. Grismer and Vice-President J. E. Hamilton, First National, Winterset; Cashier J. H. Alleged Forger Arrested

William Chumley, wanted in Indianapolis for forgery and passing worthless checks worth $600, was arrested in Des Moines last week while en route to a Des Moines hospital where his son has been very ill. Detectives who had been watching for Chumley made the arrest. It is said that the police had been on his trail for several months. Apparently the man had a great deal of affection for his son for he had been at the hospital very many times, so the officials at the institution asserted.

Account Overdrawn; Hangs Self

It is not often that the patron of a bank takes an overdraft so seriously as did William Kelly, a young farmer living near Oxford, Iowa. It appears from newspaper reports that the young man was notified that his account was overdue which so worried him that he hanged himself by a rope halter to a joist in his father's barn. He was 25 years old and had been to a dance just prior to his death, apparently trying to forget the depression caused by the note from the bank.

Banker Acts as Detective

Stuart Archibald, cashier of the People's State at West Liberty, shoved himself into the William J. Burns class when he caught a forger last week. The only clew to the forger, who had worked off $60 worth of checks on the bank and couple of West Liberty business houses, was that he had a "squaky" voice. A few days after these forgeries a thirteen-year-old boy appeared at the bank and asked for some blank checks. He said he wanted to give them to a fellow who was at the depot. Cashier Archibald grew suspicious. He shadowed the boy. The man who was waiting in turn grew suspicious and started for a cornfield. Archibald leaped into a nearby machine and gave chase. For a mile or so the race continued and finally two men coming up on the other side of a field corralled the fast flying youth. He gave his name as Leslie Smith of Silvia, said he had been railroading and was bundled off to the calaboose at Muscatine.

Iowa Notes

Iowa continues to be a ripe market for automobiles. The state department has now issued over 65,000 licenses and number plates and the end is not in sight. Already 16,000 more motor cars have been licensed this year than throughout the entire season last year. The license fee under the new Iowa law is now one half what it has been up to this time.

The depredations of loan sharks are again arousing the humane society in Des Moines. That organization has been quietly investigating this summer and discovered that the loan societies are still mulcting victims, charging enormous rates of interest on impossible terms.

Col. James R. Nutting, who helped organize the Citizens Trust and Savings at Davenport and was one of its principal stockholders, died last week at his home in Davenport. He was one of the prominent residents of eastern Iowa.

Percy W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, is enjoying his vacation. With his family Mr. Hall is making an automobile tour of northwestern Iowa and south Dakota.

John B. McDougal, note teller for the Central State, Des Moines, has returned after a vacation at Spirit Lake.

George R. Whitmer, formerly president of the National Bank of Commerce at Sioux City, is being boomed for member of the city council there. Whitmer is popular and would make a strong candidate at the primaries next spring.

Al Miller, formerly president of the Home Savings, Des Moines, and prominent booster for navigation of the Des Moines river, is the happy father of a ten-and-a-half-pound son, brought by the stork last week.

The contract has been let for the new North Harrison Trust and Savings bank building at Davenport. It will cost approximately $10,000 and will be of brick and stone, one story high, 32 by 54. The fixtures will be new and modern and are not included in the above figures.

Mrs. C. R. Brenton, wife of the well-known Dallas Center banker, is president of the Iowa Mothers Congress, which will be active at the baby health contest held in connection with the state fair in August.

Sylvester Dye, stockholder in the Macedonia State at Macedonia, died recently. The inventory of his estate filed at Council Bluffs last week shows an estate worth $40,000.

An echo of the failure of the Pilot Mound Bank of Pilot Mound turned up in court at Des Moines when suits aggregating claims for $27,175.62 were filed by F. M. Lorenzen, trustee, against banks in Boone and Des Moines. The claims ask $5,000 from the First National at Boone; $5,500 from the Boone State; $5,000 from the Boone National; $5,600 from the Iowa National, Des Moines; $2,199 from N. J. A. Carlson; $3,876 from O. W. Tornell.

Clearings for the Des Moines banks for the month of July totaled $21,025,244, an increase over the clearings for July last year of more than $2,000,000. Clearings for the week ending August 2d showed a total of $4,380,243.25, an increase over the clearings for the preceding week of nearly a million dollars.

E. D. McAllister auditor of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce at Kansas City has been in Des Moines on business. He was formerly cashier of the First National at St. Joseph.

South Dakota Notes

John Hirning has disposed of his stock in the Pierre Trust and Savings and will remove to another state. He was formerly auditor of state.

The Stockmans State is the name of the new bank at Capa. It has a capital stock of $10,000. M. C. Sherwood of Midland is president, J. E. Thorne of Capa is vice-president, and H. G. Williams of Capa, cashier. Some of the stockholders are stockholders also in the Bank of Capa, which was temporarily embarrassed when its president, John Hayes, disappeared from Fort Pierre.

ESTIMATE OF FOREIGN CROPS

The International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, has cabled the United States Department of Agriculture the following estimates of production:

Wheat—Bulgaria, 64,301,000 bushels; Spain, 110,100,000; England and Wales, 55,080,000; Italy, 198,417,000. Combined total of Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Spain, Italy, Luxemburg, Switzerland, United States, India, Japan, Great Britain, European Russia (winter wheat) and Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, is 1,962,000,000 bushels, or 100.2 per cent of last year's production in these countries.

Rye—Belgium, 21,964,000 bushels; Spain, 25,024,000. Combined total production of Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Spain, Italy, Luxemburg, Switzerland, Russia (winter rye) and Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, is 1,052,000,000 bushels, or 92.4 per cent of last year's production.

Barley—Spain, 63,742,000 bushels; England and Wales, 46,450,000; Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, 75,609,000. Combined total production of Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Spain, Italy, Luxemburg, Switzerland, United States, Japan, Great Britain and Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, is 539,000,000 bushels, or 92 per cent of last year's production in these states.

Oats—Belgium, 46,795,000 bushels; Spain, 26,838,000; England and Wales, 91,777,000; Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, 97,678,000; Italy, 35,826,000. Combined total of Belgium, Bulgaria, Denmark, Spain, Italy, Luxemburg, Switzerland, United States, Japan, Great Britain and Hungary, excluding Croatia and Slavonia, is 1,410,000,000 bushels, or 80.8 per cent of last year's production in these countries.

SOME CHICAGO BANKS INELIGIBLE FOR GOVERNMENT FUNDS

In order for national banks to participate in the distribution of the $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 which the secretary of the treasury contemplates depositing in western banks, in order to assist the latter in financing the crop movement, it is necessary for the banks to have outstanding in circulation notes aggregating forty per cent of their capital. This requirement will result in some of the nationals of Chicago being unable to obtain any portion of the government moneys.

In Chicago the amount of bank note circulation falls considerably below the required ratio, being approximately $14,000,000 or about thirty-four per cent of a capitalization of $43,850,000. While some of the national banks of this city have circulation equivalent to the required percentage to enable them to act as depositories of the federal funds, others are far below the requisite amount.

A charter has been issued to the First State, Kremlin, Mont., capital $20,000. J. J. Blair is president and George W. Swab cashier.

The stockholders of the Dayton (Mont.) State held their first meeting recently and elected the following directors: C. B. Harris, H. F. Dwelle, B. P. Drollinger, J. B. Lawlis, and Dr. Wymond Miller; the officers elected being C. B. Harris, president; H. F. Dwelle, vice-president; Geo. Brawith, cashier.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane started factory hunting this week, with a six-week trip through the Middle West and East by Gordon C. Corbaley, vice-president and manager of the chamber of commerce. Mr. Corbaley will visit thirteen cities to confer with manufacturers and capitalists with whom he has corresponded relative to establishing woolen mills, shoe factories and tanneries in Spokane. Business men during the last six months have directed a survey of all conditions surrounding the operation of such factories in this city, their results showing market, labor conditions, transportation and all other prerequisites here to be favorable to successful manufacturing. This is the first step in a three-years campaign to foster and develop manufacturing, to the end that production from agriculture, mining, lumbering and stock growing may be supplemented by converting raw materials into the finished products without shipping across the continent. On the trip Mr. Corbaley will visit the following cities: St. Paul, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, New York City, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Louisville, Columbus, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Duluth.

Industries of all kinds in the Pacific Northwest are in splendid condition, according to the semiannual trade review issued by R. G. Dun & Company. The figures were gathered from reports of hundreds of correspondents throughout Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

The report says in part: "The shipments of lumber show a large increase in both amount and value. The building permits for Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Tacoma for the six months are: 1912, $15,796,188; 1913, $16,124,515. This shows an increase of $328,329.

"The total bank clearings of the four large cities for the same period were: 1912, $748,737,937.36; 1913, $798,688,865.39, an increase of $49,590,928.03.

"Railroad construction work under contract and in prospect is still extensive in all three states.

"The demand for money for all purposes appears to be strong. Regular business does not seem to be hampered and harvest requirements are reported met without advance in interest rates.

"Large crops of good quality appear assured. The process of liquidation of obligations is proceeding a normal course. The leading industries are operating in general to full capacity, and in many cases extending their facilities. In the majority of cases a hopeful view of conditions and prospects is entertained. The elements of doubt are mainly external to the territory reviewed. The Balkan war continues to depress the money market. The change in the tariff entails a period of readjustment more or less prolonged. Labor has shown some signs of restiveness both here and elsewhere.

"There are, however, definite signs that the ebb has halted. Opening prices for the new harvest are favorable, and various industries have made arrangements to cope with an overproduction similar to that of the previous year.

"Given a market that will absorb the surplus products at fairly remunerative prices and an improvement in external and international conditions, the expectation of stable business and normal expansion in the Pacific Northwest is amply warranted.

"Business conditions in Spokane and the Spokane country show improvement in most respects for the first six months of this year, compared with the same period last year.

"There has been no diminution in the number of Spokane banks which report a satisfactory six months' business, their combined statement of June 4, 1913, showing no great change from the year previous. Deposits are around a half million dollars less, while loans increased $300,000 or $400,000, and cash and exchange decreased about $1,400,000. Most of the banks paid customary dividends on the 1st inst., and a satisfactory demand is reported for money."

Total transactions of the banks in the Spokane Clearing House Association for the six months ended July 9, 1913, aggregated $271,595,290, according to figures announced by officers of the association. During the same period actual bank clearings aggregated $105,806,834. On this basis bank clearings as published from time to time represent only about 39 per cent in Spokane of the actual transactions of the banks. The idea of keeping accurate record of the total transactions is a recent one and the Spokane Clearing House Association is one of the few in the United States that do it. It has been done in Spokane only since January 8th of this year, so that the figures announced are the first of the kind ever made by the association.

No development of recent months in the Spokane country is more fraught with importance to all lines of business than the decision of the Spokane and Inland Empire Electric Railroad, which operates lines through the Palouse country and the Spokane valley, to place in operation two special passenger-schedule stock trains each week to bring cattle, hogs and sheep from the surrounding country to Spokane. "The Spokane & Inland has been forced to do this," said Vice-President and Traffic Manager Waldo G. Paine, "by the great growth in stock raising throughout the Palouse country. This tendency to stock raising is of the utmost importance to the continued prosperity of Spokane. If carried to its logical conclusion it will result in cutting up the huge wheat farms of the Palouse, will diversify the farming and will mean that the Spokane country will keep at home $40,000,000 annually sent east for butter, eggs, cheese, dairy products, pork, etc."

B. A. Russell of the Washington Trust Company, Albert Kaye of the Spokane and Eastern Trust and W. E. Tollenaar of the Old National will represent the Spokane Chapter of the American Institute of Banking at the state bankers' convention at Bellingham, August 7th, 8th and 9th. They will accompany the delegation of local and country bankers. Mr. Russell and Mr. Kaye will represent Spokane in the interchapter debate, which is always one of the features of the convention. Spokane bankers have arranged with the Northern Pacific Railroad to furnish a special standard sleeper Tuesday evening of next week, possibly two, and an observation car if enough bankers make reservations. The special cars will be taken off at Seattle to allow the bankers to spend a day in that city, leaving Wednesday night in the same cars for Bellingham, arriving in time for the first session, Thursday morning.

Realizing the value of having good dairy cows in its territory, the Warden State at Warden, Wash., has started a campaign to encourage the farmers to increase their dairy herds. The bank will advance money necessary to buy enough cows to provide a start. J. H. Mullooney, cashier, is in correspondence with the Spokane Chamber of Commerce relative to the campaign, in which his bank will have the cooperation of the Spokane commercial organization.

The new First National of Tonasket, Wash., threw open its doors for business last week and from the start developed a good list of depositors. There is evidently room at Tonasket for a bank, and the people of that place and surrounding country are extending every encouragement to the new enterprise. Arthur Lund, who has been a successful banker at Riverside and Loomis, is president of the new bank.

At a meeting of the directors of the First National of Wenatchee, Wash., George R. Fisher was elected president to succeed W. T. Clark, resigned. L. L. Mathews of the Union Securities Company of Spokane was elected cashier. A. J. Olds resigned as director and was succeeded by George R. Fisher, who has not been a member of the board.

Ernest Wienns, cashier of the First State bank of St. Joe, Ida., was brought to Spokane last week, suffering with a case of appendicitis. An operation was performed by Dr. A. A. Mathews. Wienns was with the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company in this city for seven years. He has been with the First State at St. Joe for the last year. He is recovering rapidly.

EDMONTON NEWS

"There will be no curtailment of the construction program mapped out for this year by the public works department of Alberta," said Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, premier of the province, on returning to Edmonton the night of July 22d from an extended stay in England.

"We won't have to drop a thing," he added, "but we will husband our resources."

Premier Sifton said he had made arrangements while in London for a renewal of the bonds for $7,500,000, a loan which the province negotiated last year.

"There is no lack of money in Great Britain," he continued. "The investors are careful, that is all. The credit of Alberta is just as high to-day as it ever was. Of course, Canadian securities are not so much in demand as they were, but that is also true of all other securities—there is a temporary stoppage of new issues. This probably will last until the 'war' feeling is over. It will not be for very long, however, unless present conditions change before the tightness of money is a thing of the past."

Premier Sifton announced that quarters for the Alberta government office have been secured in a block in Charing Cross, facing Trafalgar square and Nelson's monument and close to steamship and similar offices. There is a reception room for visitors, containing copies of all the Alberta newspapers, and also handsome quarters for the agent.

"The idea in starting the office," he added, "is not only to assist immigration to Alberta. There are lots of people interested in a financial way in Alberta—not only companies, but individuals—and a place was necessary where they could get advice and information regarding the different localities in the province. It was also necessary that they should be able to get it from somebody who is not interested personally in a speculative way in the province. That has been the difficulty with regard to other agents, but it will not be a difficulty with regard to the Alberta agent, for that condition will be imposed on him before he takes office."

Premier Sifton said there is still a remarkable rush of people to Canada from the British Isles, especially from Scotland. All the boats are crowded, reservations being made several weeks ahead. It was a gratifying thing to find that they are all a good class of people.

"On the boat I came home on," the premier said, "there were six hundred emigrants to Canada, many of them to Alberta, and they appeared to be the best kind of settlers."

"Trade in the old country at the present time is exceptionally good, and all lines of business is doing well. One would naturally think that with good times over there the number of emigrants would fall off considerably, but the opposite seems to have been the case. The explanation is that in poor times many people want to come, but have not the money to do so, while in good times they have the money to satisfy their desires."

Premier Sifton received many invitations for banquets during his stay in London, and he accepted them all, for he finds that method to be an excellent way to advertise the province. Nearly all the influential people he met in London had something to say about Alberta and its wonderful possibilities, and listened eagerly to what he had to tell them, afterward confessing that the half had not been told.

After studying the political situation in England at close range, the premier came to the conclusion that the Asquith government would again receive the confidence of the electors, thus enabling them to carry out their big program of promised reforms. Bonar Law's leadership of the Unionist party, he said, does not seem to have been very successful. The former Canadian, for one thing, is a protectionist, while a large wing of his party is opposed to him on that question. He does not seem, however, to possess the qualities to enthuse the party and carry it on to victory.

While in London Premier Sifton was approached by all classes of people who desired information regarding Alberta. One was a clergyman who had invested $25,000 in a certain part of the province, and who complained that he had been swindled by real estate agents. He said he bought several acres of subdivision property upon the guarantee of the agents that its value would double in less than 18 months.

"My dear sir," said the premier, assuming a severe judicial air, "you have been gambling!"

"The trouble is," continued the premier, "that this class of people, when they buy property in the old country, make exhaustive inquiries and go through all kinds of legal processes before parting with a cent of the purchase price, but when they buy property in Canada from a real estate agent they have never seen they accept his statements without question."

Premier Sifton announced it is likely there will be a session of the provincial legislature at an early date.

BANK ADVERTISING AND BUSINESS BUILDING

Men representing eighty chapters and 14,000 members of the American Institute of Banking will assemble at Richmond, Va., September 17, 18 and 19, 1913, for the eleventh annual convention of that organization. On the morning of Thursday, September 18th, there will be conducted under the direction of Fred W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust of New York, a symposium on "Bank Advertising and Business Building." This symposium will take up for consideration by recognized experts practically all the various phases of bank advertising and business getting for banks.

Following each address there will be informal discussion, lead by picked men who have made this subject a close study, and all delegates interested in the questions will be invited to participate.

The formal addresses will be as follows: "Bank Publicity," C. B. Hazlewood, assistant secretary, Union Trust, Chicago, Ill.—Development, need, general printing as an aid, profit or loss, charity abuse; "Advertising Methods," L. A. Mershon, advertising manager U. S. Mortgage and Trust, New York City.—Newspapers and magazines, bank directories and financial papers, programs, billboards, novelties and souvenirs, trade marks and seals; "Advertising Methods," F. M. Polliard, assistant cashier, Exchange National, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Traveling representatives, convention advantages, institute influence, professional advertising agencies.

At the Richmond convention of the American Institute of Banking, which will be held September 17, 18 and 19, 1913, one of the main features will be a symposium on "Clearing Houses and the Extension of their Functions," under the direction of O. Howard Wolfe, of the New York chapter.

In order to get effective results in the time allotted for this symposium but little time will be taken up in discussing the clearing house as a medium for the exchange of city checks. This is the popular conception of the clearing house, but the underlying purpose of the symposium is a study of the many influences for good both to the banks and to the community that may be exercised through bank association, which is the main feature of every clearing house.

The subjects which will be discussed in this symposium will be handled as follows: "Collection of Country Checks" and "Settlement of Balances," by Chas A. Ruggles, Boston chapter; "Clearing House Examinations" and "Registration of Commercial Paper," by J. A. Broderick, New York chapter; "Vocational and Agricultural Education" and "Community

Questions and discussions by delegates taking part in the symposium will be limited to three minutes each, unless the time is extended by general consent. If time permits, the symposium will close with a general discussion led by Mr. Wolfe on the numerical system and total bank transaction reports.

Every chapter should see to it that at least one delegate is prepared to take part in this symposium.

The State Bank of Fostoria, Fostoria, Kan., has been closed by the state officials, who now are in charge. Wm. O. Jones, the cashier, has confessed to making misstatements to the amount of $5,100 and has been placed under arrest. The directors have made good the shortage.

WASHINGTON CONVENTION

The eighteenth annual convention of the Washington Bankers Association was held in the city of Bellingham Thursday and Friday, August 7th and 8th and is in session to-day (Saturday). Headquarters were at the new Hotel Leopold and business sessions held in the assembly room of the Elks Hall.

Bellingham bankers arranged a novel and delightful entertainment for the delegates and visitors, which included a beautiful ball and reception Thursday evening, the 7th. Friday morning a special train took the visitors to Mt. Vernon, where they were the guests of the bankers of Skagit county at a picnic lunch.

Saturday morning, the 9th, after adjournment of the convention, the visitors boarded the steamer Whatcom for a trip through Puget Sound, on the outward way inspecting the raising of some of the fish traps where salmon are impounded by the thousands. The steamer then proceeded to Semiahmoo, where the entire party were the guests of the Alaska Packers Association, returning to Bellingham in the evening through the islands in the most beautiful part of this great inland sea.

Secretary P. C. Kauffman had a program replete with interesting events. The convention was called to order at ten o'clock by President W. J. Patterson, cashier Hayes & Hayes, Aberdeen. Address of welcome on behalf of the city was made by Mayor E. J. Cleary and for the local bankers by F. F. Handschy, vice-president of the Bellingham National. The response was delivered by George B. Burke, vice-president of the Bankers Trust, Tacoma.

After the president's annual address reports were presented from Secretary Kauffman, Treasurer C. K. McMillan, Chairman J. E.

Chilberg of the executive committee and the protective legislative and uniform warehouse receipts committees. Delegates to the A. B. A. convention in Detroit reported, after which there was an address by Lydell Baker, editor of the Pacific Banker, Portland, Ore., entitled "Old Nick Biddle, the Bank Monster."

Thursday afternoon there was read an address, Mr. Pollard being unable to be present, by J. A. S. Pollard of Fort Madison, Iowa, on "Progress and the Banker;" W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, talked on advanced agriculture, education and good roads, and J. F. Sears, cashier of the Posser (Wash.) State, on "Benton County's Benefits from Diversified Farming."

Friday evening a joint debate took place between Seattle and Spokane chapters of the A. I. B. on "Resolved, That legislation enacted by the federal government permitting the establishment of land credit banks would be for the best interests of the country," the affirmative being supported by Seattle and the negative by Spokane. Saturday morning's session will be confined to a report of the prize essay contest and committee reports and election of officers.

Officers of the association are as follows: President, W. J. Patterson, cashier Hayes & Hayes, Aberdeen; vice-president, W. H. Martin, cashier Pioneer National, Ritzville; treasurer, C. K. McMillan, cashier Northwestern National, Bellingham; secretary, P. C. Kauffman, director Fidelity Trust, Tacoma.

W. C. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, in speaking on advanced agriculture, education and good roads, said:

"Only 16 per cent of the land in this country is under actual cultivation, which has to supply the needs of a hundred million people, while Germany supports sixty million people on an area smaller than Texas.

"It has been reported that 700,000 of our farmers have emigrated to Canada within the past ten years. Is it any wonder that we occupy a low position among the nations of the world so far as agriculture is concerned?

"Why isn't more of our land cultivated? We have vast areas that are capable of yielding bountiful crops. I think most of us know the reason. The farmer, although he is one of the principal cogs in the machine of human progress, is regarded by many as more or less of a joke and but scant attention paid to his needs and the improvement of his environment. He cultivates his land under conditions which are unpleasant; he experiences great difficulty in securing sufficient funds with which to finance his business, and even when he does procure a loan is compelled to comply with disagreeable conditions and to pay burdensome rates of interest entirely disproportionate to the service rendered; the country roads over which he travels, both for business and other reasons, often are in such condition as to discourage their use any more than is absolutely necessary. Consequently our rural brethren are more or less isolated from the rest of the world and denied the pleasures and benefits resulting from social intercourse with their followmen; and, in addition, they have a great deal of trouble in their business as a result of the poor roads, being unable to transport their product speedily and readily to market.

"We are wont to complain about the increasing cost of living. I want to say right here that this condition would not exist if it were not for the faulty methods of agricultural development and poor roads. I think that probably the reason that attention in being paid to these matters now is that the conditions which they have produced have become so distressing as to be almost intolerable and that the people, brought face to face with a realization of the grave situation which confronts them, have recognized the importance of doing something to relieve the strain. However this may be, the fact remains that there is something wrong and that something must be done forthwith to right that wrong, and this can be accomplished only by an aggressive campaign in that behalf."

WASHINGTON TRUST COMPANY

Washington Trust Company of Spokane, with capital stock of $200,000 and surplus and undivided profits amounting to $52,656, enjoys a line of deposits of $807,167.

The trust company was organized in 1902 by J. Grier Long, its present president, and M. B. Connelly and R. L. Webster, respectively vice-president and secretary.

Mr. Grier has for many years been manager of the Penna. Mortgage Investment Company of Spokane and formerly was president of the clearing house banks of Spokane. He now is president of the Union Park Bank of Spokane and of the board of education. Mr. Long takes a deep interest in civic affairs and helped prepare the present charter for commission form of government. He has made extensive investigations on currency questions.

C. M. SAWYER ADVISES KANSAS BANKERS

"Kansas never had a finer demonstration of the value of its agricultural college than it had this year," said Charles M. Sawyer, state bank commissioner of Kansas, recently. "It cost the farmers of the state two or three million dollars in cold cash to find out how valuable that fine school is, but they know now.

"If the farmers of Kansas had paid the slightest attention to the bulletins of the agricultural college there would not have been the chinch bug and the grasshopper raids this year that have cost millions. The college experts on chinch bugs and grasshoppers knew this was coming and warned the farmers of it. The farmers paid no attention and some of them lost part of their wheat, all of their oats and half of their corn as a result.

"Last November, two or three times in December, several times in January, February and March, and even as late as April, the entomologists at the college sent out bulletins telling the farmers that 90 per cent of the eggs laid by the chinch bugs and the grasshoppers last fall were fertile and would hatch this spring because of the mild winter. They told the farmers, and I think every newspaper printed it from two to half a dozen times, that there was going to be a big raid by the grasshoppers and chinch bugs. The entomologists had made a study of conditions and knew what they were talking about. They also urged the burning of all trash piles, clumps of grass and weed patches to kill the hopper and chinch bug eggs, and they urged that it be done right away and the ground plowed early to expose the eggs to the frost and snow. I remember that in December the college sent out a bulletin that the chinch bugs and grasshoppers had caused ten million dollars' worth of damage in 1912 and would double this in 1913 unless steps were taken to eradicate the pests.

"One in a hundred farmers followed the advice of the state's entomologists, who are paid to learn these things and tell the farmers about them. The attempt to kill the hoppers and bugs was so scattered that it was ineffective, and see what we have this year—the greatest damage from chinch bugs and grasshoppers the state has had in twenty years or more. And the loss could have been infinitesimal if the farmers of Kansas had paid attention to the warning and spent a little time and energy in heeding it."

EXPECT MONEY BILL TO PASS

President Wilson expects to have currency legislation enacted at the present session of congress, according to advices received from Washington this week. The president is gratified at the action of the house committee in deciding to report out the measure. In discussing the matter with senators the president has been assured that the senate is in favor of the enactment of a banking and currency law at the present session. It is said there are only two senators who are opposed to such a course.

THE BANKER

affected property rights of stockholders adversely, for it has been found that and that disaster need not necessarily follow the breaking up of great combinations.

American enterprise will have to expand and get its full share from the markets of the world whether it particularly desires such broadening out or not. Some might be better satisfied with limited markets and artificially sustained prices, but that day and opportunity has gone by, never perhaps to return. The American banker has the world before him, for he must lead American enterprise. The American banker keeps right along with the American manufacturer and the manufacturer is, and has been, making wonderful strides in progress. Our exports of goods to South America have jumped during the last ten years from less than $40,000,000 to $116,000,000. It is the opinion of some really conservative financiers that we will put the Indian sign on Great Britain in that trade during the next half decade. Our exports to our neighbors in North America for the last calendar year were $326,000,000. To Europe $423,000,000. This has been accomplished by our manufacturers in spite of prejudice in some of those countries against us and restrictions at home.

In this great growth of trade with South America the American banker will play a very important part. Mexico will require financing as soon as each member of the population has a whack at the presidential chair and some one is found who can sit tight long enough to make contracts. American bankers will be called upon largely to accomplish this, and they will have a hand in all the big loans to Europe and the Orient even if horse sense has supplanted dollar diplomacy. On the other hand the needs of our railroads, the exploitation of our national resources, the re-production of lost capital in the flooded districts, all promise great demands for credit here and we will have to pull vast quantities from the old world. The capital is waiting ready to come, but always contingent upon certain progressive amendments to our banking and currency laws. The foreign investor is hardly to be expected to risk liberal investment in a country where no adequate provision is made to sustain the credit system.

I think we all agree that in the progress of American banking, currency reform is demanded, the adoption in legislation of some sound plan to utilize capital wealth, so as to be able to convert that capital into currency when needed for legitimate business. I would not even attempt to discuss the plans proposed, but that I believe is the main idea, and we now have all the data and statistics by which men unbiased by politics might work out a plan adapted to the peculiar needs of this nation. This is no idle dream—why, we are only the half baked, uncivilized, knock kneed, double jointed nation of any size without those facilities. A currency is needed which will automatically respond to the demands of trade and commerce and which will not respond to the demands of speculation and stock gambling.

I have an idea that a very prominent government servant down in Washington we lately employed for just such purposes, a gentleman who has a very firm, decided and prominent chin, is going to be able, with the backing of some ninety million and odd people to put something of this kind over in spite of the politicians. I feel sure that when such a plan is enacted into law it will be largely the work of the progressive American banker, although I believe some brilliant Minnesota congressman recently introduced a bill in congress which denies to any banker or to any person interested in a bank the right to help frame a scientific currency and banking law.

It does seem reasonable that the bankers of this country could work out a proper law on this subject. In Nicaragua, in Mexico, in the Philippines and in Panama they have obtained scientific currency laws by sending for a few American experts to come over to those countries and do the work. Nicaragua held a great celebration last March over her currency reform bill designed by American financiers.

One of the most striking developments of commercial progress is the combination of capital and what is called the "Trust" question holds many and varied problems for the progressive banker.

Neither capitalist nor laborer would be as well off if both were compelled to work out their differences under the individual system. The proposition is plainly to accept the inevitable consolidation of capital—the hardly questioned right of labor to organize, and then seek not only to utilize, but to encourage such features as are beneficial, productive and economical, and eliminate their evil parts and monopolistic tendencies.

The progressive banker will investigate the true worth of bond issues made by the octopus, giving them just as close analysis as he would in making a loan to a small corporation, for there is nothing about size alone, which insures worth or stability. The lion and lamb may peacefully sleep together, but lambs who lie down with the octopus wrapped in the mantle of reckless debentures or stock certificates, will likely catch a heavy cold when the blankets shrink in the inclemency of financial depression—besides getting their feet decidedly wet.

A little reflection, a policy of conservatism, a look ahead may insure to us golden returns in continued prosperity; and when a customer whom you suspect of being inclined to a habit of poking into speculation of uncertain merit appears before you, wrap your mantle closer round your manly form, go to your closet and like the melancholy Dane soliloquize—

To lend or not to lend, that is the question,
Whether 'twere better for the bank to suffer,
The enmity of some mad speculator
Refusing aid to ventures that breed trouble
And by a turn-down, lose him? to lie—to dodge

No more,—and by the act, to say we end
The worry, and the thousand nervous jars
His plunges cause us—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. The rate,—was fair;
The loan! perchance the loss;—ay there's the rub;

For in that game of chance what schemes may come

To shuffle out the lambs and profits spoil—
That makes us pause. It holds us too
A while, and saves us the mistakes of life.
For who would dare his trust to scorn and take

Himself a flyer, and risk being gold bricked,
Betraying confidence and law's command
With insolence to office, and to spurn
That patient merit due fidelity,
By slyly gambling for a quiet stake
With sacred trust funds? Why then heel others

To play the game erstwhile you hold the sack?
And the dread of hearing something drop,
Into suspended assets, from whose bourn
Small value ere returns—depresses nerve
And makes us bear slow profits that we have Than fly to others that we know not of.
Thus conscience doth make bankers of us all;
And thus our natural state of hesitation
Is nothing more than instinct to play safe.

And enterprises which look well on paper
With this regard we firmly turn away,
And lose naught else but trouble—soft you now!

The bank inspector.—Man, in thy orisons
Be all my loans approved.

The combination is here to stay. We can trot the octopus into a metaphorical three ring circus, make him jump through figurative hoops and ply him with the goad of breezy rhetoric, but it doesn't feaze him. We can introduce him as the genuine article born in the shadow of Trinity spire, christened in Bleeding Kansas and reared in the land of the free and the home of the rich, and call him all the names in the lexicon of the energetic campaigner, but after all we must recognize the fact that he is here to live with us, and must be dealt with as a condition and not a theory.

The recurring periods of active business followed by depressions have long been accepted as fixed laws of commercial, industrial and financial progress, but as we have noticed some innovations in the management of the Prosperity stage, some of us have been wondering whether this recurring darkening of the house and opening up later in the season was really necessary; or whether by using judgment and economy in casting the performance, and encouraging more moderate patronage on the part of the public, it might not be possible to run a continuous vaudeville with only mild reactions in business during the quiet hours when the orchestra plays and the stage hands go to lunch. Heretofore the cleaning and repair work has been done between performances, but we have noticed that a great deal of dusting and remodeling, not to mention much raking, has been going on while the performance was being given, and has caused little real discomfort to the majority in the audience. Durable fire escapes have been added by legislation and a lot of red lights have been placed in plain sight by energetic courts of justice, while a number of prominent although careless and irresponsible actors have been ejected from the cast.

With all this unusual work being carried on during the biggest run the show has had, it seems possible to keep it running indefinitely, although there will naturally be dull days and seasons, and the first steps should be to clear the aisles of worn out banking laws, hang up a panic-proof curtain of currency legislation and open the exits wide to all speculators.

The great questions of conservation are right before us and we haven't been a moment too soon in turning our attention to these great problems. Much of our forest land has been depleted, much of our rich soil at least temporarily exhausted in the East and Middle states. The short sighted policy of destroying our forests without requiring a tree to be replanted for every one cut down and of exhausting the fertility of our soil for quick temporary profits has already cost us much material wealth. We have been wasting the richest inheritance which God ever granted a people when He brought our forefathers here with hope in their hearts and the dawning of a better day shining on their brows to this country rich in natural resources, its valleys and plains awaiting the magic touch of husbandry to ripen into waving fields of yellow grain,—its hills filled with mineral wealth, ready to reward man's ingenuity and skill.

No man or nation can profit by destruction in the long run. When we hear of nations of the old world engaging in a fearful war, or of a city being destroyed by the elements, we are apt to reckon upon an absolutely erroneous economic basis. We may think only of the great armies consuming our food products and supplies, of the ruined city creating a demand for labor in rebuilding. We may think of our railroads hauling supplies to the armies and material to the cities, and we sometimes talk as if these calamities, because they were not happening to us, would actually improve commercial conditions and create business activity.

But we never made a greater economic mistake. Wherever war wastes, or fire, flood or earthquake destroys, just so much of the world's capital is forever lost to mankind. Just so much of the capital which can never be replaced except by the power that created it—the thinking brain, the brawn and muscle which originally brought it forth from nature's storehouses, where otherwise it would have remained useless and chaotic throughout the centuries. The war cursed lands for years will be impoverished and unable to buy our food products and supplies except as stern necessity demands. The ruined city will for decades have to devote its energies to reproduction rather than the production of new capital. Loss is loss, we cannot get away from it, and we all must pay our share.

There is no more important problem before the people of this country than that of not only conserving its productiveness for the future, but of getting every last dollar now out of this priceless heritage of ours, the fertile soil of the United States.

And it is well that we, whose vocation is in trade and commerce, should not overlook this great foundation of soil production upon which we erect the superstructure of our commercial progress.

We are supposed to deal in money and credit, but we realize that there are greater assets in forest and field, mine and waterway, and what a vast repository of wealth is this great Northwest where the sun never sets in the Pacific without gilding your mountains with the promise of a brighter and still grander to-morrow.

Who can foretell the coming achievements of this great nation, this republic grown from seed plucked from the worn fields of old world civilization and planted in the soil of liberty, and the harvest the grandest government of free born sons, in this, the best, most enlightened day humanity has yet seen!

Our country firmly established as a great creditor nation whose eagles of gold and dollars of silver speak an international language. Girdled with bands of steel from ocean to ocean, inland waters dotted with steamers carrying the products of industry and swift grey hounds of commerce plowing the main to American possessions in the distant islands of the Orient. The magnificent spirit of American commercial, financial and industrial progress which has illumined every page of our country's history, which within twenty years has doubled the value of all property, the circulation of money and wealth per capita, the products of the farm, the homes of industry, the tonnage of vessels and miles of railway, is the same spirit which here turned the sod in savage fastnesses, brought from eternal hills emoluments to skill and industry, made furnace fires born brightly and wheels of traffic turn.

I see no shadows in this sunlight of progress. I cannot doubt that a sovereign people, in the light of our history, our magnificent achievements and our shining destiny will solve the great problems which progress hurls upon us, as we blaze the trail of civilization, that the peoples of all earth may follow, to the added glory and prosperity of our common country.

KANSAS COUNTY BANKERS ORGANIZING

As a part of the state-wide movement of the Kansas Bankers Association to promote agricultural development, county organizations are being formed throughout Kansas. The Montgomery County Bankers Association has elected George T. Guernsey, Jr., president; D. H. Martin of Coffeyville, vice-president; Earnest Sewell, secretary, and C. A. Mitchell of Cherryvale treasurer.

The bankers of Labette county elected W.

Morley, Oswego State, president; J. F. Steele, Parsons Commercial, vice-president; H. D. Paynter, Peoples State, Mound Valley, secretary-treasurer. Leavenworth bankers met on Thursday of last week to organize. Governor W. J. Bailey, and P. H. Ross, Leavenworth county's farm adviser, addressed the meeting. Among the Atchison bankers who attended were O. A. Simmons, First National; F. M. Woodford, Atchison Savings; Edward Iverson, Exchange State, and Frank Manglesdorf, German-American. The party made the trip in Mr. Simmons' car.

BANKERS SUPPLY SEED WHEAT

One of the get-together plans of the Kansas bankers to help the farmers who have suffered crop losses and are needing assistance financially is to buy and furnish them with the best quality of seed wheat. Bank Commissioner Sawyer has written to twenty counties where losses have been greatest, to discover how many will need seed wheat and the amount. This is to be managed by the local bankers' organization in each county, and probably loans on wheat will be made, payable out of the crop next year after harvest.

BIG GAIN IN JULY CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in Chicago for July were $1,343,000,000, or nearly $72,000,000 more than the corresponding month last year. For the seven months of this year the clearings have been $9,334,000,000 which is $523,000,000 more than the corresponding period in 1912, or nearly six per cent.

The figures compiled by the local clearing house indicate general business activity despite pessimistic rumors calculated to disturb the natural trend. In many lines there is an excellent volume of business.

Ground has been broken for the construction of the building of the Waelder (Tex.) State which is being organized.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking
and Financial Interests of the Middle West

AUGUST 16, 1913

Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879

10 CENTS A COPY

CONDITIONS COMFORTABLE IN WEST

Leading bankers of the Middle West report more satisfactory conditions than those which had prevailed a short time ago. A general feeling of optimism and confidence in the future is being manifested on all sides and no fear is being expressed as to the ability of the banks to cope with any normal situation likely to present itself. This easier feeling is attributed in a large measure to the stand taken by government officials at Washington in assuring the banks of a willingness to aid in averting any extraordinary strain likely to be felt as a result of autumn requirements.

Since the issuance of the government crop reports bankers have taken a more hopeful view of the situation, and while they appreciate that there still is a certain amount of uncertainty, the recent rains have led them to believe that the major portion of any damage to be sustained by crops yet to be harvested has already been felt.

While the rates for money are still high, this is but natural at the present season. It is the opinion of some that the rates may possibly ease off somewhat during the next fortnight as a result of the disposition of certain European bankers to liquidate the indebtedness accruing in favor of the United States by reason of the large trade balance in our favor the past year.

No fear exists at the present time as to the possibility of a panic, as is evidenced most conclusively by the fact that borrowers are paying off their loans. Several banks have had large sums paid up recently, a portion of which was borrowed by country banks, which is indicative of a satisfactory condition of the latter. As a further indication of this it might be added that the sale of commercial paper in the interior is increasing substantially.

Chicago-Boston Special

On Thursday there were enough reservations on THE CHICAGO BANKER sanctum desk for nine Pullman cars. That did not include the "Chicago round-up," Michigan, Nebraska, nor the Twin Cities. It will be a big convention, and the Chicago-Boston special will be the best ever. Send in your reservation at once. Either send it direct or through any member of the committee. Notices of space assigned will be sent out as soon as possible.

INVESTIGATING CONDUCT OF NEW YORK BANK

Washington, August 14th.—Great interest was aroused in Washington to-day by publication of the story that the treasury department is investigating the charge that the National City Bank of New York, in making a loan of $44,500,000 to Henry A. Blair and Samuel Insull of Chicago, had violated the national banking laws.

The violation, if proved, would subject the bank to a loss of its charter.

These two gentlemen have been conspicuously identified with all movements for advancing the interests of the state association and always have evinced a willingness to devote a portion of their time and energy in behalf of the Montana Bankers Association.

MAY INCREASE PRIVATE BANK TAXES

The board of review is making an effort to increase the taxes paid by private banking institutions. It is contended that in the past these concerns have succeeded in a measure in evading an adequate tax by reason of the fact that they publish no statements of condition. It is proposed to prorate their assets in proportion to their deposits in arriving at the proper basis for taxation.

BYRON L. SMITH RETURNS FROM NEW YORK

Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust, returned from New York this week. He said that sentiment in the East is more cheerful and conditions there are becoming more satisfactory. In speaking of the proposal to deposit government moneys in the banks to facilitate movement of the crops, Mr. Smith said:

"The offer made by Secretary McAdoo to place government deposits with the banks has helped to dispel fears of a money stringency this fall, but I do not believe the banks here are in a position where they will require much aid from the government. There is a good demand for money here at 6 per cent, which reflects a sound business situation, and the banks are well prepared to take care of their customers."

CHICAGO TO GET FOUR MILLIONS OF GOVERNMENT MONEY

It is expected that Chicago will receive $4,000,000 as its portion of the money which the treasury department will deposit in banks of the West and South. The first half of this sum probably will arrive this month and the remainder in September.

BANKERS TO MEET AUGUST 22d

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH says Indiana will have one or two cars on the regular Boston train, leaving Indianapolis on Saturday evening, October 4th.

"BANKERS in Northern Indiana will catch the big Chicago special, as a matter of convenience, comfort and good company."

SECRETARY WM. B. HUGHES of Nebraska has a "convention card" which he furnishes at $1.50 for 250, which includes the making of a small half-tone.

EACH banker is to be fitted out with the cards bearing his portrait, his name and the bank's name and location.

HUGHES tried it out at a group meeting with great success. The well known modesty of bankers is the chief objection but if "everybody's doin' it" it is easy.

FURTHERMORE the Nebraska protective department will not "collect" for members caught in crooked deals. Convictions cannot be had in "settled" cases.

"WE are not working to recoup the defrauded bank," writes the secretary, "but to lock up the criminal and protect the other 935 member banks."

THIS sounds like sound policy. In some of the states the secretary requires a signed agreement to prosecute before a case is actively taken up.

THE real purpose of the association in its protective work is to put the criminal behind the bars, not to violate the laws by compromising felonies.

SECRETARY W. F. KEYSER announces the following for the big Missouri-Boston special:

"IN order that the trip to Boston may be made as pleasant and comfortable as possible for Missouri bankers and their friends, a special train will be run from St. Louis under the auspices of the Missouri Bankers Association. The special will leave St. Louis about noon October 3d, and will arrive at Boston in the forenoon of October 5th. The Wabash Railroad will be the official line out of St. Louis and the New York Central Lines, from Buffalo to Boston.

"THE special train will be taken through to Niagara Falls, where a stop of several hours will be made. At the Falls, special cars will be provided for those of our party that desire to take the famous Gorge Route trip. After the Gorge trip there will be ample time for visiting other points of interest. Leaving Niagara at 3 p. m., October 4th, the special will go to Buffalo and remain there from 4 p. m to 8 p. m. Upon arrival of train at Buffalo, automobiles will be in readiness for the accommodation of those desiring to see the residence district of the city."

COL. J. J. SULLIVAN of Cleveland, between trips to Washington on currency matters, is giving his full time to the Ohio convention which will meet in Cleveland September 11th and 12th.

HE has Senator Owen for the "big card" and the turn-out promises to be a record even for Ohio.

S. B. RANKIN is notifying his members in the Ohio association about the big Chicago-Boston special train. Of course they will have an Ohio train but there is no rivalry in this business. The pleasure and convenience of the banker is the real object of all of them.

WE like to be up-to-date in things political, so far as there may be things political in A. B. A. circles.

WE have a letter under date August 1, 1913, signed by H. J. Haas, written on his bank's stationery, which says in part:

"THE members of the American Bankers Association in Pennsylvania, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and Utah (five in all) have unanimously indorsed Mr. William A. Law, our candidate, for first vice-president of the American Bankers Association."

NOTE the "our candidate" and the further claim that "several other states, where conventions have been held, have elected as their members of the nominating committee men who will support him."

OF course it would take more than the votes of the five named states and "several others" to elect, out of the forty-seven.

DR. F. W. POWERS has been elected president of the famous Black Hawk National at Waterloo, Iowa. F. F. McElhinney has retired.

CASHIER CHARLES W. KNOOP took the vacancy on the board. Both Dr. Powers and Mr. Knop have had extended banking experience.

SINCE they became active in the affairs of the Black Hawk National the deposits have doubled and the resources now are two millions.

DR. THOMAS N. CARVER, professor of political economy in Harvard University, is head of the newly established rural organization service of the United States department of agriculture. The purpose of this bureau is the aiding of the 6,000,000 farmers of the country to bring about the betterment of their social and economic conditions.

THE Wisconsin proceedings book is out with a full list of active and associate members, in the latter department being thirty-seven from Chicago. The book is complete and beautifully printed and bound.

SECRETARY MORRIS GOLDWATER of the Arizona Bankers Association has notified his members by bulletin of the big Chicago-Boston special and will make reservations on it when requested by member banks.

THE rates of fare granted on this train are for round trips. Chicago, $42.85; Elkhart, $32.95; Cincinnati, $36.30; La Porte $36.30; Toledo, $30.10; Buffalo, $18.50; South Bend, $35.20; Cleveland, $27.70 and Detroit via Toledo, $30.10.

PULLMAN fares are regular, no extra, and can be furnished by any ticket agent in any city.

MR. FRANCIS HENRY WILLIAMS, C.S.
Christian Science Practitioner

NATIONAL CITY BANK, New York, in its reply to Secretary McAdoo in the controversy over the "artificial" depression of the price of government twos shows that it during July purchased more U. S. bonds than it sold.

THE showing is made by including twos, threes, fours and Panamas. Restricted to twos, which market was the one that was depressed, the National City by its own showing sold more than it purchased. Draw your own conclusion.

RATTING a quotation up or down in New York is like stealing candy from a baby to those who know how and have the resources.

GOOD old American Banker says that GardComly of New York, formerly of Boston, "is coming to the front" in the race for the A. B. A. treasurership at Boston. J. W. Hoopes of Texas is classed as "a formidable opponent." A. D. Graham of Baltimore and A. G. Clapham of Washington are named as "in the race."

AREN'T you glad the job is not to go begging and that Fletcher Farrell will not be compelled, much against his will, to keep it another term?

BUFFALO is going some with her new fifty-million dollar bank consolidation.

THERE were a host of applicants for B. L. Gill's job as banking commissioner of Texas. No one of them landed, for the office sought the man, and W. W. Collier of San Antonio is the new incumbent.

THIS is on the Financial Age. It refers to Arthur Reynolds as "treasurer of the American Bankers Association," when most everybody knows he's its vice-president and after Boston will be the president.

HENRY SCHROEDER of Salin has been elected president of the First National Bank at Moorehead, Minn., to succeed the late Lew A. Huntoon.

A BILL in equity has been filed asking that the contract between the Boston & Maine Railroad and the American Express Company be annulled on the ground that it is unjust and inequitable to the railroad and a fraud on the stockholders.

SURELY the chickens are coming home to roost with the express companies.

SPEAKING of Mexico, you've heard this of course:

"We don't want to fight;
But, by jingo, if we do,
We've got the men, we've got the ships,
We've got the money, too."

PITTSBURGH interests connected with the old Second National are talking reorganization. The bank was in splendid shape when united with the First and bore a most excellent reputation.

NO dividend as yet for creditors of the late First-Second National.

THE Anheuser-Busch "switch," masquerading as a "railroad," has been before the interstate commission.

IT used to get a $4.50 rate on all cars but the commission thought this too much like a rebate and has cut it down to $2 per car.

THE new bank supervision bill in Washington will go into effect in 1915. Until then no supervision over private banks will be attempted by the state.

IN 1915 the privates will go out of business or convert. The intention of the legislature was to have supervision begin at once, but the attorney-general decided as above.

HAVE you noticed that government two's are back up to 98 on the New York stock exchange? Evidently McAdoo hit the nail on the head.

ALEX. D. CAMPBELL, of the Hanover, has returned to the "Fatherland" for his vacation. Didn't know he is German? You should have guessed it.

SECOND annual convention of the Investment Bankers will be held in Chicago this year.

DATES are October 28th, 29th and 30th, and the Blackstone has agreed to make a spread on the eats and fine rooms.

JOHN JAY ABBOTT is chairman of the banquet committee, which is about the last word in such matters.

JOHN E. BLUNT, H. L. Stewart, A. W. Bullard, President George B. Caldwell, and Secretary F. R. Fenton are others in the plot.

DOWN East L. B. Franklin of the Guaranty Trust is fixing up for a special train. Herbert Witherspoon of the Spokane (Wash.) & Eastern Trust is doing it for the Northwest.

CONVENTION will extend over three days, ending with a banquet at the Congress Hotel. The committee expects to announce within a few days the program, which is being perfected. Several of the leading financial men of the country have been secured to address the various sessions of the convention, and comprehensive plans for the entertainment of the delegates are in preparation.

UNUSUAL interest attaches to the coming convention inasmuch as the Investment Bankers Association will have ended the first year of its existence. The association completed its organization in New York City a year ago and already has become well known in America and Europe.

ITS prime purpose of organization is the betterment of investment banking conditions with particular attention to these as they exist in the various states. Its recent activities have been along legislative and educational lines with relation to currency and banking questions, the proposed income tax law and the so-called "Blue Sky" legislation.

COL. FARNSWORTH has called up to say that "if Illinois can secure 25 more members she can elect two members of Council at the Chicago convention."

THERE'S a good chance for some one down state—Peoria preferred. Col. Edens telegraphs his hopes that everybody will get busy on the non-member list.

COL. EDENS says "Washington convention best ever. Weather fine and in good company."

PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN has a splendid double column editorial based entirely upon an article in an Eastern magazine by B. F. Harris of this state.

MR. HARRIS wrote along his own well-beaten track on "making the banker richer—and helpful," a doctrine which many Eastern publications regard as quite new.

IN the West it is accepted as quite the regular thing for bankers to stand up for good roads, better farming, useful education, and more live stock on the farm.

SECRETARY KEYSER, acting for a member at Monett, Mo., is desirous of locating A. C. Cutsinger, who left Monett about a year ago.

APROPOS of the recent lobby investigation in congress an interesting sidelight on the politics of half a century ago is given by John Bigelow in the fourth volume of his "Retrospections of an Active Life," recently published by Doubleday, Page & Company.

IN a conversation with Seward, the purchaser of Alaska declared that before the United States obtained possession of this vast Russian territory, $2,000 had to be given to Robert J. Walker; $10,000 to his partner, F. K. Stanton; $10,000 to two members of congress; and $20,000 to Forney, who had lost $40,000 by the defalcation of his clerk.

"ONE thousand dollars more was to have been given to poor Thad. Stevens, but no one would undertake to give that to him, so I undertook it myself. The poor fellow died, and I have it now."

THIS doesn't make the modern Washington grafters seem quite so heartless.

H. B. VORSE, cashier of the Century at Des Moines, was asked to address the weekly Y. M. C. A. meeting on "Advertising a Bank."

WE see by the new, 1913, proceedings book for Missouri that Chairman W. S. Lucas asked the St. Joseph convention "to pray to have the rain stopped."

NO such prayer would be permitted in these dry unhappy days.

MR. KEYSER sends out his annuals bound in cloth, library style, and as a reference book they are quite valuable.

THE elaborate J. B. Jennings' signature and the "marble bust" of R. S. Hawes give great tone to the book.

CHAIRMAN HEPBURN has called the Chicago conference for 10 a. m., August 22d at the La Salle Hotel. CASHIER.

FAVOR McADOO PLAN

Grand Rapids (Mich.) bankers regard the plan of the secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to deposit between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 of government funds in Southern and Western banks, accepting commercial paper as security, these funds to prevent the usual tie-up of money during the crop moving period, as a good idea.

"It is a reasonable thing to do and I see no objection to it," said Clay H. Hollister, vice-president of the Old National. "It is perfectly safe and will help to relieve any feeling of anxiety that there will not be enough money to move the crops. I doubt if the privilege will be used to any extent as the banks are in shape to meet their customers' needs. The banks here are in good shape."

"This action will probably relieve the situation, although there may not be much of a call for the money," said R. D. Graham, president of the Commercial Savings. "The fact that it is there to be had will relieve any apprehension. There is not much call for money for crop movements here, as fruit is moved daily and cash paid, but potatoes take a little money for movement and in states where there are millions of bushels of wheat and corn and millions of bales of cotton to be stored the movement must be financed. I have seen balances run up to $100,000 and $175,000 during the big peach seasons. The farmers borrow while producing and pay loans later. It is storing crops that takes money to finance movement. I sometimes think that too much emphasis is laid on this cost of moving crops. The money advanced comes back again and it is but temporarily that it is withdrawn."

BIG GRAFT IN VOTING MACHINES

The Butts legislative committee on Thursday, after excluding it for more than a week, admitted as evidence a sensational document written by Lloyd L. Duke, city attorney of Ottumwa, Iowa, containing a charge that Andrew M. Lawrence, publisher of Hearst's Chicago Examiner, was to get $105,000 in connection with the $1,000,000 voting machine contract with the Chicago election commissioners.

The Collection of Out-of-Town Items

Address delivered at Montana convention this week by W. L. Clark, Auditor Spokane and Eastern Trust Company

The subject assigned to me is one which I think is attracting as much attention and study throughout the country as any banking topic, with the possible exception of currency reform. The banking fraternity in general is much interested in a more efficient and economical method of handling transit items, and while the general public is apparently not interested, any improvement in this respect will benefit them probably more than the banks. It is, without doubt, a great convenience to the people in the rural communities to have their checks accepted at par in payment of bills, and this practice is encouraged by those having goods to sell. The fact that this is very largely done is known to all of us, but I was somewhat surprised to see a statement, from what I consider a very reliable source, that 95 per cent of all the business of the country is done with checks. If this is true, the check is undoubtedly the most convenient form of credit instrument now in general use and must be of great assistance to business in general and probably plays an important part in assisting our inelastic currency system to perform its work. It is almost impossible to think that we will ever greatly reduce the volume of check circulation, and it is highly probable that it will continually increase.

If this is the probable course, it behooves all those who must of necessity handle large volumes of transit items to evolve some method of greatly reducing the labor and expense of handling them.

It is true that there have been many improvements in the method of handling these items, particularly in recent years since the numerical system and mechanical inventions have replaced the old-fashioned system of hand work, so common several years ago. But while these improvements in the method of handling items inside of the banks have been going on, there has been practically no improvement in the system of collecting them. In fact, I am almost tempted to state that there has been no practical improvement in collecting transit items in the last twenty years. There are some communities where modern changes in this respect have been made, notably Boston, Kansas City, Atlanta and some of the other collecting centers where a country clearing house system of some kind has been established, but a large majority of transit items are still being handled in what I consider a very costly and cumbersome manner. The bank which sends all of its items direct, or even through one intervening correspondent, is a rare institution indeed, particularly if it is located in a large city. Many times an item will pass through the town where it is payable twice or more before being presented to the drawee bank. This is very largely due to the intense rivalry in some of the larger collection centers for business, and a desire to increase par lists to the utmost limit. Probably, to a large extent, the bank's correspondents benefit by this. They are able to collect a large portion of the United States at par and the fact that the items are routed indirectly, while well known to them, is not objected to. This also has the effect of apparently increasing bank deposits and bank reserves and as the profits of a bank are largely earned from the loaning of the depositor's balances, it possibly increases the earnings of some of the country banks whose balances would surely be reduced if their depositors made a practice of purchasing exchange instead of sending their personal checks.

The banks in natural collection centers, under the present system, have to maintain a transit department in charge of a trained, high-class, thoroughly experienced transit man, for the sole purpose of looking after the arrangements for collecting such items, and a large staff of employees directly engaged in the handling of those out-of-town checks is necessary. The expense of clerical help, postage, stationery, exchange and other incidentals is increasing continually and rapidly, and the amount charged back to the depositor is becoming smaller and smaller. It is said that 90 per cent of the overhead expense of a bank is caused by the use of checks, and still we could not discontinue their use and would not if we could.

It is hardly likely that we will see a time when all the banks are willing to remit for all items drawn upon them at par. In fact, the tendency seems to be a little the other way at the present time.

A number of suggestions have been made which have improved the methods of handling this class of business, and we are progressing I think along the right line. There is no doubt that the general use of checks is bound to continue, and, in fact, it is probably well for all of us that they do circulate so freely. Some method of providing for their prompt redemption is the problem which we must face and solve before we will have given them their maximum efficiency. A number of thoughtful men, of ability and experience, believe that the ultimate solution of this problem rests in the clearing house system. The methods employed must vary somewhat, owing to the locality and the number of natural collection cities in that locality.

Some cities are much more favorably located than others and to them one system seems to be peculiarly adapted while to another some other system seems to give, temporarily at least, better results. One group of men believe that par facilities should be extended only in consideration of par facilities in return. In other words, nothing should be handled for a bank at par unless that bank in return agrees to par all items drawn on its town. Others believe that a reasonable exchange charge is right and proper, and that the collecting bank is entitled to a reasonable fee for its services.

Still others believe that all checks should circulate at par and exchange charges be done away with entirely. I recently heard a very well posted banker, in one of our reserve cities say that the day was coming when checks would circulate throughout the entire country without charge.

It seems impossible to reconcile these different and widely divergent views, but we can aid in the ultimate solution of the problem by providing a method for the quick payment of the items, and this probably can best be accomplished through a system of country clearing houses.

This country clearing house idea is not a new one by any means, as it has been considered from time to time since 1858, when the idea was suggested to the London Clearing House by the bankers of the surrounding country. When the subject was first suggested at Boston in 1877, a committee was appointed and presented a divided report, so no action resulted. It was again brought up there in 1883 and action delayed until 1898, when it was finally brought up and after thorough discussion, a trial was determined upon and the state of Massachusetts began to be cleared through this channel in 1899. Since that time several other states have been added to the territory served by it until now they are clearing practically all the New England items, sending letters to over 600 banks and trust companies daily at a cost of about 7 cents per $1,000.00.

These country clearing houses should be established in the natural collection centers of the district which it is proposed they shall serve, and through these clearing houses should be put all of the items on the territory naturally tributary to them.

Every bank in that territory should be given the choice and be put on record as to whether it will remit at par or charge on the items, and all banks clearing through these centers should be furnished a list of par points and charge points, with the rate. This is somewhat similar to the plan established by the Boston Clearing House, but modified to meet the requirements of different localities. I believe this is preferable, in some ways, to the system established by the New York banks. And, by the way, this is one of the most striking examples of the tendency of the times. We now see New York banks agreeing to handle at par items in their territory when the drawee bank will agree to remit to New York banks at par on day of receipt. When you consider that there had been no material change in the New York Clearing House rules on this subject for a number of years, until this committee on inland exchange was appointed and reported, it emphasizes the evident need of providing some means for giving quicker service in presenting and collecting such items and is valuable as showing the acceptance of the principle of handling some checks at par. It is not a great many years ago since New York banks abolished this system of collecting items, or practically abolished it, by a system of exchange charges, which nearly prohibited the sending of such items through the New York Clearing House banks, and after giving the system what must be conceded was a thorough trial, the New York banks have come to believe that the interests of their customers and depositors will be best served by modifying their rules, and I believe that their example will soon be followed by banks in the leading collection centers of the country.

I presume the New York committee has very good reasons for their action and recommendation, but I cannot help thinking that the Boston system is more economical and more satisfactory to the country bankers and would save them much clerical help, postage and stationery, and it seems to me that it would accomplish these results for the New York banks as well. I would be interested in finding out the reasons that prompted New York bankers to prefer the system they have adopted to the one in use in Boston.

I have information, from what I consider reliable sources, that the matter is now being discussed in Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, and some other important cities, and we are discussing it in Spokane. In fact, we have a committee appointed which has been working on it for about a year, gathering information and data on which to base a report. During our investigation we have written the managers of the clearing houses in several of the cities having a country collection department in operation and all report very favorably on it. In fact, it seems hardly likely that once adopted in a city it would be discontinued.

To the argument sometimes advanced that it would result in radical readjustments of balances in reserve cities, I quote from an address by Mr. Jerome Thralls of the Kansas City Clearing House, where a country collection department is in operation, who says that the deposits in Kansas City have increased 56 per cent since the adoption of this system and that capital and surplus have increased 295 per cent. According to the same authority, the volume of business has increased 52 per cent. This seems to be sufficient answer to this argument, in this instance, at least.

Ultimately when these local country clearing houses have been established it seems reasonable to believe that district clearing houses will follow, and possibly from district clearing houses will be evolved a national clearing house. This, of course, is a matter of speculation entirely, but some method and means must be provided for the quicker, more economical handling of these items if the burden of expense is to be kept within reasonable limits and satisfactory service rendered our customers and depositors.

NEW NATIONAL BANKS

Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane announced the voluntary liquidation of the First National of Capitol Hill, Okla., on July, 22, 1913. This was the bank which received a country charter under the previous administration and when Capitol Hill was embraced in the corporate limits of Oklahoma City. It moved to the center of the city, opposite a bank which was required to have a city capitalization. Out of this grew an interesting legal question of whether banks with country capitals can be chartered within the suburbs of cities. The previous comptroller adopted the practice of granting country charters to such outlying banks and fixed their street location. The voluntary liquidation of the Capitol Hill Bank leaves this question just where it was, the comptroller exercising the power to grant such country charters while forbidding them to do business in the central section of a city.

The comptroller received applications to organize the First National of Boaz, Ala., capital $30,000, and the First National of Stevensville, Mont., capital $25,000.

The comptroller approved the application to organize the First National of Mounds, Ill., capital $25,000.

RESERVE FEATURES OF THE CURRENCY BILL

The suggestion made in Washington last week in decreasing the reserve requirement for country banks from 15 per cent to 12 per cent would call for 5 per cent of this to be held in the bank vaults, 3 per cent to be deposited with a federal reserve bank and 4 per cent to be placed with a correspondent bank or kept in its own vaults or deposited with a federal reserve bank. For the city banks the reserve requirement would be cut from 20 to 18 per cent, 6 per cent of this to be kept in the bank's own vaults, 6 per cent in the federal reserve bank and 6 per cent with correspondent bank.

GROUP EIGHT, OHIO

Group Eight, Ohio Bankers Association, held its seventh annual meeting at Cadiz on Thursday of this week. Bank Commissioner Emory Lattanner was on the program.

The Cherokee County Group of the Kansas Bankers Association has been organized to cooperate with the farmers in developing the agricultural resources of the state. E. B. Schermerhorn of Galena is president and D. H. Holt of Mineral, secretary and treasurer.

THE CALL

Statements submitted this week by Chicago national banks in response to the call show that borrowing by country banks have not made any serious inroads on reserves. Cash resources fell off $14,500,000 and deposits decreased $7,822,000, as compared with the figures of June 4th. Loans and discounts increased $6,382,000. The twenty national banks had on deposit on August 9th $458,200,000, and the total cash means were nearly $170,000,000. The proportion of cash means to deposits was 27.1 per cent, as compared with 39.3 on June 4th.

The most notable deposit increase was that of the National Bank of the Republic.

Figures submitted by the state banks indicate that cash resources are a little above those shown on June 5th and that deposits and loans have decreased slightly. The decrease in deposits between the two dates was $5,308,000. Total cash means fell off $8,585,000 and loans $4,228,000.

Combining the figures of the state banks with those of the twenty national institutions, reporting as of August 9th, gives total deposits of $982,418,297, a loss of more than $13,000,000 compared with the amount reported two months ago. The total loans show an increase of more than $2,150,000 during the same period, while the combined cash resources of the state and national banks were decreased $21,000,000.

PREDICTS FIRM MONEY RATES

National City Bank of Chicago, in its August financial letter, says:

"It is altogether probable that money rates will rule active and firm during the balance of the year. The reason for this is that the country is still doing a large volume of business, that a large number of long term loans have been held up until a more convenient season, and that, in spite of the falling off in business in various branches of industry, the whole world is still suffering from a shortage of capital.

"This situation is being relieved gradually, and a large amount of quiet investment buying is going on. This buying has been of a character to indicate that prices have now declined to a level which satisfies many shrewd investors. This is natural in view of the fact that high-grade bonds are obtainable to-day at almost the lowest prices that have prevailed since the panic period of 1907."

CHICAGO'S DELEGATES RETURN

George M. Reynolds and W. T. Fenton, representative of the local clearing house at the McAdoo conference in Washington, have returned to the city. They report they found the bankers from all over the country confident of their ability to handle the crop movement successfully, even without the assistance being given by the treasury department, and say that the bankers have voted to support the currency bill and have asked for its early passage, provided the reserve and federal board control features are modified in accordance with their suggestions. Without these changes it is their opinion a majority of national bank representatives who attend will not be able to look upon the proposed new currency system as satisfactory. As to whether any of the national banks represented will go so far as to relinquish their charters if the bill is not amended they could not say.

"As regards the currency bill," said Mr. Fenton, "we are much pleased with the agreement of Senator Owen to reconsider the reserve feature of the bill. The change suggested by us will cut down the reserve required of country banks from 15 per cent to 12 per cent and for reserve cities from 20 per cent to 18 per cent. This, with some modification in the distribution of this fund, will make it acceptable to the bankers. As for the federal reserve board, our suggestion was that it be stripped of all power of initiative in the administration of the new banking system, which would make it a supervisory body only. Should this change be made the most objectionable feature of the bill from the bankers' point of view would be eliminated. We were unable, however, to gain any promise to this effect from Senator Owen, who was inclined to believe no change would be made. In general, notwithstanding this fact, I think the bankers feel we are making progress and are getting a better bill every day."

TO LIQUIDATE OLD WALSH BANK

Stockholders of the Chicago National Bank, the old John R. Walsh institution, have decided to place the concern in liquidation. It is said the available assets will pay between 15 and 20 per cent. Distribution will be made in about a month. The charter has been kept alive since 1905, but the comptroller's office has insisted that its affairs be cleared up.

SUE FOR DEPOSITS

Suits to recover money on time deposits in the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Sapulpa, Okla., when it failed about six months ago were commenced recently by S. E. Carter for $5,000, Thomas C. Hayden for $10,000, the First National bank for $5,450 and T. J. Roney as administrator for $7,000. All are citizens of Carthage, Mo. The defendants named are the defunct bank, State Bank Commissioner Lankford and members of the state banking board.

HOOPESTON BANKERS FORM PARTNERSHIP

It is reported that J. E. Merritt and Mark R. Koplin, respectively president and cashier of the Hoopeston (Ill.) National, have formed a copartnership to engage in the banking business at Wellington, Ill.

Ex-A. B. A. OFFICIAL DEAD

William B. Green, formerly secretary of the A. B. A. and prominently identified with the banking business, died last week at his home in Ohio, heart disease being the cause.

Officers for the recently chartered Toronto State at Toronto, Kan., have been elected as follows: R. L. Bedford, president; C. C. Mills and V. L. Johnson, vice-president; A. L. Cable, cashier. The bank opened for business August 1st.

A Plea for the Scientific Preparation of Wills

By DANIEL S. REMSEN of the New York Bar

Civilization permits you and me to make a private law for the disposition of our property after death. We call that private law a last will and testament. In that instrument we can legislate for the good or ill of our families and our estates. We may legislate cautiously, prudently and wisely. If we fail to do so, however, we shall not personally suffer, but the suffering caused by us will fall to the lot of those we love.

The present generation is demanding better wills than did its predecessor and the legal profession is responding to that demand. The will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan is a product of that demand. It is a type of the best class. It suggests wise foresight in its plan and a skilful hand in its preparation.

Before proceeding further permit me to remind you of the meaning of two simple words. The word "safe" means free from danger, not dangerous. The word "sound" means without flaw. In applying these words to wills we may consider that a "safe will" is one so written as to insure the fulfillment of the maker's wishes. We may also understand that a "sound will" is one without flaw and one that can be enforced even though it may not insure the result the maker wishes. In other words, a "safe will" insures the fulfillment of the maker's wishes and a "sound will" may or may not insure the fulfillment of the maker's wishes, depending upon circumstances. A little later I will give you a concrete example of a sound but unsafe will. Let us now proceed in the light of these definitions.

There are three distinct classes of wills: (1) those that are both safe and sound; (2) those that are sound but not safe, and (3) those that are neither safe nor sound. Mr. Morgan's will is, of course, both safe and sound. The will of the late Edward H. Harriman is clearly sound, but for our purposes, as will appear later, we must class it as unsafe. The will of the late Samuel J. Tilden is, of course, a most conspicuous example of a will that is both unsafe and unsound.

Within each class there are many varieties of wills often tangled one into another in the most bewildering manner. Wills of the first class usually give little or no trouble after death. Neither do the wills that are clearly and wholly void, for that means no will at all. The difficulty arises with wills that are neither clearly all good or clearly all bad.

If the difficulties presented by a will are discovered during the life of the maker it is a simple matter to take out bad and doubtful clauses and to substitute sound ones. If, however, the maker is dead the doubtful and bad clauses must stand as they are written. If anyone objects he can go to the court. The lawyers will take their portion of the estate and the court will render its decision and hand back what is left to the litigating heirs.

Mr. Harriman's Will

The Harriman will is also a typical will. At the time of its publication it was hailed by the press throughout this country as a model will and one which testators would do well to imitate. For this reason it becomes a duty to mention this will by name and to use it as a type for our consideration.

For Mr. Harriman's purposes his will is not open to criticism. When, however, it becomes the subject of great praise in the public press as a model for the preparation of other wills I cannot, in justice to the thousands of innocent people all over this country who have copied this will as their own, let this opportunity pass without sounding a note of warning. Do not misunderstand me. Mr. Harriman and his lawyers knew the conditions with which they were dealing. They were preparing Mr. Harriman's will; not a precedent for other wills. It is only when this will is viewed as a precedent, when people copy it, when it is used to fit quite different financial and family circumstances, that it presents objectionable features. Indeed, all wills may be said to present objectionable features when used as precedents without competent legal advice.

For an example of a perfectly sound will that is exceedingly unsafe and liable to defeat the wishes of its maker, let us refer to the will of the late Albert C. Bostwick, son of Jabez

A. Bostwick, of Standard Oil fame. His will was substantially the same as the Harriman will. Like Harriman, Bostwick gave everything to his wife. The important difference in the two cases was created by the family circumstances. Bostwick had four children born to him after he made his will and Harriman none. Mrs. Harriman took all the property given to her by her husband. Mrs. Bostwick did not. The four Bostwick children born after the making of the will took the bulk of the estate as if no will had been made. Mrs. Bostwick took what was left and the child born before the making of the will took nothing.

At least one other point in the Harriman will might well be noted. It will be remembered that this will made no provision whereby real estate could be sold for the payment of debts. It was not necessary in Mr. Harriman's case because of his wealth. In many cases, however, it is important. If necessary to pay debts, real estate in the hands of a devisee may be reached by creditors. In other words, real estate of a deceased person is subject to a qualified lien for the payment of debts. Therefore, speaking generally, a devisee cannot give a good title free from that lien prior to the running of the statute unless proper provisions are inserted in the will.

Tilden and Other Wills

The Tilden will is also a typical will, but of another class. Unfortunately it does not stand alone. Let us mention two other recent wills, both in my own city. Every city of importance and almost every county has its full quota of this type.

The late J. Jennings McComb made millions in his lifetime from a little patented article used to fasten steel hoops around cotton bales—a little piece of iron known as a cotton tie. At the time of his death he was the owner of the far-framed Spanish or Navarro flats in New York, now called the Central Park apartments. The litigation concerning his will was long and bitter. It resulted in the destruction of several trusts, including a trust of eight great apartment buildings. It wiped out the codicil designed to prevent a particular marriage in his family, and in a large measure otherwise defeated his plans. I have no means of estimating the cost of this litigation with accuracy, but we are told that the executors expended between fifty and seventy-five thousand dollars in making an unsuccessful attempt to sustain the will. Nothing is known of what it cost the heirs.

The late Henry B. Plant, the principal owner of the great Plant system of railroads in Florida, was also a resident of New York. He took chances with the rule against perpetuities, and his huge trust for the benefit of his descendants wholly failed and in effect his will was adjudged void. The cost of the litigation concerning this will is also said to have been enormous, exceeding half a million of dollars on both sides.

The sins of unsafe and unsound wills are the typical sins of omission and commission. Nine out of ten defects and ambiguities are discoverable on the face of a will and the tenth is usually found at no great distance. They are in the plan of the will. They are hidden in the words used, misused and not used. They are germs of strife. Their fruit is suffering from mind, body and estate.

Lord St. Leonards, better known as Sir Edward Sugden, states the facts plainly and forcefully. He says: "No hatred is more intense than that which arises in a man's family after his death, where his will is open to dispute. 'As you love your family pity them, throw not the apple of discord among them.'"

I might mention the wills of Charles T. Yerkes, Mrs. Eddy, Robert Mather and scores of other recent wills, both in New York and elsewhere, that have been wholly or partly wrecked by an "apple of discord," but the illustrations already mentioned are sufficient. Doubtless everyone present can add one or more local instances of disaster where families have been disrupted and the estate wasted in litigation concerning wills.

Diagnosis of Disease Among Wills

Up to this point we have considered, so to speak, the mortality of wills. Let us now turn our attention for a few moments to a diagnosis of the diseases so common among last wills and testaments.

Until a will takes proper form it is simply a mental state. It is a condition of the mind with reference to matter. It is an aspiration, a wish, a hope with reference to family and estate after death.

Every tangible thing created by man is necessarily a blend of mind and matter. The better the blend the better is the thing created. The better the mind is photographed on matter the better will that mind control and direct that matter after death.

This is as true of a last will and testament as it is of the architect's conception of the great Woolworth building on Broadway, but there are marked differences worthy of note. A magnificent building as soon as it is executed stands forth in all its glory before the world. It may not be perfect, but its flaws are capable of being repaired. A will, on the other hand, is hidden away as soon as it is executed. It lies dormant and unknown. It comes forth to be judged of men only on the day its maker has lost his power to dot an "i" or cross a "t." If after his death the searching storm of adverse interest discovers a flaw in the will there is no remedy. The flaw cannot be repaired. The damage is done. The consequences must follow. We can only say: Too late; it must stand or fall as written.

What does this mean? It means that too little attention is given to the plan and preparation of the will. It means that the average person about to make a will treats it as a matter of minor importance, less indeed than the making of a simple contract. He is in haste. He explains to his lawyer that he wants a short, plain, simple will. He then makes known his wishes. When he has finished with his instructions the chances are more than even that his lawyer finds it difficult, if not impossible, to accomplish all his client wishes.

Then comes the danger. The client intimates to his lawyer that he wishes quick work and minimum fees. He gets what he orders but not what he wishes. He gets something that his lawyer does not wish to give him, but it is the best he can do under the limitations imposed. The client has made his lawyer imposed.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Good showers over many portions of the state have relieved the drought situation in many localities except where the corn has suffered beyond redemption but there are yet wide areas where there has either been no rainfall or only a small amount. That the long continued heat and dry weather have caused widespread damage to the corn crop of Illinois is admitted by all who know conditions and while the soil of the corn belt shows great recuperative powers yet it is true that the state generally, and especially the lower two-thirds, will raise a much smaller crop than normal.

However, business has been generally good over the state. The increase in clearings in the large cities is reflected in country banks by an unusually busy summer. Money has been spent freely and people have spent more perhaps for vacations, luxuries and good times than ever before. The good roads and abundance of fair weather have stimulated travel and a desire to enjoy vacations and demand for amusement.

Upon the other hand, it is true that many Illinois people must retrench and spend less money and there are indications now of a more conservative feeling about expenditures. The Illinois farmer has become widely known as a prosperous man and as a "good spender" but many of them are now planning for decreased expenditures and merchants must necessarily accustom themselves to the change. No doubt there will be a certain amount of good in this enforced economy as many people tend to loose sight of some of the fundamental and essential ideas of thrift. But underlying conditions are sound, land values will remain high and the Illinois farmer, banker and merchant must simply regard this as an "off" year and one which will probably not be repeated again.

Alfalfa Yield Large on U. of I. Farm

If the farmers of Illinois had raised more alfalfa this year in place of giving such a large acreage to oats and corn, the effects of the drought would not have been so severe as they have been. Two crops of alfalfa have been harvested on the South Dairy Farm of the University of Illinois. Fifty-four acres have been cut with a yield of 200 tons of alfalfa. As the price will hover at the $20 a ton mark this winter, the alfalfa from this ground is worth $4,000. This yield is especially remarkable in view of the deficient rainfall, April having a rain fall of 2.19 inches, May .56 inch., June 1.73 inches and July 1.52. The light rainfall materially decreased the yield of alfalfa. There will be a third cutting and with plenty of rain it is hoped to secure a total of five tons to the acre for the year, a total of 270 tons.

At the South Dairy Farm H. E. Crouch, the farmer in charge, says that in Illinois corn, alfalfa and cows make a perfect agriculture. The corn is cut for silage and placed in immense silos, the alfalfa fed as hay, the milk from the cows sold for the profit and the abundant manure made by the dairy herd supplies fertilization for the soil, although some commercial fertilizers must be purchased. Banker-farmers in Illinois who are interested in dairying and alfalfa culture are invited to correspond with Mr. Crouch or with other members of the agricultural faculty and they will receive careful and courteous treatment. Better still, plan a trip to Urbana and see the great experimental work of the college of agriculture and what it will do for Illinois in the years to come.

B. F. Harris on Agricultural Situation

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign, in a circular letter sent out to 5,000 farmers of Champaign county, calls attention to the better methods of farming which have clearly shown their advantage in a hot, dry year such as this one has been. Mr. Harris says:—

"The advantages of the best methods of farming stand out more clearly than ever in such seasons as this. The farmer who has regularly rotated his land, cultivated it carefully and added to its fertility, kept plenty of humus from stalks and straw and clover roots plowed under, gets better crops each year and his soil is in such rich, loose condition that it always has plenty of nourishment and moisture in the driest years."

Country Life Conference at DeKalb

Bankers who are interested in the great problem of the improvement of American rural life will watch the proceedings of the state-wide conference on country life conditions which will be held in DeKalb during the first week in September. Two days will be devoted to a consideration of the country church, three days to general conditions and the last day to soil improvement, the final day being under the direction of the DeKalb County Soil Improvement Association.

Among the speakers will be the following: Dr. John Lee Coulter, of Washington, D. C., government expert in rural co-operation, who will discuss the high cost of living and the problem of the American middleman; Charles J. Brands, Washington, D. C., chief of the office of markets; L. H. Goddard of Ohio, member of the rural organization service recently established by Secretary Houston in the department of agriculture; Prof. B. H. Stable Investments

IT is an undoubted fact that the most truly conservative investment is the one which never fluctuates in price or depreciates in value, but remains fixed and secure at par under any and all conditions. The more nearly an investment approaches perfect stability in value, the more completely is it free from any trace of speculative element. By its very nature, a carefully chosen First Mortgage Loan on improved real estate is a non-fluctuating investment. When divided up into a series of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, the investment loses none of the conservative features of the mortgage. The investor who purchases this class of security rests secure in the knowledge that his investment is free from influence by adverse business or financial conditions, or political or tariff changes. We own and offer a great variety of First Mortgages secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago real estate, maturing serially in two to ten years. We have purchased these bonds with our own funds after careful investigation, and recommend them in the highest terms as safe and attractive investments for income. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000.

Branson, of the department of rural sociology and economics of the Normal School of Athens, Georgia, and Prof. Charles L. Stewart of the University of Illinois, the last three of whom will discuss the problems of landlordism and tenancy in Illinois, an interesting topic, inasmuch as forty per cent of the farms of Illinois are cultivated by tenants; M. O. Eldridge, of the department of public roads of Washington; William G. Edens, president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Chicago, and Homer J. Tice, author of the new Illinois road legislation, who will discuss the road improvement topic; C. G. Schulz, state superintendent of schools of Minnesota, and Miss Jessie Fields, superintendent of schools of Du Page county, who will discuss the improvement of the country school; George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, discussing the improvement of rural credit; Dr. James Robertson, secretary of agriculture of Canada, Dr. H. J. Waters, of the Kansas Agricultural College of Manhattan, and Prof. E. J. Ward of Wisconsin, discussing rural social center work for country communities; and the Rev. M. B. McNutt and the Rev. Clair S. Adams of the Presbyterian department of church and country life of New York, who will discuss the country church problem. The meeting will be a most interesting and helpful one and bankers are urged to attend as far as possible.

Pate's Failure Means Heavy Losses

The failure of the bank of Alexander Pate of Wellington, Iroquois county, was more serious than was at first supposed. At first it was believed that the depositors would be paid in full but later indications are that they will not realize more than twenty-five per cent of their claims.

The Pate failure has a connection with the failure of the late John R. Walsh. It will be remembered that Walsh built a railroad north and south along the Illinois-Indiana state line, closely following the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad. Walsh advised his friend, Charles U. Gordon, formerly postmaster of Chicago and a son-in-law of Alexander Pate, to invest in lands along the new "Walsh road" with the prediction to Gordon that the new road would greatly increase real estate values along the line. Accordingly, Gordon purchased a large tract of land near St. Anne, Kankakee county, and with the failure of John R. Walsh, was forced to ask Mr. Pate to endorse his notes.

Alexander Pate's life has been in many ways a sad one. For years he has been the "village banker" and he has lived a busy life as the friend of everybody. Many of the business men and farmers of the vicinity of Wellington owe their success to the advice and loans of Alexander Pate. He has scores of friends among the heavy creditors who are doing all that they can to aid the aged banker in his time of trial. A man of strict personal honesty and integrity he was nevertheless loose in his business methods, which precipitated his downfall. The failure of Alexander Pate is another example of the violation of the laws of strict business methods and shows that banks must be conducted soundly and not charitably. Mr. Pate is about seventy years of age and is almost prostrated by his downfall. A life of help to others was not managed well and the failure was the inevitable result.

S. E. Bradt, Secretary of Commission

The newly appointed state highway commission met recently at Springfield and named S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National of De Kalb and minority members of the commission, as its secretary. It has recommended that Secretary of State Woods turn over one million dollars of the automobile fund to the commission as that distribution may be made to the various counties. Many counties have shown great interest in arranging matters to take advantage of state aid for roads. The new commission has a large and important task to perform but the personnel is so able that its business will be handled with ability and dispatch.

Illinois Notes

J. A. Corbett, president of the Citizens National of Decatur, has been re-elected president of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Corbett is well known to bankers generally and the commercial body of which he is president is one of the most efficient in the state.

William A. Swords, a well-to-do farmer living near Peoria, drew $1,000 from one Peoria bank with the intention of depositing it in another. Before he had gone the short distance between the banks he found that his pockets had been picked and the money gone.

A. M. Burke, president of the Citizens State of Champaign, is in charge of the speed department of the Illinois State Fair, which opens in Springfield, October 3d.

Ground has been broken for the last link of the Chicago, Waukegan and Fox Lake Traction Company, which will connect Marengo and Waukegan. The road is attracting attention inasmuch as the cars will be driven by gasoline motors, making this road one of the few in the Central West using "gas" for motive power.

An insane man roaming at large near Green Valley was arrested after he had spent much time explaining his large financial deals to farmers and stating that he was waiting for the bank to open in a pasture-field. After being placed in jail he insisted upon talking about banking and financial matters. He is a Pekin laborer.

The Canton National of Canton is another bank which is actively pushing its savings department and is using the home savings banks with success. The home banks, while the cause of much detail work in banks, are certainly a valuable part in the building up of the ideas of thrift in the minds of children.

John L. Hamilton of Hoopeston, who was recently elected president of the Equitable Casualty and Bank Deposit Guaranty Company, of Columbus, Ohio, has decided to remove his family from Hoopeston to Columbus, so that his sons may receive the benefits of the Ohio State University. At first it was thought that the family would remain in Hoopeston but the plans have been changed. The name of the company will be shortened to that of the American Guaranty Company.

A new state bank to be known as the Richview State Bank of Richview, Washington county, has received a permit to organize with $25,000 capital. J. W. Stanton, J. F. Mockley, C. A. Lee and others were given the permit.

The First National of Lincoln has received its third charter to do business as a national bank, the present charter expiring in 1933. The bank began business in 1873 and its three charters have been dated in 1873, 1893 and 1913. Frank D. Hoblit is the president and F. W. Becker cashier.

MILWAUKEE

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Of 450 national state banks of Wisconsin canvassed by Andrew J. Frame of Waukesha last week, to ascertain their attitude on the currency bill, 289 of the 300 who replied voted an unqualified "no" against the bill. Nine voted "yes" with qualifications and one small national and one small state bank voted "yes." Mr. Frame incorporated the results of his canvass in a second letter to the proper committees and persons in Washington, following up his communication of last week with a more definite plan of compromise. Mr. Frame's tentative suggested amendments are as follows:

"Reserves-National banks are now compelled to hold in cash as reserves:

"In three central reserve cities 25 per cent of deposits.

"General reserve cities 12½ per cent of deposits.

"Country banks 6 per cent of deposits.

"Amend as follows in order to mobilize cash for troublous periods:

"Take 5 per cent of deposits from the 25 per cent held by three central reserve cities, say.....$85,000,000

"Take 2½ per cent of deposits from the 12½ per cent held by general reserve cities, say..... 50,000,000

"Take 1 per cent of deposits from the 6 per cent held by country banks, say 35,000,000

"This will mobilize in cash about $170,000,000

"This is not counting a percentage of deposits of banks with reserve banks. If 5 per cent and 2½ per cent respectively of these were included, it would increase the mobilized reserve of cash to about $200,000,000. The 5 per cent, 2½ per cent and 1 per cent cash taken from the present reserves should be still counted by depositing banks by reserves, while it is in the federal reserve bank, and would leave ample cash in all banks for ordinary times. The country banks cannot afford to part with 5 per cent of their deposits for use of the federal reserve banks.

"It would seem reasonable that the banks would accede to this as it costs them practically nothing to part with, say, one-fifth of their cash, as they would have the assurance that the cash mobilized in the federal reserve bank would assist any section of the country if trouble threatens. This would inspire confidence. State banks in well developed sections would be inclined to join under these conditions, and if done in great centers the $200,000,000 reserve would be materially enlarged. If capitals paid in and government deposits were added the reserve fund would probably exceed $350,000,000, which is ample for all reasonable requirements.

"As a secondary relief for emergencies permit state as well as national bank members to borrow from the federal reserve bank, secured by ample collateral, from a fund of federal reserve bank notes held for that purpose. Such currency should be loaned on a plan similar to the 5 per cent taxed currency issued by the Imperial Bank of Germany, which gives true flexibility there.

"Capital—say 10 per cent subscribed and 5 per cent paid in—would add $50,000,000. As to banks generally subscribing 20 per cent and at once paying in 10 per cent of their capitals, as capital for the federal reserve bank and receive dividends limited to 5 per cent per annum on paid-in capital, it is doubtful about country banks in undeveloped sections joining, as interest rates would naturally prevent. Again, these banks rarely have the prime paper discountable at the contemplated reserve bank. Take care of the big centers in trouble and the country will never be seriously agitated.

"A federal bank on the above lines in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco will fully accomplish the end sought without vast expense."

Wisconsin Notes

Among several facts brought out in the recent tax controversy was the fact that Milwaukee bank shares were lower in May this year than a year ago. With one or two exceptions the stocks fell off about two points.

A youthful robber held up the cashier of the Chili State last Friday afternoon and got away with $1,411. The cashier, Lucius A. Allen, was alone in the bank about two o'clock working over his books when the man appeared at the window, commanded Allen, at the point of a revolver, to hand over the money, and made good his escape through a tamarack swamp east of the town.

Bankers of Sheboygan county met this week to organize a district union. R. W. Dow was appointed head of a committee to complete the organization.

It is probable that State Treasurer Henry Johnson will accede to the Northern Trust Company's (Chicago) compromise offer to exchange $100,000 Panama Canal bonds, on deposit with him as security, for Indiana state bonds. Under an opinion of the attorney-general the company was declared to have been illegally licensed to operate in Wisconsin. Thereupon the company demanded its securities back and commenced court action to this end, when the state treasurer refused. The offer of exchange is a recent one, while the action is still pending.

Moving presents its difficulties to Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt, who refuses to budge from his present quarters in the old wing of the state capitol at Madison until vault space is provided for him in the new wing. As the demolition of the last wing of the old building is already under way Mr. Kuolt's demand offers technical difficulties. He bases his claim on the fact that both he and his deputy are under heavy bond, as well as the bank examiners, for the safekeeping of their papers and records, and must have proper facilities to make this safety a certainty.

WILSON DISCUSSES RURAL CREDIT

President Wilson made it clear this week that he does not favor an amendment to the currency bill at the present time providing for a system of agricultural credits. The president is of the belief that such action should be deferred until the December session, when the government commission, which is now studying the subject in Europe, will have reported.

In a statement issued this week the president said:

"Special machinery and a distinct system of banking must be provided for if rural credits are to be successfully and adequately supplied. A government commission is now in Europe studying the interesting and highly successful methods which have been employed in several countries of the old world and its report will be made to congress at a regular session next winter.

"It is confidently to be expected that the congress will at that session act upon the recommendations of that report and establish a complete and adequate system of rural credits. There is no subject more important to the welfare or the industrial development of the United States; there is no reform in which I would myself feel it a greater honor or privilege to take part, because I should feel that it was a service to the whole country of the first magnitude and significance. It should have accompanied and gone hand in hand with the reform of our banking and currency system if we had been ready to act wisely and with full knowledge of what we were about.

"There has been too little federal legislation framed to serve the farmer directly and with a deliberate adjustment to his real needs. We long ago fell into the habit of assuming that the farmers of America enjoyed such an immense natural advantage over the farmers of the rest of the world, were so intelligent and so enterprising and so at ease upon the incomparable soils of our great continent that they could feed the world and prosper, no matter what handicap they carried, no matter what circumstances they labored under. We have not exaggerated their capacity or their opportunity, but we have neglected to analyze the burdensome disadvantages from which they were suffering and have too often failed to remove them when we did see what they were.

"Our farmers must have means afforded them of handling their financial needs easily and inexpensively. They should be furnished these facilities before their enterprises languish, not afterward.

"And they will be. This is our next great task and duty. Not only is a government commission about to report which is charged with apprising the congress of the best methods yet employed in this matter, but the Department of Agriculture has also undertaken a serious and systematic study of the whole problem of rural credits. The congress and the executive, working together, will certainly afford the needed machinery of relief and prosperity to the people of the countrysides, and that very soon.

It has been announced that the Citizens National of Princeton, Ill., will erect a handsome new bank building next spring.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Oster of El Paso and Lawrence F. Shepard, cashier Peoples Bank, Washburn, Ill., occurred recently.

INVESTMENT BANKERS MEET

At the Cleveland meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America the nominating committee voted to have the old officials continued for another year. The nominating committee suggested the new board of directors for the one-year term as follows: S. R. Fuller, Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co., New York, to succeed H. B. Clark; John E. Blunt, vice-president Merchants Loan and Trust Company, Chicago, to succeed Charles H. Schweppe; William West, Henry & West, Philadelphia, to succeed himself; Barrett Wendell, of Lee, Higginson & Co., Boston, to succeed S. W. Webb; Challen H. Parker, San Francisco, to succeed himself; E. M. Stevens, Minneapolis, to succeed himself; H. P. Wright, Kansas City, to succeed himself, and Dean Jay, manager bond department First Savings and Trust Company, Milwaukee, to succeed Herbert Witherspoon of Spokane. The annual meeting will be held in Chicago October 28th, 29th and 30th.

HIGH CLEARINGS FOR KANSAS CITY

All records for July bank clearings in Kansas City were broken this year, according to an announcement made by Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association. The total for July was $231,000,000, a gain of 12 per cent over last year. During the month 7,711 cars of wheat were received in Kansas City, also a record breaker for July, and 20 per cent more than were received the same month last year. Movements of live stock showed a 6 per cent gain over 1912.

TO AID FARMERS

In order that the farmers of the United States may profit by the experience of farmers of Europe, Secretary Houston of the department of agriculture has decided to send abroad Dr. Thomas N. Carver, head of rural organization service, and Bradford Knapp, who is in charge of the farmers' co-operative demonstration work in the South. The study of successful co-operative schemes will be the principal object of the trip. They will visit Ireland first, then Denmark, and, if time allows, Saxony.

W. A. Morris, cashier of the Citizens State, Council Grove, Kan., died recently of heart failure.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has been fair. Rates held firm at 6 to 7 per cent on call and time loans, most of the loans being made at 6 to 6½ per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and light demand.

St. Louis Crop Fund

St. Louis will receive $1,500,000 from the government in the next ten days and a second $1,500,000 about September 15th to help move crops in its territory, announced Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics American National and chairman of the board of management of the St. Louis Clearing House Association, on his return from Washington. Most of the $3,000,000 will be distributed to smaller banks and lent by them to farmers. The large banks have been asked by Secretary McAdoo to deal fairly with the smaller banks, charging them only a nominal rate of interest above the 2 per cent charged the larger banks by the government. The rate of interest now prevailing in St. Louis, 6 per cent, will not be reduced by the receipt of the money, Mr. Hill predicted. He said the rates in the South, which are higher than those of St. Louis because of greater stringency, will be lowered. The treasury department provides banks are to share in the funds in proportion to the amount they usually advance to aid crop movement. The per cent of the loan must be safeguarded by 2 per cent government bonds, accepted at par, and the residue by state, city or county bonds, at 75 cents on the dollar, and commercial paper at 63 cents. One-fourth must be returned December 15th and a further fourth each succeeding thirty days. "This is the first time in the history of the nation that the government has placed large sums in southern cities to enable the banks to handle crops," said Mr. Hill. "Heretofore all government deposits have been made in New York and other large centers and lent by them to the crop moving points." President Frank O. Watts, of the Third National, also was an official delegate to the conference.

Kansas City Banker in St. Louis

P. W. Goebel, president of the Commercial National, Kansas City, and chairman of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, was in St. Louis last week on his way to Washington to attend the conference regarding the deposit of $50,000,000 in Western national banks. Mr. Goebel said the drouth in Kansas and western Missouri was serious, but that other conditions were fairly satisfactory.

E. P. Keshner

E. P. Keshner, vice-president of the Union Trust and Savings Bank of East St. Louis, was elected chairman of the bankers' division of the East St. Louis Commercial Club on Thursday of last week. Paul S. Abt, secretary and cashier of the Southern Illinois Trust Company, and Wirt Wright, president of the National Stock Yards Bank, were named as members of the committee.

Son of R. S. Hawes Hurt

Richard Hawes, Jr., fourteen, son of Richard S. Hawes, vice-president of the Third National, St. Louis, is recovering at his home from a bullet wound in the foot inflicted while he was at target practice with companions in Ferguson. He is patrol leader of Troop 8, Boy Scouts.

Opens Bank Account for Waitress

Byron W. Moser, president of the American Institute of Banking and publicity manager for the St. Louis Union Trust, has invented a novel scheme for giving tips. Mr. Moser thought he was so well taken care of by the young woman who waited on him in his favorite lunch room that he obtained her name in then opened a dollar account in her name in the St. Louis Union Trust. Whenever he feels that the service is just a little better than could be reasonably expected, he makes a deposit to her account.

Special Train for Bankers

Delegates from Missouri will travel to the convention of the American Bankers Association at Boston on a special train run under the auspices of the Missouri Bankers Association. The special will leave St. Louis at noon, October 3d, being routed over the Wabash as far as Buffalo, and the rest of the way over the New York Central. A stop of several hours will be made at Niagara Falls, where special cars will be provided for those who want to take the trip through the Gorge route. Other points of interest in the vicinity will be visited. The train will remain at Buffalo from 4 to 8 P. M. October 4th. Boston will be reached in the forenoon of October 5th.

To Reform Missouri Farming

A definite program to be followed by the bankers of Missouri in bettering farm conditions of the state is contained in the report of the committee on agricultural and good roads development of the Missouri Bankers Association, which has been received by St. Louis members of the association. The committee met recently in Kansas City. The means urged upon bankers whereby they may help increase the welfare of the state by increasing that of the farmers are the employment of expert county farm advisers, the encouragement of young farmers to take the short course in agriculture at the state university, the aiding of rural school consolidations, and the wider circulation of the Columbia farm publication.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

He has for a number of years been identified as one of the best business men in Osceola and among its staunchest supporters for everything calculated to build up the town.

Postal Savings in Kansas City

Deposits in the postal savings department in the Kansas City postoffice have passed the half million mark. The July report issued shows the deposits to be $517,605 and that more than $42,000 worth of postal bonds have been purchased. The number of depositors is 4,135.

New Kansas City Bank

The Troost Avenue Bank of Kansas City opened recently capitalized at $25,000 with a surplus of $5,000. The new institution will do a general banking business and will maintain a savings department, paying 3 per cent on savings accounts and time deposits. The officers are Webster Withers, Jr., president; Julius Davidson and W. W. Craney, vice-presidents; and I. B. Nordyke, cashier. The directors are G. M. Smith, George E. Ricker, J. Lee Porter, John T. Sears, J. C. Swift, Gustave W. Bachman, Wyan Nelson, Flechter Cowherd, Jr., George Muehlebach, A. D. Bonniel, and Dr. E. L. Chambliss.

Presidency to Be Left Vacant

Out of respect to the memory of T. B. Holland, the presidency of the Holland Banking Company, Springfield, Mo., will remain vacant for a period, according to an announcement made by Cashier W. B. Sanford. Mr. Holland had disposed of the greater part of his stock during the past two years, but was president of the bank until the time of his death.

New Bank for Guthrie

The Bank of Guthrie has been organized at Guthrie with a capital stock of $10,000. W. S. Mirs, the president, has donated the site for the new bank building. J. R. Reynolds has been elected vice-president, and T. B. Edmonston, of Pilot Grove, cashier. The directors are W. S. Mirs, J. R. Reynolds, J. Ed Moore, David W. Lynes, Thomas Bedsworth, George R. Criswell, and W. S. Sitton.

New Arkansas Bank

The Citizens Bank of Tillar, Tillar, Ark., has been incorporated with a paid-up capital stock of $50,000. W. L. Harrell has been elected president; R. H. Wolfe, vice-president, and V. C. Harrell, secretary. T. W. Gill, at present cashier of the Bank of Tillar, will be cashier, while the board of directors is made up as follows: V. J. Trotter, Monticello; J. H. Meek, Bankers Mortgage and Trust Company, Fordyce; Jo Nichol, cashier Simmons National Bank, Pine Bluff; G. W. Stroud, Tillar; E. S. Terrall, Tillar; S. C. Mullis, Florence, Ark.; Dr. G. W. Fletcher, Tillar.

Important Bankruptcy Ruling

Judge F. A. Youmans of the federal district court for western Arkansas handed down a decision in Fort Smith recently, the effect of which will be of interest to every state corporation in that it is a ruling upon the rights of corporations and their stockholders as well as their creditors, in cases of financial or business administrative difficulties. In effect the decision holds that in cases in which corporations appeal to state courts for receiverships they must be able to show that it is a solvent going business. Another phase of the decision is the holding that when a majority in the holdings and numbers of the stockholders and officers of the corporation petition a state court for a receivership, it is in effect the act of the corporation, and as such is an act of bankruptcy.

Second Attempt to Rob Bank

A second attempt to rob the Bank of Portia, Portia, Ark., was made last week. Entrance was effected through a window and the building was ransacked, but no attempt was made to blow the safe. The bank was entered July 4th and an attempt was made to blow the safe.

Bank Report Filed

The first authentic statement of the accounts in the Bank of Forrest City, Ark., accredited as deposits belonging to the state of Arkansas and to St. Francis county, has been filed with Acting Governor Futrell. The report shows the state's funds to total $45,358.82, apportioned as follows: State general fund, $11,345.90; state school fund, $19,792.93; state sinking fund, $824.70; pension fund $9,896.47; state capitol fund, $3,298.82. The county funds total $102,694.60, apportioned as follows: County general fund, $33,122.59; county debt, $824.71; county road fund, $19,792.92; district school fund, $37,592.82; poll tax fund, $344.26; school fund penalty, $338.16; city fund, $77,275.14. The two statements combined show that $180,543.42 is on deposit in the Bank of Forrest City, representing the settlements of the sheriff and collector for St. Francis county, Dr. J. A. McDougal. The statement was furnished Acting Governor Futrell by James Fusell, president of the Bank of Eastern Arkansas.

Oklahoma Sues National Banks

One hundred and twelve national banks which nationalized after operating under the guaranty law for varying periods, were sued by the state of Oklahoma in an action filed last week by the attorney-general, seeking the recovery of $646,452, the difference between the total guaranty fund assessments levied against these banks and the amount they paid before nationalizing. The plan first was to file separate suits, but the actions are all joined in one case filed in the district court.

Will Liquidate Bank

Commissioner of Insurance and Banking W. W. Collier of Texas has announced that the Winters State of Winters, Tex., has assumed the liquidation of the affairs of the Farmers and Merchants State of Winters, which the department closed recently because of a shortage, and that under the liquidation agreement no assessment on the guaranty funds of the state and no use of any money in the guaranty fund to pay off the depositors of the bank is necessary.

Freeport Bank Opens

On Tuesday of last week the Freeport (Tex.) National opened for business in its new building. The bank has a capitalization of $50,000 and a paid-in surplus of $12,500. It is the only national bank at present in Brazoria county. S. M. Swenson is president of this new institution and George C. Morris, formerly cashier of the First State of Gainesville, is cashier.

Southwest Notes

Webb. Mesurvey has entered upon his duties as cashier of the First National, Excelsior Springs, Mo.

At the reorganization of the McAlester (Okla.) Trust Melvan Cornish was elected president; Ben Mills, active vice-president; W. P. Allen, cashier, and E. A. Jones, secretary.

The Central State, Enid, Okla., now occupies its permanent quarters in the Stephenson building, taking the room so long occupied by the Enid National.

E. L. Woodley, president Farmers and Merchants State, Shamrock, Tex., has returned from South America.

A new bank has been opened at Bremond, Tex., with R. B. Spencer as president. The capital is $30,000.

A certificate of authority to do business has been granted to the First State of Seadrift, capital $10,000. W. D. Stephens is president and J. O. is Parrash, cashier.

The department of insurance and banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks: Commonwealth National of Dallas for the Guaranty State of Myra, Powell State of Powell and Cumby State of Cumby; Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas and Central Texas Exchange National of Waco for the Farmers and Merchants State of Bremond; Stockyards National of Fort Worth for the Farmers State of Merkel; Commercial State of Sherman for the Addison State of Addison; National Reserve of New York and First National of San Angelo for the First State of Big Lake; National Bank of Commerce, Houston, and Austin County State of Bellville for the Cat Springs State of Cat Springs; National City of New York for the Guaranty State of Mertens.

COMPTROLLER SEEKS FULLER INFORMATION

The acting comptroller, in the call issued this week, requested information from the banks as to all money loaned to or borrowed from other banks. The purpose in seeking this additional information, it is believed, is to ascertain which institutions are borrowing for speculative purposes and which to meet the legitimate financial needs of the country. It is believed that the treasury department is desirous of knowing what banks are not employing their resources to facilitate the crop movement in order to preclude their sharing in the proposed distribution of government funds designed to avert any possible stringency as the result of extraordinary demands on the banks this fall.

The acting comptroller issued the following statement:

"Banks have heretofore been required to show in the reports of condition, notes and bills rediscounted for them by other banks and money borrowed on bills payable and other obligations from other banks, but have not been required to show in detail loans made to other banks. The new form will show both sides of such transaction, so that one may be checked against the other and from a standpoint of practical purposes will enable the comptroller to more easily determine what sections of the country are in need of additional circulation at stated periods of the year; what banks accommodate their correspondents in such sections, and in addition should also enable the comptroller to more easily ascertain what banks borrow in order to meet legitimate discounts and varying conditions, and what banks should be listed as chronic borrowers—that is, those which borrow to reloan in normal times.

"This amplification of reports of condition is in line with the policy to obtain from these reports as much information as possible to serve practical as well as statistical purposes. With this end in view the forms used by the department are being analyzed and considered."

STATE BANK AND TRUST COMPANY

State Bank and Trust Company of Sioux Falls, S. D., under a statement of condition at the close of business August 9th, shows capital, surplus and profits amounting to $234,000 and deposits of $1,909,819. The bank was established in 1890 and has enjoyed a steady growth.

Editorial Comment

WARRANTY OF GOOD FAITH

A telegram sent out from Washington this week may have been only an administration feeler as to what the bankers of the country would think about naming George M. Reynolds to be head of the federal board of control in event of the currency bill being passed with that a feature of the new system. What a warranty of good faith such an appointment would prove to all classes of banking while the new system was being installed. It was current belief in the days when the central bank was impending that Mr. Reynolds would be its governor. It had a very steadying effect then and can have no other effect now. About half of the banks in the federal system now keep their balances with Mr. Reynolds and the other half would not be (averse). Whether or not Mr. Reynolds would take the place could not be known until the formal stages are reached. He refused the secretaryship of the treasury but that isn't a banking position and politics never interested the intensely active banker. The Washington dispatch says:

Mr. Reynolds has in his several talks with the officials of the government, especially during the conference last Friday, when he presented to the secretary of the treasury his views on the present condition and needs of banks, and later with the secretary and Senator Owen, chairman of the committee on banking and currency of the senate, discussed the pending currency bill and created an exceedingly favorable impression.

If the astute and clever McAdoo will poll the bankers of the country it will be demonstrated that the big Chicago banker has the confidence alike of those who favor and those who oppose the bill. What a rounding out of an unparalleled career it would be to establish firmly a new banking system in such a country as ours.

THE ATTITUDE OF THE GOVERNMENT

Recent developments in the treasury department seem to prove conclusively that the federal government is able and willing to avert any undue monetary tension caused by the extraordinary demands certain to be made upon the banks during the crop-moving period. The action of Secretary McAdoo in offering to deposit government funds in the banks has been commended in all sections of the country. The only criticism which has been offered has come from those influences which have been attempting through artificial means to cause a recession in business and industrial activity and to create a spirit of unrest and apprehensiveness.

The action of the government will aid materially in dispelling any pessimistic feeling which may have been felt. The administration leaders have shown that they have the situation well in hand and are thoroughly conversant with underlying conditions.

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

For a great many years the impression has prevailed in many quarters that should the democrats succeed in gaining control of the national government hard times immediately would ensue. This reasoning is fallacious and one is reluctant to believe that it would be indulged in by any but the ignorant or misinformed. However, there have been certain interests, which, as a result of the existence of this notion, have endeavored to discredit the present administration and to misconstrue the motives actuating the Wilson leaders in attempting to secure the enactment of remedial legislation along tariff and currency lines.

This government is still a government "of the people" and the people are the rulers. Appreciating the significance of this, it has been the aim of the present administration to subordinate the will of special privilege and the predatory interests to that of the people and in attempting to effect reforms to do so in such a manner as would be calculated to advance rather than retard the interests of those the most vitally interested in seeing the reforms brought about.

Any talk about hard times or a panic is absolutely without foundation, and no intelligent person would for a moment give any credence to such an idea.

GOOD EFFECTED BY THE CONFERENCES

Much good was accomplished by the conferences between the bankers from the fifty-nine cities and the administration forces in Washington. It was over the government's first attempt to help out the agricultural districts in crop-moving time. Aid often had been extended elsewhere and for other purposes and much more secretly. Really the whole thing was a very pleasing novelty and didn't seem a bit like "the government engaging in the banking business," a phrase often used derisively. The care with which the delegates to the conferences were selected was a noteworthy feature. It was asserted by financiers in the city at the time that they have never known a more representative body of men to come to Washington. Whereas at a bankers' convention anyone may attend, those participating in this conference were selected and no one not invited was allowed to attend.

While no one doubted that the bankers were called for the purpose of finding out the reasonable crop requirements of the various sections, it was believed by many that the administration was also desirous of finding out what the bankers thought of the new powers in charge. Plenty of opportunity has been given these bankers to discuss this phase of the question. Commendation was universal. With a money market strong at six per cent additional funds will be profitable to the banks, and will tend to keep rates from going any higher. Thus there is benefit, profit and assurance both to the lender and to the borrower. In the face of such an administration policy there can be no fall stringency to paralyze prosperity.

THE ADMINISTRATION CURRENCY PROGRAM

The proposed currency law of the Wilson administration having been subjected to so much comment and discussion, both friendly and hostile, perhaps an impartial consideration of the various phases presented by the subject would have a tendency to clarify the situation and to promote a more satisfied feeling on the part of the opponents of the measure who are viewing the efforts of the democrats with so much apprehension and alarm.

The necessity for adequate currency legislation having been pretty generally conceded, the basic principle upon which the government has been working has been to secure the enactment of such a law as would best serve the interests of all of the people rather than of any particular class. It is quite obvious that it would be impossible to please everyone.

The leaders at Washington have manifested an inclination to act fairly in the matter and a disposition to give intelligent consideration to all suggestions honestly made and designed to increase the efficiency of the proposed law. The bill ought not to be wholly condemned simply because it contains certain provisions which in the opinion of some are unwise. We ought to look at the matter calmly and dispassionately and be sufficiently broadminded to make certain concessions if by so doing the country as a whole will be the better served.

POLLING WISCONSIN BANKERS

Andrew Jay Frame has polled the Wisconsin bankers on the currency bill provisions and had 300 replies. Only two answered "yes" as to favoring it and nine said "yes" but with qualifications. All the rest (289) said "no." Mr. Frame has prepared a compromise on reserve requirements which he thinks is "all the banks will stand for." His suggested amendments have been sent to Washington.

Among the new Texas state banks are: First State, Big Lake, capital $15,000; Guaranty State of Merit; Quinlan State of Quinlan; City Guaranty State, Whitesboro; Seadrift State of Seadrift.

violate a fundamental rule for good work: "Whatever the haste be not in a hurry. The best work can never be done by a perturbed mind."

After the maker of the will is dead each of the heirs employs a lawyer to search for flaws in the will. The probabilities are that something great or small will be discovered. The unfortunate lawyer who drew the will is then in trouble. He is unjustly blamed when the fault lies at his client's door. He is blamed because he omitted something from the will; because he did not omit something from the will; because some part of the will when applied to facts unknown to him has an uncertain or double meaning. He is blamed because he did not foresee and provide against every possible contingency that might arise in connection with the testator's family and estate before and after death. In short, the lawyer is criticised by all if anything goes wrong and by some if everything goes right and in accordance with the wishes of the deceased.

Better Wills in Sight

Let us not complain. Let us not criticise. Let us construct. As we are getting preventive medicine so let us have preventive law. As a campaign of education is effective against tuberculosis so will it be effective against unsafe wills. It is in the interest of the client. It is in the interest of his lawyer. It is in the interest of the trust company as prospective executor, or possible creditor. And who will say that better wills and less litigation are not in the interest of the heirs?

How shall we get better wills? The answer is simple: make them. Lawyers are able and willing, if that service is demanded. Clients are willing when they appreciate the importance of care and skill.

What, then, is lacking? If the client will not appreciate the importance of having a safe and sound will, there is no help for his family or his estate. If he does appreciate the importance, then two things are lacking, but both are within his control. He must give his lawyer a fair chance and demand his best service. When his will is complete he must demand that it be tested while he is alive and able to repair any defects or ambiguities that may be discovered.

How shall wills be tested before death? There is only one way. As a will does not take effect until its maker is dead it can not be tested by a judicial proceeding during his life. The only method, therefore, is that of scientific constructive criticism by one or more fresh and independent minds. The better those minds are equipped and the more independent they are of the mind which gave the instrument form the better can they forestall adverse criticism after death and the more sure will be the test.

This does not mean that the mind that tests the will should be hostile to the mind that gave the instrument form. On the contrary, both minds should be sympathetic rather than competitive. They should not be self-centered but broad in their horizon, open to conviction and eager for the truth.

I am advocating no new departure. It is the better practice in England. It is the better practice in America. It produced the will of Mr. Morgan. It is producing hundreds of the best and most important wills each year. If properly done it could not produce a Bostwick will, a McComb will, a Plant will or a Tilden will.

What I said at the beginning let me repeat at the end: A will is a private law which civilization permits you and me to make concerning the disposition of our property after death. In that instrument we can legislate for the good or ill of our families and our estates. We may use that legislative power cautiously, prudently and wisely. If we fail to do so, however, we shall not personally suffer but the sufferings caused by us will fall to the lot of those we love.

CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT OF A. I. B.

The friends of Laurence C. Humes, secretary of the Memphis Chapter, A. I. B., are waging an active campaign in behalf of his candidacy for the national presidency. Mr. Humes is a former officer of the national body and was the organizer of and for six years past an officer of Memphis Chapter. He is a regular attendant at group meetings and state and national bankers' conventions.

One of the points advanced by his campaign committee is that there is a growing tendency to distribute the offices of the Institute among bank officers rather than bank clerks, which it is believed is in contravention of the purposes of the Institute.

JAMES B. FORGAN ON THE MONEY SITUATION

James B. Forgan, in commenting on the monetary outlook recently, said that the panicky feeling of a few weeks ago has passed off, this condition being denoted by borrowers paying off. "Our bank has had several million dollars of loans paid up recently," said Mr. Forgan, "some being from country banks, indicating easy conditions. Fewer loan applications are also coming in from this source. There is also increased sales of commercial paper in the interior. Western banks are in excellent condition. Banks at one very important center have notified Secretary McAdoo they will not need crop relief money. There is no money under 6 per cent now, and lower rates are not probable this year. Loans on new crops are small as yet, and it may be several weeks before they reach their height."

WILSON APPROVES SAVINGS DIVISION FOR NATIONAL BANKS

President Wilson has given his official approval to the Bulkley amendment to the administration currency bill allowing national banks to establish savings divisions and act as trustees for mortgage loans. Furthermore, the president let it be known that the bill as amended by the democratic members of the house banking and currency committee has his hearty support.

SAYS WISCONSIN BANKS ARE WELL PREPARED

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association says that the banks of that state are well prepared to take care of the demands which will be made upon them for funds with which to move the crops this year. For some time the banks have been restricting loans and building up their resources, which has resulted in placing them in a comfortable position.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

Every employee of the Guardian Savings and Trust, Cleveland, has been insured for $1,000 at the cost of the bank. The $111,000 worth of insurance was taken out on the new group insurance plan. When an employee leaves the services of the bank his life insurance automatically ceases. Similarly the employee who takes his place is insured from the moment he is hired. The pension and profit-sharing plan adopted by the Guardian provides additional rainy day funds for employees. Each will pay in a certain percentage of his salary. The bank will "cover" this with a percentage of its net earnings. This provides a pension fund for employees in the service of the bank for twenty-five years or over sixty years of age equal to one-half the annual salary, but not to exceed $2,000 a year for each pensioner. Employees who reach the sixty-year limit on less than twenty-five years' service will benefit in proportion. In case the bank's contribution to the funds exceeds the individual contributions the excess is set aside in a profit-sharing fund, which is divided every five years in proportion to the individual contributions.

Money Situation

E. R. Fancher, vice-president of the Union National, Cleveland, says that the Cleveland money situation is comfortable. "There is no excess here and banks could use government funds. But we are not in the center of a crop region, such as for instance the cotton area, where crop moving produces an abnormal demand for money." Col. J. J. Sullivan, president of the Central National and the Superior Savings and Trust, and Thomas H. Wilson, vice-president of the First National and the First Trust and Savings, attended the conference at Washington with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo on Friday.

Banker Enters Real Estate

Horatio Ford has resigned as secretary of the Garfield Savings of Cleveland to enter the real estate field in conjunction with his father. Mr. Ford has been with the Garfield Savings for seven years, for the last three years at the main office.

Two Ohio Banks Fail

The Peoples Bank of Sycamore, a private bank, filed deeds in assignment in the probate court last Saturday. The owners are George A. Klahr of Sycamore, who is critically ill with typhoid pneumonia; Jacob A. Klahr of Bloomville, and Frank C. Samsel of Sycamore. They have assigned everything, including their property, to John Wensinzer and Jacob A. Petty, both of Sycamore. It is said that there was less than $100 available cash in the bank when it closed its doors. Some believe that the bank was "loaned out" too heavily. According to the last statement filed by the bank at the auditor's office its loans and discounts amounted to $142,102.41; there were $1,542.12 in overdrafts and $14,152.50 due from other banks and bankers. The real estate is worth $3,000 and the furniture and fixtures $1,000; checks and other cash items amounted to $11,047.49 and paper and currency to $5,418.29. The capital is $25,000. The Bloomville Exchange of Bloomville also has been closed. Its capital is not listed and no statement concerning the assets and liabilities has been issued.

Group Seven, Ohio, to Meet

A meeting of Group Seven, Ohio Bankers Association, will be held in Janesville on August 19th. W. S. Mooney, Jr., of Woods-field is chairman and Otto Giffen of St. Clairsville is secretary and treasurer.

Group Eight at Cadiz

Group Eight of the Ohio Bankers Association held their seventh annual meeting on Thursday in Cadiz. The program included addresses by Ralph Cole of Findlay, Hon. M. A. Warnes, Emery Lattaner, superintendent of banks, of Columbus, and Prof. Charles E. Thorne of the Wooster agricultural experiment station. I. M. Taggart of Massillon, chairman of the group, responded to greetings by Maj. David Cunningham of Cadiz. There was an informal dinner after the meeting. S. J. Brister of the State Savings, Canal Dover, is secretary-treasurer of the group.

Group Two Holds Meeting

The seventh annual meeting of Group Two was held at the Putnam Club rooms, Ottawa, Ohio, on Tuesday, August 5th. Governor Cox made the principal speech. Other speakers were Hon. Ray R. Kennedy, Spencerville, on the recent banking legislation, especially with regard to the private banking bill; Hon. Robert Black of Cincinnati on recent "Blue Sky" laws; President S. D. Fitton of the Ohio Bankers Association, and Secretary Stacy B. Rankin of Columbus. A resolution was adopted to favor legislation that will limit to a maximum of 3 per cent the interest that may be paid on deposits, whether public funds or private account, as such a law would guarantee more conservative banking, increased profits, salaries and dividends and yet permit of a reduction in rates to borrowers. A banquet was held in the evening. The meeting was very largely attended and voted a success by all who were present.

Ohio Notes

The First National of McConnelsville celebrated its fiftieth anniversary recently.

As a result of bad loans the Bank of Sugar Grove, which was organized in 1906 with a capital of $10,000, is said to be insolvent, and Elmer O. Pettit of Logan has been appointed receiver. Resources of the bank are estimated at $42,000 while the debts will aggregate approximately $48,985.17.

Columbus was not represented at the conference with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo at Washington upon the subject of furnishing money for the movement of crops, following the decision of the Columbus Clearing House by a vote of seven to six not to send any representatives.

Abuses in Building and Loan Associations

State Banking Commissioner William H. Smith of Pennsylvania criticises the building association broker and the practice of investment of building and loan association funds in large blocks in his annual report on the operations of the associations in Pennsylvania, just completed. The report goes into detail of some abuses and gives an immense amount of interesting data about the extent of the business of these organizations.

The building association broker is declared to have become a great factor in the placing of loans and "premiums and commissions, which would otherwise revert to the treasury of such associations and assist in the maturity of the stock, share and share alike, for the benefit of all shareholders, now becomes a remunerative recompense for the broker." In this connection the report says commissions have ranged from $25.00 to one case in which $25,000.00 was reported. Then the report says:

There is no fixed statute, apparently, to prohibit the payment of a commission to an outside agent for getting a building association loan, but the department uses whatever moral force it can against this practice, particularly with reference to directors or other officers who become thus engaged. It should be remembered that, while agents and brokers are enriching themselves in this way, the mortgages thus placed are free from taxation or other charges in pursuance of the gratuity advanced by the state in the early inception of the building association scheme to encourage thrift among wage-earners.

There is also criticism for recorders of deeds who satisfy mortgages without having the instruments produced, and criminal derelictions in this regard will be prosecuted.

The report shows building associations are growing rapidly and immense amounts of money are controlled by them. There are now 1,656 associations, a growth of sixty-four in a year. In all eighty-one were chartered, of which sixty-nine were for Philadelphia and four for Pittsburgh. Seven renewed charters and nineteen dropped out. There were no receiverships, the report calling attention to the fact that in several instances the department's men succeeded in having liquidation proceedings started without such expensive legal steps as receiverships.

The financial details show 475,949 shareholders, of which 323,041 are males and 152,453 females, their holdings being 3,771,818 shares in force at the end of the year. The associations helped buy 17,885 homes.

Total assets are given as $213,825,547.70, against $197,376,758.53 in the previous year. The receipts were $102,488,084.47 in 1911, but $110,634,700.61 last year, divided as follows: Premiums, $41,026,593.53; interest, $11,016,631.08; money borrowed, $18,724,121.89; mortgages repaid, $23,324,298.68, and stock loans repaid, $5,659,368.04. Payments during the year were: Money borrowed and interest, $19,093,412.82; real estate loans, $42,648,379.34; stock loans, $8,016,362; installment stock withdrawals $18,511,204.27; installment stock withdrawals, $932,574.93; matured stock withdrawals, $13,454,805.42.

Bank Examiner Resigns

National Bank Examiner Henry A. Williams, in charge of the Pittsburgh (Pa.) district prior to the failure of the First-Second National, has tendered his resignation, which has been accepted by Acting Comptroller of the Currency Thomas P. Kane.

Bank Buys Site for an Addition

The Northern Trust, Philadelphia, has bought property at 514 North Sixth Street from J. K. Smith for $10,000. The property, which adjoins the company's present bank building at the southwest corner of Sixth and Spring Garden streets, measures 27 by 171 feet, to Marshall Street, and was bought, it was announced, with the ultimate intention of enlarging the bank, which now measures 49 by 174 feet. This will be the third enlargement of the building.

New Kentucky Bank

The organization of the McRoberts (Ky.) State has been completed and the bank soon will open for business. John G. Buckingham of Paintsville is president; John C. C. Mayo, vice-president, and Walter S. Perry, cashier. This is the fourth banking institution in Letcher county.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

In response to the call of the comptroller of the currency the Northwestern National, First National, Security National, Scandinavian-American National, Metropolitan National and Commercial National, Minneapolis, show combined deposits of $72,381,923.73, which is $2,539,618.98 less than June 4th when the last previous call was made, and $6,182,561.79 less than the nearest corresponding statement, that of September 4th last year. The deposits of all the city banks stand at $107,778,715.42. This compares with $109,938,731.39 June 4th, and $111,178,939.13 September 4th last year. It is $7,166,827.88 less than the record Minneapolis high of $14,945,543.30 in April, 1913. Minneapolis banks, both national and state, present figures that show stability. Loans and discounts, which were $70,290,088.55 in June, are down to $66,709,725.50, showing contraction in proportion to the decreased deposits.

The savings banks that report on call show $23,001,520.78 on deposit, which is another high record. Since the September call for statements, in 1912, when the four banks reported $20,702,095.22, the deposits for savings accounts have risen steadily. The June 4th statement showed a new high line reached at $22,696,238.73, but the figures at the close of business August 9, show that these four savings banks had deposits totaling $23,001,520.78 and had gained $305,282.05 in a little more than sixty days.

St. Paul Banks Prosperous

Deposits in five St. Paul banks and their affiliated trust and savings companies, in their report to the comptroller of the currency this week, showed a total of $50,370,965.81. The Merchants National leads with $20,491,845.49. The First National is second with $18,175,137.30. The total resources are $63,107,155.28, the Merchants leading with $25,027,358.61, and the First second with $23,455,627.16. The Capital National and the Capital Trust show combined deposits of $7,050,526.54. The combined deposits of the American National and the Northern Savings, affiliated institutions, are $3,058,516.67. Deposits in the Scandinavian-American State are $1,594,939.81. The St. Paul banks are in the most flourishing condition of their histories and bankers declare they will be able to meet all legitimate demands.

E. W. Decker Back From East.

Edward W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis, who has returned from the East, says that money in Minneapolis is about on a parity with New York, and, if anything, a little easier. "We are lending money in Minneapolis at 6 per cent," says Mr. Decker, "and we are accommodating everyone who needs it. The little borrower gets the same credit as the big man. Our bank has 15,000 depositors, and of these about 5,000 are depositors whose average balance is $100 or less. These are our customers as much as the big fellows, and their wants and needs are carefully guarded. The greatest number of our loans are less than $1,000 each. Of course we are not financing new enterprises or helping to expand unduly new business and credit, but everyone with a legitimate need can secure money. We could get higher rates on certain classes of loans, but we choose to be conservative. We do not contemplate any increase in the current rate, unless the advance is general and we are forced to meet competition. This talk of discrimination in favor of big business against the little borrower, so far as we can find out in Minneapolis, has little foundation in fact. As I have said, we take care of our small depositors and the other bankers in our section are doing the same."

Crop Reports Show Great Harvest.

According to reports received from country bankers by the Security National, Minneapolis, there will be an abundant yield this year. Minnesota leads the Dakotas and will produce a handsome crop. Barley is being harvested now. The grains soon will be in the hands of the harvesters. While North Dakota in some regions will have but a fair crop the greater part of the state will have a bounteous yield. From South Dakota and especially from the eastern portion very optimistic reports have been received. Sioux Falls reports a yield of seventy-five bushels of oats to the acre.

Snelling Bank Reorganizes.

M. W. Stuart, Minneapolis, has been chosen president of the Snelling State, St. Paul, to succeed John Barrett, who recently resigned on account of ill health. A. F. Swanstrom, formerly cashier of the East St. Paul State, has been elected cashier and will take charge of the bank immediately as cashier and acting manager. He will succeed A. L. Jenks, who resigned some time ago. Mr. Stuart, the new president, has been identified with the growth of the institution since its organization.

Conference on Currency Bill

Eleven representatives of the banking association of six Northwestern states met in the rooms of the Minnesota Bankers Association in Minneapolis on Friday of last week to consider the national currency measure now pending before congress. The conferees declared that the business and agricultural interests of the country would be injured by the bill, if enacted into law, far more than the banking interests, although these undoubtedly would suffer. They think the compulsory transfer of several hundred million dollars from the banks to the proposed federal reserve banks will contract credit to such an extent as seriously to hamper the credit resources of the country. In a statement which they issued they said that a contraction of credit such as they think would result from the Owen-Glass bill would press hardest, not upon the "well established, prosperous and wealthy business men, but upon those who can least afford to suffer. Every farmer, every salaried man and every wage-earner feels the brunt of financial stress first of all."

In conclusion the bankers said that the compensatory features of the Owen-Glass bill, namely, the privilege banks will have of rediscounting their commercial paper in the federal reserve banks, will not be of any great value, except in times of stress, and even then banks would have to be extremely cautious about borrowing from the new banks. A resolution was adopted which indorsed an analysis of the bill prepared by Curtis L. Mosher, secretary of the Citizens League of Minnesota, which brings forth six good features of the bill and seventeen bad ones, contending that the latter outweigh the former to such a extent that the bill should be thoroughly revised before being adopted by Congress. The bankers present were: C. H. McNider, Mason City, Ia., who was chairman of the meeting; J. S. Pomeroy, Minneapolis, president of the Minnesota Bankers association; N. F. Canfield, Austin; J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul; J. C. Bassett, Aberdeen, S. D.; P. C. Remington, Bismarck, N. D.; J. W. Warr, Lewiston, Mont.; E. L. Johnson, Waterloo, Iowa; J. L. Edwards, Burlington, Iowa; William D. Banks, Superior, Wis., and Joseph Chapman, Minneapolis. George H. Richards, secretary of the Minnesota association, was secretary of the meeting.

Bankers Confer with McAdoo

F. A. Chamberlain, who with A. A. Crane and E. W. Decker, was in Washington last Friday to confer with Secretary McAdoo regarding the many millions the federal treasury is willing to advance to aid crop movement, has returned satisfied that the offer, even if not utilized in the Northwest, will serve to impart much confidence in the future.

"He offered $50,000,000 to aid crop movement and followed this up by promising $100,000,000 more later," said Mr. Chamberlain. "Then he proceeded to get out the treasury department statement to show us that the federal treasury could well do this. Certainly this should be significant of justification for confidence."

"We were called upon to report on conditions in the Northwest and I told the secretary that crops up here were a long way from a failure; in fact, that the Northwest could promise a pretty good crop. Asked to make a definite statement as to how much the banks of the Northwest would wish of the millions offered, we refused to name a definite figure and I suggested that in my own opinion it might be as wise to deposit this money in New York, Chicago, and St. Louis, the reserve centers."

"I do not know how much the Northwest will ask of the treasury department, but it is at least reassuring, even if we do not touch a penny of it, to have this immense sum to fall back upon."

Acting upon the suggestion of Mr. Decker, who was in New York and went thence to Washington to meet the treasury officials, A. Barton Hepburn of New York, chairman of the currency committee of the American Bankers Association, will issue a call for a conference of bankers in Chicago the moment that the house of representatives disposes of the Glass-Owen bill, that sentiment of the banking world may be clearly defined. The president of every clearing house association and the president of every state association of bankers in the United States will be asked to attend.

Mr. Crane believes that when the currency bill reaches the senate there will be a disposition shown to make such changes as will conform to the views of the bankers as to the features of a workable bill.

"The bill has already undergone many changes," Mr. Crane said. "It now provides for an advisory board of bankers, which was not contemplated in the original draft. This advisory board, while without initiatory power, will be of great influence. The legislators are determined that the government shall control the board."

"The Chicago meeting will be the most important gathering of bankers for many years, in my judgment. It will bring out united expression of what the bankers want. The reserve fund requirement to which the bankers have objected has already been tentatively modified."

W. B. Geery, vice-president of the Capital National, St. Paul, represented the St. Paul bankers at the conference.

New Deputy Bank Examiners Named

Under the new law reorganization of the department of bank inspection, Superintendent Kelsey S. Chase has announced appointments as follows:

Harry S. Quiggie, Winnebago, deputy superintendent of banks; O. I. Brandbold, Fergus Falls; A. I. Mellenthin, Sleepy Eye; Harry B. Hill, Faribault; J. S. Millard, Willmar; W. J. Regan, St. Paul; W. T. Hanneman, Minneapolis, examiners; E. F. Kenrick, St. Paul; F. E. McGregor, Crookston; D. B. Fuller, Minneapolis; Andrew P. Rotert, St. Paul; Charles I. Welch, Minneapolis; Albert E. Dorff, Detroit; Edward T. Olson, Roseau, assistant examiners; Gertrude M. Durkee, Mankato, chief clerk; Frederick D. Neumeier, Stillwater, and Robert S. Picca, St. Paul, clerks.

Counterfeiting Charged

C. W. Heath, Minneapolis, pleaded guilty to having in his possession materials for counterfeiting before Samuel Whaley, United States commissioner, late Saturday. His bond was fixed at $2,000. Heath was bound over to the federal grand jury which meets in Minneapolis the first Tuesday in October, and sent to the Hennepin county jail. His companion in the alleged passing of forged checks in Minneapolis, F. C. Lupin, was held for the Hennepin county authorities on a forgery charge.

Trade Reports Cheerful

An increase of $1,113,690.75 was shown in Duluth bank clearings for the week ending August 7th, the figures being reported at $3,640,633.88, as compared with $2,526,943.13 during the corresponding week last year. This follows a betterment of $1,076,205.63 in the preceding week's clearings. Grain receipts at Duluth continue to exceed previous records for the season. The tally for last week was reported at 1,203,000 bushels. Shipments to the lower lakes to fill outstanding contracts were more liberal, running up to 1,976,000 bushels, leaving the amount in store at 9,432,451 bushels. Of that 5,474,000 bushels were wheat, as compared with 1,874,000 bushels a year ago.

Judging from the present crop prospects through the Northwest members of the Duluth board of trade are counting upon another heavy year's business. J. A. Todd of the Kindel-Todd Company, who has just returned from an inspection trip over North Dakota, says that wheat is being cut in the Red River Valley. It will grade well, and yield an average of 15 bushels to the acre. The district south of Crookston and through the norwestern part of the state up to the boundary, he also found to be promising well.

Chosen Bank Cashier

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Citizens State, Brainerd, Minn., officers were elected as follows: President, M. T. Dunn; vice-president, J. W. Koop; cashier, Giles P. O'Brien, and assistant cashier, Miss Clara L. Donant. The directors are M. T. Dunn, J. W. Koop, Giles P. O'Brien, and Con O'Brien. Giles P. O'Brien, the new cashier, started work at the bank as a bookkeeper and in a year and a half advanced to his present position.

Minnesota Notes

John Swenson, a pioneer banker, has deposited $1,000 in the Bank of Canby, to be available for the city of Canby in 110 years. This sum compounded at 4 per cent for the specified time is expected to amount to $77,889.16. It will then be spent "for the best interest of the community, not forgetting the poor, the sick and the helpless and a reasonable protection for dumb animals."

The Welcome (Minn.) State has been organized by G. E. Knaack of Hartley, Iowa, with a capital of $12,500. Mr. Knaack will be president; F. J. Klein, vice-president; Wm. Greenwaldt, cashier. It will open for business September 1st.

Des Moines, Iowa., August 15th.—Plans of Secretary McAdoo to finance mid-west banks have about divided interest in Iowa financial circles with the crop outlook and the effect of the drought of early August. The two go hand in hand to a certain extent, but recently Iowa bankers have wondered if the crops of Iowa this year are going to keep the state in the same prosperous condition it has enjoyed for years. Everyone is entitled to a guess on the corn crop and the estimates have been running all the way from half a crop to an average crop. That the hot weather and lack of rain have been decidedly injurious to corn all will admit and the only difference of opinion is to the extent of the damage. In his crop summary for the first week in August, Dr. George M. Chappel places the corn crop at 89 per cent, pastures at 86 per cent, potatoes at 75. The small grain was largely out of the way before the drought became serious, with the result that Dr. Chappel estimates that the oats will go 163,000,000 bushels as against 206,949,700 last year. Winter wheat he places at 12,000,000 bushels as against 8,133,000 last year. Other crops, spring wheat, barley and hay are practically the same as last year.

George A. Wells, secretary of the Western Grain Dealers Association, has made his first estimate on corn, placing the total at 377,986,000. This is a falling off from the crop last year which the government placed at 432,021,000. In other words Mr. Wells believes that Iowa's corn crop this year will be about 85 per cent of the crop last year. Mr. Wells says that wheat turned out better than he thought and he increased his estimate on August 6th from that of July 21st. Also he increased his estimate on oats from 148,000,000 July 21st to 156,000,000 on August 6th. The condition of hay, Mr. Wells says, is better in Iowa than in any other state.

Whether the money which Secretary McAdoo placed at the disposal of national banks in Des Moines and Sioux City, to help with the moving of the grain, is needed in Iowa is also a question upon which there is disagreement. Des Moines bankers express various views on the subject. C. T. Cole of the Valley National declared that the idea is splendid and that movements of similar nature at critical times is all the currency reform that is needed. Other banks express the belief that the South needs money for moving cotton but that Iowa and the great Middle West is not so hard up. Harry T. Blackburn of the Iowa National asserted that Iowa may need the money in October but she does not need it now. Iowa farmers, he pointed out, are holding perhaps a third of the output of the fields for last year. Many buy cattle, fatten them and sell the corn-fed beef next spring. Thus the grand rush so apparent in crop moving in some sections of the country is never seen in Iowa. He also points out that Iowa's crops are diversified and that it is never harvested at once. The wheat and oats crop is out of the way before corn comes on. In October business men will begin to borrow for winter activity and it is then that the banks in Iowa can use the money to better advantage. Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National, Homer A. Miller of the Iowa National and John McHugh of the First National at Sioux City, were three named by clearings houses at Des Moines and Sioux City to attend the conference with Secretary McAdoo.

Love Letter Clew in Swindling Case

Detective Gust Patek of the Burns agency in Iowa has in his possession a love letter couched in terms of endearment and signed by "Midget." This particular letter was addressed to one Clarence Williams of Raleigh, N. C., who presumably was doing carpenter work in Des Moines. But in truth and in fact, Williams was in Des Moines only long enough to pass a bogus check for $125 on the Mechanics Savings of this city and get away with it. Williams' first stunt was to join the carpenters' union. His next was to try to collect on a check for $125 drawn on a bank in Raleigh. In this he was unsuccessful as Vice-President Fred Walker at the Mechanics did not like the looks of the paper and turned it down. But when later on, Williams appeared with the check endorsed by James F. Gray, business agent for the carpenters' union, Mr. Walker cashed it. It subsequently developed that Gray's signature was forged. Then began the search for clues. The love letter was about the only one, although "Midget" had enclosed with it a letter purporting to be written by the Rev. Williams commending his son for the latter's earnestness and another letter signed by residents of Raleigh certifying to his honesty. The government has been asked to assist in the location of "Midget" as well as her lover.

Detective Patek, however, was more successful in landing Lester J Strain, Roy Grubb and Roy McPherrin, thought to be three successful forgers. Little towns near Des Moines were selected for their operations and the Madrid State at Madrid and the Woodward State at Woodward were among the victims. Grubb and McPherrin were caught first but Strain escaped. He remained in hiding in the timber along the Des Moines river for several weeks. But he grew careless, came to Des Moines and was promptly nabbed by Detective Patek.

Changes at Black Hawk

Some important changes have made in the official personnel of the Black Hawk National at Waterloo. Dr. F. W. Powers, active vice-president since 1909 and one of the organizers of the institution, has been advanced to president, succeeding F. F. McElhinney, resigned. C. W. Knoop, cashier of the bank since 1905, was elected to the directory. Both of these gentlemen have been experienced bankers, and Dr. Powers is vice-president and principal owner of the Rice Savings at Smithland.

Curtin to Supervise Racing at Fair

E. J. Curtin of Decorah, formerly president of the Iowa Bankers Association, has been in Des Moines preparing for the speed events at the big state fair which begins here August 20th. Mr. Curtin is an authority on racing and he has been superintendent of the speed department of the state fair for a good many years. He says that the races this year will be the best ever held. The entries are large and the prizes more valuable than ever before.

Well Known Financier Dead

E. A. Lynd, former well known Iowa financier and director and vice-president of the Des Moines National, died last week in Los Angeles. He was eighty-eight years old and one of the early settlers in Iowa.

Iowa Notes

Leo Stephens, president of the Century Savings, Des Moines, has been made one of the directors for the Union Building and Investment Company of Des Moines.

Nathan Drucker, a Jewish cobbler at Muscatine, was flimflammed out of $1,040 by a couple of swindlers last week. The fellows gave Drucker $25 for the use of the money which he had on deposit in a bank at Davenport. They also gave him four diamonds as security and promised to repay the loan at the conclusion of the following day. When they failed to return the old man became suspicious. He discovered that the diamonds were fake. He tried to kill himself but was rescued.

The city commissioners of Mason City are planning to finance city improvements by selling securities to the people. Bonds will be issued and certificates with the bonds as securities will be sold to the people in amounts of $10 or multiples of that amount.

Joseph C. Ludmeier of the Farmers State at Dyersville, accompanied by Mrs. Ludmeier, was in Des Moines while en route in automobile to Denver.

F. F. McElhinney, Waterloo banker, has resigned as president of the Iowa Life Insurance Company at Waterloo.

South Dakota Notes

The State of York, Neb., is expected to buy the equity in the Downie Wright Manufacturing Company of Rapid City when it is sold at auction September 6th. The bank has a mortgage upon the property which aggregates $23,000.

New fixtures have been installed in the new bank at Parker and it is now opened for business.

Burt Rogers, cashier of the Black Hills Savings and Trust, Deadwood, was married to Miss Lulu Shrayer of that city.

D. E. Foley has disposed of his interest in the Commercial State at Draper to Thomas F. McGingam. Mr. Foley has been cashier for the past three years.

Cashier Albert C. Kingsburg of the Security State at Montrose was married recently to Miss Mary Esther Johnson of that city.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Supplementing assurances that this year's wheat crops of the Spokane country will be of bumper proportions came other encouraging reports of increased real estate activity and swollen postoffice receipts.

Real estate transfers for the week ended July 30th, as compiled by the Spokane Title Company, show an increase over the corresponding week in 1912 of almost 100 per cent. The week in 1912 showed $128,798, while the week this year shows $255,830, or a gain of 99.21 per cent. Transfers for the week this year, however, are nine less in number than a year ago, the figure being 186, as against 195 in 1912. On the other hand there is a decrease this year in mortgages of almost 100 per cent.

Continued increase in the volume of business done at the Spokane postoffice is shown by the report of business for the month of July. The receipts including sales of stamps and postage on second, third and fourth class matter, were $42,253.41. This is an increase of nearly $2,000 over July, 1912, and of more than $5,000 over the corresponding month in 1911. In 1912 the July receipts were $40,990.82, and in 1911 they were $37,043.50.

Spokane banks offer depositors a greater degree of protection than most other western banks, as shown by a comparative table, giving the percentage capitalization bears to deposits prepared and issued by the American National of San Francisco from statements at the last call of the comptroller.

The table prepared by the San Francisco bank gives Spokane second place in the list, with capital representing 21 per cent of the deposits. With the exception of San Francisco, no other city approaches the percentage of Spokane by a wide margin. Spokane having large capital and smaller deposits would be in splendid condition to meet all calls in case of emergency.

Under ordinary circumstances the capital of Spokane banks represents 21 per cent of the entire deposits. Considering the matter of double liability of bank shareholders, those in Spokane would cover 42 per cent of all deposits in local banks, and consequently protection is afforded depositors in local banks such few banks guarantee.

With a special sleeper and observation car at their disposal, thirty Spokane and eastern Washington bankers left Monday evening for the annual convention of the Washington Bankers Association at Bellingham. Those composing the party, with their banks designated, were O. M. Green, Exchange National; E. V. Klein, Traders National; R. L. Rutter, W. L. Clark and Albert Kaye, Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; J. J. Rouse and Thomas H. Brewer, Fidelity National; M. B. Connelly and B. A. Russell, Washington Trust Company; J. A. F. N. Walker of the Neely-Walker Investment Company announced on returning from a trip East that a company of Michigan persons is being organized to take over 100 acres of land recently opened up just north of Spokane by a number of local capitalists headed by Jay P. Graves and A. L. White. Prime movers of the plan recently looked over the proposition and returned to Michigan, reporting favorably on the proposal to invest $65,000, settling the land with their own people and starting a large commercial orchard.

When the tax rolls for Spokane county were completed by Assessor Glen B. Creighton, it was found that Spokane county properties were valued at $727,245 more than a year ago, exclusive of the railroads, which are valued at approximately $16,000,000. The property of the county, exclusive of railroads, was valued at $106,543,365 in 1912, while this year the valuations are $107,261,610. The valuation for the county is divided as follows: Real property, $58,042,380; improvements, $32,954,350; personal, $10,667,590; corporations, $5,597,290.

The annual meeting of the Day & Hansen Security Company, one of the large investment concerns of the Northwest with headquarters in Spokane and owner of 45,000 acres of choice agricultural lands as well as a string of banks, resulted in the election of the following board of directors: Charles Hurst, New York; C. S. Evans, Cedartown, Ga.; C. H. Rodenbach, Chicago; Edgar C. Smith, Council Bluffs, Iowa; J. B. Hungerford, Carroll, Iowa; Lyman Whittier, Whiting, Iowa; Amy W. Houghton, Galva, Ill.; J. W. Blair, Helmville, Mont.; Frank W. Schultz, Wenatchee, and C. T. Hansen and W. T. Day, Spokane. The officers are W. T. Day, president; C. T. Hansen, first vice-president and secretary; Charles Hurst, vice-president; C. H. Rodenbach, vice-president; J. H. Peters, assistant secretary, and F. E. Barbour, auditor.

City Auditor J. Anthony Smith reports that the strength of the city sinking fund has been brought to $146,298.48, the largest amount ever held in the fund. All but $42.15 of this is now at work, invested in city 6 per cent bonds and warrants. The fund has taken up all of the warrants in the hands of City Treasurer H. F. Tabb, making the city the beneficiary of its own warrant indebtedness. Auditor Smith estimates that with an allowance from time to time from taxation the city sinking fund can in course of the next twenty-five years take care of the city's general bonded and water debt.

Everybody is prosperous in Central Minnesota, said President F. M. March of the National Bank of Commerce on his return to Spokane from a vacation period in and around his old home at Litchfield, Minn. "The crops there are splendid, the farmers have plenty of money and bank deposits are large. The dairy industry never was more prosperous than now. The income from the average cow there is $70 per year in quick money."

After 1915 all private banks in the state of Washington must incorporate as state banks or go out of business, is a ruling of Assistant Attorney-General J. T. S. Lyle, in a formal opinion to H. F. Hanson, state bank examiner. The ruling declares also that the state bank examiner has no jurisdiction over private banks at the present time.

Carl M. Kraemer, cashier of the Plummer State of Plummer, Ida., was elected a director at a recent meeting of the board, at which E. T. Coman, L. F. Connolly, J. J. Kroetch and J. J. Connolly, all of Spokane, were in attendance.

PRAISES McADOO PLAN

Henry Clews of New York says that all danger of a monetary crisis this fall has passed, crediting Secretary McAdoo with being largely responsible for this feeling of assurance. Mr. Clews said:

"By making it plain on repeated occasions that the treasury would do its utmost to relieve monetary pressure when crop and trade demands begin Secretary McAdoo has materially lightened the burden of the banks and enabled them to lend with far greater freedom than was dreamed of.

"It is estimated that his offer to put out $50,000,000 of treasury funds available for bank reserves will expand the credit facilities of the country about $200,000,000, the effect of which is already seen in easier rates for time money, a better demand for commercial paper and a general revival of confidence in banking circles.

"Of course, much credit for the present improvement must also be attributed to the banking community for its persistent application of the brakes. In consequence there has been a general liquidation and contraction that is proving wholesome. There has been a decided stoppage placed on all imprudent enterprises.

"In brief, the financial world has been taking the rest cure and is already much invigorated in consequence."

TO TEST CONSTITUTIONALITY OF LAW

The twenty-five visiting members of the Investment Bankers Association in session in Cleveland predicted a gradual betterment of the business outlook with the approach of fall. They decided to file suits in Michigan and Iowa to test the constitutionality of the "Blue Sky" laws recently enacted in those states. President George B. Caldwell appointed a committee on monetary legislation consisting of Warren S. Hayden of Cleveland; Challen R. Parker of San Francisco, and A. C. Foster of Denver, Col. Charles A. Otis of Cleveland, Charles R. Dunn of Detroit, and Edgar Elliott of Chicago, were named for a committee to report on the attitude of bankers regarding the income tax on bonds.

NEW SAN DIEGO TRUST COMPANY

San Diego, Cal., is to have a new institution to be known as the Union Trust Company, with an authorized capitalization of $500,000. The new concern will take over all the trust business now handled by the Union Title and Trust Company. The officers are John F. Forward, Sr., president; J. F. Forward, vice-president; James D. Forward, secretary, and H. Sweet, M. P. Heller, O. C. Clark and S. F. Brant, directors.

Arguments on Proposed Currency Legislation

By GEORGE W. WEBER

It would be useless to attempt to compare the details of the monetary reform projects of the Wilson administration with the plan laid down by the monetary commission appointed by President Roosevelt and endorsed by President Taft. A volume might be written on the subject without exhausting it, and even then the whole topic would be as nebulous as ever. A good deal has been said to the effect that the Glass plan is much the same as the monetary commission's recommendations. On the contrary, it appears to me that there is a wide and fundamental difference.

First, consider the declarations of the three principal parties at the conventions of 1912 on the "money question." Following is the gist of them:

1. The regular republican platform declared in favor of a sound currency, progressive development of our banking system, panic prevention, crop-moving cash, against sectional, financial or political domination. It also asserted that easy loans should be provided for the farmer, and recommended further investigation of agricultural credit societies of other countries. For the most part the affirmations were highly academic and unobjectionable.

2. It must be said that the progressive platform declarations on the money question were much more to the point, especially because they were to the effect that the "present method of issuing notes through private agencies is harmful and unscientific, and that the issue of money is fundamentally a government function." It also mentioned Wall Street, and declared expressly against its domination, and opposed the Aldrich monetary commission "because it would place our currency and credit system in private banks and not subject to effective public control."

3. The democratic platform was explicitly against the Aldrich plan, favored a rural credit bank system, opposed Wall Street and favored the depositing of government funds by a system of competitive bidding, and generally was in opposition to the system of centralized credits.

First, understand that the present banking system is really not a national system at all. It is tied together rather by conditions and tendencies rather than by laws, and in its working out has made Wall Street the central money reserve bank of the country. To some extent the movement was facilitated by republican legislation and policies, and would have been conformed and crystallized by the Aldrich monetary commission plan. The progressive platform was really more specific than the democratic against Wall Street and the Aldrich law.

We now come to a consideration of the general monetary or financial conditions of the United States—as a government and commercially.

I cannot illustrate the situation better than by an easily understood comparison. At certain seasons of the year there is a great demand for railroad cars, perhaps for crop-moving or coal-transportation purposes. Now, then, if all these cars, as fast as they become idle, could be "deposited" or parked in a central switch yard they could be sent out hither and yon as transportation requirements demanded for this or that purpose. Or if all the water power of the United States were developed and connected it could be connected and transferred as electrical power from point to point, as it might be needed, or as there might be an excess at one locality and a deficiency in another. It is exactly the same way with money. There are times when money is much needed first in one portion of the country and then in another, and the conditions should be such that they could be made to conform to requirements of each locality and season. At the same time, while it ought to be possible to shift cash from points where it is not needed to points where it is most required, it ought to be possible to increase the aggregate volume so that it would conform the volume of money to the requirements of trade and not compel trade to adjust itself to a rigidly fixed amount of currency, increased or diminished perhaps by adventitious conditions or war scares in Europe. Money should be the tool, and not the master, of commerce, and the banker should not by his position or necessities be compelled to throttle or encourage business enterprises.

At the present time the total volume of currency is fixed by circumstances that are not correlated with the needs of commerce.

In other words, the rate of interest, which is governed by the supply of cash, should be as nearly permanent as it is possible to make it. Business should not recede or advance in conformity with the rate of interest, but should go on without the apprehension of curtailed loans or increased interest. At the present time the money in circulation in the United States is about $35 per capita. As I have said, there is a wide difference in the amount of money required at different seasons of the year, so that business must adjust itself to a fixed amount of money, when, as I have further said, the requirements of business should be the governing factor. The effect of this condition is that when money is plentiful and interest rates are low there is a tendency to borrow for the expansion of business. Then comes the time when loans are called in and borrowers must pay their loans, generally entailing more or less difficulty. It is sufficient at this point to say that all the monetary plans contemplate an elastification system, so that as money becomes scarce the volume of currency will, or can, be increased to meet the augmented demand and diminish as the requirement for cash grows less.

We now come to a consideration of the Wall Street problem.

There was a time when most of the manufactured products in the United States were imported. New York, by the process of natural selection, was the entry port for imported goods. At the same time we exported much in the way of agricultural products. The effect of this was to make New York City the commercial gateway and distributing center of the country. This compelled every bank in America to carry heavy balances in the banks of that city so that they could draw drafts there against. This condition has greatly changed. The amount of exports has diminished—production considered—and manufactured products have decreased in volume. At first, as American manufacturing began, it developed largely in the East, and Western money went eastward much the same as before. But in the last 15 or 20 years the West has come forward in manufacturing and also in consuming its own agricultural products, but nevertheless New York has remained the financial center, the same as it was during the early half of the 19th century. The effect of this has been to maintain the financial center at New York despite the fact that the East is not now really the center of commercial activity and production. Wall Street is but another name for the New York banks, and the conditions are such that there is a piling up of cash in these banks at one season and withdrawal of it at another season. This ebb and flow is at the bottom of the financial disturbances which the country suffers every year. At seasons of redundant cash Wall Street makes investments and loans which when the time of paucity of cash returns have got to be called in or realized upon. The real problem is whether or not the currency system of the country should be adjusted so that when the time of scarcity arrives money can be manufactured—printed—based on the assets acquired during the season of redundant cash? or, should a system be devised so that there will not be a time of overplus of cash in the New York banks—or any other banks? The old state bank system, with its "wildcat" and "red-dog" currency, really prevented this condition. At that time, before the Civil War, any state bank could put forth its own notes for use as money. These notes were, by their terms, redeemable in coin at the bank issuing them. They met the requirements, but the trouble was that the banks were not financially sound, and in times of apprehension were crowded for coin and could not redeem their notes. When the Civil War broke out many, or most, of them failed, and they were succeeded by the national banking system and laws, which placed a tax of 10 per cent a year on state bank note issues. They were thus taxed out of existence. In order to diffuse the currency national banks were allowed under certain conditions to issue and withdraw notes, and it was presumed that these notes would be issued and withdrawn elastically in conformity with local demands for currency. But this plan of distribution did not work out responsively to public demands, and we now have a system wherein a western national bank will issue its own notes and deposit them in a New York bank for part of the year and draw more or less of them out during the other portion of the year. It is this drift of money to and from Wall Street, as I have said, that has caused so much recent attention to the matters of loans for farmers, for, be it understood, a great many farmers borrow money against their growing crops, to be paid back when the crop is marketed. It appears that for the cash required by them the agriculturist must pay a very much greater rate per cent than the Wall Street speculator. This condition is not wholesome, because it has a tendency to induce speculation rather than production of real wealth.

The real difference between the Glass and Aldrich plans may be stated in few words.

The Aldrich plan proposed to combine all the banks of the country in a central reserve bank, to be governed by banking interests. The Glass plan proposes to create numerous reserve banks or financial centers and keep them dissociated, so that Wall Street cannot control the entire monetary and credit affairs of the country. In his message to congress President Wilson said:

"Our banking laws must mobilize reserves; must not permit the concentration anywhere that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points.

WE ARE TOLD

What has that to do with banking

A STRAIGHT LINE.

in a few hands of the monetary resources of the country or their use for speculative purposes in such volume as to hinder or impede or stand in the way of other more legitimate, more fruitful uses. And the control of the system of banking and of issue which our new laws are to set up must be public, not private, must be vested in the government itself, so that the banks may be the instruments, not the masters, of business and of individual enterprise and initiative."

It is difficult to reach a general sweeping conclusion as to the relative merits of the two systems. As in the case of the water power electrical current, if properly administered, it would be better if the entire country were united on one transmission system. The same is true as to railroad cars. But, under a vicious administrative system, there should not be combination. It is the same as any other combination problem. A beneficent monopoly is best suited for economy and efficiency, but an oppressive monopoly is malignant and obnoxious. I have always felt that Wall Street domination of the West was harmful, but I am not assured that the mere breaking down of Wall Street will insure a plentitude of cash in the country. Probably the Glass plan, with its several reserve centers, will in time bring about a central reserve bank that will be near the seat of commercial and business activity—Chicago.

One of the principal objections to the Glass plan is that the country would be divided into financial zones instead of having a homogeneous currency system. It might work out that Wall Street, already being most powerful financially, would become even more so. So far as my own opinion goes, it seems to me that the great fault of all the currency of banking systems proposed is that banks should be permitted, in fact encouraged, to deposit their reserves in other banks. Likewise it seems as if the government should by some device of "coining money and regulating the value thereof" put itself in position to issue money as it is required for legitimate purposes upon proper security.

MONTANA CONVENTION

The tenth annual convention of the Montana Bankers Association, held in Helena, was called to order Friday by President James T. Wood, cashier of the First National of White Sulphur Springs. The convention also is in session to-day (Saturday).

Response to the address of welcome delivered by Governor S. V. Stewart was made by C. F. Morris, vice-president of the Security State of Havre. After the annual address by President Wood, reports were heard from Secretary Mark Skinner, cashier of the Commercial Trust and Savings, Great Falls, and from the various groups comprising the association.

W. L. Clark, auditor of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, made an address on the collection of out-of-town items. His remarks will be found printed in full elsewhere in this edition. W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust, Chicago, told of the bankers' interest in agriculture, education and good roads, giving a detailed summary of the work which has been accomplished by the banking interests of the Middle West in endeavoring to promote interest in these matters and to secure improved agricultural and educational methods and provide a satisfactory system of highways.

After the appointment of committees and announcements, adjournment was taken.

This morning George H. Dunscomb, assistant cashier of the First National, Chicago, will discuss the administration currency bill. J. A. S. Pollard, the peerless Fort Madison, Ia., orator, was down on the program for a talk on "Progress and the Banker," but was unable to be present. The Hon. Edwin L. Norris, former governor of Montana, will speak on bank taxation.

Officers of the Montana Bankers during the past year were as follows: President, James T. Wood, cashier First National, White Sulphur Springs; vice-president, D. R. Peeler, president

Bank of Commerce, Kalisell; secretary-treasurer, Mark Skinner, cashier First National, Great Falls.

W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust, Chicago, in speaking of the bankers' interest in agriculture, education and good roads, said, in urging consideration of these matters:

"These are subjects, gentlemen, of vital interest to the whole country and all classes suffer through a neglect of them. It simply is a case of self-preservation, for the conditions which past indifference has brought about are such as create consternation and emphasize the necessity for immediate, concerted action. We are facing a grave economic crisis and it is up to the people to meet that situation fearlessly and intelligently and in the fight for better things the bankers of the nation must take a prominent part."

CHANGES IN WISCONSIN BANK

At the regular meeting of the directors of the First National of Grand Rapids, Wis., Edward Lynch, who is just moving to Milwaukee, resigned as vice-president. This was followed by an election which changes titles all along the line. Earle Pease, formerly cashier, was made vice-president and managing director; A. G. Miller, the former assistant cashier was elected cashier, and H. C. Demitz, the former second assistant cashier, becomes assistant cashier. All these gentlemen have been connected with the bank for several years and have well earned the recognition given them.

The First National was the first bank incorporated in Wood county and has made continuous progress since 1872.

The Farmers State of Blue Mound, Kan., opened its doors August 1st, with I. L. Pettyjohn, of Olathe, as president, and Charles M. Way as cashier.

DALLAS CHAPTER WANTS NEXT A. I. B. CONVENTION

Dallas chapter of the American Institute of Banking is continuing its active campaign for the 1914 national convention of the American Institute of Banking. The members of the chapter met around the banquet table in the early part of July to hear reports from various committees. Senior officers from all of the various banks were present, giving the movement for securing the convention their support and encouragement.

J. Howard Ardrey, cashier of the City National and manager of the clearing house made announcement of the action of the clearing house in extending to the American Institute of Banking an invitation to meet in Dallas in 1914, and the further announcement that a substantial appropriation had been made by the clearing house towards the expenses of every delegate who can attend the convention in Richmond, Va., in September next.

Spicy and encouraging talks to the members were made by A. V. Lane, vice-president of the American Exchange National; J. B. Adoue, president of the National Bank of Commerce; S. J. McFarland, vice-president of the Guaranty

State Bank and Trust; Wm. G. Breg, vice-president Dallas Trust and Savings; Ben B. Cain, chairman of the board, Merchants National. M. B. Keith, assistant cashier of the Guaranty State Bank and Trust, as president of the chapter, filled the post of toastmaster.

W. M. Massie, president of the Fort Worth chapter, assured the co-operation of Fort Worth bankers with Dallas efforts for securing this convention. "All petty strife and jealousy should be laid aside in a movement like this, and every city in the state should use its efforts to get it, for the benefits of this great convention composed of live, up-to-date young bank men, will accrue to the entire state."

Stewart D. Beckley, chairman of the convention committee, briefly outlined the work already in progress and stated that an active campaign had been commenced by his committee and by the chamber of commerce, setting forth the claims of Dallas and inviting the delegates to see Texas in 1914.

Secretary Babcock of the chamber of commerce spoke of the desirability of securing the convention and pledged the support of the chamber of commerce both for securing and entertaining the delegates in 1914.

An outline of the work done and plans for the coming year were presented. In the words of President Keith: "We want to fit the banking men of Dallas for higher and more responsible place in the future and to equip them to do more efficiently the work that is allotted to them each day."

National Bank of La Crosse, Wis., is capitalized at a quarter of a million; the surplus and profits amount to $450,000 and the deposits to $4,239,000. Officers are as follows: George W. Burton, president; F. P. Hixon and L. C. Colman, vice-presidents; F. H. Hankerson, cashier and Joseph Boschert and R. C. Whelpley, assistant cashiers.

NATIONAL BANKS IN THE UNITED STATES

During the month of July thirteen applications were received by the comptroller of the currency to organize national banks. Of applications pending thirteen were approved and none rejected. In the same month twelve banks, with a total capital of $450,000, were authorized to begin business, of which eight, with total capital of $200,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and four, with a total capital of $250,000, had individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On July 31, 1913, the total number of national banks which had been organized in the United States was 10,427. Of this number 2,929 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,498 banks with authorized capital of $1,065,922,175 and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, of $738,502,408. The total amount of the national bank circulation outstanding was $759,293,191, of which $20,790,783 was covered by lawful money of a like amount, deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

CHANGES AT FREDONIA (KAN.) BANK

C. L. Squires, who has been cashier of the State Bank of Fredonia, Fredonia, Kan., for the past six years, has sold his stock to F. J. Cambern, who will become officially connected with the bank. Mr. Squires has organized a new bank at Neodesha, to be known as the Union State, of which he will be president, with Lee H. Rowley, who has been assistant cashier of the Fredonia State, as cashier. W. S. Pettit will be vice-president and Lewis Arthur secretary of the Union State, Neodesha.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

Chicago Conference

That the Wilson administration and the bankers of the country may be able to get together on the main provisions of the Owen-Glass currency bill was the hope expressed yesterday by leading members of the American Bankers Association attending a conference for the discussion of the bill at the Hotel La Salle. George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, returning from Washington, said that he had had a very satisfactory interview with Mr. McAdoo and that, if this conference of bankers was harmonious, he did not see why the bankers and the administration could not get together.

A. Baton Hepburn, chairman of the board at the Chase National, New York, and chairman of the currency commission, opened the conference by an address in which "constructive criticism" was the keynote. Mr. Hepburn commended many features of the Owen-Glass bill, but his attack on others showed how vitally the bankers resent the taking away of the control of the finances of the country as represented in the central bank idea and the spreading of that control through twelve regional reserve banks established in as many sections of the country under the direct supervision of the administration, as proposed in the pending legislation. The speaker laid great emphasis on the failure to develop fully the central bank idea, which he declared was "recognized in principle."

"Why, then," he asked, "should not the principle, once recognized, be correctly applied? Why should not the law create one central bank, which should have branches wherever there is commercial need for them? Such a plan would be simpler, less cumbersome, and more certain in operation, and far more efficient. There would then be no need to give the federal reserve board authority to direct one section of the country to loan money to another, for the central authority would then control all the deposits and all the loans and they would make loans to those section of the country where most needed.

Race for Funds by Banks

"As matters stand to-day whenever stringency in the money market exists, our twenty-five thousand banks begin competing with each other to strengthen their cash reserves. In doing so, they intensify the stringency and aggravate the trouble. The disposition of bank managers to strengthen their individual institutions is natural and inevitable.

"In viewing the proposed legislation, one of the most natural questions then is whether the establishment of these regional reserve banks will remedy or aggravate that condition. Will there not naturally and inevitably be competition between the regional reserve banks, competition between the twelve sections of the country, and may we not in the end have competition for cash holdings between individual banks added to the competition of section against section, reserve bank against reserve bank?

"The framers of the measure evidently recognize that danger and seek to palliate it by giving to the federal reserve board the author-

Mr. Hepburn is one of America's most distinguished banker-financiers, and now is chairman of the board at the Chase National and president of the currency commission of the American Bankers' Association, where he has rendered great service.

Mr. Farnsworth is the popular and efficient general secretary of the American Bankers' Association and is executive secretary of the commission. He has had charge, in large part, of the systematic fight for a safe currency bill and of the Chicago conference plans. Is mayor-domo of the Boston convention.

DAIRY SITUATION IN ILLINOIS

Chairman B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association committee on agriculture has sent out a report on the "dairy situation in Illinois," which in reality is a clever treatise on the milk and butter business in the state. The committee spent days as guests of the Milk Producers Association, going about for first hand information. The report is a valuable one and banks can have copies for distribution upon request through Mr. Harris, at Champaign.

TWO NEW STATE BANKS

State Auditor Brady of Illinois has issued a permit for the organization of two new state banks in Cook County.

One permit was issued to Charles Hasterlik, Mathias Aller, Isador Sabath, William H. Beckman and Robert H. Baring for the organization of the Citizens State Bank of Lake View in Chicago, with a capital stock of $250,000 and a charter tenure of ninety-nine years.

The other permit was issued to Herman

Lorenz, Peter Bellert, Norman Carstensen, Henry Kugen, Otto Freese, H. R. Mentzer, F. Bartelme, Otto Finke and Gus A. Olson for the organization of the Shermerville State of Shermerville, with a capital stock of $25,000 cash and a charter tenure of ninety-nine years.

STATE BANKS SHOW CONDITION

The state auditor's report showing the condition of state banks in Chicago on August 11th, compared with the condition on June 3d, has been issued and shows total capital, surplus, contingent fund, and undivided profits aggregating $93,042,250, an increase of $1,881,707; total deposits of $5,164,402, an increase of $7,381,340; total cash and amounts due from other banks, $139,668,369, an increase of $870,897. Loans on real estate have increased $219,658, and on collateral security $1,462,316. There is also a decrease of $82,701 in overdrafts.

A charter has been issued to the First National, Whitesburg, Ky., capital $25,000.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

CHAIRMAN B. F. HARRIS of the agricultural committee of the Illinois Bankers Association has sent out to banks in the state a list of 28 questions based upon the desirability of the rural credit system proposed at Washington.

PROBABLY other states will follow suit but bankers should be in a state of preparedness for the next and succeeding democratic congresses.

MR. HARRIS believes in being fortified particularly on a subject which will affect country banking very materially.

F. W. FOOTE, well known in American Bankers Association circles, operates a model bank at Hattiesburg, Miss., and, being widely known, has a large collection business at profitable rates.

HE sees a colored gentleman in the Glass-Owen wood pile, which leads him to remark:

THE country bankers little appreciate that paragraph six of section seventeen of the proposed currency bill will require country banks to remit at par to cover all checks and drafts. They are in ignorance of this terrible cloud hanging over their future. Exchange charges on checks and drafts is one of the principal sources of revenue of country banks, and we cannot afford to give up same, and if we get caught on this proposition it is going to be very serious."

MR. FOOTE states his objection in the clearest possible terms. He further says: "State banks will be forbidden by the conditions to join the regional banks, and national banks will have to retire from the system. It is very unjust and the provision should be eliminated from the law. Country banks cannot afford to be members of regional banks and be forced to clear everything at par when a competitor in the same town or near-by village will enjoy full rights and privileges in that regard."

THERE are no rather serious objections in the eyes of the practical banker but those who go down to Washington tell us that he who objects to the new bill because it may cut down his profits doesn't get much attention.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, commenting on the current activities of the association, says that the officers and members are of one accord in complying with the Wisconsin "Blue Sky" law recently passed. Little opposition seems to hold against the Ohio law. "Already a number of our members have qualified under the act. The Michigan and Iowa 'Blue Sky' laws have been opposed from the start and we are friendly toward the suit which was commenced recently in Michigan."

POLLARD'S address was read at the Washington convention and a resolution passed thanking him and expressing sorrow at his enforced absence and the cause of it.

IT will be printed in the proceedings book by Secretary P. C. Kauffman, who is very proud of the large attendance at Bellingham.

W. G. EDENS also had a vote of thanks for his contribution to the speaking parts of the convention.

THE convention found standard objection to "government administration" of banks and to "politician" control. It made the following recommendations.

THAT the provision regulating the reserve requirements for country banks be further amended to permit them to carry 5 per cent with the federal reserve bank, 5 per cent in their vaults and the remaining 5 per cent at their own discretion either in vault or with central reserve city correspondents.

"WE urge our senators and representatives in congress to use their best endeavors to secure an amendment to the banking and currency bill providing for the payment of interest upon bank deposits, similar to that now proposed to be paid on government deposits."

LINCOLN bankers are pushing preparations for the big Nebraska convention, September 25th and 26th.

PLANs for the entertainment have been partially perfected and include a cabaret luncheon and smoker with vaudeville on Thursday evening; a league base-ball game between Lincoln and Omaha on Friday at 4:00 o'clock with the shady end of the grand stand reserved for the bankers, and a banquet in the evening.

SECRETARY WM. B. HUGHES says his "convention cards," containing the picture as well as the name of the delegate, are going fine. He sends 250 cards and the half-tone cut for $1.50.

GROUP SIX, Mississippi, at a formal meeting adopted strong resolutions on the currency bill proposals.

LIKE Mr. Foote they oppose collections at par, believing that Mississippi state banks cannot afford such a restriction of their income.

THE bankers favored paying regional bank stock holders six (instead of 5) per cent and then dividing all other earnings among the depositors.

STATE banks and trust companies demanded equal opportunities in the way of membership with national banks.

ABOVE all the features of the new bill calculated to restrict the income of the smaller banks are resisted. The crediting of items at par and as instantly available in cash is such a feature.

THE clearing house at Meridian at once endorsed the position taken by Group Six bankers and all congressmen and senators from the state will be advised of the action taken.

CHARGING for exchange or for making collections is looked upon as "a local question" and not properly one for federal control, not having interstate features to warrant.

IN Walker Bros. bank at good old Salt Lake, just after Col. W. G. Edens had stepped out, the other day a hastily sketched tribute "To Dear Old Montana" was found.

THE Colonel had spent several days there under the benign hospitality of E. J. Bowman of Anaconda and felt grateful.

THE sketch was as good as anything W. O. Jones has done for Kansas and was addressed to Colonel Bowman.

TAKE me back to old Montana,
Where there's plenty of room and air;
Where there's cottonwood an' pine trees,
Bitter root and prickly pear;
Where there ain't no pomp nor glitter,
Where a shillin's called a "bit,"
Where at night the magpies twitter,
Where the Injun fights were fit.

TAKE me back where the sage is plenty,
Where there's rattlesnakes and ticks;
Where a stack of "whites" costs twenty,
Where they don't sell gilded bricks;
Where the old Missouri river
An' the muddy Yellowstone

Where old Sittin' Bull was known.

MOTION picture theaters now play a part in the catching of criminals in Bohemia. When a bank crook or confidence man is "wanted" by the police authorities of Prague, and difficulty is experienced in finding him, a photograph is sent to every motion picture theater in the country, and this is shown, with a short explanatory note, until the criminal is found.

BANK notes that speak have been patented by an English inventor to baffle forgers. AMERICAN NATIONAL at St. Paul keeps forging ahead. Recently capital was doubled to $400,000 and surplus jumped from $120,000 to $140,000, which is going some even in St. Paul. Ben. Baer is president and Harry B. Humason, cashier.

J. G. WHITEMAN, cashier of the First National at Biggsville, Ill., is an undisputed member of "the 400."

HERE'S how it happens. Biggsville has exactly 400 population according to the U. S. official census, but the First has $525,000 in deposits, which puts the town also in the A1 class, having gained $100,000 since January 1, 1913.

MR. WHITEMAN is treasurer of Henderson County Drainage Districts Nos. 1 and 2, which is going to put about 17,000 acres of low, wet land on the map.

THIS is his side-line and the land promises to prove a gold mine to those interested. It lies right in a bend of the Mississippi river and is bisected by the C., B. & Q. railroad.

NELSON H. GREENE of Moline, member of the A. B. A. Council, was in Chicago and St. Louis this week "circulating" among his banker friends. He estimates the travel to Boston convention as the "biggest ever."

JOSEPH CHAPMAN has a host of friends throughout the Middle West, who would like to see him elected vice-president of the A. B. A. at Boston. THE Southeastern Banker counsels "the Southern bankers who are 'boosting' the candidacy of William A. Law," etc., to go it double and elect McLane Tilton, the popular and talented secretary of the Alabama association to Col. Farnsworth's job.

WE have heard that this is a part of the "Philadelphia plan." Will this really help Law?

THE same publication states that "Virginia and other Southern States" failed to endorse Law because "this method of choosing the future officers of the A. B. A. would establish a precedent that would later bring 'trouble' into the harmonious ranks of their association."

W. D. VINCENT of Spokane helped out as "secretary" at the Bellingham convention, Secretary P. C. Kauffman being still in a weak condition from his long illness.

George H. Dunscomb on Administration Currency Bill

When I first received the request to discuss the currency bill an analysis was comparatively easy. The act, while not as clearly drawn as the Aldrich bill, held distinct provisions; but in the last three weeks so many amendments have been proposed that it is difficult in some cases to determine the present scope of the provisions. One fact is of interest. So far the amendments tend to modify the more experimental or objectionable features of the bill. And, by discussing the more vital provisions, together with the amendments, we will be better able to judge the purpose of the administration.

The vital defects of our present system of banking arise from the fact that it is a unit system and in its operation is denied the principal co-operative functions. This lack of co-operation is manifested in the enforced treatment of reserves, the failure to supply an elastic note circulation, to provide a general discount market and the inability to control the volume of credit. These defects, long recognized, were met by the provisions of the National Monetary Association bill. This bill, commonly called the "Aldrich bill" provided a united co-operative organization—a co-operation which took the form of a national reserve association and its branches. It provided a machinery for the mobilization and concentration of the reserves of the country. It made possible an elastic responsive and adequate system of note issue. It created an available discount market and exercised a supervisory and controlling influence over the volume of credit by the application of a discount rate.

With a change in the political organization has come the birth of a measure predicated upon the findings of the monetary commission, yet deviating in many essential features from that bill which was formed upon the constructive judgment of both theoretical and practical bankers. The obvious difference between the Aldrich and Glass bills is this: The Aldrich bill sought to consolidate the banks in a central association to be controlled by the banks themselves; the Glass bill seeks to make numerous reserve associations and to keep them disassociated and controlled by other than the banking interests of the country. This is shown by sections two and three of the bill, which provide:

That the United States shall be divided into not less than twelve federal reserve districts, in each of which there shall be established a district reserve bank to which the national banks in that district are required to subscribe to the capital to the extent of 20 per cent of their own capital, one-half to be paid in cash and the other half to be subject to call. The minimum capital of any district reserve bank is to be five million dollars. The capital stock is to be increased as new member banks are authorized and decreased as banks go out of business. It is obvious that the creation of numerous reserve districts brings back to us the essential defects of our present unit system in that the effectiveness of control depends upon the number of the associations to be controlled. Such division will necessarily divide the cash reserves into as many parts under as many different managements, no one of which can strengthen its position except at the expense of another. The principal upon which we were seeking legislation was to secure a co-operation and mutual interdependence. If this be not secured the bill is of doubtful value in providing remedial effect. If there are to be numerous organizations these at least should be under a common control of the banking interest supervised by the government.

Section four provides for the control of the district reserve banks which shall be exercised by a board of directors selected as follows: Three members representing and chosen by district reserve banks; three members representing the commercial, agricultural and industrial interests, also chosen by the district reserve banks but subject to removal by the federal reserve board; three members to be chosen by the federal reserve board, one of whom shall be chairman of the district reserve bank. Now by analysis this means, that by the power of appointment and removal, which is the same thing, banking interests have three directors, the federal reserve board six, and holds the dominating power which subjects the management of the district association directly to political control. How complete this control would be will be discussed later in treating of the character of the federal board itself.

Sections five and six merely deal with administrative features, and under the amendment provide: That banks must subscribe to an amount equal to 20 per cent of their paid up capital at the par value of the district reserve stock instead of at the book value as at first proposed.

Sections seven and eight provide for an annual payment of five per cent cumulative dividends. Additional earnings are to be divided; half to create a surplus to equal 20 per cent of the capital stock of the association and half to go to the United States government. When the surplus equals 20 per cent of the paid in capital all net earnings above 5 per cent were to go to the government. This has now been amended by a provision that after the 5 per cent dividends are paid and the 20 per cent surplus accumulated, 60 per cent of the annual surplus profits ought to go to the government and 40 per cent to the banks in proportion to the balances maintained.

The division of earnings as originally provided in section seven was not particularly attractive, since new banks subscribing on a basis of 120 or the book value of the stock would receive only 4.17 per cent. What amount will be received from the 40 per cent division of net earnings proportioned to some five hundred million dollars in deposit, is of course impossible to estimate. In order to secure an effective system, it must include a representative portion of our banking capital, and to do this any change must be sufficiently attractive to keep within the system its present members, and also induce others to join, that is, both state and national banks should find it advantageous to operate under common provisions.

Sections nine and ten provide that state banks and trust companies may become shareholders in the district reserve banks if they comply with the provisions of the national bank act, as to unimpaired capital, examinations, reserve, etc., and if they obtain consent in writing of 51 per cent of their own stockholders. Apparently the bill contemplates that these institutions may continue to operate under their own charters.

Section eleven provides that there shall be created a federal board of seven members, including the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, the comptroller of currency and four bi-partisan members chosen by the president of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate. Of those appointed by the president, at least one shall be experienced in banking. No member of the federal reserve board shall be an officer or director of any bank or district reserve bank. Now, the salary limitation of $10,000 connected with these offices is scarcely such as to attract public men of recognized ability unless they are willing to sacrifice a great deal for the honor of serving their country.

But the most serious objection to the organization of the board lies in the method of selecting its members. The three first named would be members of the president's official family, receiving their office through appointment by him. The remaining four are also appointed by the president with the consent of the senate.

This provision is autocratic to a degree never previously reached in federal legislation. The commerce commission exercises control but has never attempted to take over the actual management of the railroads. Federal authority over national banks has hitherto stopped at limits of reasonable supervision and control. This act is based upon a theory of fraternalism

RECOGNIZING that all bankers and business men are interested in currency legislation, we have had the bill now before congress printed in convenient form, with side notes, and will send you a copy on request.

The Fourth National Bank Of the City of New York

JAMES G. CANNON, President

is prepared to transact all branches of domestic and foreign banking. Accounts are solicited from banks, bankers, firms, corporations and individuals, who may rely upon courteous consideration and the very best terms that are consistent with good business methods. which is repugnant to American sentiment, yet is offered to us with coercive features, inasmuch as any national bank failing within one year to comply with the provision of this act shall be dissolved.

Therefore, it is compulsory for national banks to enter this system and to supply capital and deposits amounting to between five and six hundred million dollars, over which the federal reserve board, only one of whom may be of banking experience, has the controlling power. In other words, the sole owners of the stock are prohibited from the right of representation on the board or participation in its control.

In response to general protests throughout the country, an amendment has been adopted which provides that there shall be created a federal advisory council to consist of a member of each federal reserve district annually selected by the board of directors, who shall receive no compensation for his services, but may be reimbursed for actual necessary expenses. The meetings shall be held in Washington at least four times each year and oftener if called by the federal reserve board. The council may select its own officers and adopt its own methods of procedure. In other words, this advisory body is to meet and confer with the federal reserve board on general business conditions; to call for complete information and to give advice, but is not permitted to participate in control.

It has been frequently stated, both by individuals and by the press, that the federal reserve board would be organized along the lines of the supreme court of the United States, and that it would be as free from political influence. I can best answer this by quoting from the recent analysis of James B. Forgan, in which he says: "I fail to see any analogy between the organization of the two bodies, nor can I admit that they would be equally free from political influence. The justices of the supreme court are appointed for life; they are selected with due regard for their professional eminence. The members of the federal reserve board on general business may not have either previous experience or knowledge of the banking business, the destinies of which are to be placed in their hands.

The duties and functions of the supreme court are deliberative. The duties of the federal reserve board are administrative, with full power of the initiative. By the very nature of its existence, the supreme court is placed above and beyond political exigencies and in authority is superior to the government, both legislative and administrative; not so the federal reserve board, which is nothing more nor less than a department of the administrative branch of the government.

Section twelve, which has been amended, authorizes examinations and as I understand it, permits the federal reserve board to require the district reserve banks to discount for any other federal reserve bank at a rate not to be less than one per cent or greater than three per cent in excess of the current discount rate, authorizes the suspension for thirty days of any reserve requirements and the renewal of such suspensions for periods not to exceed fifteen days, and in general defines the authorities and duties of the federal reserve board.

The provisions relative to rediscounts and acceptances are found in sections thirteen, fourteen, fifteen and sixteen. These newly created functions are as important as any within the bill and apply with equal force to city and country banks. The fact that heretofore there has been no sufficient means provided for converting rediscounts of the banks into money, is a conspicuous defect in our present system. The bill affords such facilities in that it allows any member of the district bank to discount its endorsed notes and bills of exchange arising out of transactions representing agricultural, industrial, or commercial purposes (and by a recent amendment paper whose proceeds shall be used for such purposes). Such bills must not run more than sixty days. Every bank has a certain amount of such receivables. The sixty days do not mean notes which are made for that length of time, but apply to any note arising out of one of the aforementioned transactions, which, though made for a longer period, is yet within sixty days from its maturity. Furthermore, when the cash reserves of any district reserve bank exceeds $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent that bank may take paper having maturity up to 120 days, but not more than one-half of such paper shall mature beyond 60 days. These discount facilities to the country banks at present, are restricted to the accommodations granted to their correspondents who take paper under rediscount, but ordinarily the country bank is obliged to hold its paper and, as you know, generally renew it. Not only can the members of reserve banks have the advantage of this privilege by rediscounting direct, but indirectly they will benefit by the rediscounting power of the larger banks. These latter, by the ability to rediscount, are immediately enabled in their turn to rediscount for their correspondents and could and would take paper not acceptable to the district reserve banks. State banks, not members of the association, would in a like manner partake of these benefits. The advantages are obvious. Money will flow from the reservoir to the place where it is needed. There is no way to adjust the supply of money between different sections of this country, except by discounting and rediscounting.

The provisions relating to note issues are found in section seventeen. This issue which is to be designated as federal reserve treasury notes was originally limited to \$500,000,000. Under an amendment, however, all restrictions as to the limit have been removed. Full retirement of national bank notes is required within twenty years. The new issue is redeemable in gold, upon demand at the treasury department or at any district reserve bank and may be charged to treasury balances or to the special redemption fund. The application of any member bank for treasury notes must be accompanied by an equal amount of collateral security, such collateral to be notes and bills accepted for rediscount. The district reserve bank shall keep segregated in its own vault gold or gold certificates equal to $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent of the notes issued, and shall charge the member banks such rate of interest as may be fixed by the reserve board. The notes themselves are to be a first lien upon the assets of the district reserve bank. Provision seems to be made for note retirement in that the district reserve bank may reduce its liability for

THE PRESIDENT AND THE BANKS

In an article discussing the views and attitude of President Wilson regarding the currency bill a Washington correspondent declares there is no foundation for the widespread notion that the chief executive had a "hatred for bankers." It is not claimed that he has any particular fondness for them. The idea that he feels hatred toward them, an idea which started from a misapprehension of a portion of his speech last fall before the Commercial Club of Chicago, has been heightened by his failure to promise changes in the currency measure desired by some of the influential banking interests.

"It was complained," says the article referred to, "that no bankers were summoned in to aid in preliminary process of drafting the banking and currency bill. This complaint was met by the president with the statement that he had not found bankers as a group unanimous in opinion or in all respects even well-informed with regard to the chief points in banking theory. Every change proposed in the bill that has thus far commended itself upon reasonable consideration has been freely received and acted upon by the president through the representatives in charge of the measure."

Most Western bankers believe that the findings of the conference held in Chicago on Friday will be influential with the administration.

ALL BANKS TO INCORPORATE

After 1915 all private banks in the state of Washington will pass out of existence or else incorporate as state institutions. This is the substance of a recent ruling handed down by Assistant Attorney-General Lyle to State Examiner H. F. Hansen. The ruling further declares that the state examiner has no jurisdiction over private banks at the present time.

NEW BANK FOR WINFIELD, KAN.

The newest financial institution for Winfield, Kan., is the Progressive State. The officers, who are all well known in Winfield business circles, are Senator Louis P. King, president; Orville E. Mabel, vice-president; Fred W. King, cashier, and Harry W. King assistant cashier. The capital is $25,000.

The Bank of Whitewater, Whitewater, Kan., has increased its capital stock from $12,000 to $30,000.

NEW WASHINGTON ASSOCIATION OFFICIALS

The Washington Bankers Association has chosen the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. H. Martin, cashier of the Pioneer National of Ritzville; vice-president, Robert Moody, vice-president of the First National of Everett; secretary, P. C. Kaufman, director Fidelity Trust Co., Tacoma; treasurer, P. M. Winans, cashier First National, Walla Walla; executive council, Ralph S. Stacy, president National Bank of Commerce, Tacoma; F. F. Handschy, vice-president Bellingham National; T. H. Breiver, president Fidelity National, Spokane; H. W. MacPhol, vice-president Willapa State, Raymond, and W. R. Baker, cashier Bank of Colville. J. P. M. Richards, president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust, was elected a delegate to the national convention.

BANKER GIVES UP TO POLICE

John Worthington of 4458 Olmstead Avenue, Chicago, surrendered himself to the police Wednesday on a charge of larceny as bailee. W. T. Bishop, 111 North Dearborn Street, took out a warrant for Worthington's arrest. Worthington, who gave his occupation as a real estate dealer, is president of the America Bank, 117 North Dearborn Street. He was released on a $500 bond for his appearance in court Thursday.

WICHITA BANKS HOLD BIG DEPOSITS

Wichita's four national banks have on deposit more than ten million dollars, a sum never before equaled by them. Not only has there been a material increase in deposits during the past three months since the last report, but the increase during the past year has been more than a million and a half. During the year the Fourth National showed an increase in deposits of $543,000; Kansas National, $153,000; National Bank of Commerce, $500,000; Union Stockyards National, $300,000, a total of $1,501,000. The increase during the past three months has been more than $600,000.

CHICAGO RESERVE BANKS

The condition of Chicago's nine reserve city national banks on August 9th last has been made public by Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane. The report shows that since the last call on June 4th loans and discounts in these institutions increased nearly $7,000,000, while individual deposits increased about $6,000,000.

PASADENA DEPOSITS SHOW INCREASE

The statements of the Pasadena, Cal., banks issued in response to a call from the United States comptroller of the currency, show an approximate increase in deposits of half a million dollars, as compared with the reports made in response to the corresponding call of a year ago. The reports showed deposits aggregating $13,073,000.

NEW STATE BANK FOR MORRIS

The United Trust and Savings Bank, of which the United Safety Deposit Company is a part, is being organized at Morris, Ill. The new institution is to be capitalized at $150,000.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Harris, of Champaign, are reminded by the grand encampment of the Knights Templar in Denver that Sir Knight William B. Melish, grand commander of the Templars, is the father of Mrs. Harris. Mr. Melish has made many friends nationally while he has directed the movements of the large body of which he is the head.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE

ity to force one reserve bank to loan to another. Under the conditions that would exist, would not the exercise of that authority fail to accomplish the just distribution of funds? Is there not a strong probability that in exercising that authority factors would be created that would endanger the smooth working and permanence of the whole plan?

"With a single central reserve bank, with branches, reserve money of all the banks deposited with that central institution would count in the aggregate, no matter with which bank it was deposited, or through which branch it was loaned. With such a single central bank, the controlling board would place its reserves in the section of the country where most needed. This shifting of funds would be accomplished without ostentation and without notoriety, whereas, if a federal board should require, as it might do, under this proposed law, one federal reserve bank to loan money to another federal reserve bank, that could not be done without attracting attention to the borrowing locality in a way that would operate to the prejudice of that locality."

Has Fear of Inflation

Mr. Hepburn pointed out what he believes to be the danger of having the credit of the government called in question at some future time by obligating it in the proposed note issues of the regional reserve banks. The banks, he said, should be made solely responsible for the notes. It was his opinion that these notes meant inflation, though he disclaimed any offense by the term. He pointed out that the limits placed on the resources and business of the reserve banks would lead to a curtailment of credit.

It was difficult, he said, to see the advantages of the proposed system or the inducements to banks to go into it. Banks should not be compelled to go into it against their judgment, he said, and then called attention to the monetary commission plan which permitted, but did not compel, banks to subscribe to the central bank. Mr. Hepburn doubted the wisdom of providing for land loans and savings departments in the system.

The absence of public hearings on the bill and the imminence of its enactment, he said, placed a responsibility on the bankers of the country which they could not avoid "in justice to themselves, to the public whom they represent, and to the stockholders by whom they are employed, to give at the present time public expression to their opinions in regard to the pending measure."

Many Points to Commend

In reviewing the commendable provisions of the bill Mr. Hepburn said:

"It creates a central bank, it establishes branch banking, it recognizes bank assets in the form of commercial paper, as the normal and proper basis for bank currency, it provides for keeping the current funds of the United States in current use instead of locking the surplus up in the subtreasuries whenever the income from taxation exceeds government expenditures.

"At the present moment we have an illustration, since the secretary of the treasury is now putting back into the channels of trade money which the excess of taxation over expenditures has withdrawn from business—an attempt to restore a normal condition and to offset the stringency created by such tax absorption.

"The secretary, too, acting strictly within the law recognizes bank assets as the proper security for government deposits. Those of us who have long contended for a central bank and the other principles above mentioned, may rejoice that this measure, approved by the administration, recognizes the truth of these principles and believes in the necessity of their embodiment into law."

Col. Farnsworth Outlines Proposed Action

Col. Frederick E. Farnsworth, secretary of the association and of the currency commission, outlined the proposed action of the association as follows:

"It is not the idea of this conference to criticize the administration or its work, but to assist in the preparing of good currency legislation. There are four fundamental features of the bill to which the bankers of the country are almost unanimously opposed.

Oppose Government Control

"These are the government control provision, the reserve feature, the portion referring to note issue by the government and the stipulation for the refunding of the 2 per cent bonds. The ideas of the association bankers on these scores are already known, and it is probable that their action will take the form of resolutions protesting against the objectionable features and suggesting amendments.

"I believe it safe to say that the delegates will object unanimously to these features. They represent not only the national banks but the state banks, savings banks and trust companies."

It is the intention to appoint a resolutions committee and the committee will take up the present bill section by section. It also is expected that the parts of the bill which were included in the old Aldrich bill, which was backed by the association, will meet with favor, but opposition to many of the new features, it is expected, will be framed into resolutions suggesting modifications and changes in the present form.

Name Committee of Twelve

A committee of twelve on resolutions was authorized, with the stipulation that James B. Forgan, president of the First National, who took a decided stand against the Owen-Glass currency bill, be its chairman. Mr. Forgan declared that the convention should appoint a committee to draft a new bill from the bottom. This declaration by Mr. Forgan caused considerable discussion. Some of the bankers thought it would not be wise to attempt to draft a new bill; that the bankers had better work in co-operation with congress and thereby get better results.

Forgan Presents Resolutions

Chicago bankers led in the debates which were precipitated when James B. Forgan, president of the First National of Chicago, presented the first of a series of resolutions he had prepared, touching upon the question of eliminating state banks from the federal reserve bank idea. Opposition came chiefly from bankers who stood against any sort of action on "a five minute" consideration. Banker after banker reminded the assemblage that the subject must be approached in a conciliatory and co-operative manner. Several speakers, among them Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust of St. Louis, declared that the convention of financiers should not undertake to condemn the administration measure in toto.

Warm terms were used by some of the bankers in referring to the currency bill and a climax was reached when Mr. Forgan declared:

"The measure is not a measure of expansion—it is a measure of the most damnable contraction that ever took place in any country." This charge led to an outburst of applause from the bankers.

Others who took part in the discussion were George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago; H. A. Moehlenpah, president of the Wisconsin State Bankers Association; Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust of Illinois, and W. T. Fenton of the National Bank of the Republic of Chicago.

Following the adjournment, which was taken shortly after 1 o'clock until 2:30 p. m., a committee appointed by the chairman met to appoint a committee on resolutions to consider the various resolutions offered. The resolutions committee will have full power, it is said, to change the resolutions offered by Mr. Forgan or suggest changes in them. Its members will then report back to the main body before anything definite is done with the resolutions. The committee to consist of twelve members was to be chosen from the three branches of the banking business represented—four men from among the members of the currency commission, four from among the state bankers' organizations represented in the convention, and four from the clearing house.

CENTRAL GROUP, MONTANA, ELECTS OFFICERS

The Central Group of the Montana Bankers Association has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: R. P. Reckards, National Bank of Great Falls, president; R. O. Kaufman, Union Bank and Trust, Helena, vice-president; W. M. Buckles, assistant state bank examiner, secretary and treasurer; S. C. Purdy, First State Bank, Geyser, executive committee; J. P. Kearns, State Bank of Townsend, Townsend, executive committee; A. W. Warr, Bank of Fergus County, Lewistown, member of executive committee of the state association for the Central Group.

TEXAS BANKS CONSOLIDATE

The Lamar (Tex.) Savings Bank and the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company consolidated on August 15th under the name of the Lamar State Bank and Trust Company, with a capital of $150,000. The officers are H. L. Baker, president; G. F. Simmons, R. H. Young and D. C. Humphries, vice-presidents; Morris Fleming, cashier.

BANKER DECLARES HIMSELF BANKRUPT

Alexander Pate, a Wellington, Ill., banker, who closed the doors of his bank a month ago because of failure to realize upon certain investments, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court at Danville. Liabilities were given as $164,000 and assets as $215,000, if time is given to permit realization on certain properties, otherwise there will not be enough to pay all claims.

CITIZENS STATE OF LAKE VIEW

Charles Johnsen, president of the Lake View Trust and Savings at 3211 North Ashland Avenue, will on October 1st become president of the Citizens State of Lake View, newly incorporated with a capital of $250,000.

Otto J. Gondolf, former cashier of the Lake View Trust, and during the last year the head of the real estate department, will accompany Mr. Johnsen. He will be cashier of the new bank.

NEBRASKA BANKER DEAD

W. R. Adair, president of the City National, Kearney, Neb., died last week after a week's illness. Mr. Adair was one of the foremost financiers of the state and was very well known. Together with a brother, J. S. Adair, he came to this city about twenty-five years ago and organized the bank of which he was the head.

NEW CASHIER FOR MISSOURI BANK

R. S. Wooldridge has been elected cashier of the Bank of Harrisonville, Harrisonville, Mo., to succeed W. B. Scruggs, resigned on account of ill health. Mr. Scruggs has been cashier for the past six years.

CASHIER OF NEW WINDSOR BANK

Henry G. Peterson, formerly a clerk in the Aledo, Ill. Bank and later cashier of the Farmers Bank of North Henderson, has been elected cashier of the new bank of New Windsor, Ill.

BANKING NOTES

Col. J. H. Best, president of the Illinois State, Quincy, Ill., has returned from a nine weeks' tour of Europe with his brother.

Application to organize the First National of Mounds, Ill., has been approved. The institution will have a capital of $25,000.

Samuel B. Hann, national bank examiner for the Baltimore and Washington district, has resigned. He will become connected with the Fidelity Trust of Baltimore.

It is expected that by December 1st the State Bank of Freeport, Mich., will be located in its new two-story building. It will be built of brick with terra cotta trimmings. The first floor will be used for the bank.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Bankers are watching the corn fields with great interest and there are wide divergences of opinion as to the damage which has been done by the long continued heat and dry weather to the great staple crop of Illinois. That there has been damage ranging from ten to fifty per cent is admitted by all good judges of crop conditions, the greatest concern now being the lack of ears upon stalks. Barren stalks abound in every field and there is certain to be a large shortage from this source.

However, there have been general rains over the state and much improvement will be noted from now on in the development of the crop. The moisture cannot, of course, help barren stalk conditions, but upon the other hand there will be much improvement in the filling out of the grain. Pastures will be greatly improved with the coming of the rains and feeding conditions will be helped.

Farmers are very bullish about the market and many of them are talking of "dollar corn." Sixty cents has been offered (August 19th) for new corn but higher prices are predicted. Farmers have taken advantage of the high prices of old corn which have reached seventy-five cents at country stations and much old corn and both new and old oats have been marketed in large quantities. The sale of this grain has greatly helped banks and merchants and has tended to keep farmers in much better financial condition than they would have been otherwise. It is difficult to feel much encouraged over the prospects of a lower cost of living as far as a considerable part of Illinois will affect the world's market. The farmer and business men, with some retrenchment, can live over the period of shorter crops especially with higher grain prices, and many farmers will have almost as large an income as in other years. The added cost of living will in large measure be passed along to city consumers. Bankers, farmers and merchants are more or less "marking time," but in many cities and towns good business has been experienced and people have been spending money liberally. There is much to feel discouraged over, naturally, but the man who states that "Illinois is up against it" has "another guess coming," as this state with its great material and natural resources will ride safely over a period of shorter crops with comparative ease.

Death of Young Champaign Banker

Charles M. Gardiner, title examiner in the real estate department of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign, died Tuesday, August 19th, following an operation for appendicitis. He was thirty-two years of age and had been married about a year. He was a member of the Champaign Country Club and of the Elks and was prominent in his city. He was a promising young banker. His death marks the passing of two junior bankers of Champaign this summer. Joseph H. Zeiring of the First National force having died in Edinburgh, Scotland, while abroad.

"Better Crop of Boys and Girls"

The Illinois National of Peoria seems to have caught the full measure of meaning in the "better crop" doctrine and in the "savings and thrift" campaign for it now comes forward with a most acceptable appeal to parents to rear "a better crop of boys and girls" by teaching them the fundamental ideas of thrift. The bank seeks to have the parents encourage their children to read the "thrift talks" which appear in the newspapers and says:

"The best way to improve the crop of boys and girls now growing in Peoria is to cultivate the habits of thrift in them. To this end the Illinois National Bank uses this space several times a week. Parents will do well to encourage the boys and girls to seek out these little 'thrift talks' and to read and discuss them."

Bank Yeggman Arrested

Harry Cassil, alias Smith, who shot Cashier Peterson of the Hennepin Bank a few months ago and who later escaped from the jail at Hennepin, is said to have been "caught at last." He was arrested in St. Louis. Cassil will be tried at Hennepin in the next term of the Putnam county court but will be held in the Bureau county jail at Princeton until the time of the trial.

Tries to Swindle Springfield Banks

A stranger giving his name as Orval Stewart and his residence as Detroit, Mich., was arrested after he had tried to secure funds illegally from two Springfield banks. He went into the First National and stated that he wished to purchase a draft, alleging that he had $3,500 on deposit in the "First National Bank of Indianapolis" and that he would check on that account in payment for the draft. The draft teller informed him that there is no First National in Indianapolis, whereupon the stranger became confused and left. He later made a second attempt to secure funds at the same bank and afterwards was arrested at the Farmers National. He secured no money from the Springfield banks.

Stable Investments

It is an undoubted fact that the most truly conservative investment is the one which never fluctuates in price or depreciates in value, but remains fixed and secure at par under any and all conditions. The more nearly an investment approaches perfect stability in value, the more completely is it free from any trace of speculative element. By its very nature, a carefully chosen First Mortgage Loan on improved real estate is a non-fluctuating investment. When divided up into a series of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, the investment loses none of the conservative features of the mortgage. The investor who purchases this class of security rests secure in the knowledge that his investment is free from influence by adverse business or financial conditions, or political or tariff changes. We own and offer a great variety of First Mortgages secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago real estate, maturing serially in two to ten years. We have purchased these bonds with our own funds after careful investigation, and recommend them in the highest terms as safe and attractive investments for income. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000.

The Illinois Traction System stock, selling at a price to yield 5.45 per cent, while many other railroad stocks yield over six per cent, is said to show the faith which investors have in the company. Earnings available on the $10,000,000 common stock are increasing each year, amounting to 5.65 in 1911 and 7.41 in 1912. Although earnings on the common stock would have allowed payment of dividends on the common stock yet no such distribution was made until last May when it was placed on a three per cent dividend. It is now quoted at 54 bid, 56 asked.

William B. McKinley, president of the company and formerly Illinois congressman, associated himself with Montreal capitalists with the result that much of the stock is held in the Canadian city. Comparatively little of the stock is held in Chicago. If the company extends its line from the Illinois Valley and Joliet into the metropolis there will be more interest in the stock by Chicago money. With magnificent terminals in St. Louis, the Illinois Traction System is annually placing thousands of dollars worth of business in the Missouri city which could be duplicated in Chicago.

Illinois Notes

Work on the new building of the Central National of Peoria was delayed a few days when the builders went out on a strike. Fortunately the strike was called before the interruption became serious.

There were twelve more state banks in Illinois at the time of the August 11th call than at the time of the June 5th call. Of these twelve new state banks seven had previously been private institutions. There are now 672 state banks in Illinois.

Banks in railroad centers find that the semi-monthly pay-rolls which are now obligatory upon railroad companies in Illinois increase the work in the transit departments inasmuch as payment is naturally very largely by check. There is no doubt that in the main both workmen and merchants profit by the change.

Work has been completed on a stretch of road in LaSalle township which complies in every way with the new road law provisions. The new road is one mile in length, is twenty feet wide, is built of concrete and is ideal in every respect. The county board of supervisors of LaSalle county was the first in the state to comply with the new law. The LaSalle Commercial Club is boosting the dedicatory exercises of the new road which will be attended by Governor Dunne and members of the new highway commission.

The Western Livestock Insurance Company, with headquarters in Chicago, has a number of banker-directors, among them being Berne M. Mead, cashier State Trust and Savings of Peoria; George A. Anthony, president Kewanee National of Kewanee; E. A. Strause, president State Trust and Savings of Peoria; T. P. Ross, cashier Farmers and Merchants of Carlinville, and John Huston, president Huston Banking Company of Blandinsville. Clifford Ireland of Peoria, president of the company, and Herman Danforth, prominent farmer of Washington, are both well known to Illinois bankers. The company insures high-grade live stock.

Streator National of Streator reports deposits August 9th as $798,000. F. Plumb is the president and H. W. Lukins is the cashier.

First National of Peoria and the Savings Bank of Peoria, allied institutions, report combined deposits of $5,736,000. Other Peoria bank deposits are Illinois National, $2,070,000; Merchants National, $1,983,000; Commercial-German National, $4,465,000; Home Savings and Trust, $1,728,000, and Dime Savings and Trust, $1,916,000.

Fire losses in Illinois for the month of July totalled $1,038,780 with approximately enough insurance to cover the loss. There were 735 fires during the month, 248 being in Chicago and 487 out-in-state.

The National Bank of Monmouth reports deposits of $1,087,000 and loans and discounts of $1,210,000; the Second National of Monmouth, deposits of $818,521 and loans and discounts of $738,167, and the Peoples National of that city, deposits of $693,110 and loans and discounts of $634,000.

The Lincoln National of Lincoln had a rest tent at the Lincoln Chautauqua to which its customers and friends were invited to come for rest during the assembly. Accommodations for writing, telephone, checking parcels and other conveniences were provided.

F. W. Sauer, cashier of the Rutland State Bank, has returned from a vacation spent at Niagara Falls and other eastern points.

TESTING MICHIGAN BLUE SKY LAW

Detroit, August 20.—Michigan's "Blue Sky" law must secure the approval of the courts as to its constitutionality before it can become operative. A temporary injunction against the enforcement of the law has been granted by the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Michigan upon a bill of complaint prepared by the Michigan Bankers Association attorney who is representing the Investment Bankers Association of America in the proceedings to have the act declared unconstitutional. The parties to the injunction proceedings are the Alabama and New Orleans Transportation Company, an issuing company described in the act as an "investment company," and the following dealers: N. W. Halsey & Co., A. B. Leach & Co., Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings, Chicago, and Lee, Higginson & Co. After reciting the provisions of the act the bill of complaint attacks its constitutionality on technical and other grounds.

MENDOTA BANK TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

The First National of Mendota, Ill., has purchased the building adjoining the bank and will take possession not later than March 1, 1914. In place of these two buildings there will be erected a modern bank building, the first floor to be used exclusively for banking purposes and the second floor to be arranged into offices.

NATIONAL BANK AT RIVERBANK, CAL.

Riverbank, Cal., is said to have the distinction of being the first town in California of 600 inhabitants to have a national bank. The First National of Riverbank opened its doors recently. The bank has a capital of $25,000 and has some of the most prominent business men of Stanislaus county interested in its welfare. The prime mover in the establishment of the bank is R. W. Hobart, who until recently was general agent for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad at Fresno.

The directors of the First National, Ridgefarm, Ill., met last week to elect a successor to Henry J. Coles, the former president, who died recently. Richard Mills was elected president; Charles M. Harrold, vice-president, and Henry G. Parker, cashier.

WISCONSIN

Traveling through Europe via automobile at the average rate of one hundred miles a day is described in interesting manner by President Oliver Clyde Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust, who returned from his two months' vacation this week. Mr. Fuller was accompanied by his wife, daughter, and two sons. Says Mr. Fuller anent the roads of Europe:

"The roads of Europe are incomprehensible to anyone who has not traveled over them. We traveled more than 3,000 miles through seven different countries of Europe in thirty days. During all that time we were not delayed by tire or machine trouble altogether more than one hour. It was a highly enjoyable trip, made more so by the excellent condition of the roads everywhere. These, in every country but Belgium, are made of macadam. The manner in which the roads are kept up is interesting to note. There are piles of stone of varying sizes at intervals and at every sign of a depression the road is filled to the proper grade. We engaged a car in Paris and went through France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Germany, Belgium, and other parts of the continent. We crossed the Alps seven times at different altitudes. As the trip was purely for recreation, I paid little attention to business matters. On the continent all the talk was about the Balkan situation, which at that time was acute. We heard nothing but war and saw nothing but soldiers while traveling through Austria. What few bankers and business men I met while in Paris and London seemed not to be concerned regarding our currency or tariff legislation. They appeared to feel that as these measures were liable to change before passed they would await results before discussing them. At the Tower of London Art Gallery Mrs. Fuller's handbag was searched by the constabulary stationed there to thwart the attempts of militant suffragettes to injure the paintings."

Bumper Crop for Minnesota and Wisconsin

A two weeks' vacation trip through northern Wisconsin and Minnesota has convinced Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association that this year's crop will be a record breaker. "Prosperous conditions exist throughout the farming country I passed through," said Mr. Bartlett. "Farmers are agreed that this year's crop will be a record breaker. Their optimism has infused itself into every line of activity and the wonderful increase in banking business and general trade this year points to a fulfillment of this prediction."

Wisconsin Notes

Many Milwaukee and state members of the American Bankers Association will attend the thirty-ninth annual convention of the A. B. A. in Boston October 6th to 11th. The delegates from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and North and South Dakota will leave by special train over the Chicago & Northwestern road, leaving Chicago at 5:30 p. m. September 30th.

The first meeting of the Bankers Mutual Limited Casualty Company was held Thursday in the offices of Secretary George D. Bartlett, the incorporators taking initial steps toward the organization of the company. It is predicted the new company for the insurance of bank deposits will be in operation early in the fall.

H. A. Moehlenpah, president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, Secretary George D. Bartlett, and J. W. P. Lombard, president of the Milwaukee Clearing House, represented Milwaukee and Wisconsin bankers at the bankers' conference in Chicago this week to discuss the administration currency bill.

LOAN ASSOCIATION FAILS

Advices from Townsend, Del., announce the failure of the Mutual Loan Association, an organization that has been doing business along building and loan lines for years. The concern has a deficit estimated at from $5,000 to $7,000. The stockholders will hold a meeting August 25th. Trustees will either be named to wind up the affairs of the association or application will be made for the appointment of a receiver. Then an investigation will be made. President Daniel B. Maloney made this announcement: "Bad bookkeeping and the maturing of stock on inflated values caused the failure. Mr. Scott told me that he would make good all he was responsible for." It is estimated that the collectible assets will amount to about $31,000 or $32,000, while the liabilities as shown by the last published statement amount to $37,320.

HARRY YAEGER ADDRESSES CENTRAL GROUP, MONTANA

Why will directors of banks, who are generally the most representative men of a community, after taking an oath to diligently and honestly perform their duties, surrender their powers to some dominating member of the board and be content to act as figureheads?" was the question put to the Central Group of the Montana Bankers Association who met last week by Harry Yaeger, national bank examiner. "A director is not an ornament to a corporation," he continued. "He is not a fancy stone lion in front of the building, but should be the active watch dog within. His duty does not end by his securing suitable and convenient quarters and appointing officers, and hoping that the outcome will be successful.

"The banking laws of Montana as well as the national bank act include exacting requirements as to the management of banks. The directors are given the supreme powers and they are also assumed to be responsible for what goes on inside of the bank. They are required to take oath that they will perform their services to the best of their ability, yet too many of them are content to decorate the bank's advertisements, act as make-weights and then when something goes wrong think that they have done their full duties to others because they themselves are innocent of any wrongdoing.

"To the student of banking this condition of affairs is surprising. What the public supposes, and have a right to suppose, is that these men have been selected by reason of their high character for integrity, their sound judgment and the capacity for conducting the affairs of the bank safely and honestly. Yet why will these same men as bank directors do what they would not do in their personal business? Why will they consider their duties as passive, not active, when the courts hold that it is the legal duty of the directors to direct?"

"The banking business deals so largely with the development, progress and welfare of every community that its wise and safe management is properly a matter of public concern. Its proper management can only be secured through the directors, and it is likewise a matter of public concern that the directors should live up to their oaths and devote as much time to the fulfillment of their duties as is required of them to properly run the bank."

Mr. Yaeger then quoted from authorities statements to the effect that no national bank whose officers had strictly obeyed the national bank act had ever failed.

"The practically universal rule," he concluded, "is that all failures are due to excess loans, to one interest or group of interests generally owned or controlled by the officers of the bank itself."

COLORADO CONVENTION.

The twelfth annual convention of the Colorado Bankers Association will be held at the Brown Palace Hotel, Denver, on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. An attractive program is being prepared. Matters of importance relative to banking will be discussed and able speakers will address the meeting. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust, St. Louis, is expected to address the convention on "An Analysis of the Banking and Currency Bill." Gordon Jones president of the United States National at Denver will speak on "European Country Banking Systems." Mr. Jones recently returned from an extensive trip abroad where he went as a representative of Colorado to study banking as conducted in foreign countries.

There will be nothing lacking in the matter of entertainment. On Wednesday evening there will be a dinner at Lakeside and everyone will be provided with tickets to the various concessions, including the theatre. The ball-room also has been reserved for the evening. On Thursday afternoon the ladies will be entertained at a tea while in the evening for the gentlemen there will be a smoker and Dutch lunch at the Denver Athletic Club.

WALSH BANK LIQUIDATED

The defunct Chicago National Bank, known as the John R. Walsh bank and the only Walsh institution that held a national charter, has been placed in liquidation by Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane. This bank closed its doors December 18, 1905, and transferred practically all its assets of any value to the clearing house banks of Chicago, which banks assumed all liabilities of the Chicago National to depositors and other creditors. These assets have been slowly liquidated by the clearing house banks, but no resolution was formally adopted placing the Chicago National in liquidation until August 12, 1913, the resolution being effective August 15, 1913."

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

Bank clearings for the past week showed a slight gain over those of the corresponding week last year. The demand for money has been fair, with rates holding steady at 6 to 6½ per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by brokers at 6 to 6½ per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand and sold between banks at a slight discount.

St. Louis Banks Show Gain

The forty-four banks of St. Louis last week in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency reported loans and discounts of $237,064,211; cash and sight exchange of $94,709,232, and deposits of $299,195,627, according to a statement issued by W. W. Hoxton, manager of the St. Louis Clearing House. This, compared with loans and discounts June 4th, of $233,168,713; cash and sight exchange of $100,353,869 and deposits of $305,369,467. Other items are: Resources—bonds, stocks and premiums, $61,048,923; real estate and fixtures, $9,539,041; liabilities—capital, $41,800,000; surplus and profits, $38,034,546; circulation, $16,334,230; bond account, $2,400,490; foreign acceptance and bills payable, $4,596,514.

St. Louis bankers say that in some lines of trade there is a feeling of hesitation because of the severe damage to the corn crop. This condition, however, is offset largely by a bumper yield of wheat. This year's production of wheat in Missouri exceeds that of 1912 by more than 3,000,000 bushels.

Central Trust Chartered

The Central Trust of St. Louis, capitalized at $200,000, has been chartered by State Bank Commissioner Mitchell. The incorporators include F. E. Bryan, R. E. Adreon, Amedee Petring, Charles E. Smythe, Charles E. Lane and G. F. Moore, all of St. Louis; S. H. Wyss, Alton, Ill.; Ashley Cabell, Kirkwood, Mo., and Asher R. Cox, Xenia, Ill. Ashley Cabell has been elected president; G. F. Moore, vice-president, and F. E. Bryan, secretary and treasurer.

To Address Colorado Bankers

A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National, St. Louis, has been invited to address the Colorado Bankers Association next week. Mr. Wilson also is chairman of the executive committee, Clearing House Section, American Bankers Association. He does not yet know whether or not he will be able to attend.

To Boost the Ozarks

Publicity for the Ozarks of Missouri was guaranteed in a meeting of bankers of the Southwest and officials of the Frisco Railway held in St. Louis on Tuesday of last week. More than one hundred bankers attended the session and plans were adopted for the organization of an association for systematic work which is expected to result in a thorough advertising of the Ozarks through the country. The purposes of the new organization, which has adopted the name Ozark Bankers Development Committee, are to "place the Ozarks in a business-like manner before the entire country in order that those interested may be persuaded to immigrate here; to work in co-operation with the Frisco department of publicity in bringing about the most improved and advanced methods of agriculture; to co-operate with the Ozark farmers and the Frisco marketing bureau in every way that will tend to secure for Ozark producers the maximum prices for products." To carry out the purpose of the organization, five standing committees were created. They will be known as bureaus and each will have work covering a wide scope. A president and vice-president were elected and a secretary will be appointed later by the officers and the executive committee. L. M. Harris, editor of the Frisco Man and director of the Frisco publicity department, is to assist the organization's publicity committee and all Frisco officials also will help.

The officers are M. B. Clarke, West Plains, president; S. E. Trimble, Springfield, vice-president; Charles M. Knapp, Rolla, chairman of the immigration and publicity committee of which Richard Hawes and Tom Randolph of St. Louis and C. G. Hutcheson of Kansas City are members. Other committee chairmen are: Live Stock, James McMahan, Seymour; Agriculture, E. J. Greene, Mountain Grove; Dairy, P. P. Lewis, Crescent; Market, Joseph Knoerie, West Plains.

The members are E. J. Greene and J. M. Hubbard, Mountain Grove; J. B. Thomas, Willow Springs; F. W. Webb, Rolla; C. H. Burdette, Ava; J. A. Chase, Mountain Grove; Ed McKelvey, Moody; J. M. Loan Concerns Warned

Plans of St. Louis money lenders to evade the drastic law passed by the last legislature regarding loans on chattel mortgages and salaries have been thwarted by Prosecuting Attorney Howard Sidener when he called attorneys representing money lenders into his office last week and told them the law must be obeyed. Under the law, all money-lending firms must obtain licenses and file with the mayor a sworn statement giving the name of each person connected with the concern and his private and business address. The law requires a bond of $2,000 be filed with the mayor as surety the law will be obeyed. Firms complying with these requirements are allowed to charge 2 per cent interest a month. Those failing to take out a license shall not charge more than 8 per cent interest a year. If more than that is charged the law deems it prima facie evidence the concern is engaged in the chattel and salary loan business and the lenders may be prosecuted for failure to take out a license and meet the other requirements of the law. Punishment for failure to comply with any section of the law is a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 and not less than thirty days or more than three months in jail or both. The law applies to all cities of 30,000 or more inhabitants.

Praises Texas Road Work

James C. Travilla, former street commissioner, who now has charge of building eight highways in Tarrant county, Tex., to cost $800,000, spent a few days in St. Louis last week. He said:

"Work is under way on each of the roads and the expenditure is about $45,000 a month. It will be greater as we go along, for the work now on hand does not run into money as the finishing work will. Our longest roads, with Fort Worth as the base, are the Dallas and the Grapevine highways, each about thirty miles. This Dallas road will be one of the finest highways in the South. The Tarrant county people will build seventeen miles of it and the Dallas county officials about the same amount. There is keen rivalry between Dallas and Fort Worth. Dallas is waiting to see what Fort Worth does with its portion of the intercity road and proposes to build its end a little better than that of its rival.

"I travel about 1,000, sometimes 1,300 miles a month in an automobile over the roads I am building, and have taken many trips this summer over other parts of Texas. Prospects are excellent for a big cotton crop and that spells prosperity. Texas counties have voted $6,000,000 for hard roads and the people are earnestly trying to make the roads of the state strictly modern. Road building, however, has struck a snag because bonds can not be sold. The law of the state requires the interest to be limited to 5 per cent, and specifies that bonds must bring par value. Under these restrictions northern buyers will not purchase and Texans with money to loan can get 8 per cent.

Indicted for Shortage

A. C. Tindle, defaulting cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, Caruthersville, Mo., has been indicted on thirty-four counts by the grand jury. He gave bond in the sum of $8,500 to appear for trial at the November term of court. There were seventeen indictments and the bond was fixed at $500 in each case. The amount of the shortage has not been definitely stated, but it is near $400,000. The shortage was discovered in May, but Tindle has been at liberty.

Trust Company Acquires Loan Business

The Ozark States Trust of Springfield has provided for the establishment of a farm loan department through the purchase of the business of the Adams-Mosier Mortgage Company of Bolivar. The purchase was made through the instrumentality of John T. Woodruff, president, and F. E. Miller, treasurer of the Ozark States Trust. The Bolivar concern has been in business over twenty years, has more than $1,400,000 in live farm loans on its books and last year did a business in excess of $500,000. Mr. Adams and Mr. Mosier will have direct charge of the new department and will remove to Springfield.

"We feel that the addition of a large and a good farm loan business is an important item in the development of the Ozark States Trust company," said J. T. Woodruff, president. "Farmers in all sections of the country, particularly in the Ozark states, have found it difficult to get farm loans under suitable conditions. By the establishment here and development of the new department we expect to have a large field that will not only mean a development of our company but the development of this section of the state through ability of farmers to get farm loans without difficulty."

Consummation of the deal has been effected and it is the expectation of the Ozark States company that the department can be taken over, transferred and business started in Springfield not later than the first of October.

Missouri Notes

Work has been commenced on the interior and exterior decoration of the Burnes National Bank building, St. Joseph. The interior is to be done in umber and the exterior painted white and enameled.

George R. Lingle has been elected vice-president of the Prinkerhoff-Faris Trust and Savings, Clinton. The board of directors has been enlarged from five to seven, George R. Lingle and H. F. Finks being added.

A new bank, to be known as the Newton County Bank, has been organized at Neosho with a capital of $40,000.

The Bank of Blackburn has put in a new Mosler safe.

Alonzo L. Burch has resigned his position as cashier of the Bank of West Line to accept the cashiership of the Citizens Bank of Belton. Charles A. Defabaugh, who has been cashier of the Belton institution, was compelled to resign because of ill health.

T. E. Williams has resigned his position as vice-president of the Metz Banking Company.

Oklahoma Bank Reorganized

The Alva (Okla.) Security Bank, the second largest in western Oklahoma, has been purchased and reorganized with the following officers and directors: President, G. A. Harbaugh; vice-president, T. F. Fennesey; cashier, H. E. Noble. Evan Anderson is named as an additional director. The new institution will be known as the Central State, and will conduct its business in the building formerly occupied by the Security Bank.

Dallas Chapter Choses Delegates

At a recent meeting of the Dallas Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, delegates were elected to attend the national convention of the organization which will be held at Richmond, Va., September 17th-19th. The Dallas party will be about twenty-five strong and will go to the convention in a special car. Several bankers from Fort Worth will be with the party and a hard fight will be made to bring the next session to Dallas. Dallas delegates are J. L. Crosthwait, H. P. May, George F. Stroud, V. F. Hallum, Stewart D. Beckley, M. B. Keith. The alternates are G. L. Hern, Forest Mathis, W. J. Evans, A. B. Kendrick, J. W. Massie and Grady Burlew.

Houston Bank Deposits

Houston national bank deposits have shrunk under the influence of the hot weather to the extent of $3,414,087 since June 4th, leaving the six national banks of Houston, however, with the neat total of $31,658,903 in deposits on August 9th. The loans and discounts of the banks have decreased in proportion to the decrease in deposits. The decrease in bank deposits has been evenly divided between the six banks, each losing in proportion to its size.

Southwest Notes

Depositors of the Bluff City Bank, De Vall's Bluff, Ark., are receiving a first payment of 20 per cent. It is understood that the bank will be able to pay the depositors in full.

Editorial Comment

A MEASURE WORTH TRYING

Non-banking papers, of all shades of political preference, generally commend the amended draft of the currency bill now before congress. Naturally they overlook the technical features which have disturbed the skilled banker. The reading of some hundreds of editorials from the lay papers convinces one that the Chicago Tribune has skillfully summarized press opinions in an editorial headed "A Measure Worth Trying."

In reading this the banker may be assured that it fairly presents press opinion which in all ages and on all questions is a fairly accurate register of public opinion. The Tribune says:

It is natural that the bankers should press hard for a modification of the large powers vested by the Owen-Glass bill in the appointive federal reserve board. It is possible to argue that the greater initiative should be given to the advisory council, while the official board powers should be mainly of veto and regulation.

But this is contrary to the theory which the administration firmly and perhaps wisely holds as to control of the new system, and the bankers should realize that they will be granted no such concession as some of them are demanding on this point.

The question, therefore, is: Does the public-spirited, intelligent mass of banking opinion intend to turn its back on the proposed system or attempt to obstruct its establishment because of difference of opinion on the composition and powers of the federal board?

The Tribune devoutly hopes no such mistake will be made.

The Owen-Glass bill with the modifications in the reserve provisions recommended by business men and bankers of all sections, and with the reasonable increase of profits allowed to subscribers to the reserve banks, is probably as good a piece of legislation for banking reform as could be hoped for from this or any other congress. Its general outlines are approved by every informed critic, and the provisions which at first threatened to prevent the banks from coming in have been amended. The bill has gone through a drastic criticism, and the Tribune believes should be passed at this session.

It should not only be passed. It should be received hospitably by the banks and given a fair and thorough trial. Doubtless the system set up will not prove to be perfect. It would not be perfect if every banker's objection were acted upon. It can be perfected only in the light of experience, and the important thing, since it is not seriously defective, is to set it at work and better it as it shows its defects. To reform the delicate relations and processes of our finance is a tremendously difficult task, and no man can predict how details of a proposed system will act. We have a well considered plan. Let us try it loyally.

The objections to the federal board provision may or may not be in principle sound, but they are to a considerable extent academic. The dangers of partisan domination and of unscrupulous or ill-advised use of powers are so reduced by the device of an advisory council that they offer no excuse for radical opposition. If the reserve banks of the twelve districts select the right type of representatives the council will deserve and develop legitimate influence over the board and a public support which will make its powers fully adequate to the protection of the rights and legitimate interests of banking investment and to the protection of the financial and business interests of the country at large.

Above is to be taken as non-banker in its tone. The A. B. A. Currency Commission at the Chicago conference with the presidents of 187 clearing houses and forty-seven presidents of state bankers associations will present the banker side of the question to the country. This momentous caucus of financiers will convene in Chicago August 22d and will present congress with, not an ultimatum, but the best logic at the command of the profession. Every state organization will be officially present and every important clearing house. The members of the A. B. A. federal legislative commission and the currency commission will conduct the meeting.

UNIFORM BLUE SKY LAWS

Some of the "Blue Sky" laws are so drastic and oppressive that the Investment Bankers Association, composed of the best bond and investment houses in the country, has decided to fight the worst of them in the courts. Where they are reasonably fair to the dealer amendments will be asked for as the defects show up in operation. This youthful but powerful association is not opposed to the principle involved. On the contrary it invites and welcomes legislation of a legitimate and protective nature.

Of this we are assured by President George B. Caldwell, in large degree the founder of the organization. Practically every convention of bankers, held this year or last, has indorsed the doctrine promulgated by the then banking commissioner, J. N. Dolley of Kansas. From the official bulletin, published by the I. B. A., we learn that eighteen states now have such statutes. The first to act was Kansas, whose law served as a model for other legislatures. After Kansas came Arkansas, California, Florida, Idaho, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont and West Virginia. Although the intent of these bills is identical—the protection of the public against unsound investments—the regulations imposed are different.

It would be a wise bit of constructive effort if the investment bankers at their forthcoming Chicago convention could design—or start to work on it—a genuine "Blue Sky" bill which will protect the investor and the legitimate dealer while barring out the shark and the imposter. Mr. Dolley has offered to assist in every way at his command. The remaining thirty states would adopt such a bill and the new act could be substituted in most of those states where defective bills have been passed.

But few of the "Blue Sky" laws are really oppressive, probably none of them prohibitive. Yet many of them could be vastly improved and every state wants to make the path of the imposter as difficult as possible. In this the I. B. A. can help. A federal law, of course, would be uniform but is not considered advisable. As nearly as possible each state ought to be in a position to handle its internal affairs without interposition by the national government. "Blue Sky" legislation will be enacted in many more states when the next legislatures meet. To get the best results there should be uniformity in prohibition. The house of governors has been appealed to but the foundation work should be the task of the ablest minds in the Investment Bankers Association of America.

ONE FIELD WHICH IS OVERWORKED

Commercial houses, manufacturers and local associations and chambers of commerce have about reached the conclusion that many of the promoters of national leagues, associations and chambers of commerce have overworked their contributors. Chicago is the real if not the charter home of a dozen such. Ambitious men in some cases and mild grafters in others are the prime movers. They have laid a heavy tax upon business which has been reflected upon the consumer. Every line of trade almost has been exploited. Where is the end?

The currency and the tariff bills have brought from their hiding scores of such organizations, trying in some way to justify their existence and to pave the way for further contributions or assessments. Many of the so-called "national" leagues, associations and chambers of commerce are unworthy of support. They have been grafted on to every worthy public movement from good roads and better farming to labor legislation and the tariff. They always are collecting dues and "sustaining" memberships, the latter being very profitable to the promoter. At the present moment this question evidently is present in the minds of not a few persons interested in the problem of such associations. It can hardly be doubted that a distinct limit is found to the extent and success to be had in pushing commercial organization. Conditions are quite different—and necessarily so—from those which exist in foreign countries where chambers of commerce are practically an official government mechanism. In this country the development naturally takes a different line of growth. It is doubtful whether that growth can be simulated or developed from the top. Local associations of commercial interests are those which should most carefully be tended and safeguarded. If the "Blue Sky" principle of legislation could be applied and publicity enforced it would save thousands which annually are paid to supposed successful lobbyists but which in reality go to the officers of the associations as salary and expense, many of the latter being disguised as "secret." Fake associations, leagues and chambers of commerce should be cut off your 1914 list of "worthy objects."

FEAR OF BANKS

The case of Louis Batke and his lifetime savings proves conclusively that the fear of banks often leads to crime. Batke and his good wife had saved up a sum to pay for their home. They feared the banks and tried every possible hiding place about their humble abode. A fifteen-year-old son was in the secret for the money and the parents' solicitude about it provided a temptation which the lad could not resist. Now the son is a fleeing criminal against the law and his own parents and the money is gone. There is room for the McWilliam series of Thrift lectures. There would be room for an additional educational movement by the A. B. A. on the very broadest lines to free the humble toiler from his fear of banks. The bank of which the lowly wage earner knows the most—the private bank "run" by a fellow countryman—is the real cause of the fear, and the open, universal remedy is better bank regulation, insuring solvency, honesty and capability, with known capital and responsibility. With these insured the rest will be easy.

H. J. Josey, a banker and large property owner of Texas and Oklahoma, spent several days in the town of Lincoln, Wash., recently looking over the country with a view to establishing a bank.

The Park Bank and Trust Company, Memphis, Tenn., opened for business recently.

RULES GIVEN OUT FOR CROP FUNDS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—Acting Secretary of the Treasury Williams made public to-day regulations governing the deposit of government funds in national banks to facilitate the movement of crops. Mr. Williams stated that the names of the banks selected and the amounts assigned will not be made public, at least at this time.

The regulations provide that depositories act as mediums of distribution in furnishing funds to the localities in need of them for transporting and marketing the crops. As security the banks must deposit with the treasurer of the United States bonds of the United States government equal to at least 10 per cent of the deposit. The remaining 90 per cent may be secured by high class state, municipal and other bonds approved by the secretary, accepted as security at 75 per cent of their market value. Prime commercial paper indorsed by the bank and approved by the secretary, will be accepted at 65 per cent of its face value.

The bank desiring to be a depository must furnish a list of the securities other than United States bonds to the securities committee. When such list is approved three copies must be forwarded to the secretary of the treasury, with a copy of the resolution of the directors authorizing the request. Upon compliance, the United States treasurer or an assistant will be directed to deposit funds.

The deposit of funds, except where the secretary may change it, will be in two equal installments. In the southern states it is proposed to deposit 50 per cent in August and 50 per cent in September.

All deposits will be payable on demand and without previous notice, but 25 per cent of the total deposit will be withdrawn by the government on December 15, 1913; 25 per cent on January 15, 1914; 25 per cent on February 15, 1914, and 25 per cent on March 1, 1914. Banks may return the deposits earlier. The depository bank will pay 2 per cent interest on the average balance.

NEW ARKANSAS BANK

The Citizens Bank of Pottsville, Ark., has been organized with a capital of $15,000. R. C. Morton is president and Neil Bell is cashier. The directors are Roy Falls, J. B. Sinclair, E. H. Teeter, E. R. Jones, T. A. Matthews, A. H. Boggess, J. H. Oates and J. V. Allmon.

The Bank of McRoberts, Ky., with a capital of $25,000, has filed articles of incorporation. The incorporators are J. E. Buckingham of Paintsville; J. N. Camden of Versailles; G. P. Watson, of Claremont, W. Va., and W. S. Perry of Jenkins.

MONTANA BANKERS ELECT OFFICERS

The Montana Bankers Association, which met on Friday and Saturday of last week in annual convention, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, D. R. Peeler, Kalispell; vice-president, C. W. Butler, Miles City; secretary-treasurer, Mark Skinner, Great Falls, re-elected. The district vice-presidents are F. J. Lange, Helena; G. U. Hill, Butte; E. A. Hannah, Philipsburg; Howard Smart, Stevensville; G. G. Wheat, Virginia City; C. P. Tooley, Two Dot; W. J. Brubaker, Terry; James Eckford, Choteau; L. F. Hare, Three Forks; T. T. Taylor, Lewistown; George Noffsinger, Somers; L. N. Boileau, Chinook; Charles Spear, Billings; J. B. Kearns, Townsend. State Bank Examiner H. S. Magraw was elected an honorary member of the association, while a legislative committee was appointed consisting of S. McKennan, A. C. Johnson, T. A. Marlow, R. O. Kaufman, all of Helena, and A. W. Warr of Lewistown.

A resolution was adopted recommending that each bank contribute ten dollars a year, for two years, to create a fund to pay the salary and expenses of a rural life helper in connection with the state department of education. It was urged that the legislative committee take up the matter of a new banking code, with a view of having it complete and in readiness for action by the next session of the legislative assembly. Bankers also were urged to encourage diversified farming as more profitable, and the Montana representatives to the A. B. A. convention to support the "Lands resolution," relating to the organization of a national banking section of the American Bankers Association. The Montana association went on record as in favor of one cent letter postage.

CURRENCY AT THIS SESSION

Washington, D. C., Aug. 20.—A rattling speech by Chairman Carter Glass which swept aside the insurgent opposition to the currency bill in the house democratic caucus, and a personal pledge by Chairman Owen of the senate committee to President Wilson that he had not deserted the administration bill, but would fight for its immediate passage, made the administration more confident than ever to-night that the measure will be written into law at the present session.

The building of the State Bank of Weldon, DeWitt county, was destroyed by a fire which consumed most of the business section of that village.

A charter has been issued to the Paisley (Ore.) National, capital $25,000.

Cleveland

Central States News Letter

Cincinnati

The reports of Cleveland banks in response to the call of the comptroller of the currency show combined deposits for the seven national banks of $84,336,000, loans and discounts, $60,945,000 and cash and due from banks $33,810,000. The latter item is exactly 40 per cent of the total of individual and bank deposit liabilities. The previous high record in deposits was $84,978,000 in April of this year. More new accounts have been opened in Cleveland banks this year than ever before.

Private Banks in Ohio

Private banks under the new statute must use the word "unincorporated" on all their stationery as well as in advertisements was the decision of Attorney-General Hogan in an opinion to State Banking Superintendent Lattanner recently. This applies to deposit slips used inside the bank. In fine, wherever the banking institution uses the word bank it must use the word "unincorporated." Mr. Lattanner also was informed that after a bank has been liquidated by the department it must be dissolved as a corporation. There is no special method provided by law for banks, but the attorney-general believes that the general statute relating to corporations will apply. Unclaimed deposits remaining after liquidation of banks are to be deposited to the credit of the state banking department and held until the general assembly makes provision for their final disposition. The state bank superintendent has come across a number of these deposits and asked for advice concerning them.

Bank to Be Dissolved

Dissolution of the West Side Dime Savings Bank, Columbus, has been determined upon by Supt. Emory Lattanner of the state department of banks. Beginning on Thursday of last week depositors of that institution will receive every cent that is due them upon presentation of pass books and no further deposits will be accepted. Mr. Lattanner's action has been given the approval of the banks' stockholders. This was necessitated by a condition culminating from a series of unfortunate circumstances. The state superintendent called the representatives of twelve of the larger banks of the city following an examination of the affairs of the West Side institution and advised that dissolution was better for the city and would fully conserve the interests of depositors. The bank's train of misfortune began with the failure of the Union National of Columbus. Then the president, William Little, was driven to suicide. Next an assistant cashier made away with $10,500 and last of all came the March flood.

Appoints Private Bank Examiner

State Bank Superintendent Emory W. Lattanner of Ohio has appointed as the first private bank examiner under the law providing for supervision of the business of all concerns in the state using the names "bank" or "bankers," Oscar Miller, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Millersport. Under the new law all concerns using the term "bank" must file reports with the state department and be approved or they cannot transact business in Ohio after January 1, 1914. The law is intended to provide regulations for private banking institutions, but it becomes operative gradually, so that this class of banks may have full opportunity to arrange their affairs to conform to new conditions. In effect, this class of institutions will not come under all of the provisions of the new act until July 1, 1914. They are required, however, to make reports to the department on and after September 1, 1913. Limitations provided for the operation of private banks do not go as far under this measure as in the laws fixing regulations for the state banks and trust companies. It is to be the purpose of the banking department in supervising their operation to safeguard, in a liberal way, the interests of depositors without altering the private banking scheme any more than may be necessary. Since the enactment of the law private bankers in all sections of the state have given it their approval.

Group Eight at Cadiz.

Group Eight, Ohio Bankers Association, met at Chautauqua Park, Cadiz, on Thursday of last week. The meeting was called to order by I. M. Taggart, chairman. Rev. Geo. Leslie Davis gave the invocation and Major David Cunningham, the welcoming address, to which Mr. Taggart responded. Reports of officers were then heard, followed by an address by Hon. Ralph Cole, Findlay, Ohio. Hon. M. A. Warnes spoke on "Recent Legislation Affecting State Banks;" Superintendent of Banks Emory Lattanner, "What an Examiner Would Like to Find in a Bank;" Prof. Chas. E. Thorne, Ohio Agricultural Station, Wooster, "The Redemption of a Run-Down Farm." Officers then were elected for the ensuing year. An informal dinner was served in the Auditorium at 5 o'clock, at which John Criley of Cleveland was toastmaster. Responses were given by S. D. Fitton of Hamilton, president of the Ohio Bankers Association, and S. B. Rankin of South Charleston, secretary.

Will Be Cashier Bloomville Bank.

Lloyd H. Smith, assistant cashier of the Tiffin (Ohio) National, has resigned to become cashier of the new bank being organized at Bloomville and which, it is expected, will open about September 1st. The new bank will be a state institution. N. R. France, the chief mover in the enterprise, probably will be president.

Head of Two Failed Banks Dies.

George A. Klahr, president of two failed banks, the Peoples Bank at Sycamore and the Exchange Bank at Bloomville, which went into the hands of receivers last week, died Tuesday from illness brought on by worry over his financial difficulties. Simultaneously with his death the Sycamore Grain and Milling Company, in which Klahr was interested, failed. It is claimed the banks which Klahr conducted became involved through carrying the mill when the concern was in bad shape. Klahr built the opera house, telephone building and almost all the other business blocks in Sycamore. His bank held funds of all the business men and of the township. The failure will amount to many thousands.

Pittsburgh Nationals

The total deposits of the national banks of Pittsburgh on August 9th last were $188,576,000 exclusive of about $31,000,000 locked up in the closed First-Second National. Including this amount the total shows a decrease of about $9,000,000 since June 4th, but is practically the same as September 4th last year, excluding the amounts then held by the First National and the Second National.

Pennsylvania Bank Has New Officers

Since 1897 the Tidouite (Pa.) Savings has lost by death three presidents—Jahu Hunter in 1897, L. L. Hunter in 1902, and H. H. Cumings in 1913. This coupled with the death of W. J. Elder, cashier, a few weeks ago, left the bank without officers. During the last week, however, J. L. Hunter has been named as president; Lillian Hunter as vice-president and Frank C. Parshall, as cashier. Mr. Parshall is thoroughly familiar with the bank's business, having for some years been the bookkeeper.

Plan Three Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollar Stock Increase

Stockholders of the Detroit (Mich.) Savings Bank have under consideration recommendations by the bank's directors that the capital stock of that institution, the oldest bank in Michigan, be increased from $400,000 to $750,000 and its surplus from $400,000 to $750,000. President D. C. Delamater has called a special meeting of the stockholders for October 2d, when action will be taken on the recommendations of the directors concerning the proposed increase in capitalization and the method by which it is to be attained. Under the plan favored by the directors $300,000 par value of the new issue of stock will be offered pro rata to the present stockholders at $150 a share and the remaining $50,000, par value, will be placed in the hands of trustees to be sold at not less than $225 to purchasers, whom they shall select, who are not already connected with the bank.

Detroit Banks Gain In Deposits.

Detroit banks and trust companies had total deposits of $198,079,000, according to their statements of condition on August 9th. This is an increase of $6,609,000 over the deposits June 4th, the date of the last previous call, and an increase of $18,596,000 compared with Sept. 4, 1912, the corresponding call of a year ago.

Buys Branch Bank

New Madison, Ohio, interests have purchased the controlling interest in the Farmers Banking Company of Eldorado, Ohio, which has been operated as a branch of the Farmers Banking Company of New Madison. The Eldorado bank will be organized into an independent institution with a capital of $25,000, surplus $2,000.

Woman Bank Cashier

The board of directors of the First National, Petersburg, Ind., have chosen Miss Nellie Frank as cashier. She is only twenty-three years old and is consequently the youngest national bank cashier in the state. She is a granddaughter of Governor Williams and the board is said to predict that she will be one of the best cashiers the bank has ever had.

Terra Haute Banks Show Gains

Reports submitted by the three national banks of Terre Haute, Ind., show a splendid increase in the volume of business done since three months ago. Deposits have increased nearly $350,000.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

"Banks of Minneapolis were never in a better position to aid in the movement of the crop and take care of legitimate business than they are to-day," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, after seeing the reports showing deposits of $107,739,031. "Although the banks are showing a slight decrease in deposits, the call was made at a time of the year when the railroads have drawn heavily upon their deposits. The statement is not a fair comparison to that of September 4th a year ago. I predict that in September this year the deposits will show a marked increase."

Bankers of Minneapolis are unanimous in that the banks were never stronger as to capital, surplus and profits than they are at this time, and that they are all ready to aid in the crop movement. The general deposits are far above those of a year ago, but there are no larger balances of any concerns or railroads to inflate them. It is expected that by September 1st these railroads again will have large deposits.

Large Gain in City Assessment

The total assessed valuation of Minneapolis real estate, personal property and moneys and credits for 1913 has been estimated at $264,471,530, an increase of $12,000,000 over the 1912 assessment. The moneys and credit items at the time of the estimation was incomplete. City Assessor G. L. Fort has announced that the total real estate assessment is $168,727,500 and personal property $54,744,030; moneys and credits, $41,000,000. New structures erected since the 1912 assessment have added $4,928,810 to the real estate valuations this year.

See $162,000,000 Gain in Business.

St. Paul's business for the first eight months of 1913 will be about $162,000,000 greater than for the same period of 1912, according to St. Paul bankers. Bank clearings for the first eight months of 1912 amounted to $361,137,888.23, while the first eight months of this year will be just about $334,601,542.71 or only $26,536,345.52 less. Bankers declare this showing is remarkable in view of the various bank consolidations last year. "The consolidation of our banks," said Kenneth Clark, former president Merchants National, "has cut off about $5,000,000 a week in clearings and business undoubtedly is many millions of dollars greater in St. Paul this year than in 1912."

To Go With East St. Paul Bank

Andrew J. Newgren, who resigned his position as deputy city comptroller on August 1st to take up the practice of law, has accepted a position as cashier of the East St. Paul State bank and will assume his new duties September 1st. Mr. Newgren and Adolph Anderson of this city are now touring Yellowstone National park and expect to visit the Pacific coast before returning to St. Paul.

New St. Paul Bank Building.

Preliminary work on the new $1,000,000 Merchants National Bank building, St. Paul, was started last week. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy January 1, 1915.

Duluth's Bank Deposits Larger.

Statements issued by Duluth national banks at the last call from the comptroller of currency, August 9th, show a healthy increase in deposits over the amount reported in the last call, June 4th. The four national banks of Duluth reported a total of $24,787,343.10 in deposits. At the last call the total was $24,447,218.62. The increase is $340,124.48. The bank deposits of the four banks and the deposits at the last call are as follows: First National, June 4th, $10,557,211.01; August 9th, $10,828,619.15; City National, June 4th, $3,543,643.86; August 9th, $3,467,866.86; Northern National, June 4th, $1,531,947.81, August 9th, $1,618,245.54; American Exchange National, June 4th, $8,814,415.94, August 9th, $8,872,610.55. State banks also report substantial increases in deposits.

The reports show that Duluth's financial institutions are in an exceptionally strong position and are abundantly able to take care of the crop movement and other heavy fall requirements.

New Oronoco Bank Elects Officers

J. H. Fifield has been elected president; L. J. Baker, vice-president and E. Grant Brooks, cashier of the Oronoco State, a new institution which soon will receive its charter. It is capitalized at $10,000 with $2,000 surplus already paid in. The directors are J. H. Fifield, L. J. Baker, E. Grant Brooks, Chas. Ihrke, A. H. Brockway, G. H. Olson, Chas. E. Postier, W. W. Churchill and Wm. Kolb.

Minnesota Notes

A movement has been started by sixty or more farmers at Greenbush, to organize a farmers co-operative bank. It is expected to begin business October 1st.

C. L. Bishop has resigned as secretary and manager of the Farmers Trust, Fessenden, N. D., to assume charge of the Farmers Loan and Trust at Winona, a newly organized company with a capital of $50,000.

St. Cloud banks have total deposits of $3,051,941.96, an average of $254.32 per capita.

The First State at Grand Rapids has started judgment proceedings against the city for $14,000 worth of outstanding orders held by that institution. The bank at one time held $30,000 worth of orders, but of this amount, $16,000 was recently taken up. The orders draw 6 per cent interest from the date of issue, and in addition, the bank is permitted a discount of 2 per cent when they are cashed, making a total of 8 per cent interest if taken up within the year. The members of the council claim that the bank will embarrass the city's credit by attempting to force payment at this time.

A charter for the First State of Oak Park has been applied for by Ferdinand Peters of Cold Springs, who will be president. M. Peters will be vice-president, and Frank Pallanch, cashier.

Wayne Norton, cashier of the State Bank at Winnebago, has resigned, to take effect September 1st. He will identify himself with the Gilmore-Thayer Company, dealers in lumber and fuel, Rockford.

The rebuilding of the office room of the First National, Fergus Falls, has been completed.

L. C. Simons, president of the Farmers National Bank of Red Lake Falls is now on a tour of Europe in company with L. C. Hanson of Thief River Falls.

Roy A. Young of Calumet has been made manager and vice-president of the Citizens National of Houghton.

Fargo Banks Do Not Need Money

Fargo banks have not asked for any of the $50,000,000 as its share of government money to aid in moving the crops and do not expect to receive any portion of the vast amount being distributed by Secretary McAdoo. H. W. Gearey of the Merchants National bank stated last week that their bank had not asked for money and that they did not expect to do so as they had plenty of funds on hand. F. A. Irish of the First National stated that if the weather would allow the farmers to thresh their crops they would not require any funds to aid in moving them. He stated that the big wheat centers needed funds for the purpose of paying for the grain, but as it would be sold here such large amounts were not needed.

Half Billion Increase

There is an approximate increase of $510,000,000 this year in assessment of farm lands over the state of South Dakota by tax commission from that of last year, when the total was but $219,995,000 for all counties. With eight counties not yet in this year the total assessment is $635,537,000, and the eight counties not yet reported last year were assessed about $30,000,000, so that if the percentage holds good this year the total assessment for farm lands in South Dakota will be approximately $730,000,000.

North Dakota Banks in Fine Condition

North Dakota banks are in excellent condition to handle the state's crops this fall. A. I. Hunter, cashier of the First National, Grand Forks, has declared that he did not believe it would be necessary for the banks to call for outside money to handle the big grain crop of 1913. "The statements of the banks, just issued, are remarkably favorable," said Mr. Hunter. "They show deposits that are practically as large as though shown under the June 4th call, and this condition is very unusual."

Prosper Bank Opened

The State Bank of Prosper, N. D., opened its doors for business on Thursday of last week. Harold E. Johnson, who has been with the Scandinavian-American of Fargo, is cashier. The bank has a capital of $10,000.

Northwest Notes

Fargo is to become the residential city of both the North Dakota national bank examiners of this state. C. H. Anheier, one of the appointees, is a pioneer resident of that city, and F. S. Graham is removing from Oakes to Fargo because of the better train facilities.

G. E. Fulkerson has resigned as assistant cashier of the First National, Hampden, N. D., to accept the cashiership of the Farmers State at Halliday, a new bank.

The State Bank of Crystal, N. D., began business on Friday of last week with $15,000 capital.

Andy H. Jones, a former North Dakota banker who had served four years of a sentence of ten years for violation of the national banking laws, was released on parole from the federal prison at Leavenworth Monday.

The First State of Denton, Denton, N. D., soon will be opened with the following officers: Albert Johnson, of Valley City, N. D., president; J. Gamble, of Rhame, N. D., vice-president; S. Brown, of Rhame, N. D., cashier.

Halliday, N. D., is to have a new bank, according to articles of incorporation filed last week. Adam Hannah, of Minneapolis; P. L. Arms, of Goldenvalley, and R. N. Harmson, of Krem, are the incorporators. G. E. Fulkerson of Hampden will be cashier. The bank will be known as the Farmers State.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the State Bank of Waverly, Waverly, S. D., with a capital of $10,000. Incorporators are John Swenson, J. A. Thompson, J. P. Anthony, T. M. Anthony, A. T. Lenertz.

Articles have been filed for the German-American Alliance of South Dakota, the incorporators being leading German-Americans of the state. The headquarters of the association are at Sioux Falls. The incorporators are Hans Demuth, Sioux Falls; Herman Steubing, Sioux Falls; C. M. Knodt, Hartford; John S. Mueller, Parkston; Rev. H. Reinhart, J. F. Paul Gross, Eureka.

That the banks of Dell Rapids, S. D., are dodging the taxes of their undivided profits, by not listing them in their sworn statements to the assessor of their holding, is the complaint which has been filed with the board of county commissioners. The complaint sets forth that while the banks in their sworn statements, list undivided profits, they fail to include this item in the sworn statement to the assessor.

C. A. Fountain, cashier of the Commercial Bank, Watertown, S. D., has been elected president of the Bankers and Merchants Fire Insurance Company, Minneapolis. Mr. Fountain will continue to make his home in Watertown and will retain his position as cashier of the Commercial.

George J. Crilly, cashier of the Bonesteel (S. D.) State, was seriously injured last week by being thrown from a horse he was riding while rounding up cattle on the Crilly ranch. His collarbone was badly fractured and his body and back bruised and lacerated.

The First State of Buffalo, Buffalo, S. D., is to have a new bank building soon.

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the Stockmans State Bank at Capa, S. D., to take the place of the bank which failed several months ago. The new bank is capitalized at $10,000, and the incorporators are J. E. Thorne, A. J. Bloom, A. J. Bunker, N. W. Edwards, Erick Kleven, M. C. Sherwood.

The Aberdeen (S. D.) National now is occupying its splendid new $75,000 building. J. C. Bassett is president of this thriving institution.

The capital stock of the Tabor (S. D.) State has been increased from $15,000 to $25,000.

A. T. Westrom, formerly of Two Harbors, and who for a number of years worked in a bank in Mackintosh, S. D., has been elected cashier of the First State Bank of Grasston, Minn. He reports that the crops in the vicinity of Grasston are very good and the business outlook favorable.

John F. Trubmo, cashier of the Farmers State, Bridger, Mont., was chosen as president of the Southern Group of the Montana Bankers Association at Billings on Tuesday of last week, succeeding Lee Mains of Billings. W. E. Waldron, of the Yellowstone National of Billings, was selected as vice-president.

The new Circle (Mont.) State, of which H. A. Jensen is cashier, formally opened its doors last week.

W. E. Arnot will be succeeded as cashier of the First National, Conrad, Mont., by H. A. Bruenn of Willow City, N. D.

Stevensville, Mont., is to have a new bank to be called the Farmers State of Stevensville. It is incorporated for $20,000. The directors are P. L. Cochran, Stevensville; Elmer Johnson, Stevensville; B. L. Logan, Stevensville; Dr. F. D. Pease and Joe Danigren, Missoula. Dr. E. C. Anderson of Missoula is also interested in the bank.

Frank H. Drinkenberg, who has been president of the First National, Hamilton, Mont., has been succeeded by E. T. Kaster, former president and organizer of the Union (Ore.) National. Mr. Drinkenberg will continue as a director.

Butte bankers declare that Montana will without doubt be able to handle its enormously increased crops of this year without calling for assistance from the federal government under the new government loan policy of the treasury department.

Tallahassee, Florida, City Bonds to Be Sold

The City Clerk of the City of Tallahassee, Florida, will receive, until noon of September 11th, 1913, sealed bids for $32,000.00 of 5 per cent. 50-year bonds to be issued by said city for doing certain additional street paving; also for $4,000.00 of 5 per cent. 50-year bonds to be issued by said city for relaying the water mains on the streets to be paved; also for $9,000.00 of 5 per cent. 50-year bonds to be issued by said city for improving and extending the gas, electric light and water works plants. Denomination of said bonds to be $1,000. Bonds to bear interest from August 1st, 1913. Interest payable February 1st and August 1st. Principal and interest payable at Chemical National Bank of City of New York. Bonds to be redeemable at any time after ten years from date thereof. No bid of less than par and accrued interest, nor unless accompanied by certified check for 2 per cent. of the amount of the bonds bid for, will be entertained. Bids may be made for all or any part thereof. Bonds have been validated by decree of the Circuit Court of the Second Judicial Circuit of Florida, in and for Leon county, dated the 22nd day of May, 1913. The City Council reserve the rights to reject any and all bids.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF SEATTLE

Union Trust Company, with capital and surplus of $750,000, possesses a line of deposits in excess of $3,700,000. Officers are as follows: President, James D. Hoge; vice-presidents, J. D. Lowman and A. B. Stewart; cashier, N. B. Solner; assistant cashiers, Rollin Sanford and J. O. Shinn.

Des Moines, August 22.—Iowans have been wearing the smile that won't come off since the rains of the past fortnight have insured a good corn crop. Just what the effect of the drouth was on this yield it is not possible to estimate but it is probable that in southern Iowa the damage was noticeable while in northern Iowa it was slight. As was stated in my letter of last week, the figures of 377,000,000 bushels submitted by George A. Wells of the western grain dealers are probably as near accurate as may be obtained at this time. Mr. Wells maintains that he has had no occasion to change his figures since the rain which insured for Iowa her always reliable crop output.

For Movement of Crops

National banks of Des Moines will receive from $600,000 to $1,000,000 from Secretary McAdoo of the United States treasury. This is the word brought back to Iowa by Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National and Homer A. Miller of the Iowa National. John McHugh of Sioux City also attended the conference with Secretary McAdoo and announces a similar amount for that city. From the latter point it is expected to use this money in the states of Nebraska and South Dakota. Iowa bankers are still of the opinion that they do not need the money but that they can use it in their business.

Iowa Nationals

Deposits in the national banks of the cities of Iowa show a general falling off in reports to the comptroller of the currency following the call for conditions on August 9th. As this is the off season of the year bankers are wearing an "I should worry" smile and refusing to be downhearted. Farmers are not selling just now and the country bankers are calling upon the city banks for money. In Des Moines the Valley National shows a gain since the call of June 4th of $100,000. The other three show losses approximately as follows: Iowa National, $100,000; Des Moines National, $200,000; Citizens National, $50,000. Within a month or so the deposits will again pick up and the next call should make a very favorable showing.

Home Well Guarded

Neighbors of A. F. Dawson, well known Davenport banker, were at first perplexed and later suspicious of two men who were seen hovering around the Dawson residence while the family was absent one night recently. After watching the antics of the pair, they turned in a call to the police station and two policemen were sent out. The latter began to shadow the mysterious pair. For half an hour they trailed them and then, all at once, the four came face to face under a street lamp. And strangely enough, the two men of mystery were policemen also. After exchanging cigars, it was all explained. Mr. Dawson had asked two members of the day force to watch the house while the family was on an excursion. The members of the night force did not know it. But anyway, all are satisfied that the Dawson home

Trio of Yeggs at Work

Three men believed by Detective Gust Patek of the Burns Detective Agency to be some of the bank robbers he is seeking had an exciting brush with officers at West Liberty one night last week. Mayor L. W. Swem of the town was shot in the arm and abdomen and one shot struck him in the eye but apparently the yeggs were shooting buckshot and it is thought the mayor will recover. The yeggs had battered down the door of the postoffice and had exploded two charges of nitroglycerin in trying to force an entrance to the postoffice safe. Mayor Swem, who was sleeping down town, was awakened and summoned assistance. The yeggs shot out the surrounding lights, then turned upon the mayor. In the excitement following the wounding of the latter the men escaped. A few hours later an attempted robbery was reported at Wapello. It is the opinion of Detective Patek that Wapello was having a visit from the same trio.

Pass Resolutions Denouncing Bill.

Some of the commercial clubs in Iowa are getting interested in the Glass banking reform bill. The Commercial Exchange at Burlington passed resolutions denouncing the scheme and it is expected that other Iowa booster organizations will do likewise. The Burlington resolutions declare that the mandatory transfer of several hundred millions of dollars from the banks to the federal banks will enormously reduce the loaning power of the former. Also that "the ability of banks in the United States not only to extend new and better credit facilities but maintain unimpaired the credit facilities they are now able to extend will be gradually reduced. This is by far the most important and serious contingency arising under the present system." Furthermore the resolutions declare that banks will do the best they can but that it will not be possible for them to save business from danger under the proposed new system.

Iowa Notes

R. H. Moore, president of the First National of Traer, was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane by twenty of his friends as a token of appreciation of the fact that he has been in the banking business for forty years. Mr. Moore began the banking business in Traer with $1,000 capital and a dry goods box for a counter. But he prospered and now he is president of the heaviest capitalized bank in Tama county.

E. R. Rich, solicitor for a Des Moines farm paper, is accused of raising a check for 98 cents to 98 dollars and he is in trouble. It seems that the check was given him by a subscriber who forgot to write the word "cents" after the 98 and that is how it chanced that Rich was led astray. He was arrested at Sioux City.

The big state fair which opened Wednesday of this week and the Knights of Pythias grand lodge last week brought hundreds of Iowa bankers to Des Moines. Some of those noted before the rush began are as follows: President A. C. Savage, Adair State, Adair; President J. B. Elliott, Knoxville, National; Cashier O. L. Wright, Marion County National, Knoxville; President C. J. Specht, Carroll Trust and Savings; Cashier J. E. Reid, Altoona Savings; Cashier H. A. Early, First National, Cambridge; Cashier and Mrs. Martin Troup, Peoples State, Maxwell; Cashier and Mrs. A. C. Heath, First National, Montezuma; President R. F. Graeber, Sheldahl Savings; Cashier W. G. Stanley, Indianola Bank; President F. W. Reinig, Lorimor Bank; Cashier B. F. Heiney, Citizens, Pleasantville; President T. E. Johns, State of Prairie City; Cashier O. M. Thatcher, Luther Savings; President J. M. Pierson, Bank of Runnels; President M. M. Reynolds, Guthrie County National, Panora; President E. D. Bower, Citizens of Paton.

The Drake Park has moved into its fine new building in University Place, Des Moines. Grant McPherrin, cashier of the Central State, is president and chief owner of the institution.

Two new assistant cashiers were created by the directors of the Central State of Des Moines last week. John B. McDougal, note teller, and Frank C. Ash, teller, were advanced by the directors. Both are very popular with customers of the bank and were well worthy of promotion.

It seems that Al Miller, former president of the Home Savings and now actively identified with the Des Moines Trust Company, was the victim of a jokester. This latter caused it to be circulated and published that Al was the father of a ten and a half pound daughter. The statement is vigorously denied by the gentleman referred to but the origin of the canard is still unexplained.

The Security National and the Mason City Loan and Trust have moved into their handsome new building and the patrons are admiring the bank and fixtures in copious numbers. The interior fixings are of the finest and most modern. The two concerns are capitalized for $100,000 each and are made up of men prominent in financial circles. Of the bank, John A. Senneff is president; S. A. Schneider, vice-president; Tim Donavan, vice-president; E. W. Clark, cashier. Of the loan company, Senneff is president; N. C. Kottchell and Julius Kuntz, vice-presidents; S. A. Schneider, secretary; E. W. Clark, treasurer, and Mark E. Geeting assistant cashier. The new building is the first door south of the City National building.

W. B. Pedelty and M. J. Nolan of the Peoples Savings at Mason City have acquired the 400 acre farm of John Pedelty, one of the best known farms in Cerro Gordo county. The price paid was $60,000.

The Jackson State Savings at Maquoketa is going to be remodeled and put into shape as the finest bank structure in that section of the country. The building was originally built in 1876. The plans contemplate several months of labor. C. A. Leach is president of the bank,

A. L. Cook is vice-president and R. E. Stephens cashier.

It is stated that a new bank is to be organized at Elma to be known as the Elma State Savings. R. Cunningham is president; F. E. Silver, cashier, and C. Foley vice-president.

The town of Mount Ayr has voted to issue bonds of $45,000 for the construction of a water works system.

A. O. Hauge of the Iowa Trust and Savings and his wife have been visiting at Detroit City, Minn. Mrs. Hauge had the misfortune to fall and dislocate her elbow.

C. F. Schmidt of the First National at Davenport was prominent in the organization of the new Andrew Savings at Andrew. The bank has a capital of $15,000 and on the first day its deposits were $11,000. It is located in the heart of a prosperous farming community.

John P. O'Malley and Mrs. O'Malley have returned after a tour of Ireland. Mr. O'Malley is a prominent banker at Perry and was a candidate for congress on the democratic ticket at the primaries last year.

H. C. Kahl, well known contractor at Davenport, was elected to the directory board of the Iowa National of that city to succeed Julius Burmeister, who resigned because business interests at Kansas City took him out of the city too frequently to do justice to the bank.

August Freund is president of the German Savings at Lowden and Charles Reinking is cashier. The bank was started a short time ago and has excellent prospects.

Fred Woodson of Mount Pleasant has succeeded J. E. Krieger, who recently resigned as cashier of the Bank of Mt Hammill.

F. F. Jones, actively identified with the Iowa legislature, is said to be considering a new bank at Villisca. He is president of the Villisca National, and W. H. Kinlayson, cashier, is said to be interested with him in the organization of the new institution.

Roy Maxfield of the McClelland Bank has been made vice-president of the new Corn Belt Route, an improved road, which connects Atlantic with Council Bluffs. The road enters the famous river-to-river road a short distance out of Council Bluffs and is merged with it.

The Iowa National at Davenport has inaugurated a monthly letter giving trade conditions and indicating general business conditions as to future prospects, etc.

The Farmers State is the name of the new institution at Scranton. It is capitalized at $25,000. C. W. Cressler is president; S. H. Arthur, vice-president.

E. A. Slininger, cashier of the Peoples Savings, Des Moines, has been spending a portion of his vacation in Colorado.

The Farmers Bank at Adair will be changed to the First National with a capital stock of $35,000. The building of the Farmers Bank will be occupied.

F. O. Jackson has been chosen vice-president of the Cedar Falls National.

The State bank of Harper has succeeded the Farmers Savings of that town.

C. F. Bartlett has succeeded the late Thomas McCook as president of the State at Riceville. Nelson McCook succeeds Bartlett as vice-president.

A charter has been issued to the Security National at Mason City. It is capitalized for $100,000. John A. Senneff is president and E. W. Clark is cashier.

Edwin H. Furrow, cashier of the Merchants National at Cedar Rapids and formerly a banker at Iowa Falls and at Goldfield, was married at Marshalltown recently to Miss Byrde Knight of Garwin. Furrow is a candidate for treasurer of the I. B. A. next year.

South Dakota Notes

P. C. Scholberg of Correll, Minn., and J. C. Gans of Odessa, Minn., have bought the H. C. Bachelder interests in the Marvin State at Marvin. Mr. Gans is president, K. A. Ramsay is vice-president and Mr. Scholberg is cashier.

The Tabor State has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $25,000. The Farmers Savings at Tabor reports Charles Vauk as vice-president and Robert Vauk as assistant cashier.

NEW JERSEY BANK CLOSED.

The Roseville Trust, Newark, N. J., a state institution in Newark's suburbs, has been closed by the state bank examiners. Raymond E. Smith, secretary-treasurer, is missing, leaving behind him a shortage estimated at $305,000. The trust company was opened for business in 1908. William Fairlee, vice-president, confirmed the shortage, but said he could not say what the exact shortage would be. In its last report, filed June 4th, the bank reported assets of $1,000,694 and deposits of $702,975. It had a surplus of $50,000, undivided profits of $43,000 and a paid-up capital of $100,000, all of which will be wiped out by the shortage, the department says.

Three years ago Deputy Commissioner Thomas K. Johnson investigated the institution and recommended that Smith be removed from office. He said that in his opinion he was not capable of efficiently performing his duties. Smith retained office, however, at the request of the directors.

BANKS OBJECT TO BONDS.

Prosecutor Meek of Wyandotte county, Kansas, has filed a suit in the Wyandotte county district court to take from the mayor and commissioners of Kansas City, Kan., alleged power to require a bond from state banks which are city depositories. Deposits of these banks are secured by the state bank guaranty fund. There are about ten state banks in Kansas City, Kan., and they object to bearing the cost of furnishing additional bond.

H. W. FLINT TO TAKE OMAHA POSITION

Harold W. Flint, cashier of the Union State Savings Bank & Trust Co., Kewanee, Ill., has accepted a position with the John Deere Plow Company and will leave early in September for Omaha to begin his duties as credit manager of the company for southern Nebraska. Mr. Flint's successor has not yet been appointed.

BANKERS OF COUNTY ORGANIZE.

The Jewell (Kan.) County Bankers Association recently was instituted at Mankato. D. H. Stafford of Mankato was elected president; G. O. Seaton of Formoso, vice-president; W. A. Matson of Jewell City, secretary, and P. H. O'Brien of Burr Oak, treasurer.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Statements made by sixteen Spokane banks responding to the August 9th call of the controller of currency show an entirely satisfactory condition. As expected, deposits have fallen off some, due to the fact that country banks have had to withdraw their deposits and as well to borrow from Spokane banks to finance the record crop movement. All the banks are carrying more reserve than the 25 per cent demanded by law, the reserves of the largest being as follows: Old National, 29.9 per cent; Fidelity National, 28.7; Northwest Loan and Trust, 31.8; Traders National, 32; Spokane and Eastern, 35; Exchange National, 28.5.

Outside of the bumper grain crop being harvested in the Spokane country this year, the most significant note is a greatly increased activity in mining, which industry experts declare will set the best record since that established the last six months of 1906. The producing mines of the country tributary to Spokane are earning more than ever before, as evidenced by the resumption of dividend payments by the Granby Smelting Company and the inauguration of disbursements by the Stewart Company.

The situation from a mining standpoint was never more promising in the Pacific Northwest than it is to-day. There is not a mine of any importance but has a heavily increased pay-roll and correspondingly augmented output, while the profits have increased more than proportionately because of the installation in the larger properties of improved labor-saving devices and value-saving appliances. This is true of the Coeur d'Alene region particularly, and several companies there are adding materially to their monthly earnings by milling profitably large bodies of ore that were stored in the underground since the high-grade was extracted years ago.

Bankers of Washington believe money will be much easier this fall is the word brought back to Spokane from the state convention at Bellingham by R. B. Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, who said: "A growing feeling of optimism was apparent in all their conversation. The announcement that the government was to distribute $50,000,000, perhaps $150,000,000, among the banks of the country, much of it coming to the West already has had a wonderful influence in creating a much better feeling. This money probably will be distributed some time this month and will be of untold benefit in financing the crop movement. Another encouraging feature of the western financial situation is that the farmers are all ready to sell their crops and there will be no long, expensive waits this year, from all indications. The farmers will realize on their crops much quicker and the millions necessary to finance the crop will soon be rolling back into the banks. This is the best in the long run for the farmer, as he will not have the expense of holding his crop and tying up his wealth. The tremendous sum available with the early crop movement, together with the distribution of the government money, ought to make money much easier in the Spokane country this fall."

Spokane bank clerks, members of the American Institute of Banking, gained many honors at the recent state convention of the Washington Bankers Association at Bellingham, winning the interchapter debate against Seattle and taking both first and second prizes in the annual essay contest conducted by the association and open to bank clerks from all parts of the state, whether members of the chapter or not. Joseph W. Bradley of the Old National won the essay prize on the subject "Political Considerations in Financial Legislation." Albert Kaye of the Spokane and Eastern Trust took second prize. Mr. Kaye and B. A. Russell of the Washington Trust won the debate on the establishment of land credit banks, scoring ninety-eight points and beating their Seattle competitors by three points.

Among the visiting bankers in Spokane this week were William G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago; B. F. McGregor, assistant cashier of the Northwestern National, Minneapolis; Charles L. Davis of the Wells-Fargo Nevada National of San Francisco; Hugh Waddell, president First National of Colville, Wash.; H. D. Warren, cashier Latah County State Bank of Deary, Ida.; E. L. Farnsworth, vice-president State Bank of Wilbur, Wash.; H. C. Burns, cashier Reardan Exchange, Reardan, Wash.; Julius C. Johnson, cashier Almira State, Almira, Wash.; W. W. Downie, cashier First National of Harrington, Wash.

R. L. Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust, was appointed vice-president for the West for the next meeting of the American Bankers Association, the appointment being made by the recent state bankers' convention.

MILES C. MOORE AT WASHINGTON CONVENTION

Ex-Territorial Governor Miles C. Moore, now president of the Baker-Boyer National of Walla Walla, delivered a short but severe arraignment of the Pinchot policy of conservation in which he characterized it as "infamous and insidious," before the Washington Bankers Association convention recently. "We overlook one thing," said Governor Moore. "If we want to foster the 'back to the farm' movement, we should first see that we have some land to send people back to. The West has been handicapped by the infamous, despicable policies of Pinchot and other politicians. Up in Alaska they have not been able to develop their own coal, the patents have been turned down for the development of the agricultural land, while the progress of the entire West has been arrested materially by the policies. We see a ray of light, however, for President Wilson has begun to open up the development of Alaska, or at least has expressed himself as willing to facilitate such a move."

Prof. J. A. Tormey of the state agricultural station at Pullman gave a lucid and forceful address on the work carried on by the state, in the interests of intensified and diversified farming. "Education has come to be general," said Prof. Tormey. "Years ago education was solely in the hands of the teacher, but now we see the bankers taking it up, and the railroads are doing a big work with demonstration trains. We are all educators in this day and age. We have awakened to the fact that the education of people to farming, and to bring out of the soil the best possibilities, is the resource on which we must fall back."

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

Part of the program which will be followed during the conference in Kansas City next week of the banking committees on agricultural development and education, has been prepared by Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association. Among those who will address the committee will be J. C. McDowell, who has charge of the department of farm management in the agricultural department at Washington. He will speak on farm management.

Lieutenant Governor Ingalls of Kansas will talk on the subject of farm mortgages and W. J. Bailey of Atchison, former governor of Kansas, will tell of the progress being made in organizing the bankers in the different counties of Kansas. Sam Jordan of Sedalia, Mo., Pettis county's farm expert who has made a name for himself all over the United States by the work he has accomplished, also will be on the program.

KANSAS BANKS PROSPEROUS.

Kansas bank accounts increased $22,000,000 in June over the reports for the same period last year, according to announcement by Bank Commissioner Charles N. Sawyer. On June 4th the combined reports of the 1,132 state and national banks in Kansas show $199,241,714, as against deposits of $176,437,265.62 for June 14, 1912. The total assets of these banks this year were $261,320,351.22 as against $237,256,320, 21 last year. It is by far the biggest showing ever made by the banks of Kansas for this season of the year, and is but $2,000,000 short of the showing of the state and national banks as given in the April reports. The increase of $22,000,000 in deposits this year over the figures of last year is nearly five times the increase made in 1912 over 1911. In the year from June, 1911, to June, 1912, the banks of the state showed an increase of about $4,500,000.

MULFORD TO LEASE BANK

W. Belknap Mulford has tendered his resignation as cashier of the Manufacturers National of Rockford, Ill., and on September 1st will leave the institution with which he has been identified for twenty-four years. He will continue on the board of directors. Mr. Mulford leaves the bank to become associated with H. H. and N. S. Robinson and Norman E. Catlin in the farm mortgage business which was established in 1875. The firm name will be H. H. & N. S. Robinson, Catlin and Mulford.

SALT LAKE CHAPTER ELECTS OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of Salt Lake Chapter, A. I. B., the following officers were elected for the next year:

President, Beach D. Lyon, Merchants Bank; vice-president, M. A. Miller, Zion Savings Bank and Trust; secretary, Willard Evans, Walker Brothers Bank; corresponding secretary, Charles S. Gardiner, Deseret National; treasurer, Fred Rich, Utah State National.

The Peoria County Farm Bureau is asking for an appropriation of $5,000 from the board of supervisors of that county.

the bank, is out on bond awaiting trial on a charge of accepting deposits after he knew the bank was in an unsound condition.

The Guaranty State, Waxahachie, Tex., has been organized with a capital of $150,000. K. W. Ward is president; W. L. Ackers, vice-president; G. C. Waggoner, cashier, and G. B. Davidson, assistant cashier.

The Texas department of banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks: Seaboard National of New York for the First State of Bettie; Citizens Bank and Trust of Austin for the First State and Trust of Abilene; National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis for the State Bank of Omaha; Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas for the First State of Bettie; Union National of Houston and American National of Austin for the Citizens Guaranty State of Manor; Hanover National of New York, Brownwood National of Brownwood and Farmers and Mechanics National of Fort Worth for the Blanket State of Blanket; Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas, Central Texas Exchange National of Waco, First State of Hillsboro and Texas and Trust Co. of Galveston for the Guaranty State of Abbott.

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Farmers National of Hempstead, Tex., the regular semiannual dividend of 5 per cent was declared and $1,000 passed to the surplus fund; $3,388 was carried to undivided profits account.

The First State of Franklin, Tex., opened its doors recently with the following officers: W. C. Crane, cashier; A. T. Alley, assistant cashier. The new bank has a paid in capital of $30,000 and has taken the benefit of the state bank insurance law to insure its depositors against loss.

The Flint (Tex.) Guaranty State, with a capital stock of $10,000, has been granted a charter. The incorporators are F. B. Butler, J. W. Fitzgerald, F. E. Swann and others.

The state department of banking has placed the Luling (Tex.) State Bank in the hands of a receiver. Depositors are protected by the state guaranty fund.

The work of remodeling the Robinson (Tex.) Guaranty State building is now under full sway, and the interior of the bank is to be made very attractive. New fixtures are also to be added.

CENTRAL GROUP MEETS

The central group of the Montana Bankers Association met in Helena on Tuesday of last week. The meeting was called to order by A. W. Warr, president, who is cashier of the Bank of Fergus County, Lewistown. Hon. R. R. Purcell, mayor of Helena, delivered the address of welcome and N. J. Gould, cashier American National, Helena, gave an address of welcome on behalf of the bankers of Helena. Mr. Warr delivered the response. The report by counties followed: Lewis and Clarke, P. B. Bartley, cashier Conrad Trust and Savings, Helena; Musselshell, H. P. Lambert, cashier First National, Roundup; Meagher, J. W. Freeman, cashier State Bank of Harlowton, Harlowton; Broadwater, W. L. Cronk, cashier First National, Townsend; Cascade, S. C. Purdy, president First State, Geyser; Fergus, Samuel Phillips, president Empire Bank and Trust, Lewistown. After a business session and appointment of committees the meeting adjourned for luncheon.

In the afternoon Governor S. V. Stewart delivered an address followed by Harry Yaeger on "Bank Management." Other addresses were: "Bank Advertising and Exchange Charges," T. T. Taylor, assistant cashier Bank of Fergus county, Lewistown; "Promotion of Better Farming Methods and Dairying," Carl H. Peterson, agricultural expert of Fergus county, Lewistown; "Legal and Banking Questions," R. O. Kaufman, cashier Union Bank and Trust Company, Helena. The meeting concluded with a general discussion, reports of committees and election of officers.

The meeting of the central group was preliminary to the meeting of the state association which was held on the two following days. The central group is composed of bankers operating in Fergus, Cascade, Broadwater, Meagher, Musselshell, and Lewis and Clarke counties. The 1912-1913 officers of the central group are as follows: A. W. Warr of Lewistown, president; R. P. Reckards of Great Falls, vice-president, and Ward M. Buckles of Helena, assistant state bank examiner, secretary-treasurer.

HENDERSON HEADS SACRAMENTO BANK

J. M. Henderson, Jr., has been chosen president of the Sacramento Bank, to fill the position made vacant by the death of Philip Scheld. George W. Kramer has been elected to fill the position of cashier and secretary, to succeed Mr. Henderson.

LOS ANGELES PROMOTIONS

At the semiannual meeting of the California Savings Bank, F. H. Nichols, who has been cashier since the bank started, nearly ten years ago, was elected vice-president; A. L. Crandall, former assistant cashier, was promoted to cashier, and B. P. Pentecost was made assistant cashier.

PORTLAND BANKS SHOW INCREASE

Deposits in Portland banks, as shown by the reports of banks issued in response to a call by the comptroller of the currency showing conditions at the close of business August 9th, approximate $75,000,000. The total deposits shown at the previous call, June 4th, were $74,638,954. There was an increase of over $2,000,000 over the statement issued September 4, 1912, when the total was $72,363,821.

FARMERS TO BE GIVEN SHEEP

Lewistown, Mont., Aug. 19.—A plan that will tend to put the Judith basin at the head of all other sections of Montana and ultimately make it a leader in the United States in the production of mutton and wool is to be put into effect by John D. Waite, president of the Bank of Fergus and a large land owner and wool grower. He has offered to furnish to any farmer who has the necessary equipment in the way of improvements and who has had some experience all the sheep that his ranch will profitably carry, they to be paid for at the rate of one and a half to two lambs for each ewe that is purchased. Not a cent of money is to change hands in the transaction. Along with the ewes Mr. Waite will furnish some rams, largely of the Hampshire breed, and for which he paid as high as $35 in the East, and in this way he hopes to raise the grade of Fergus county sheep so that the returns to the farmer will be much larger both in wool and mutton.

TO BOOST SOUTHEAST PART OF MISSOURI

The Southeast Missouri Development Association was organized at Bismarck, Mo., Tuesday, comprising eighteen counties, all of which were represented at the meeting. The purpose of the association is to co-operate with the business men of St. Louis in the development of that section and to promote the construction of good roads as well as the immediate settlement of thousands of acres of productive lands, and also the development of water power and the advertising of the scenic advantage of the Ozarks. The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the action of Gov. Major in designating two days for good roads work and heartily support the plan to make the movement a permanent annual event.

The next annual meeting of the association will be held at either De Soto, Farmington, Charleston or Poplar Bluff. The first meeting is to be held at Bismarck October 10th.

The following officers were elected: John H. Curran, St. Louis, president; R. L. Daniels, Ellington; E. A. Rozier, Farmington; Jas. A. Shields, Potosi; Geo. Bigles, Poplar Bluff; O. L. Munger, Piedmont; W. A. Welch, De Soto; E. L. Purcell, Fredericktown, vice-presidents; Dr. J. L. Eaton, Bismarck, treasurer; J. F. Schroeder, Bismarck, secretary.

BANK ABSORPTION

It is reported that the Tradesmens State Bank, Oklahoma City, Okla., has taken over the Oklahoma State. V. M. Bosworth, cashier of the Oklahoma State, is cashier of the new institution. George W. Piersol and J. E. Piersol, retiring president and vice-president of the Oklahoma State, will devote most of their time to their bond and loan business but will be closely associated with the bank and retain offices in the building.

NO MONEY STRESS IN MISSOURI

There may be drouth and desolation in some parts of Missouri, but the men who make the loans on farm property within the state have not been able to discover any unusual conditions. There has been no falling off in the payments of interest and principal on farm mortgages, and this is considered an unfailing barometer of good or bad rural conditions, according to the loan and financial agents. The general impression among insurance men and their agents who watch farm loans is that the state was scared before it was hurt. They are agreed that the present crop shortage is by no means as serious as that of 1901 or 1911.

outstanding notes by depositing lawful money—gold bullion or treasury notes. The principal of this issue seems to be that it is the function of the government alone to issue currency. This is unfortunate, since being obligations of the government they are apt to remain too long in circulation.

Sections eighteen, nineteen and twenty have also been amended and provide that upon application the secretary shall exchange two per cent bonds up to 5 per cent per annum of the amount deposited as security for circulating notes, giving in exchange 3 per cent bonds without circulating privilege, payable 20 years from date of issue and exempt from taxation. Every national bank may continue to apply for and receive circulation. After 20 years from the enactment of the currency bill, the two's will be redeemed at par.

An attempt is being made to meet the demands of national banks to loan on farm mortgages by permitting banks outside of reserve and central reserve cities to invest in farm mortgage loans to an amount not exceeding 25 per cent of their capital or 50 per cent of their time deposits. Unfortunately the length of these mortgages must not exceed nine months.

In regard to reserves we find the proportions are substantially the same as under the present system, although the distribution is different. Section twenty-one, which is very long, and with which you are undoubtedly familiar, condensed into a few words provides that at the expiration of three years banks in the reserve cities must so arrange their reserve that they will be carrying 20 per cent, 10 per cent in gold or lawful money in their own vaults and 10 per cent with the district reserve banks. Country bank members will be required to maintain a 15 per cent reserve, 5 per cent of which must be in lawful money in their own vaults, 5 per cent with the district reserve banks and the remaining 5 per cent under the permission of the federal board, may be carried with correspondents, in reserve or central reserve cities. This section was amended by prohibiting the carrying of any portion of the reserves with correspondent banks, other than the district reserve banks, but I understand Mr. Carter Glass has stated that the bill will be re-amended permitting country banks to carry 5 per cent and reserve city banks 6 per cent with their correspondents.

Let us consider for a moment how this apportionment of the reserves would operate. In the national banks in Chicago, for instance, there was due June 4th to other national banks, $160,000,000. Approximately $53,000,000 of this is on deposit from reserve city banks and $107,000,000 from the country banks. Under the reapportionment of the reserves as now contemplated in the bill, Chicago would lose $53,000,000 from the reserve city banks, and 4 per cent of the reserves from the country banks, this 4 per cent being the difference between the 9 per cent reserves now carried and the 5 per cent as allowed under the new bill, amounting to $48,000,000, making a total loss to the money center of $101,000,000. Estimating that 40 per cent of this amount is carried as reserve, means there would accrue a shrinkage in the loaning capacity of the Chicago banks of $60,000,000. Add to this the disturbance to business that would be caused by a proportionate shrinkage of credit throughout the country and one realizes the effect such a redistribution of reserves would have on general business. This is a vital feature of the bill and there should be no misunderstanding of the practical working of this act as it relates to borrowers.

The hope of banking reform has been that those who need them the most, to the men in business, and to the growing institutions in the developing sections of this great country.

To eliminate panics was the first consideration, to direct credit facilities, to give a maximum usefulness to sound business was the second. A contraction of credit, whether from natural movements or as the result of some sudden catastrophe, is the element that precipitates a stringency.

It would seem that this proposed redistribution of reserves must inevitably reduce the loaning power of banks to an unprecedented degree. It is true that this contraction due to the forced withdrawals of large deposits from commercial banks which they in turn loan would not be complete for a period of three years from the enactment of the bill. But does not this mean a slow contraction of credit of three years' duration, from which relief could only be obtained through rediscounting? It is a question whether good business and conservative banking judgment would justify the banks in assuming a line of rediscounts sufficiently large to meet a condition such as is here involved when it is considered that this contraction will be in direct proportion to the loaning power made possible by deposits of half a billion dollars.

That this redistribution of reserves would work a hardship upon country banks, there can be no question, since country banks would find it necessary in addition to the reserves specified to carry considerable balances in reserve cities to enable them to transact their customers' business conveniently and to maintain a relation that will establish a privilege of borrowing upon such collateral as would not be available for discount with the district reserve banks. For instance, we all know that farmers, cattlemen, country merchants and small dealers will not execute notes maturing before such period as they expect to realize upon the crops or stock, which provides them funds to meet their obligations.

To the country bank the need for money ordinarily arises four to five months in advance of the maturity of the greater portion of their paper. Especially so one-crop sections, and in such cases the channel of relief would still have to lie with the banking correspondents.

The same reasons apply measurably to reserve city banks. Let us assume now that the bill has been enacted and a national bank in Montana has qualified for membership. This bank has a capital of $100,000 and deposits of $1,000,000. What will be the price of its membership? First it will subscribe 20 per cent of its capital, or $20,000, upon which its dividends are limited to 5 per cent (the 40 per cent provision must, however, be borne in mind). It shall after fourteen months deposit with the district reserve bank $50,000, or 5 per cent of its deposits, upon which no interest shall be paid; an amount which, under the relation with its present reserve correspondent, nets 2 per cent, or $1,000. By only keeping 5 per cent in its vault, as against the 6 per cent now required, there is freed $10,000 to earn 2 per cent, or $200, which, subtracted from the $1,000 of loss of interest above mentioned, leaves an annual cost of $800. To this cost also must be added the difference in the capital return between the 5 per cent paid by the district reserve banks and the income which is at present earned on capital invested in this state. If money may be safely invested in this state at 8 per cent, there is a further cost on capital subscribed of $600, making a total annual cost to this bank of $1,400.

The state of Montana showed in January, 1913, 57 national banks with a capital of approximately $4,900,000 and deposits of $40,500,000. The total annual cost to these banks would by the same requirements amount to $61,800.

It is for the bankers who are in fact trustees for the stockholders to determine whether or not by joining the proposed system they meet the best interests of their beneficiaries. Therefore it will be interesting to consider for a moment what the cost would be of denationalizing.

Suppose the directors of the same $100,000 bank determine to leave the national system; assume further that this bank held an average amount of government bonds for a bank of its capitalization, or approximately $70,000. The bank would be obliged first of all to deposit lawful money with the treasury to obtain the release of its bonds, thereby shifting its liability to its circulation. This would mean that its current funds were depleted $70,000 unless it sold its bonds. If it decided to carry the bonds, a loss would be met equal to the difference between the 2 per cent rate of interest and the current loaning rate. If the current rate was 7 per cent this would be a loss of 5 per cent on $70,000, or $3,500 per annum. If these bonds were sold in order to restore the fluid funds by this amount, the bank would lose the difference between the price paid and the present quotations.

It must be borne in mind that if many banks followed this course of action the bonds would undoubtedly decline rapidly in value, since the amount which may be refunded is limited to a 5 per cent proportion per annum. In this case the loss would be much larger, and should a great number of banks desire to leave the national system and sell their bonds, it is conceivable that the decline in market value might be so great as to make the transaction prohibitive.

The various modifications made on the bill indicate, I think, a desire upon the part of the administration that the measure, when enacted, shall represent the best collective judgment on the country. It is therefore obvious that a large measure of responsibility for the proper amendments rests with the business men and bankers. We, on our part, have been earnestly desiring a better banking law and it is the duty of all of us to work collectively and individually to secure an act which will conserve not only our own interest, but also the interest of the community at large.

The bankers assembled in convention can, I believe, render aid in formulating this bill by sending to their congressmen and senators a copy of the adopted resolutions endorsing such provisions as they approve and containing constructive criticism upon the remainder.

PASS RESOLUTIONS.

At the eighteenth annual convention of the Washington Bankers Association the bankers passed resolutions on the currency reform bill now pending before congress. The resolutions favor regulation and supervision by the federal government of the nation's currency rather than government administration. Strong opposition developed against the section of the Owen-Glass currency bill, which has to do with the federal control of the reserve board. The bankers said, "We oppose emphatically taking control from the stockholders and placing it in the hands of politicians." The recommendations of the monetary commission of the American Bankers Association were indorsed and congress urged to make a change in the new currency bill permitting payment of interest on bank deposits similar to that now proposed to be paid on government deposits.

Company. There are now ten directors on the board of the Bank of Buffalo. The increase in the number of directors follows the bank's recent action in increasing its capital and surplus to $1,000,000. The officers of the bank are president, Elliott C. McDougal; vice-president, Laurence D. Rumsey; cashier, John L. Daniels; assistant to president, Ralph Croy; assistant cashiers, L. C. Olden and D. C. Appleby.

A. A. Berrick President Buffalo Bank

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Buffalo Loan, Trust and Safe Deposit Company, Alfred A. Berrick was elected president; L. Franklin Messer, vice-president, and Myron S. Hall, secretary. Mr. Berrick formerly was a vice-president of the company. He succeeds George Urban, Jr., who was compelled to retire because of illness.

Marine National In Response to Call

The Marine National of Buffalo in its August 9th report shows deposits of $30,869,292; loans and discounts, $20,750,300; bonds and securities, $5,577,616; cash on hand and due from banks, $8,077,942; capital, $2,000,000; surplus and undivided profits, $1,801,567; resources, $36,300,859. The resources of the Columbia National between which and the Marine National a merger is contemplated, are now over twenty-one million dollars. John D. Larkin has been elected a director of the Marine National to succeed E. H. Hutchinson, who resigned June 27th.

Central States Notes

Baltimore was represented at the conference with Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo in Washington by A. D. Graham, vice-president of the Citizens National; Douglas H. Thomas, president of the Merchants-Mechanics National, and T. Rowland Thomas, president of the National Bank of Baltimore. Louisville, Ky.,

was represented by H. C. Rodes, president of the Citizens National and president of the clearing house, as chairman; S. Thurston Ballard, vice-president Louisville National; Henry D. Ormsby, cashier National Bank of Kentucky, and Frank M. Gettys, cashier of the Union National.

The contract for the erection of the building for the Fishers (Ind.) National which recently opened in temporary quarters has been awarded. The building will cost $4,000 and will be two stories.

State Superintendent of Banks Emery W. Lattanner is considering the feasibility of remodeling the ground floor and basement of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company building, so that it can be leased to merchants. It is figured that the annual rentals of the building could be increased $22,000 by doing this. The annual rental thus would be about $46,000, which would be sufficient to pay depositors 6 per cent on the value of the bank building, or 4 per cent on the $1,400,000 of deposits.

RAIN NEEDED IN TEXAS

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 18.—Texas crops have not been seriously injured by dry weather, but rain within the next week is necessary in most sections of the state to prevent crop losses according to reports to-day from every section of the state. The weather has played a trick this year by an unusual amount of local rains which have given one farmer an abundance of rain and his neighbor a few miles away scarcely a drop. In a few counties this spotting has been so extreme that the very rain which one farmer's cotton needs will cause deterioration in the crop of his neighbor. However, by far the great majority of cotton farmers want rain very soon. Many localities, particularly in north and northeast Texas, predict 20 per cent deterioration in cotton unless these rains come quickly.

Conditions are reported most acute along the Oklahoma border, particularly in that portion near the Panhandle. Nevertheless, reports from portions of Fannin, a border county, say that the one thing cotton farmers fear is rain. West Texas reports generally fine crops, with here and there an exception.

The Texas corn crop seems to have been largely made before the present dry weather. This dry spell, moreover, according to reports, has been just about what the cotton is usually supposed to need, with the exception of a great many small spotted areas.

ROBS BANK IN DAYLIGHT

DEFUNCT BANK PAYS DIVIDEND

Receiver L. Wilson of the defunct State Bank of Commerce, Wallace, Ida., has mailed checks to the depositors covering an additional dividend of 6 per cent or $28,000, making in all 71 per cent that has been paid. The funds just distributed were derived from the sale of the remaining assets of the bank to Harry L. Day and it is said deferred payments to be made by Mr. Day will practically pay the 29 per cent still due the depositors.

L. P. Hillyer on Corn, Cotton and Cattle

Cuthbert, Ga., August 20—The hit of the meeting of the State Agricultural Society, which convened here, was the eloquent and timely address by L. P. Hillyer of the American National of Macon.

The address was listened to with intense interest and universally approved by the members of the society who heard it. It represented so much research and is so full of meaning to agricultural activities that a liberal synopsis of it is presented herewith.

Among other things Mr. Hillyer said:

"While it is true that farmers of moderate ability manage to get along, there is no vocation in which a high grade of business genius will bring forth greater results than in the business of farming.

"Cotton is not the only money crop. There are numbers of instances in Georgia where farmers have made more money planting other crops on certain tracts of land than if they had planted the same tracts in cotton. The best advice that can possibly be given to farmers is to diversify their interests. They should not be dependent on any one crop or industry. In the time allotted to me it would be impossible to dwell on the various crops a Georgia farmer can successfully raise or the industries in which he can successfully engage; but the one industry to which I wish particularly to call your attention at this time is cattle raising.

World Short on Beef

"The whole world is short on beef. In England, France and Germany and all the other countries of Europe cattle and meat are scarcer than has ever been known in their history. In the Daily Consular and Trade Report for February, 1913, we find that the United Kingdom had, on January 1, two hundred and sixty-two head of cattle to every one thousand of population; Germany, 318, and France 367. These figures explain why the cost of living in those countries has greatly increased. These figures also show us that Europe will absorb any surplus of beef for years to come, thereby maintaining the price of beef the world over at a high figure. Statistics tell us that in the United States in 1907 there was one head of cattle for each man, woman and child. On February 8, 1913, there was only six-tenths of one head for each man, woman and child—a decrease of forty per cent. in just six years. So you will see that while the shortage of beef is growing more alarming in Europe, the number of cattle is rapidly decreasing in this country. We have ceased to be a nation with a surplus of beef cattle, and we have already reached a point where, if conditions are not changed, we must go without beef, or buy it from other countries. Heretofore the three great countries which had a surplus of cattle were South America, Australia and the United States. From reliable information, we learn that owing to drouth conditions which have prevailed in Argentina and Australia, each of these countries has lost a million head of cattle.

Argentina's Predicament

"So serious is the situation in Argentina, and so insistent is the demand for beef from other countries, that legislation is now pending in Argentina to prevent the slaughter of calves and all cows under seven years of age, or the export of live cattle of any character. With this stringent legislation, it is believed that it will take ten years for the cattle supply in Argentina to reach its normal proportions. Canada is unable to help this cattle situation, for she too is short of cattle.

The able and popular Georgia banker goes before the State Agricultural Society to advocate more live stock for southern farms. Mr. Hillyer has, for several years, been making a special and careful study of the cattle industry. He was, therefore, gladly heard, and his observations will be gladly read.

"Canada now claims a supply of less than one head per capita, the figures being 998 head per one thousand population. With South America and Canada practically eliminated as our competitors in the cattle trade, the only country to which we may look for the replenishing of our herds is Mexico. The revolutions in Mexico have played havoc with their herds, and the present shortage is causing thoughtful Mexicans much alarm. If the present tariff bill should place beef and cattle on the free list farmers of the United States need fear no competition from other countries.

"The situation in the west, from a cattle raising standpoint, is fast becoming similar to what it is in Georgia. Mr. James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, and the man who is largely responsible for the up-building of the great northwest, in a notable address, made the following statement:

"Within the last six years there have been transferred from public to private ownership more than one hundred million acres of government land. At the present rate, therefore, every acre of public land would disappear within the next fifteen years, and where are our children to find standing room?—and the tens of millions of the future, a place for wholesome industry?"

"After advising the young men of the country to stick to the farms, and after telling his hearers how we might expand our resources and add billions of dollars to our national wealth by conserving our soil resources instead of exhausting them he declares that the best thing our farmers could do would be to join stock raising with grain raising. Nature, he said, has provided the cattle to go with the land. There is as much money in live stock as there is in grain. Looked at in any way there is money in live stock. Money for dairy products; money for beef; money for the annual increase, and most money of all for the next year's crop when every particle of manure is saved and applied to the land.

"Our best hope for bringing our supply up to the proper proportion is through the development of the small individual herds, characteristic of those countries which have grown rich through intelligent live stock farming. Every farmer in Georgia knows there is no trouble to sell cattle. They are as staple a product as cotton. Let it be known that a herd of fine cattle is to be sold, and buyers from the great packing concerns will immediately appear with the ready cash to pay the highest market price for the entire herd. Farmers should stop 'single shooting cotton.'"

Talbert's Good Advice

Joseph T. Talbert, vice-president of the National City, of New York, in a letter to Mr. Hillyer said that from his own personal observation he could say that, during the harvest season, the methods now employed are not near so good as they were nearly thirty years ago. Mr. Talbert further wrote, said Mr. Hillyer, "The great trouble which the south contends against is the irresponsibility and shiftlessness of negro labor. The colored man has been brought up to cultivate cotton and corn, and these alone, and he cultivates them in a very costly and expensive manner. He does not use, and does not know how to use, scientific methods, or proper means of fertilization, or of preservation of the soil. It must be admitted that the poor white man is not much, if any, better. If the proprietors, who call themselves planters, would actively interest themselves in learning, first, something about intensive farming and then actively undertake to instruct their attendants, and see that their instructions were carried out, as is done in the case of the hustling western farmer, and those of the northwest particularly, success would be assured. The trouble is that most of the large proprietors depend upon hired agents to look after these matters, where any attention at all is paid to them, and, in consequence, they are neglected."

Big Ranches Gone

"A. M. McFadden, president of the Texas Cattle Raisers' Association, said in a recent address before the Texas Bankers Association:

"France is not as big as Texas, and France is not a cattle country, and yet France has 14,000,000 cattle, while Texas has less than 6,000,000."

"The day of the big ranch is absolutely passed. We have got to raise our cattle at home. There never was a bunch of cattle in the world that, when they had feed and water, did not pay out. Texas should carry 14,000,000 cattle if France can do it. We have the water and everything else in the world to help us, and why should not we? Texas and other great cattle states of the west are realizing that the day of the great ranch is passed and this country must depend upon the small farmers for its cattle.

Money in Cattle

"One of the greatest iron ore companies in Michigan, owning a large tract of land in the upper peninsula, fenced in a few sections, and in the spring of 1911 bought a lot of cattle and turned them on the pasture, where they ran until fall, when they were shipped. They did the same thing in the year 1912. Their books show a net return of $17.50 per head—10 per cent on land at $175 per acre, and you can buy better land in many counties in Georgia to-day for from $10 to $15 per acre. Over 100 per cent net on your money. During the last six months of 1912 practically no dressed beef was exported from the United States. Up to within the last few years American beef was sold in nearly every market in the world, but to-day we have passed from that position to one where we can supply our own people only. Judge for yourself whether there is any money to be made in raising cattle!

Georgia and Iowa.

"Just as sure as death and taxes, the farmers of Georgia can duplicate what has been done in the state of Iowa. We have the advantage over that state. We do not have their severe winters with which to contend. We have more water and better water. We can raise as much corn per acre as can Iowa or any other state.

"We are exporting cotton seed hulls and cotton seed meal to other countries to fatten their cattle. Let us give it to our own cattle in Georgia. If we make a specialty of this money-making industry of cattle raising well equipped and up-to-date packing houses in Georgia and numerous plants for the manufacturing of cattle by-products will be the inevitable result. If the farmers of Georgia will make cattle raising a specialty, raising all of their provisions at home and making cotton a surplus crop, lands in Georgia will, like the lands in Iowa, double, treble and quadruple in value. The banks of Georgia will help you in this enterprise. The Georgia bankers have been taking farmers' notes, secured by mortgages on crops and mules, since the civil war, and of all classes of notes, these farmers' notes are the best. A note secured by a mortgage on a herd of fine cattle would be as good as a note secured by crops and mules. The banker is the natural ally of the farmer, and the farmers of Georgia, in their intelligent and industrious efforts to diversify their interests, to make cotton a surplus crop, to make a specialty of cattle raising, thereby multiplying the value of our Georgia farms, will receive the unqualified financial support of the bankers of Georgia."

How Germany's Co-operative Banks Were Started

In his article on the co-operative banks of Germany in Harper's for September, John L. Mathews tells a story of a sample instance of the way in which these banks came into being.

"The pastor of the Protestant church was a man of heart and intelligence. He saw the intense need of help. With characteristic vigor he threw himself into the creation of a co-operative bank, into the organization of the farmers so that they could command seasonal money from outside when it was needed, and facilitate the movement of funds within the district at all times. Summoning his best powers of persuasion, he preached just as earnestly on week-days that their material salvation lay in their own hands, as on Sunday he exhorted them to remember that no one else could save their souls.

"You all suffer from a common need,' he told them. 'No matter how honest, you cannot get money except on the most difficult terms. Acting separately, this must be so, even with honest men. But you can change this by coming together, by consolidating your credit. If you who trust one another organize into a society to form a savings and loan bank, to which character is the prime requisite for membership and to which you will pledge all the property you own, we can dig a new channel for credit. We will keep our own money in the district and we will attract savings. Bankers will loan on the property of us all, so that money will come to us when we need it to help us in our production. Indirectly the whole district will benefit. We can accept savings from anybody, but loan only to members, and to them only for purposes which will bring increase. We will pay only a moderate interest on savings, and then it will be necessary to ask members to pay only a little more for their loans. To make a loan we may take the same sort of securities as other banks. We may do better than that. We may loan on personal surety if we keep a high standard of membership. If money is needed for any reason, any one of you may go to your neighbor and show him what you want to do and why it will be profitable for you to do it. If he approves of it, bring him with you to the bank. If he is willing to sign your note, becoming your surety, the bank must consider the loan, investigate it, and upon your promise to use it for the purpose stated will advance you the money. You cannot borrow money to pay your debts, or to invest so the return will be uncertain, or in any but provident ventures. Not all of you will need money, yet there are none of you who may not require funds to buy seeds or fertilizer or machinery. It is clearly a matter of wisdom for you to protect yourself by having open to you some source of credit. This you may have if you all stand together in brotherhood. You must each watch to see that the bank's money is properly spent, and give service wisely, willingly and unselfishly.'

"To the individual he would talk directly. 'You Johann, know that when your barn burned last year and you so nearly lost all the rest of your buildings, you were only able to go on because you managed to put a second mortgage on your land, at very bad terms. If you had then had the bank to come to, Heinrich or Hermann would willingly have signed for you because they know you are honest; you would have got a new loan to build a barn, on easy instead of exorbitant interest. All of us would have been glad to help, instead of which none of us were able. This is your chance to insure yourself in the best way.'

"So with urging and explaining, a little co-operative savings and loan bank with unlimited liability was formed."

In Germany there are two systems known by the names of their founders—F. W. Raiffeisen, and Hermann Schulze, of Delitzsch, a little village in the Grand-Duchy of Saxony, from which he and his banks are known as Schulze-Delitzsch. The former are entirely banks for farmers, each restricted to a single village; the latter chiefly for small and large trades-people, and all classes of peoples in the cities and large towns. Yet of the four billion dollars which now represent the annual turn-over of nine hundred and sixty Schulze-Delitzsch banks in their national association, one-fourth represents loans for agricultural purposes.

The rural banks with unlimited liability were started in the Westerwald, a poverty-stricken region in the province of Westphalia on the Rhine, entirely under the domination of the usurer. Herr Raiffeisen, who originated these rural banks, was a well-to-do and charitable gentleman who was from time to time chosen Burgomeister in these villages for the benefit he was able to give them. When he was Burgomeister of Weyerbusch, a little farming village a few miles inland from Neuwied on the Rhine, he endeavored to get the people out of the hands of the usurers by getting them loans at low rates from the large landholders. He soon saw, however, that if the farmers would all come together, unite their buying power, and pledge all their property as security, they could establish without help their own credit, and borrow and buy what they needed. Beginning at Weyerbusch and Heddesdorf, he aided the farmers to organize little co-operative credit societies, without shares, ruled by the general meeting in which each member has one vote—the universal system of co-operative voting.

For many years these little banks did not spread more than a hundred miles from the valley of the Rhine, but to-day they cover the Empire and number in their membership one-sixth of all the population engaged in agriculture in Germany. Seventy-six per cent of them are in villages of less than two thousand inhabitants. Once fundamentally poor, they are now able to show a total annual business of one billion two hundred million dollars. The number of co-operative credit banks of all sorts in Germany at the present time is more than seventeen thousand, with a total turn-over of six billion dollars.

KANSAS IN GOOD FINANCIAL CONDITION

Although Kansas has the poorest corn crop prospect and the greatest deficiency of moisture in the country, pity on the state would be wasted, according to Governor Hodges.

"Kansas," the governor said, while at his home at Olathe, where he controls a big lumber business, "never was in such splendid financial condition and never so well prepared to stand a little setback on account of weather conditions. Kansas raised a big wheat crop this year, a big oats crop and a big potato crop. Two cuttings of alfalfa were the best ever. It really has been a year of plenty for Kansas, and we would not have noticed the shortage there will be in the corn crop but for the lack of water to tide the stock through for a few weeks."

Governor Hodges is being commended at the stock yards for his action in enlisting co-operation of bankers of Kansas in helping stockmen hold their cattle through the drought. The governor, with the aid of W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas State Bankers Association, appealed to every banker in the state to do his part toward preventing sacrifices of live stock and urged stockmen to stick to their animals. The governor's efforts are bearing fruit, the movement of cattle not being as heavy as expected.

Governor Hodges is considering plans for storing water for use in drought years. Reservoirs were advocated after the drought of 1911, but nothing was done.

JOHN T. SCOTT BACK FROM WASHINGTON

John T. Scott, president of the Houston Clearing House and vice-president of the First National, Houston, returned recently from Washington. He said that the conference of southern bankers in Washington was very successful. "Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has promised the national banks of Houston, Dallas, Galveston, Fort Worth and San Antonio at least $40,000,000 to be used to help move the crops," he said. "Of course, all this money will not be held in the city banks. A good deal of it is to be distributed among the smaller national banks of the state. Secretary McAdoo stated that the $40,000,000 would be available within 60 days.

"We would probably have been able to take care of the movement of Texas crops without any serious difficulty, but the action of Secretary McAdoo will certainly make the problem of moving Texas' big crops this year much simpler and will remove all possibility of a money stringency in the state.

"Secretary McAdoo certainly deserves much credit for the masterful manner in which he is conducting the affairs of the national treasury. He has proved himself to be a masterful financier and all of the southern bankers who were at the conference at Washington were high in their praise of him. His one purpose has been to work for the good of the entire nation and to avert all chances of a financial flurry. The fact that he is willing to loan to the national banks many millions to facilitate the movement of the crops of the country proves conclusively that he is the firm friend of the American farmer and that he is willing to do all in his power to help them out when they need money for the movement of their crops.

"There has been considerable talk in the press of a money stringency in the East, but its extent has been greatly exaggerated. Although it is true that money has been a little close in most of the eastern money markets, conditions are improving steadily."

Beverly D. Harris of the South Texas Commercial National of Houston, who was also in attendance at the conference of southern bankers in Washington, remained in the East, where he will spend his summer vacation.

Caucus Currency Bill Agreed Upon

Washington, August 29.—By a crushing majority the administration currency bill has passed the democratic caucus. The insurgents were demolished. Chairman Glass predicts that the bill will pass the house by September 20th.

Bankers' Views Cause Changes

Two important amendments were adopted to-day which are in accord with the views expressed by bankers at the Chicago conference. One had to do with the reserve features of the bill, and the other related to loans authorized by "the country banks" on agricultural real estate. The latter proposition excited a long discussion.

As the bill was presented to the caucus it provided for nine months' loans on farm lands. The time of such loans was extended to twelve months in accordance with representations made by savings banks and other institutions that deal in such property.

The reserve section adopted proposes that reserves in central reserve and reserve cities shall be 18 per cent instead of 25 per cent, and 12 per cent instead of 15 per cent in "country banks," as required by existing law.

Twelve Reserve Districts Provided

The bill divides the country into twelve reserve districts and provides for the establishment of a federal reserve bank in each district. The capital for these banks is to be provided by national and state banks desiring to become members of a district association. Each bank is required to subscribe 20 per cent of its capital, 10 per cent of which is to be paid in.

The management of each reserve bank is to be lodged in the hands of nine directors, six of whom are to be selected by the capital contributing banks and three are to be elected by the federal board of control created by the bill.

The federal board is to be authorized to issue treasury notes to the reserve banks, receiving in exchange approved securities. These notes will be issued to the member banks upon commercial, industrial, and agricultural paper, which the reserve banks are authorized to discount for the member banks. The discount rate is to be fixed by the board of control and may not be uniform.

Provides High Reserve Funds

The reserve banks are authorized to hold approximately two-thirds of the reserves of all member banks and the member banks are required to deposit at least one-third of their reserves in the reserve banks.

The proposed system will transfer a larger portion of the reserves to the federal reserve banks, but makes them available for use by the member banks in exchange for commercial paper offered for discount. In the federal reserve banks the reserves of the other banks will be treated simply as deposits, thereby making them available for business purposes. The other deposits in the reserve banks will be

JOSEPH CHAPMAN of Minneapolis pulled off the third annual conference of the Bankers' Committees on Agricultural Development and Education at Kansas City, Tuesday and Wednesday in his usual creditable style. Mr. Chapman is the discoverer of the movement. His boom for first vice-president of the A. B. A. received great impetus at the Kansas City meeting.

President Rubey of the Colorado Bankers Association is cashier of the Woods-Rubey National of Golden. In his annual address at Denver he described conditions as they are in his state. The Denver convention closed a successful year for the Colorado Bankers under the leadership of President Rubey.

A BOOM IN PEOPLES GAS

The Peoples Gas Light & Coke Company will shortly call a special meeting of stockholders to authorize an increase in the capital stock from $35,000,000 to $60,000,000, according to reports in banking circles.

Part of the $25,000,000 increase will be offered to shareholders at par, to obtain funds to build the company's new coal-gas manufacturing plant. There are rumors that a portion of the new stock will be available for free distribution to shareholders in the form of a special dividend, just as the Commonwealth Edison Company recently decided to capitalize a portion of its surplus by declaring a 10 per cent stock dividend. There is no official information as to the plans of the gas financiers. The announcement is not official.

WASHINGTON CONSOLIDATION

The consolidation of the Union Savings Bank of the District of Columbia with the Commercial National Bank became effective Monday. The combined assets are over $10,000,000.

RETURNS FROM NORTHWEST

W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Illinois returned yesterday from a month's trip through the Northwest. Edens spoke at the conventions of the Washington and Montana bankers and at the Kansas City agricultural conference this week.

SHUMAN APPOINTED SUBTREASURY HEAD

Irving Shuman, cashier of the First National, Sullivan, Ill., will take charge of the subtreasury at Chicago September 15th, Len Small, the present incumbent, having resigned to make way for Mr. Shuman. Mr. Small, however, will retain the position until October 1st in order to teach Mr. Shuman his duties.

Revision of the assessments of downtown banks completed this week by the board of review shows an increase of $11,209,000 over the figures fixed last year.

Chicago bank clearings for last week increased nearly 8 per cent.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE Chicago conference was the greatest of its kind. It was original, forceful and honest as well as patriotic.

THE current issue of a New York banking paper says: "As this is written, we are in receipt of a copy of Chairman Hepburn's address at the Chicago meeting, from which undoubtedly the conference will take its keynote."

It wasn't a good guess. The conference didn't use any "patent insides" in fixing its policy and its resolutions weren't even warmed over—they are brand new stuff.

THERE were big men present. They thought for themselves. Festus J. Wade with his big oratorical flat-iron smoothed out a few wrinkles.

THEN G. M. Reynolds put a few creases in the garment before it was ready to try on. The committee on resolutions by staying up nearly all night did the rest.

WHEN it was over everyone was glad the square thing had been done by the parent association, the great A. B. A.

SOME of the more active of those present expressed themselves as approving all that was done. Following paragraphs are quoted:

J. B. FORGAN: The meeting was highly satisfactory. The report represents the unanimous opinion of the bankers from every section of the country.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS: The meeting with its "findings" has eliminated the principal argument which has been advanced in the past—that bankers are not in accord in their ideas. The making of the report has been attended by dignified proceedings and I believe it will be accepted at Washington in the spirit in which it is given.

SOL WEXLER: This is the first time we have had a unanimous expression from the banking interests and I believe that if the changes proposed are adopted at Washington the country will have a sound, workable banking law.

FREDERICK E. FARNSWORTH: The report will unquestionably influence the course of legislation. Within the last six weeks public opinion has been forming and has found its expression in a striking way in this meeting.

NATHAN ADAMS: With these resolutions placed before congress, action on the Owen-Glass bill will be speedy. Our demands are at best but simple justice, and to curtail them is to invite financial disaster.

H. A. MOEHLENPAH: I think congress will incorporate our amendments in the bill on currency finally passed.

R. S. HAWES: The resolutions contain the factors that eventually will make up the bill solving the currency problem. They embody the needs of the banking business and of the country at large.

JOS. T. TALBERT: It is to be hoped that the work of our conference will aid the national legislature in solving the most difficult and intricate problem of the business world.

LEVI L. RUE: I am delighted with the outcome of our deliberations. After the arguments had been exhausted every consideration gave way to the feeling that harmony and conciliation should be the keynotes of the gathering.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS: I regard the present convention as the most representative meeting the American Bankers Association has ever held on any subject. The delegates have shown the highest interest in every phase of the discussion, and their utter fairness in their deliberations is evident in the manner in which the resolutions were prepared and adopted. I have no doubt of the favorable action of congress.

HOMER MILLER stayed over a day to try out the links at Wheaton.

RICHARD T. FORBES went out to Homewood to see what he could do on a championship course.

"MY, my, George, but I'm glad to see you," said J. F. Sartori when he got to the LaSalle.

"WHAT'S the matter, Joe?" said Mr. Reynolds.

"I'VE been traveling four days with John Perrin on French vichy," said the financial wizard of Los Angeles.

"C'MON along," said the big Chicagoan, who further remarked: "Seems to me you told me the same thing at Atlantic City." "Yep, I did," said J. F.

THE two have been fast friends ever since the days of small things back in Iowa—their native state.

JOSEPH CHAPMAN also is an Iowan and a staunch admirer of D. L. Heinsheimer, president of the Iowa association.

CHARLES A. HINCH, president of one of Cincinnati's big banks, was one of the most dapper of the lot at the conference.

WHEN Chapman shook with Hinch he just let it slip "Mr. Hinchheimer," thinking of his Iowa friend.

"NAME is partly right," said C. A., "but the nationality is all wrong," and they went down stairs where Sartori et al had been.

MR. HINCH in reality made one of the most telling of the many fine addresses heard by the delegates.

NOBODY got so much applause as our good friend George Rogers of Little Rock. He's a weather specialist.

IN his capacity of weather prophet Rogers has predicted "cool" in Washington where (not when) J. B. Forgan hands the conference report to Chairman Carter Glass.

JAMES H. PERKINS and Ledyard Cogswell were here from Albany. Mr. Perkins is referred to as "the next president of the New York Bankers Association."

COL. J. J. SULLIVAN and E. R. Fancher came over from Cleveland. The Colonel will preside at the Council Club banquet at Boston and will welcome the delegates to the Ohio convention at Cleveland September 11th.

MR. FANCHER and the Colonel will board the Chicago-Boston special, for the reason that the Ohio special will not arrive in the Hub until some time Monday, too late for the busy ones.

LYMAN EDWARDS and E. L. Johnson were in from Iowa and joined Homer Miller in bragging the Iowa crops.

J. E. PLATT, secretary of the South Dakota bankers, and G. H. Richards, secretary for Minnesota, were busy attendants.

GEORGE H. RUSSEL of Detroit and Rome C. Stephenson of South Bend attended every session.

O. B. GORIN of Decatur and President John D. Phillips of the Illinois Bankers were among the "down-staters" who "sat in," and Col. J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo made an eloquent address.

tentatively, get the required new members in one month. Is there any response?

SECRETARY P. W. HALL of Iowa was kept away from the Chicago conference by illness. It wasn't French vichy, as in the case of Mr. Sartori, which floored the Iowan this time. It was just plain ice water that did it.

THE Iowa proceedings book is out about a month late. The time was wasted in waiting for a manuscript (see page 89) which never came.

HALF-TONES of the famous "forty million" check issued by the government in 1904 to J. P. Morgan "to stop the panic" are being printed in the dailies.

THEY illustrate the huge difference in the methods of then and now. The Wilson plan of direct aid to banks where funds are needed is a new chapter in "government aid."

MERCHANTS NATIONAL, Richmond, has performed a very valuable service at the opportune time. It sent out a letter of inquiry as to the crop conditions and demand for money to banks in North and South Carolina and in Georgia and Florida.

THE replies are printed in a neat little booklet for distribution, the names of correspondent banks being omitted. Geo. H. Kee-see of the Merchants will forward a copy on request.

CHAIRMAN CHARLES H. McNIDER of the "Joint Banking and Currency Committee" for Iowa, Minnesota, Montana and the two Dakotas, has sent out to bankers in those states full reports of the meeting recently held in Minneapolis.

GERMANIA NATIONAL, Milwaukee, now has $4,600,000 in deposits and still keeps hard at it.

ONE Oklahoma safe agent has in his employ to-day a man who was arrested last year for complicity in a number of bank robberies and who was charged with having the combinations to 250 safes owned by Oklahoma banks in his possession.—Oklahoma Banker

NOW it is up to the O. B. A. to run this pair—not out of the state—but straight into the pen.

RAND McNALLY DIRECTORY for July is out. Did anybody beat it? Not that you could notice.

MANAGER GEORGE K. REED says "The Rand McNally has the largest paid (p-a-i-d) circulation of any similar publication in America."

GEORGE is a cheerful, happy soul and says as they say in the melodrama, that he "has the papers" to prove it.

IN our section of the map the state secretaries base their charges for dues upon figures found in the Rand McNally, which certifies to its rated accuracy.

THE Chicago conference committee will meet the senate committee of which Senator Owen is chairman on September 3d in Washington.

POSSIBLY the hearing will be public and from its nature it should be.

GEORGE WOODRUFF was in on Tuesday, not on his way to the Chapman agricultural conference at Kansas City, but headed for the White Mountains for hay fever reasons.

HE will be back in time for the great Illinois convention, which President John Phillips and the Chicago committees are preparing for.

MR. WOODRUFF probably will not have any opposition for the chairmanship of the Illinois council.

HE paved the way for harmony at Peoria by withdrawing in favor of Col. J. S. Aisthorpe when the forces were closely balanced.

ILLINOIS association is in great luck to have in succession such men as Blum, Green, Crabtree, Harris and Phillips with Montgomery, Aisthorpe and Woodruff to come.

BY sitting up nights they have counteracted or warded off a mischievous bulletin service, the one which boasted of putting to rest banking legislation at Springfield.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS has just "laid to rest" a deluge of words on the currency bill, but here is one that got by him:

DATED August 18th, at the very moment when President Phillips and prominent Chicago bankers are negotiating for a prominent administration speaker on the Chicago convention program, a mendacious bulletin comes out.

IN heavy black-faced type denoted "a statement of President Wilson," that distinguished scholar and head of the nation is charged with making "rather loose references as to low interest rates."

SOME apology should be made at once or the speaking invitation withdrawn.

L. P. HILLYER was "up from Georgia" at the currency conference and in his inside pocket he had a little autograph copy of "When Bryan Came to Butte," sent him by Edward J. Bowman, president of the Daly Bank and Trust Company at Anaconda.

DOWN at the Briarcliff May meeting of the council, Mr. Hillyer was drafted as a banquet attraction. He recites "When Bryan Came to Butte" and "Casey at the Bat" as though inspired.

HE was the hit. No one present, except Mr. Bowman, knew the author of the Butte poem, which ever since 1896 had circulated anonymously.

IT is a wonderful jingle and without a rhythmic rival. C. H. Eggleston, editor of the Anaconda Standard, is the author. Mr. Bowman will send you a copy if you ask him. (Our promised copy has not arrived yet.)

OUTSIDE of the entertainment program, Boston bankers are probably most interested in the election campaigns being waged by some candidates for the various offices. William A. Law, of Philadelphia, is putting up a good fight against Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis. However, the "campaign tactics" are somewhat different.—South-eastern Banker.

"SOMEWHAT different" hardly expresses it. The Southeastern Banker also says "some feeling is evident at the method used by one candidate for endorsement by state associations."

THERE are two W. O. Joneses. The other one is president of the Bank of Elberton, Ga., and he's no "pote" (Dooley spelling) either.

LOUIS G. KAUFMAN was in Chicago this week en route from his splendid summer camp at Marquette, back to the "purlieus of Wall Street," where he is president of two big banks.

HE didn't know a thing, he said, but fishing stories and wasn't worrying about the currency bill.

MR. KAUFMAN was one of the very first to point out its weak points and frankly to admit its good ones. He stands with Mr. Reynolds, whom he greatly admires, on the subject.

MR. KAUFMAN says the American business man and the American banker can adapt themselves to any new conditions and that much which the bankers said about the present national bank act when it was passed really wasn't fit to print.

THE postal bank act was another case where the banker unduly magnified its possibilities for injury to the banking business.

MR. KAUFMAN'S two banks in New York, the Chatham & Phenix and the Century and the First National at Marquette are all doing well. He "aint mad at nobody."

JOHAN BURIANEK, vice-president and builder-up of the Peoples Savings at Cedar Rapids, is back from a world tour. September 1st he will retire from his present connection. He would be a valuable find for any bank looking for talent and energy combined.

GEORGE T. WELLS of the Denver National seems to be a very live wire. He jumped in and acted as secretary for the convention last year and is putting renewed life into the Colorado association's agricultural committee.

HE has had yards of good stuff in the Denver papers and probably has done more banker-farmer publicity work than any other man in the state.

FREDERICK A. BRACKEN is the new assistant treasurer of the Title and Savings Trust at Kansas City. For a number of years Mr. Bracken was cashier of the First State in Kansas City, Kan.

JOHAN SCHUETTE, Manitowoc, Wis., has sent a short letter to members of congress on "Banking Reform with the Stroke of the Pen."

MR. SCHUETTE compliments congress on the treasury move to collect 2 per cent on government balances and figures it up that former administrations lost $150,000,000 in interest by not doing it.

HE wants guaranty of deposits as the chief of all banking reforms.

ALBERT E. KUOLT, commissioner of banking for Wisconsin, reports a gain in deposits between calls of $18,147,076.20.

JOHAN L. HAMILTON is happy to-day. Last night the citizens of Hoopeston gave him a big banquet.

JOHAN has taken the presidency of two or three insurance companies and will reside in Columbus, Ohio. His companies will write all kinds of fiduciary, burglary and guaranty bonds.

BANKERS in Illinois should give their old friend a share of their business. They've never had a better chance to do the square deal a kind turn.

WE told Charles N. Fowler some time ago that the calcium had been turned off for good. He found it so at the Chicago conference with a vengeance.

LAST week's mention of the Chautauqua bungalow maintained by the Lincoln (Ill.) National has brought a fine picture of the building.

HALF-TONES of the bungalow are used in the bank's advertising, inviting everyone to use the facilities for checking packages, writing letters, rest and retiring rooms, porches and easy chairs, all free of charge.

CASHIER P. E. KUHLE says it's the best publicity investment his bank ever made. The bank serves souvenir postals free, containing a fine picture of the bungalow.

Stand with the Government for Currency Reform

The history-making Chicago conference of organized banking which concluded its sessions late on Saturday last closed in a blaze of glory. It disproved the general Washington belief that "the bankers can't agree on what they want." There was no program fixed in advance, no curb on the kind of resolutions or talk that might be introduced. It was an open-minded, open forum for every important element of organized banking in the United States. The American Bankers Association through its chief officers and its currency commission was at the helm. Every clearing house of record and every state association was represented and the committee which prepared the final report was composed of the ablest minds in the three branches of organized banking represented so fully. There were no contending factions such as the sensational dailies exploited so fully. The first resolutions introduced, "prepared at the request of Chairman A. B. Hepburn," so the printed copies said, were not kindly received and in the final report were wholly ignored. It was to be a real conference, and Charles G. Dawes, Festus J. Wade and George M. Reynolds united in a movement to sidetrack reactionary effort even in high places. The result was a harmonious and unanimous agreement upon essentials in the end. The resolutions suggesting changes in the Glass-Owen bill will be presented in Washington by the following committee:

James B. Forgan, president First National of Chicago.

George M. Reynolds, president Continental and Commercial National.

Joseph Chapman, vice-president Northwestern National, Minneapolis.

Festus J. Wade, president Mercantile National, St. Louis.

E. J. Hill, vice-president National Bank of Norwalk, Conn.

R. F. Maddox, vice-president American National, Atlanta, Ga.

Sol Wexler, vice-president Whitney-Central National, New Orleans.

Following is the official preamble and resolution adopted:

The currency commission of the American Bankers Association, charged with the duty of endeavoring to secure remedial banking legislation, and regarding the banking measure now pending in congress as evidencing the earnest wish of the administration to give a wise law to the country, has profoundly desired to co-operate in every way. To this end, upon its invitation that the presidents of the forty-seven state bankers associations and that representatives of the one hundred and ninety-one clearing houses attend and unite in an expression, this joint body composed of bankers from every section of the North and South, from coast to coast, representing country and American Bankers Association by its chief officers and its currency commission agree with representatives of 191 clearing houses and 47 state bankers associations to pull for the new banking bill. Sane and helpful recommendations made to congress. Committee will present views in Washington. The Chicago Conference.

city banks, state and national, and trust companies, after carefully considering the bill, has adopted the following:

Whereas, We recognize the imperative necessity of incorporating into the banking and currency system of this country those proven principles which will provide the most ample credit facilities with greatest safety and a currency based on gold which automatically adjusts its volume to trade requirements, in order that the highest stability may be attained for our commerce, thereby assuring continuity of employment for the laborer and favorable markets for the producer—the fundamental basis of general prosperity.

Whereas, Although the pending measure has many excellent features and recognizes certain principles fundamental in any scientific banking system, yet it is believed that the application of those principles may in certain respects be made in ways that will more surely avoid a credit disturbance and more efficiently attain the desired benefits for the whole people, and,

Whereas, We believe that to insure the successful operation of a new banking law it must be of such a character as to warrant a general acceptance of its provisions by existing banking institutions, both state and national, country and city; since the final test of the measure of success must be the strength and power for efficiently serving the interests of the entire country, which can alone be had from general participation of banks of all classes; and believing that the bill as now drawn, will, by its onerous provisions prevent state banks and many national banks from joining the system, and earnestly desiring to co-operate with the administration in bringing about the adoption of the most highly efficient plan.

Therefore, be it resolved, That we recommend changes in the bill as now published, convinced that, while not rendering the plan ideal, these changes would render organization more probable, would avoid a credit disturbance, and provide a system that would gradually develop into a great bulwark for the protection of our whole commerce, benefiting alike, and in equal measure, the laborer, the farmer and the business man.

The fundamental changes in the caucus bill, suggested by the Chicago conference, may be briefly stated as follows:

One central reserve bank preferred, but not more than five in any event.

Optional, not compulsory, subscription of stock in reserve banks by national and state banks and trust companies, to the extent of 10 (not 20) per cent of its unimpaired capital.

Federal reserve board deprived of power to remove directors of reserve banks if it is decided they do not represent the interests of respective districts.

Federal reserve agent not to be chairman of reserve bank directorates.

Subscribing banks that increase their capital shall purchase additional stock in district reserve bank equal to 10 (not 20) per cent of its increased capitalization.

Shareholders of federal reserve banks shall be entitled to cumulative 6 per cent dividend, instead of 5 per cent.

Any national banking association may join the banking movement at any time after the passage of the act and not be limited to one year.

Compulsory observation of the proposed law on penalty of dissolution is stricken out. This section was referred to by James B. Forgan as "the death warrant."

Federal reserve board shall consist of seven members, including the secretary of the treasury, ex-officio (secretary of agriculture and controller of the currency being dropped), and three (not four) members chosen by the president with the approval of the senate, and three members selected by the directors of the federal reserve banks in the same manner. The president's choices shall be from different sections of the country. All board members to devote their entire time at a salary of $10,000 a year and to serve nine years. The first board will be apportioned two each for three, six, and nine year terms. The president shall designate a governor and vice-governor of the board, their salaries to be fixed by the members.

Federal reserve banks permitted, but not compelled, to rediscount each other's paper.

Federal advisory council eliminated because of recommendations in change of personnel of reserve board.

Every reserve bank shall receive on deposit at par checks and drafts drawn on another reserve institution. This was contended for by the country bankers.

Reserve banks are permitted to buy foreign exchange to facilitate trade.

Farm land loans extended from nine months to twelve. Some country bankers contended for five years.

Savings department section eliminated in full, leaving the present arrangement, whereby national banks add this department by

The Federal Reserve Act

RECOGNIZING that all bankers and business men are interested in currency legislation, we have had the bill now before congress printed in convenient form, with side notes, and will send you a copy on request.

The Fourth National Bank Of the City of New York

JAMES G. CANNON, President

is prepared to transact all branches of domestic and foreign banking. Accounts are solicited from banks, bankers, firms, corporations and individuals, who may rely upon courteous consideration and the very best terms that are consistent with good business methods. Correspondence is invited. Capital, Surplus and Undivided Profits over sanction of the government, without danger of interference.

Federal reserve banks are forbidden to discount paper drawn for carrying securities other than stocks or bonds. This is aimed at the radical measures for the discounting of paper on warehouse receipts and like paper, to which conservative banking interests object.

All government moneys to be deposited in federal reserve banks except the 5 per cent redemption fund for existing national bank notes to be retired in twenty years.

Federal reserve bank notes shall be issued by federal reserve banks, not by government for treasury, as at present. This, on the belief that there is ample security in the banks and reserve banks to cover this currency, leaving government credit unimpaired for emergency use. All issues to be under supervision of controller, and with exceptions noted to be covered by 40 per cent gold reserve, balance of reserve in discounted paper and foreign bills of exchange. For each deficiency of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent or part thereof below 40 per cent gold there shall be a tax of $1\frac{1}{2}$ per cent per annum. No issue shall be made if gold reserve is below $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent. When such notes are received by another federal reserve bank they shall be returned for redemption to bank of issue. Payment by another bank, instead of return, shall cause penalty of 10 per cent tax. These notes shall constitute a first lien.

Important changes in reserve requirements provide: country banks' reserve reduced from 15 to 12 per cent, not less than 4 per cent to remain in vault, nor less than 4 per cent with federal reserve bank, remainder with correspondent. Reserve city bank reserve reduced from 20 and 25 per cent to a fixed 18 per cent, of which 6 per cent shall remain in vault, 6 with federal reserve bank, and 6 with central reserve city correspondent. Central reserve city bank reserve reduced from 20 and 25 per cent to a fixed 20, half to remain in vault and half with federal reserve bank.

On joint application of ten member banks the federal reserve board shall order an examination and report on any federal reserve bank.

The Chicago Tribune, Chicago Daily News and other influential Chicago newspaper recognized editorially the great services Mr. Reynolds performed in securing the complete eradication of all reactionary and political influences in the final report of the conference.

The following were the committee on resolutions:

Currency commission—James B. Forgan, chairman; George M. Reynolds; John Perrin, Los Angeles; Sol. Wexler, New Orleans, and A. Barton Hepburn, New York.

State banking associations—E. J. Hill, Connecticut; Nathan Adams, Texas; George A. Holderness, North Carolina; H. A. Moehlenpach, Wisconsin, and R. S. Hawes, Missouri.

Clearing house associations—E. F. Swinney, Kansas City, Mo.; R. F. Maddox, Atlanta, Ga.; Stoddard Jess, Los Angeles; S. D. Fitton, Hamilton, Ohio, and Graham G. Lacey, St. Joseph, Mo.

PREDICTS SLUMP IN BONDS IN CASE OF WAR

St. Louis, August 26th.—A drop of $200,000,000 in the value of 2 per cent Government bonds outstanding in the event of a war between the United States and Mexico was predicted here to-day in an address before the City Club by Festus J. Wade.

The decline would take place immediately upon the issuance of $100,000,000 bonds to finance the war, he said. Under such circumstances the whole power of the government could not maintain the 2 per cent bonds at par, he added.

Mr. Wade is a member of the currency commission of the American Bankers Association, which will present to President Wilson and congress the recommendations decided upon at the recent Chicago convention.

A Book for Banks

Railway equipment obligations, because of their fundamental soundness, have become a very popular form of investment for banks. They combine in a high degree the three requisites of a good investment—security, marketability and liberal income.

We have prepared a comprehensive book which describes the equipment issues of the principal railroads, and will be pleased to send a copy to any bank or banker on request.

Boston Convention

Boston, August 26.—In all respects the greatest convention the bankers of America ever have held will be that of the American Bankers Association in Boston, October 6th to 10th,—the 39th annual convention of this organization of 14,000 banks and trust companies. Interviews with the leading bank men in all parts of the country disclose a unanimity of opinion that the coming meeting affords the best possible opportunity for the banks to express their ideas regarding the currency bill now before congress, and which they believe to be the most important financial legislation in 50 years.

Agricultural development is another topic in which there is unusual interest. James J. Hill, the empire builder who has been talking scientific agriculture as a source of wealth for 20 years, and President George E. Vincent, of the University of Minnesota, will make the leading addresses on agricultural development.

A report of the work of the past year and the proposed action of the currency commission, which officially represents the association in matters of banking and currency legislation, will be read to the convention and voted upon by the delegates. A president will be elected to succeed Charles H. Huttig of St. Louis, who died last July, and the trust company section of the convention will have a special program which will command a great deal of attention.

But business will not be the only attraction at this convention. The delights of Boston and the entertainment program prepared by the Boston bankers are worth the time and expense incidental to many miles of travel and a week's stay at the Hub.

Though the convention will not formally open until Wednesday, October 8th, there will be committee meetings and the meetings of the executive council at the Copley-Plaza hotel on Monday, October 6th, and big meetings of the trust company, the savings bank, the clearing house and the state secretaries sections on Tuesday, also at the hotel; and the entertainment program provided by the Bostonians will begin on Monday morning and continue each evening of the week until Friday, when all day will be given up to entertainment.

Symphony hall will house the convention on Wednesday and Thursday. The presiding officer will be first Vice-President Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines at least a part of the time, and possibly some of the ex-presidents. The meetings of the sections will be presided over

AMERICAN STATE TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Directors of the American State Bank have decided to increase the institution's capital from $200,000 to $400,000, and have called a meeting of the stockholders for September 24th to authorize the addition. It is announced that the $200,000 new capital will be distributed to old stockholders as a stock dividend of 100 per cent, but the stockholders are to pay in $50 a share to create a surplus of $100,000.

In effect this amounts to giving the present stockholders $100,000 of new stock as a dividend and selling them $100,000 at par. There will also be an extra cash dividend of about $10,000 out of the present undivided profits. When the changes have been made the bank will have $400,000 capital, $100,000 surplus and a small amount of undivided profits.

It is proposed that of the $200,000 new stock to be issued 40 per cent, or $80,000, shall be pooled to be sold to outside interests with a view to increasing the business of the bank. The American State now has about $1,500,000 of deposits. The present stock has a book value of $203 a share. The market value is around $220. The present dividend rate of 6 per cent will be continued on the increased capital. John Karel is president of the bank and J. F. Stepina, cashier.

THE ILLINOIS TREASURERSHIP

Friends of Homer Brents, cashier of the Colegrove & Co. bank at Taylorville, are trying to induce him to enter the race for the treasurership at the coming Chicago convention. Mr. Brents has been told that there "is no other candidate in the field." Assistant Secretary Chas. H. Fox of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company has had his lightning rod up for some time and his candidacy has had much encouragement. If Mr. Brents goes in it will add to the interest considerably. Mr. Brents is well known and well liked by Illinois bankers.

GOVERNMENT MONEY DEPOSITED

The first of the $50,000,000 which the government is ready to deposit with banks to facilitate the movement of crops this fall has been placed in the South. Among the cities receiving federal funds were Richmond, Atlanta and Memphis, each getting $750,000. Baltimore will receive $2,000,000.

NEBRASKA AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

Last week there was held in Omaha a conference of representatives of the larger business interests of Nebraska for the purpose of considering ways and means of increasing the grain and live stock production especially along the line of placing farm demonstrators in as many counties as possible in the state. A number of bankers were present at the meeting, which was presided over by Carson Hildreth of Franklin, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Nebraska Bankers Association.

Mr. Hildreth in the course of his remarks recommended the creation of the "Agricultural Development Commission of Nebraska," whose duties shall be to advance the general purposes for which the conference was called; also that the Omaha meeting aid in the work of placing farm demonstrators in the various counties of Nebraska. The conference voted to adopt the plan and a committee of five was appointed to effect a permanent organization and carry out the purposes of the meeting.

J. J. TOWNSEND DEAD

James J. Townsend, former president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, died yesterday in this city following a stroke of apoplexy. Mr. Townsend was a well known figure in the financial world and recently had announced his candidacy for the democratic nomination for county treasurer.

CAIRO BANK TO MOVE

The early part of October the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, Ill., will move into a new building at the corner of Eighth Street and Washington Avenue. The new home is in the retail part of the city, three stories high and of white enameled brick. Col. J. S. Aisthorpe, the president, is chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association.

NEW BUILDING FOR DECORAH BANK

Winneshiek County State Bank of Decorah, Ia., is erecting a fine new bank building which it expects to occupy in the near future. President C. J. Weiser is building this in memory of his father and is having a beautiful memorial tablet engraved at the Chicago Art Institute. The building will be as complete as any on the American continent and will have few equals.

KANSAS CITY AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

Third annual conference of the bankers committees on agricultural development and education was held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in Kansas City, the sessions being in the Baltimore Hotel. Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis presided. Good roads, better farming methods and vocational education were subjects occupying the attention of the bankers. There were exhaustive discussions of all matters affecting the marketing and raising of crops and consideration of plans for the betterment of present conditions. The combined committees in attendance represented the bankers' associations of forty states. The attendance was somewhat light owing to the warm weather.

The first session of the conference was held Tuesday morning in the Francis I room. Three hours were given up to routine business and the delivery of special addresses, followed by luncheon in the Pompeian room, and the second session was held in the afternoon. The day was concluded by an auto ride and supper at the Blue Hills Club. The third meeting took place Wednesday morning and the fourth in the afternoon.

Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House, in discussing the conference, said:

"It is fitting that such an important meeting should be held here in Kansas City, which is the center of the greatest farming country in the world. We hope to make the good roads movement national, for it is one of the problems that touches most closely upon the farmers' needs. It would be a good thing for the farmers everywhere if the work done in this state on August 20th and 21st could be extended throughout the nation."

Chairman Joseph Chapman told of the origin of the movement and some of the things which have been accomplished in his state. Already they are teaching elementary agriculture in eighty rural schools and more than one hundred high schools and the boys and girls now go to school with "Rag Babies" under their arms as well as readers, spellers and geographies. The "Rag Babies" are long rolls of cloth used by the pupils for testing the germinating qualities of grains. Mr. Chapman said in part:

"The 'Rag Baby' promises to become as universal in the rural schools of Minnesota as the spelling book. This, of course, is only one of the branches in elementary agriculture. I use it as an example.

"With the 'Rag Baby' the pupils are taught how to test the germinating qualities of seeds. The seeds are rolled in the long roll of cloth and treated properly as to heat and moisture. If the germ of reproduction is there the test quickly develops it.

Scoffed at the "Rag Baby"

"The farmers laughed merrily at first when they were told that their boys and girls were to be taught how to select the seed corn for the next year's crop. A lot the kids would know about picking out the biggest and best ears and shelling the kernels at the ends. That's the way their fathers had done for years. They could tell the good seed by 'looking at it.'

"But the fathers were willing to let the book farmer go ahead with his tomfoolery. It furnished a part of the amusement for the long winter months, that and spreading the gossip about the schoolmaster.

"So the fathers, according to instructions, 'looked at' their corn and selected the best ears for seed and sent them with their children to the country schoolhouse for the 'Book Farmer' and his pupils to pore over.

The New Way Universal Now

"Often it developed in the test with the 'Rag Baby' that the seed selected as the best by the farmer father would not do at all. It looked fine, but faulty maturity had killed the germ of reproduction in the kernels of corn. Had they been planted the next spring they would have rotted and not 'come up.'

"Such object lessons converted the farmers rapidly to the new idea. Thousands now use the 'Rag Baby.' They take a few kernels from each ear of seed corn and put them through the test in the long roll of cloth. If a large percentage of kernels germinate, the ear from which these kernels were taken is retained as seed. If not, the ear is discarded. The 'Rag Baby' is equipped to test the kernels from

"The banker lends his money to the farmer. The better crop the farmer harvests the more secure becomes the loan. It's not generosity or philanthropy that prompts the banker to try to increase the efficiency of the farmer. It's a selfish interest."

B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., is an enthusiastic advocate of teaching agriculture in the schools. He said:

"I believe that every branch the child in the rural schools studies should smack of agriculture. The farmers' son and daughters should be so filled with the agricultural spirit that they will take up the work of their fathers naturally with no thought of the city.

"Now, one way to do this is by vocational educational methods in all the schools at the earliest possible age. Make all the problems in arithmetic those of the farm; have the grammar sentences speak of agricultural matters; make the reading lessons in things dealing with more efficiency in farm matters.

"Further than this methods of farming should be taught in all the schools. The great majority of boys go to school only until they are 14 years old. Therefore farm improvement should be taught to them at the very beginning of their school life—practical methods of managing a farm. This should include teaching the system of rotation of crops, the road problem and the correct manner of studying to stamp out a destroying evil among crops.

"In Illinois the bankers are into all the problems that confront the farmers. By helping the farmer the bankers can help themselves, and also the farmers themselves and the general public."

Among the speakers at the conference were P. W. Goebel, representing the associated bankers of Kansas City; Prof. J. H. Miller of the Kansas Agricultural College; Frank Bailey of the Title Guaranty and Trust Company, Brooklyn; Thomas Cooper, manager Better Farming Association of North Dakota; the Hon. J. C. McDowell, department of farm management, U. S. department of agriculture; the Hon. J. W. Bailey former governor of Kansas and Wm. G. Edens, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago.

In addition to these speakers a report was called for from each state represented, and all questions of importance discussed in open session by delegates and others present.

W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company, Chicago, in his good roads talk, said:

"Good roads are of vital interest to the farmer and if we want to make him satisfied with his calling, we shall have taken an important step in that direction by improving the roads over which he is obliged to travel in conveying his produce to market and also for pleasure. Much time and money have been spent in effecting other improvements and it would seem as though a portion of this might be profitably spent in bringing about a reform so highly desirable and necessary, so that we may evolve an adequate system of highways.

"The world is beginning to realize that the problem of the American farmer is one which cannot be regarded lightly, and that unless immediate attention be given to it we are apt to find ourselves confronted with an unfortunate economic situation.

"While the bankers of the country have performed splendid service in this movement, I believe that there is still much to be done in spreading the good roads gospel and that we should not lose sight of the important influence which good highways necessarily have on our welfare. The bankers are not the only class who are engaged in this movement, and we should co-operate with the other interests working along the same lines."

Resolutions providing for changes in the conditions of rural life in this country which, it was stated, would decrease the burdens and increase the opportunities of the farmer and his family, were adopted.

Vocational training in the public schools, plans to make the marketing of farm products easier and more profitable and federal aid to make farm demonstration work more general throughout the country were among the things urged. After advocating the vocational instruction of the children in the grades as well as in the high schools of the country, the resolutions in part follow:

"Our committee, being especially concerned with agriculture and instruction in that line in the country schools, realize that they need and must have the largest measure of aid to the end that the country boys and girls may be placed on an equal footing with those in town. Therefore, we urge both state and federal aid in this direction.

"In all this work we especially urge the centralization and consolidation of schools, particularly in the country, and that such state and federal aid be granted entirely with reference to carrying on such vocational work in connection with and as a part of our present school system, as opposed to separate schools.

"As farm demonstration work through local or county demonstrators has proved to be the most practical and effective means of improving farming methods, and as the government now and for many years has contributed thousands of dollars toward such work in certain states and little or nothing in others, we endorse and earnestly urge legislation on the part of congress that will provide generous federal aid in all the states for such work."

B. F. Harris was elected president before the final adjournment of the organization Wednesday. He said the next meeting probably would be held at Chicago, although that will be decided later by the executive committee. In accepting the office Mr. Harris said:

"Some people seem to be distrustful of bankers in this move to help the farmer. In this campaign for the educational and agricultural development of the farmer we really in our hearts desire to help him as well as ourselves. Ulterior motives should not be laid to every move made by the bankers."

Frank H. Williams of Michigan said: "The bankers have been too long taking interest from the farmer and not taking interest in him. This is a wonderful education campaign and it means the development of the farmer and farm life to the fullest extent."

The Citizens State, Hempstead, Tex., has declared a 5 per cent dividend and 5 per cent was carried to the surplus fund.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Copious rains which have fallen in practically all parts of the state have greatly benefited corn and fall pastures. Some of the corn was naturally damaged to such an extent that no amount of rain can bring it back to normal condition, this being especially true of scores of fields where barren stalks prevail. Much of the later corn will be greatly benefited, however, by the rains, while abundant rains will ease the feeding conditions very greatly. The next "I should worry" of the banker and farmer is the possibility of an early frost on the late and damaged corn. Business continues good, some localities having better conditions than last year while other places suffer because of short crops retarding business. Upon the whole, the business condition is as nearly satisfactory as might be expected when crops are so short as they have been in many sections this year.

Alfalfa Men Enthusiastic

Fifty alfalfa experts met at the St. Nicholas Hotel in Springfield and discussed the possibilities of alfalfa as a great forage crop for Illinois. Most of the men had "some big stories" to tell about the yield of alfalfa in the northern or the southern parts of the state and enthusiasm over the future of alfalfa in Illinois was keen. A number of the best known farmers of the state attended, such as A. P. Grout of Winchester, Eugene D. Funk of Shirley, George F. Tullock of Rockford, Fred L. Hatch of Spring Grove, Frank I. Mann of Gilman and others. Mr. Grout, who is president of the Illinois Alfalfa Growers Association, is a member of the banking firm of Neat, Condit & Grout of Winchester. In his address he said:

"Illinois is this year passing through one of the severest drouths in its history. Is it possible that the value of the greatest of our drouth resisting plants and the one least affected by the adverse conditions of the year shall be overlooked and disregarded even by the hard-headed farmers of Illinois?"

"It was not an uncommon picture in Illinois this summer to see parched and brown fields and denuded pastures, fired and wilting corn, and ruined crops alongside of fields of alfalfa green, beautiful and luxuriant and maturing crops with regularity, little affected by the same conditions which have caused such losses with other crops, and often with too frequent regularity for the comfort of those charged with the harvesting.

"The growing of alfalfa has been so thoroughly and widely tested under almost every possible condition that it is now safe to say that it can be grown successfully and profitably on practically every farm in Illinois. It has been found to be the best, the most valuable and most profitable farm crop grown. It only remains for the farm owners to apply the knowledge now available and make it the source of additional land."

Veteran Banker is Ninety-Five

L. K. Scroggin, president of the Farmers Bank of Scroggin & Son, of Mt. Pulaski, is perhaps the oldest banker in this state. Mr. Scroggin has been in active business for seventy-five years and does not by any means look to be ninety-five years of age. He resides just south of Mt. Pulaski on one of his farms and goes to town every day.

He is one of the largest land owners in this state and up to five years ago owned 60,000 acres of land in the United States and Canada. He has been decreasing his holdings and now owns 40,000 acres and was in Kansas City only a few weeks ago selling some of his land. He owns 10,000 acres in Canada, 10,000 in Minnesota and the rest in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Mississippi Alabama and Texas. The Farmers Bank of Scroggin & Son is one of the old private banks of the state and has this wealth of real estate behind it. It was established in 1872. T. A. Scroggin is the cashier. The correspondents are the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago and the Third National of St. Louis.

New Bank Building at Greenview

Ground has been broken at Greenview for the new building of the First State Bank. The new building will be one of the best appointed village banks in the state and will include all of the up-to-date furniture and vault fixtures usually placed in banks in towns of that size at the present time and small towns have now almost as pretentious bank buildings proportionally as do the cities.

This is the second modern bank building for Greenview, the Bank of H. H. Marbold being one of the most beautiful bank structures in that part of the state and is said to be complete enough for a city of 15,000 people. Mr. Marbold is an extensive farmer and stock raiser and is well known among stock men.

Another new bank building which is now almost completed is that of the Gerber State Bank at Argenta, a good business village near Decatur.

Stable Investments

It is an undoubted fact that the most truly conservative investment is the one which never fluctuates in price or depreciates in value, but remains fixed and secure at par under any and all conditions. The more nearly an investment approaches perfect stability in value, the more completely is it free from any trace of speculative element. By its very nature, a carefully chosen First Mortgage Loan on improved real estate is a non-fluctuating investment. When divided up into a series of First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds, the investment loses none of the conservative features of the mortgage. The investor who purchases this class of security rests secure in the knowledge that his investment is free from influence by adverse business or financial conditions, or political or tariff changes. We own and offer a great variety of First Mortgages secured by the highest class of improved income-producing, centrally-located Chicago real estate, maturing serially in two to ten years. We have purchased these bonds with our own funds after careful investigation, and recommend them in the highest terms as safe and attractive investments for income. Denominations $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000.

guest, from apoplexy. He was seventy-one years of age and for many years had been a prominent business man of Fairbury. The general mercantile business of Walton Bros. has been one of the largest department stores in central Illinois and the family has taken a prominent part in the banking interests of Fairbury. Isaac Walton had been a member of the firm of Walton Brothers since 1868. He had very extensive interests in the rice lands of Arkansas and was one of the largest rice-growers in that state. He leaves a large estate.

Calhoun County on the Map

Calhoun county, tucked away between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers just at their junction, is not to be overlooked this year with the apple crops which are now being marketed there. Calhoun county is long and slender, with two great rivers on either side and with no locomotive whistles to break the silence. Nevertheless down there "Apple is Autocrat" rather than "Corn is King," for we learn that Chris Ringhausen, the "apple king of Calhoun county" has just sold his apple crop to a Chicago house for a sum reported to be $36,800. His orchards are four in number, the trees are in their prime and are yielding about 16,000 barrels, for which the owner receives $2.30 a barrel. In 1911 his orchards brought him $20,000 and in 1912 slightly more than that. Four other Calhoun county orchards have been sold for $10,000 each so there is a fair amount of prosperity down there in that corner of Illinois. Let us not overlook Calhoun county.

For many years Calhoun county had no bank as well as no railroad. Now the Bank of Calhoun County, located at Hardin, established in 1899, is doing a good business with $50,000 capital and its deposits have reached $342,000. M. A. Kamp is the president and E. E. Williams is the cashier. Corn Exchange National of Chicago and the National Bank of Commerce and the Third National of St. Louis, are its correspondents.

Bankers Aid County Fairs

George A. Anthony, president of the Kewanee National of Kewanee, and Len Small, president of the First National of Kankakee, are secretaries of the Henry and Kankakee county fairs held in their respective cities. C. R. Miller, cashier of the First National of Kankakee, is president of the fair association. Both the Kewanee and the Kankakee fairs are successful and are attended by thousands. The Kankakee fair, located in close proximity to Chicago, draws large crowds from the metropolis by trolley and automobile, the city people delighting to attend a "county fair." As the Kankakee fair always begins on Labor Day, the holiday pleasure seekers are attracted to the county fair in large numbers.

In spite of the fact that many county fairs have been greatly mismanaged and badly financed, as all who know conditions will agree, it is true that these fairs can be made very interesting and profitable to the farmers of the vicinity. There are great possibilities in such exhibitions for agricultural and live stock displays and the banker-farmer movement could aid in no better way than to stimulate interest in an annual exhibit of soil products and live stock under a properly managed and financed fair. Racing seems to have lost none of its interest in spite of the coming of the automobile and lovers of good horses are as numerous as ever. While there are many objections to racing from the gambling standpoint, yet the sport is an interesting one and provides abundant amusement. It is to be hoped that the value of county fairs from the standpoint of agriculture and stock raising may yet be realized and that racing be made unobjectionable and wholesome.

Illinois Notes

The Sangamon County Farmers Congress will ask the Sangamon county board of supervisors for $5,000 annually for the support of their county soil supervision work. Both the Peoria and the Tazewell county soil work is nicely started and both are attracting wide attention from the farmers and business men.

The Second National of Monmouth is now in temporary quarters pending some extensive improvements to its banking room which when completed will be one of the best appointed in the state.

In the south part of Macoupin county there is lively competition between the villages of Medora, Brighton, Piasa and Fidelity, with the result that the last three named towns are each to have a bank, while Medora already has one, so that there is keen rivalry between them. A branch of the Alton Trust and Savings of Alton will be established at Piasa. Keen rivalry between banks in the same or adjacent towns may stimulate business in some ways but is likely to lead to misunderstandings and possible losses in other directions.

James E. Rhodes has been named president of the First National of Altamont to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Herman Schwerdtfeger. J. L. Brummerstedt, who has been identified with the bank since its organization, was named a director. W. H. Shubert, vice-president of the Charleston Trust and Savings of Charleston, also is a director.

The Sangamon County Farm Congress is following the example of the Kankakee county soil expert, J. C. Collier, and is arranging a special train to take the farmers of the county and their wives to see the agricultural experiment work of the University of Illinois.

COUNTRY AND CITY BANKS TO BE TREATED ALIKE

According to statements made at the treasury there will be no further distinction between the classes of securities acceptable for the placing of deposits at city and country banks. The class of securities accepted will be within the control of the distributing banks responsible for the deposits. Assistant Secretary Williams says that Secretary McAdoo will determine each security for deposit for itself, city banks alone receiving direct deposits. The securities accepted from one bank may not in like manner be accepted from another. The secretary will not allow the treasury to be loaded up with the same paper. For instance, should one bank offer $250,000 worth of perfectly good county bonds these probably would be accepted as security, but should another bank offer another $250,000 worth of the same bonds these would be refused. The treasury will have had enough of these same bonds. It wants only marketable security. As there is to be no direct deposits with country banks, inquiries relative to a distinction to be observed between the collateral of city and country banks are not answerable except by indirection in the security the city bank may demand of the country bank, this in turn to be passed on by the secretary, who is to insist that each case is to be individual and stand on its own bottom.

The Detroit (Mich.) Savings Bank opened its ninth branch at 283 Holden Avenue recently. Earl W. Collins is manager.

WISCONSIN

The first meeting of the incorporators of the Bankers Mutual Casualty Company for the insurance of Wisconsin bank deposits was held in the office of Secretary George D. Bartlett this week. C. M. Smith of Janesville, Wis., was elected president of the new bankers' organization. Other officers are vice-president, F. W. Humphrey, Shawano; secretary and treasurer, George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee; directors, E. A. Dow, Plymouth; F. W. Humphrey, Shawano; George N. Fratt, Racine; Adolph Pfister, Sheboygan, and George D. Bartlett, Milwaukee. While the company will confine its business to Wisconsin at the start its articles of incorporation permit it to extend its business to other states later. Business at present will be conducted through the offices of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, Pabst building, Milwaukee. The charter of the company will permit the writing of fidelity and depository bonds, but this business will not be undertaken at first.

Bankers Divided on Currency Bill

Milwaukee bankers are divided in opinion on the Glass-Owen currency bill, discussed at the national meeting of bankers in Chicago last week. Fred Vogel, Jr., president of the First National, says: "I think that the currency bill should be drawn by the bankers. The Glass-Owen bill in its present form will undoubtedly injure the banking business. It is up to the bankers to get the best possible legislation for their institution, and for the public." William Bigelow, vice-president of the First National, says: "The currency bill in its present form is not workable. Certain modifications are necessary. We hope that the amendments adopted at the Chicago conference will in the end be considered by the administration and used to make the currency bill a better measure." Herman F. Wolf, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, just returned from a three months' vacation abroad, urges the expediency of a special committee of bankers to represent the business at large at Washington. R. J. Schwab, vice-president of the German-American Bank is at difference with many of the bankers regarding the bill. He said: "I can see no particular danger to the banking business in general from the Glass-Owen bill although it may hamper some of the larger banks at the start. I believe that the banking business should be under governmental direction."

Sees No Need of Government Funds

J. W. P. Lombard, president of the Milwaukee Clearing House Association, and head of the National Exchange Bank, does not see the necessity of the government crop loan in Wisconsin. "We appreciate the offer as a matter of sentiment, but we do not need the money," he said. "As so many cities will share in the $50,000,000 fund, the share we would be entitled to would be only a drop in the bucket in case of real necessity."

Wisconsin Notes

J. R. Wheeler of Columbus, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Wisconsin

Bankers Association, and Secretary George D. Bartlett of the association, went to Kansas City Monday to participate in the agricultural conference.

"Beware of counterfeit $10 national bank notes," is the import of a warning received this week by Milwaukee bankers from the United States treasury department at Washington. Earmarks of the bad money which has made its appearance are described in the circular as follows: "Figures poorly formed and out of alignment; lathe work very good; back of bills darker shade of green than the genuine; paper thick and harsh to the touch."

The city administration will appeal to a bond broker to float the bonds it has been unable to sell, according to authorization given the public debt commission this week. Increasing the interest rate from 4½ to 5 per cent or selling the bonds on deferred payments, two suggested alternatives, were considered impractical. The action is necessitated by the short interval to the making out of the new tax rolls.

Violating a former probation by passing a bogus check, James Ludford, old time forger, was sentenced to two years at Waupun this week. He already has served terms at Stillwater, Minn., Waupun, and in the Milwaukee House of Correction.

Following a warning in the showing made by the abstract reports of June 4th, Wisconsin banks on August 9th showed a net increase in resources of $956,613.55. There has

KANSAS LAW UPHELD

J. N. Dolley, president of the National Blue Sky Law Protective Association and author of the Kansas "Blue Sky" law, has given out the following statement regarding recent litigation in connection with the Kansas "Blue Sky" law:

The District Court of Shawnee County, in the State of Kansas, recently handed down a decision upholding the constitutionality of the now famous "Blue Sky" law. The constitutionality of the law was attacked on the following grounds by the attorneys for the American Sugar Manufacturing and Refining Company, whose officers have recently been placed under arrest by the federal government for alleged misuse of the United States mails:

1. That the law authorizes the taking of private property for public use without just compensation.
2. That the law deprives the plaintiff and all others similarly situated or interested, of his property without due process of law, and denies to him the equal protection of the law.
3. That it confers judicial power upon an administrative officer.
4. That it violates the provision of the constitution that "the citizens of each state shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the several states."
5. That the bill contains more than one subject, which is not clearly expressed in the title.
6. That it violates the bill of rights by imposing cruel and unusual punishment.
7. That it violates the state constitution which provides that all laws of a general nature shall have uniform operation throughout the state.

The decision which was rendered by Judge H. Whitcomb and Judge A. W. Dana, of the First and Second Divisions of the District Court of Shawnee County, sitting jointly, upheld the law in every particular.

Judge Whitcomb, in delivering the opinion of the court, which answered the above charges in detail, said in part:

"Regarding the exercise of police power, the right of the state in that respect is the right to exercise the functions of government, provided it is not exercised arbitrarily or unreasonably. The power is not as limited as stated in some of the state authorities cited.

"As I read it, the principal purpose of the law is to regulate and supervise the dealing in securities by investment companies. I think it is very clear that the state has the power to regulate matters of that kind to protect its citizens against imposition and to place the matter of the administration of the law in the hands of some officer to be designated—in this state, the bank commissioner and charter board.

"It is well known to everyone that in some cases during the last few years, there are people—some of them might be found within the limits of this court room—that have been led to invest their money in various schemes brought to their attention by agents and brokers, perhaps in good faith, and a very large per cent of the investments that have been made in that way, in some classes at least, have been very unfortunate. I might refer to mining investments in which the percentage of return, omitting all consideration of interest and dividends and limiting it to the return of a portion of the principal, has been very small indeed. With a good many investments of that character, people have felt well satisfied if they received anything in return ultimately on the principal.

"During the last few years another class of investments, and this term is principally used in this connection, has been the land contracts—investments in land purchased on time. There has been a large amount of this sort of business done in this state to the knowledge of everyone. It is not to be thought that the people who have been engaged in that business have all been dishonest or anything of that sort. No doubt a pretty large percentage of them have acted in good faith, but the nature of the investment was a very uncertain one.

"This leaves one other matter and that is the question of the title. The courts have held frequently that it is a discretionary matter of the legislature as to the particular form of the title. A title isn't necessarily bad because it is broader than the body of the Act, provided the Act contains but one subject and that is expressed in the title. So in examining this title, we shall have to adopt the rule that has been established, and that is, it will have to be given a liberal construction. This objection that is made to the title is referred to by the Supreme Court—I think by Justice Johnston—as 'the frequently used and well-worn objection.' It has, of course, been often made, but apparently in recent years without very much success."

In discussing the question of whether the word "company" as used in the law could be applied to single individuals, Judge Whitcomb said:

"Individuals may be included within the meaning of the term. If this were a statute placing a tax upon a telephone company, could it reasonably be said that it wouldn't include individuals operating such public utilities? The word 'company,' as used in the statute under consideration, includes individuals as well as corporations."

Attorney-General Dawson expressed himself as being well pleased with the decision rendered and that he would be able to uphold the same in any court in the land.

"I am highly pleased," said Mr. Dolley, "with the results of this litigation. There has never been any doubt in my mind but what the law was constitutional in every respect and nothing would please me better than to have the enemies appeal from the decision of the district court, as we are ready and anxious to carry the matter through the supreme court, of the United States, if necessary, and there is no question but what that court would uphold every word of the decision of the district court."

The Proviso State Bank of Maywood, Cook county, has begun business with capital of $50,000. Albert W. Holden, Cyrel Vandembrouche and George A. Hart were given the permit to incorporate the bank.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The demand for money during the past week has been fair with rates steady at 6½ per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange has been in moderate demand and the rate was around par. Bank clearings were not quite as large as those of a week ago but were fair and satisfactory.

Name Federal Deposit Body

The committee of St. Louis bankers and business men who will pass on collateral offered for portions of the $3,000,000 to be deposited by the federal government with local banks during the crop moving period has been named by the Clearing House Association and is composed of Walker Hill, president Mechanics-American National; Festus J. Wade, president Mercantile Trust; W. H. Lee, president Merchants-Laclede National; A. O. Wilson, vice-president State National and N. A. McMillan, president of the St. Louis Union Trust. E. S. Simmons was named by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and with sub-treasurer W. D. Vandiver will represent the government on the committee.

Trust Company Merger Legal

Circuit Judge Grimm has decided the merger of the Lincoln Trust and Title Company and the Title Guaranty Trust is legal. The ruling was made in the suit of George E. Luehrmann and Guy B. Fulton against the companies. Two suits were filed in 1909. One was dismissed in May and the other decided in favor of the companies. Luehrmann owned 244 shares of stock in the Lincoln Company, forty-four of which were in Fulton's name. The Title Guaranty Company bought all the Lincoln Company's stock, except that held in the names of Luehrmann and Fulton. Luehrmann refused to sell and also refused an offer to exchange the stock for that of the Title Guaranty Company. The two brought suits for the value of the stock, which they placed at $35,000. Judge Grimm ruled their contentions that the majority stockholders in the deal took advantage of the minority were not sound.

Texas Banker in St. Louis

Rufus Coy, vice-president of the Western National of Fort Worth, Tex., and a former Missourian, was a visitor at the State National last week. Mr. Coy praised very highly Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, especially the latter's stand on the crop moving problem.

Approve Proposed Currency Changes

St. Louis bankers returning from Chicago were enthusiastic in their approval of suggestions for national currency legislation. Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust, is one of the members of the special committee, selected by the bankers in their national conference in Chicago, to go to Washington and present the recommendations, unanimously adopted at their meeting, to President Wilson, Secretary McAdoo and congress. Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National, who was one of the St. Louis representatives to the conference, said that he believed the suggestions adopted by the conference would do much to aid President Wilson and congress in shaping financial legislation that would be beneficial to the country and obtain legislation that is much needed. "I believe that if the suggestions are properly presented, they will be received by President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo, who have intimated that such suggestions will be given due consideration," said

Mr. Hill. Richard S. Hawes, vice-president of the Third National, who attended the bankers' conference as president of the Missouri Bankers Association, was one of the three Missouri bankers who were members of the committee of resolutions which drew up the suggestions adopted. The other two were E. F. Swinney, president of the First National of Kansas City, and Graham G. Lacey, president of the Tootle, Lemon & Co. National of St. Joseph. Mr. Hawes said: "I consider the Chicago conference one of the most important ever held. We met as private citizens, interested in the general welfare of the country. Our purpose was not to criticize but to suggest improvements to the bill now pending before congress. We have no doubt that they will be given consideration."

Addressed City Club

Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust, in an address before the City Club Tuesday, outlined what the bankers want in the currency bill now pending in congress. Mr. Wade also addressed the Colorado bankers at Denver on Thursday.

To Agricultural Conference

M. R. Sturtevant, vice-president of the Central National, St. Louis, represented the St. Louis Clearing House Association at the conference of committees on agricultural development and education held in Kansas City this week.

New Officers for Carrollton Bank

The stockholders of the banking house of Wilcoxson & Co., Carrollton, Mo., met recently and elected H. J. Wilcoxson a director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Jas. M. Wilcoxson. The directors elected H. H. Wilcoxson, who has been cashier for several years, president. H. J. Wilcoxson, who formerly was assistant cashier, was promoted to the cashier-ship and Jack Wilcoxson was elected assistant cashier. John J. Wilcoxson was re-elected vice-president.

The financing of the cattle industry is becoming a question of increasing importance to the bankers of the great corn belt.

Our experience of more than thirty years, our assets of more than six million dollars, and our location at one of the largest markets in the United States especially equips us for satisfactorily handling the accounts of those interested in the proposition.

The National Stock Yards National Bank
National Stock Yards, Illinois

The only bank at the St. Louis National Stock Yards

New Arkansas Bank

A new bank is being organized at Grady, Ark., to be known as The Bank of Grady. J. H. Hellums will be president; B. F. Ingram, vice-president; directors—M. S. Hastings, J. H. Hellums, J. W. Sanders, B. F. Ingram, S. A. Woods, T. S. Lovett and Dr. E. L. Hutchison. The capital is $15,000, all paid in, and it is expected the bank will open October 1st. The cashier will be elected at the next meeting of the directors.

Oklahoma Bank Deposits Up

More than 25 per cent increase in bank deposits in Oklahoma City during the year ending August 9th over the same twelve months ending August 9, 1912, is shown by the report of the Oklahoma City Clearing House Association. A healthy increase is also shown in cash in hand and sight exchange. Loans and discounts also show an increase over the previous year. The greatest increase is in the deposits, which total for the year just past $13,231,715, while the August 9, 1912, reports showed that the total at that time was $10,511,153, an increase of almost $3,000,000, and more than 25 per cent over the previous year.

Asks Receiver for Trust Company

T. W. Garrett has filed application in the district court for a receivership for the Western Guaranty and Trust of Oklahoma City, of which he is a stockholder. The petition alleges that H. W. Williams, as president of the company, capitalized at $250,000, has managed the affairs of the company in his own interest and in a manner derogatory to the institution. Garrett charges that Williams has had stock in the trust company issued to himself without paying for it, and that other stock in the institution has been sold for prices greatly in excess of its intrinsic value. As a further reason for the receivership, Garrett claims that officers of the company have refused to call a meeting of the stockholders, at which officers and directors might be elected, but that instead meetings have been held in out-of-the-way places at which officers have been elected and business transacted without the knowledge of the stockholders.

Southwest Notes

The officers of the Merchants and Planters Bank, Arkadelphia, Ark., have let the contract for their new building.

E. E. Lewis, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce at Coweta, Okla., has been indicted on a charge of embezzlement.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank and Trust Company of Taylor, Tex., J. V. Stiles, a ranchman and capitalist of Thrall, was elected a director to fill the vacancy on the board of directors occasioned by the recent resignation of T. W. Marse. The directorate of the First State Bank and Trust Company, as now constituted, is as follows: Robert J. Eckhardt, Oscar E. Roberts, John F. O'Shea, Robert C. Eckhardt and J. V. Stiles.

A capital of $2,000,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $1,019,063.92 is shown in the recent statement issued by the Bankers Trust of Houston.

At a special meeting of the Texas state banking board a certificate of authority to do business was granted to the Guaranty State, Whitehouse, capital stock $10,000. C. H. Willingham is president and J. McCutcheon cashier. This bank has assumed the guaranty fund plan of protecting its depositors.

The Yowell (Tex.) Bank, a private institution, opened for business recently. Tom Smith is president and A. F. Stephenson cashier. It is a branch of the First National of Ladonia.

Houston's authorized bond issued for $1,200,000 has been placed in ordinance form by the city council. These bonds, $800,000 of which are for street improvement and $400,000 of which are for bridge bonds, will bear interest at 5 per cent per annum, payable in New York.

The Texas department of insurance and banking has approved the following banks as reserve agents for state banks: Guaranty State and Trust of Dallas for the Winters (Tex.) State; Union National of Houston for the Liberty (Tex.) State; Lumbermans National of Houston for the Farmers Guaranty State of Meridian; Stock Yards National of Fort Worth for the Guaranty State and Trust, Dallas; Alice State and Corpus Christi National for the Guaranty State of Robstown; National Bank of Commerce, Houston, for the First State of Franklin; Commercial National, Shreveport, and State Bank of Marshall for the Security State Bank and Trust Company of Longview.

government moneys, all of which is to be placed in these institutions, and such deposits as may be made by member banks. The federal reserve banks are prohibited from accepting deposits from the public, and also prohibited from discounting directly for the public.

Notes Redeemable in Gold

The bill provides that all treasury notes to be issued shall be redeemable in gold upon demand at the reserve banks or at the treasury of the United States. To provide for this redemption the reserve banks are required to make a deposit in the treasury of gold equal to 5 per cent of all the notes issued, and in addition to hold in their own vaults an amount in gold sufficient to make with the deposit in the treasury 33 1/3 per cent of the entire amount of notes outstanding. The notes also are made first liens against the entire assets of the reserve banks.

The federal board of control is to consist of seven members, three of whom are to be the secretary of the treasury, the secretary of agriculture, and the comptroller of the currency, the other four to be named by the president and confirmed by the senate.

Board's Issuing Power Limitless

The board has power to issue notes without limit, can prescribe the exact character of paper which the reserve banks must pledge for the redemption of these notes, can make exhaustive regulations for the management of the federal reserve banks, and virtually control transactions between these banks and the member banks which do business with the public.

The board has authority to permit country banks to make limited loans on agricultural real estate for a period of nine months, and also has authority to designate banks which are to be classed as "country banks."

KENTUCKY MERGER

Jackson, Ky., August 26.—Final arrangements have been made for the consolidation of two of the leading financial institutions, the Breathitt County Bank and the Hargis Commercial Bank and the formation of the Hargis Commercial Bank & Trust Company, with a capital stock of $75,000. The new institution will occupy the new Hargis Commercial Bank & Trust Company building, and former State Senator A. H. Hargis, who is president of the Hargis Commercial Bank, will be president; J. P. Crawford, former president of the Breathitt County Bank, will be vice-president, and John H. Hindman, now cashier of the Breathitt County Bank, will be the cashier. It is understood that the actual consolidation will take effect September 1st.

THE GENERAL SITUATION

Bankers and business men are looking toward the future with a reasonable degree of assurance. While there is a certain amount of uncertainty as to the events of the next few months from a legislative as well as a business and industrial standpoint, this is not sufficient to cause a feeling of uneasiness. In well informed circles it is the consensus of opinion that the nation's men are big enough to adjust themselves readily to any change which may be brought about.

It must be admitted in all candor that the crop yield this year will not equal that of last; but, when one considers that 1912 was an exceptional year, the outlook this year would seem not to afford any reasonable ground for discouragement. Certain sections of the country have suffered heavily through lack of moisture, but the current belief is that the profits of last year will be sufficient to carry these sections through an off-year. Optimistic people are pointing out that one advantage to be gained from this situation will be a lessening of the demand usually made upon banks for funds for crop requirements. It would seem, however, that, with the offer of assistance from the treasury department, this argument would have no particular significance. At any rate, the outlook for easier money this fall seems to be reasonably bright.

The demand for government crop funds has not been so large as was originally anticipated. Nevertheless, the announcement of the department has had a salutary effect and has served to allay fears of any possible stringency. It has been reported that many banks are slow to comply with the conditions which will entitle them to participate in the distribution of the government money.

The Mexican situation is occupying a large place in the public attention. President Wilson has the confidence of the people, who are depending upon his judgment in the matter. That he will use the utmost discretion in this delicate situation and that he ultimately will effect the proper solution of the problem is the general belief.

OHIO PROGRAM

The principal speaker at the Ohio convention to be held in Cleveland, September 11th and 12th, will be Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma. Senator Owen will discuss the currency bill. Dr. H. Parker Willis, associate editor of the Journal of Commerce, New York, will talk on the reserve feature of the Owen-Glass measure.

Among the entertainment features will be a dinner at the County Club for the bankers and their families September 11th and a boat ride on the Secandbee September 12th, with luncheon on the boat.

RAILROAD PASSES DIVIDEND

At a meeting of the directors of the Big Four this week it was decided to pass the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock. This action was caused by the loss of business and increased operating expense as a result of recent floods.

PEOPLES GAS MAY INCREASE CAPITAL

It is rumored in banking circles here that the Peoples Gas Light and Coke Company is contemplating an increase in its capital stock. Details are lacking.

HOUSE TO CONSIDER CURRENCY BILL SEPTEMBER 3d

It is expected now that the house will be in a position to give consideration to the currency bill September 3d.

Editorial Comment

THE CHICAGO CONFERENCE

The far outstanding feature of the Chicago currency conference was the harmony with which a wise and helpful report was adopted with not one dissenting vote. Personality was submerged in the face of a national question of importance up for decision. It was a great triumph for the progressive tendency in organized banking circles. There was no domination or control attempted by the currency commission, by the clearing house or by the state bankers associations. No hastily considered action was taken upon any branch of the subject and the conference at the very start became a deliberative body. The Daily News, one of Chicago's most influential papers, said editorially that "the denunciation of the Owen-Glass bill would have been foolish in view of the reasonable attitude of the president, the secretary of the treasury and leading members of congress. They are ready to make concessions if in this way the bill can be improved. Each banker, no matter how freely he gives his views, is but one man. Grant that he is deeply versed in the mysteries of banking and you still have to account for the dissenting views held by other eminent and accomplished bankers. Each of them may be reasonably sure that he is not going to get precisely the kind of currency legislation he would individually prefer. Each should try, however, to get the best legislation possible.

"The bankers who counsel co-operation with the law makers in an effort to get a good law at the present session of congress clearly give the best advice. Mr. Reynolds of Chicago, for example, fresh from a conference with the secretary of the treasury, told his fellow bankers: 'We are talking about a measure that is incomplete. What we do should be in the nature of conciliatory and constructive discussion. We should waive everything petty and penurious and small. We shall find then that the administration will be willing to meet us so far as is possible.' If the bankers take at this time a properly helpful course, in the opinion of Mr. Reynolds, the country will be able to get 'a bill that is reasonably satisfactory to all interests.'"

The Chicago Tribune concludes an editorial indorsement of the work of the conference by saying that "when the bankers met in this city two plans of campaign were set before them. Should they issue an ultimatum that congress would surely disregard, or should they make an effort to contribute to the working out of a scheme of constructive legislation? That they chose wisely is clear. The common sense that they evinced in their great representative conference is to be commended, and so is the spirit that they displayed and that is reflected in the preamble of their resolutions."

The conference report will go to congress in the hands of a very able committee but what congress may do is not certain. It ought to consider well the wise and able constructive work done at Chicago. The whole situation can be cleared and the bill made certain of passage if conference proposals are met in a proper spirit.

A MANUFACTURED MISUNDERSTANDING

The anti-administration newspapers seized upon the plain, careful statement made by George M. Reynolds at the recent Chicago currency conference for material from which to manufacture a misunderstanding between Mr. Reynolds and Secretary McAdoo. The able secretary of the treasury was prompt to say that he did not believe Mr. Reynolds had misquoted their New York conversation. Mr. Reynolds was just as prompt with a telegram to Washington telling Secretary McAdoo: "I have read with much interest," reads Mr. Reynolds' telegram, "a statement made by you concerning my interview with you in New York on last Thursday and beg to assure you that you are entirely right in your assumption that I had not made the statement attributed to me. Please accept my thanks for your courtesy to me to the effect that you did not believe I had made any such statement.

"Naturally, I regret anything should have arisen which made it seem to you necessary to even have to refer to anything purporting to have been said by me, and I have made public announcement here that the alleged quotation from me was entirely erroneous and that your statement of our interview is exactly as I understood it."

Thus the artificial misunderstanding has been ironed out. Everyone who heard Mr. Reynolds' able address knows at first hand that he did not misquote Mr. McAdoo.

WILSON EXPLAINS MEXICAN SITUATION

On Wednesday the entire government of the United States—judicial, legislative and executive—was assembled upon the floor of the lower house of congress. It was an open consultation between the president in charge of our foreign relations and the congress, which can declare and prosecute war. President Wilson appeared in person and laid bare to the world the details of this nation's efforts to bring about peace in Mexico, the facts concerning Huerta's rejection of the peace proposals and the policy to be pursued by this government.

After pointing out that it was his duty "without reservation" to lay all the facts concerning the relations of the United States with Mexico before congress, the president outlined what the United States had done "as a friend and neighbor." Asserting that this nation was "glad to call itself the friend of Mexico, and hoping on many future occasions to show that disinterested friendship," the president declared that "we shall yet prove to the Mexican people that we know how to serve them without first thinking how we shall serve ourselves."

All of the important papers of the standard powers already have commended President Wilson for his efforts to pacify the Mexican situation and for his assurances of none but a friendly, neighborly motive. His policy has been made public in all of the foreign capitals and has been approved. Truly President Wilson's is the master mind at Washington. His life-long study of governmental economics has fitted him to be the leader not only in America but in the world at large. Trust the president!

by the following section presidents: Wm. C. Poillon, vice-president Bankers Trust Company, New York City, president Trust Company Section; R. C. Stephenson, vice-president St. Joseph County Savings Bank, South Bend, president Savings Bank Section; Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president Continental and Commercial National, Chicago, president Clearing House Section; and W. C. Macfadden, secretary North Dakota Bankers Association, Fargo, president State Secretaries Section.

It is still too early for the announcement of the details of the business meetings but the program of entertainment is complete and is certainly full of magnetic force.

For instance, 100 automobiles will be at the call of the delegates and their families for three-hour sight-seeing excursions, from Monday morning until Thursday evening. The chauffeurs will follow carefully arranged routes to give the visitors the best views of the metropolitan park system, the business section, the north shore of Massachusetts bay, or Concord and Lexington.

No guests will be expected to take more than one of these excursions and it is planned to entertain 500 each morning and each afternoon. For those who like to browse around an old town signs will be erected all about the historical section of the city to describe the stirring events that took place there in revolutionary days; and guides will be provided to conduct groups about for visits in old Boston in Cambridge and in near-by cities famous for their big industrial institutions of special interest to the visitors.

On Monday evening a half million people will gather on the broad esplanade and the long bridges of the Charles river basin to join in welcoming the American Bankers Association to Boston. The vast expanse of the mid-city water park will be brilliantly illuminated and made gay with water craft of all sizes, from tiny motor boat to big torpedo boat destroyer. The electric illumination of the basin and the flashing of powerful searchlights, with the most ambitious display of fireworks ever seen in Boston, will make this a night of wonderful beauty. There will be music by at least four of the best bands in New England and an attempt will be made to induce the leading choral societies of the vicinity to give concerts on the esplanade and to lead the crowd in singing the airs best known to all. A part of the esplanade, about three minutes' walk from Copley Square and in the very center of the festivities, will be reserved for the bankers and their friends.

Tuesday evening will be given up to the grand ball of the convention in Symphony hall, with a buffet supper in Horticultural hall just across Massachusetts Avenue, which will be carpeted and canopied and shut off from the regular traffic during the evening. Barrett Wendell, Jr., chief usher, will have 150 assistants, all experienced ball directors. The music will be by Kanrick's orchestra of forty pieces. The floor of this magnificent hall will accommodate eight hundred couples and there is no question that this ball will be one of the most brilliant social events ever held in New England. There are two balconies and roomy promenades for those who wish to attend the ball but who do not care to dance.

A distinct touch of variety comes to the program on Wednesday evening when meetings will be held for the visitors in the oldest churches and in Faneuil hall.

These meetings will be historical in character and for many historical meeting night will prove as delightful as any evening of the week. In Faneuil hall there will be a concert of American airs from 7 to 8 o'clock by the First Corps of Cadets orchestra. Honorable Robert Luce, formerly lieutenant-governor of Massachusetts, will deliver an address on the historic value of the "Cradle of Liberty." The Weber male quartette will sing patriotic selections and will lead the gathering in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

At the same time there will be three other meetings. In the Old South meeting house there will be singing by the Harvard male quartette, a concert of American compositions by Daggett's orchestra and an address on the history of the building by a speaker yet to be announced.

In Christ church, built in 1723, the oldest church now standing in Boston, the principal speaker will be Dr. George Hodges, dean of the Episcopal theological school of Cambridge. At 7:15 the bells in Christ church, obtained in England in 1744, the finest in the country and the equal of any in the world, will be rung for forty minutes by a guild of proficient English bell ringers, who have headquarters at the church. There are eight of these bells. The largest weighs 1,545 pounds, and they will be rung in "changes" also after the meeting, which will begin at 8 o'clock. It was from this church that the lanterns were displayed to tell Paul Revere that the British were about to move toward Concord and Lexington by sea, and after the exercises within the church a descendant of Paul Revere will climb the belfry tower and hang two lanterns from it.

In King's chapel, founded in 1686, the first Episcopal church of New England, the present edifice having been built in 1754, the speaker will be the Honorable John D. Long, formerly governor of Massachusetts. Malcolm Lang, the well known organist, will give an organ concert before the meeting and the Pilgrim male quartette will sing. Among other selections which the audience will be asked to join in singing is the famous hymn "Our Fathers," written by the Rev. John Pierpont, great grandfather of J. Pierpont Morgan.

On Thursday evening the entertainment program will return once more to Symphony hall, when the Symphony orchestra will begin its thirty-second season with a special concert for the bankers. There is no finer organization of musicians in the world. For this concert it will use not less than eighty-five instruments, including sixteen violins, fourteen second violins, ten violas, ten 'cellos and eight double basses. Dr. Karl Muck, for many years director of the Royal Opera, Berlin, and now for several seasons leader of the Symphony, will direct this special concert of selections from the best works of all schools and all periods. This will be the first time that the Symphony has ever given a special concert for any organization and the arrangements for the bankers are possible only through the cooperation of Colonel Henry L. Higginson of Lee, Higginson & Company, who established this orchestra thirty-two years ago as a personal enterprise and who has enabled it to maintain the highest artistic ideals free from commercial considerations throughout its existence.

At 10:30 Friday morning three large excursion steamers will take the convention visitors on a tour of Boston harbor. Opportunity will be given for a glance at the port development that is going on here; and there will be a sail among the beautiful islands that are so rich in historic and legendary association. At 1:30 in the afternoon the visitors will all sit down together in Paragon park, an amusement enclosure at Nantasket beach, and enjoy a New England clambake. The return to Boston in the three steamers is scheduled for 5:30 p. m. No detail that will contribute to the success of this day is being neglected, and it is safe to predict that it will close the convention most happily.

Details of the Boston entertainment are under the supervision of an executive committee of the following well-known persons: T. P. Beal, president Second National, chairman; A. L. Ripley, vice-president Merchants National; W. A. Gaston, president National Shawmut Bank; D. G. Wing, president First National; Philip Stockton, president Old Colony Trust Company; Allan Forbes, president State Street Trust Company; W. R. Evans, president Five Cents Savings Bank, and H. L. Ayer, secretary.

The chairmen of the other committees are T. P. Beal, Jr., Second National, entertainment; Charles P. Blinn, Jr., National Union Bank, hotel; Charles E. Bockus, Old Colony Trust Company, publicity; H. L. Higginson, Jr., Lee, Higginson & Company, finance; Harry L. Burrage, National Shawmut Bank, automobile; Barrett Wendell, Jr., Lee, Higginson & Company, reception and ball; Clifton H. Dwinell, First National, carnival; Henry J. Nichols, Swift & Company, catering; Randolph C. Grew, city clubs; Herbert Jaques, country club; G. W. Hyde, First National, decoration; Storer Ware, Bond & Goodwin, excursion; Frank H. Wright, Second National, hall; Casper G. Bacon, Gaston, Snow & Saltonstall, Harvard; C. B. Wiggin, Merchants National, historical and church; R. H. Bean, National Union Bank, information; Edmund Billings, Paul Revere Trust Company, industrial; Arthur Adams, New England Trust Company, music; F. C. Waite, Merchants National, police; Charles W. Cole, Old Colony Trust Company, theater; and M. C. Brush, Boston Elevated Railway Company, transportation.

HIGH RATES IN MINNEAPOLIS

Although interest rates are nominally firm and unchanged at 6 per cent, some loans have been made in Minneapolis on good paper at 6½ per cent, and a few as high as 7 per cent. These are the highest interest rates for strictly commercial loans that have obtained for a number of years.

Robert L. Owen, United States senator from Oklahoma, will be the headliner among the speakers at the twenty-third annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association at Hotel Statler, Cleveland, September 11th and 12th. Dr. H. Parker Willis, associate editor of the Journal of Commerce, New York, will discuss the currency measure, talking on the reserve features of the bill. Mayor Newton D. Baker will welcome the bankers on behalf of the city and Colonel J. J. Sullivan for the local bankers. W. P. Sharer, president of the First National, Zanesville, will respond to the addresses of welcome. Governor Cox also is scheduled to address the bankers. The entertainment committee has provided a supper for the visiting bankers and their families at the Country Club Thursday evening, September 11th, and a boat ride on the Secandbee on the afternoon of Friday, September 12th, with luncheon on the boat.

Head of "Blue Sky" Division

Announcement of the appointment of Joseph Harper of Washington Court House, Ohio, as superintendent of the "Blue Sky" division of the state banking department has been made by Superintendent of State Banks Emory Lattanner. Mr. Harper is editor of a Washington Court House paper. His salary will be $3,600 per annum.

Shortage Made Good

According to a report filed in the office of the state bureau of accounting, the Sherwood (Ohio) Savings Bank has made good a shortage of $543.59 in the accounts of the treasurer of Delaware township, Defiance county. The bank was held liable because it paid out public funds when it should have paid only on the official warrant of proper authorities.

Arrest Defunct Bank Cashier

John R. Bowen, cashier of the defunct Sugar Grove Bank, charged with embezzling $5,700 of the bank's funds, was arrested last Tuesday at his home. The Sugar Grove Bank went into the hands of a receiver August 3d, following a disastrous run lasting a week. The bank had loaned out so much money that it was unable to meet the run. According to Bowen's statement, he was invited to invest in the bank when it was organized five years ago. He had no cash, but was told, he said, that he could take out fifty-seven shares and deposit them as security for the loan of $5,700, which they cost. These shares remained in the bank pinned to his note for $5,700, during the five years of the bank's existence, according to Bowen. H. M. Anderson, president, testified that the cashier was not authorized to make loans above $100 but that Bowen had loaned $6,541.25 with no security other than his own note.

Sycamore State Incorporated

The Sycamore State, with a capital of $30,000, was incorporated recently. The incorporators are Dr. W. H. Wickham, J. D. Curlis, George Ankney, John Wren and D. F. Dunlap, all of Sycamore.

Ohio Notes

The comptroller of the currency has issued a charter to the Farmers National of Haviland, Ohio, with an authorized capital stock of $25,000.

The Peoples National of Greenfield will move into new quarters on November 1st. An entire new equipment will be installed, providing a larger lobby, a larger banking room and a new vault as well as private safety deposit boxes. The entire front of the building will be reconstructed.

The Alliance (Ohio) Bank Company has let the contract for its new six-story building to be erected where the institution now stands. The building will cost about $100,000 and in addition to comfortable and spacious quarters for the bank, there will be suites of rooms for office purposes.

The Exchange State of Bloomville has been incorporated with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are N. A. France, head of the France Co., Toledo; H. W. Tomb and C. A. Weidman of Bloomville and others. The new bank will take the place of the bank which closed some time ago. Mr. France will be president.

The First National of Portsmouth celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on Thursday of last week. Simon Labold is the president.

It is expected that the Second National of Toledo will occupy its new twenty-one-story bank and office building on Madison Avenue and Summit Street in about two weeks.

Calumet Bank Meets Crisis

With the big steel doors of its vaults resisting every effort to open them for a whole day, the First National of Calumet, Mich., on August 16th tided over a crisis only by its ability to borrow over $200,000 in cash within two hours. The First National does a big deposit business and had known demands of $120,000 to meet on that day, besides facing the miners' July pay day, which often requires $150,000. Attempting to open the big doors shortly before nine o'clock, the bank officials were thrown into a near panic by the discovery that something had gone wrong. Rush requests were sent out to copper country banks and the amount necessary for the First soon was assembled. The vaults were entered at noon by expert drillers and electricians.

New Indiana Bank

The stockholders of the Farmers State, a new institution in Mexico, Ind., have elected Josiah Maus, president; the Rev. Frank Fisher, vice-president; J. Sparks Charles, cashier; Josiah Maus, the Rev. Frank Fisher, Charles Bond, Leroy Graft, D. S. Hood, George Wilson, Rufus O. Kinzie, C. H. Black and C. H. Cox, directors. The capital stock of the bank is $25,000.

Kentucky Convention

With a single exception the program for the annual convention of the Kentucky Bankers Association, to be held in Louisville September 17th and 18th, is complete. James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National, New York, who was to have made the principal address, cannot be present because of illness, and a new speaker will be secured. The headquarters will be at the Seelbach. At 1:30 on the first day of the convention the Louisville Clearing House Association will give a luncheon in the rathskeller for the visiting bankers and their friends. At 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the second day special cars will carry bankers to the state fair. The convention will be called to order at 10:15 o'clock Wednesday morning, September 17th, by President John E. Buckingham of Paintsville. Mayor W. O. Head will deliver the address of welcome, to which G. K. Holbert, director Union Bank and Trust, Elizabethtown, will respond, followed by the annual address of the president and reports of the secretary, treasurer and chairman of the executive committee. On Thursday T. Kennedy Helm, general counsel Kentucky Bankers Association, Louisville, will address the convention on "The Blue Sky Law;" Percy H. Johnston, national bank examiner, Louisville, on "A Scientific Credit System for Country Banks," and Col. Thomas J. Smith, banking commissioner state of Kentucky, on "Trying to Get Results." These addresses will be followed by reports of committees and the election of officers.

New Kentucky Bank

The Whitesburg (Ky.) First National opened its doors for business last week with W. H. Courtney of Winchester as cashier. Dr. John D. Fitzpatrick is president.

Central State Notes

Plans have just been completed for a two-story building for the Webber State Savings, Portland, Mich. The new building will be built of Bedford stone.

Louisville (Ky.) bankers were represented at the Chicago currency conference by President H. C. Rodes of the Louisville Clearing House Association, Capt. John H. Leathers, Logan C. Murray, Oscar Fenley, Embury L. Swearingen and S. Thruston Ballard.

Articles of incorporation of the United Bank and Trust Company of Louisville, Ky., were filed last week with the secretary of state. The bank has $250,000 capital stock and the incorporators are Clarence Lebus and G. C. Patrick of Lexington; Edward C. O'Rear of Frankfort; O. L. Ballinger, T. P. Satterwhite, Clarence Dellen and others of Louisville.

The Merchants and Mechanics Bank, Richmond, Va., will open on October 1st.

The Frederick (Md.) County National has a handsome new building which was erected on the site of the original building. It is three stories in height, fireproof, and is constructed of light-colored impervious brick with ornamental terra cotta trimmings and huge monolith supports of Marvillia marble. The interior is finished in marble, mahogany and opal, with fluted pilasters in the banking room decorated with gold leaf. The bank will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks.

NO NEED FOR CROP MONEY IN DENVER

The clearing house of Denver has decided not to participate in the distribution of the $50,000,000 of federal funds to aid in moving the crops. This decision was reached after a careful study of conditions. Edward Irish of the Denver National said:

"The loan was not considered advantageous by the members of the Denver clearing house for two reasons. They did not want to put up the 2 per cent on the government money as a part of the securities, and they considered the time in which all the money advanced by the government must be paid, April 1st, entirely too short."

The Denver banks feel equal to handle the demand in the Denver territory. The clearing house, as a body, will not participate in the loan, but the individual members of the association are at liberty to if they desire.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by F. C. Redmond

"In the United States senate, when the measure has reached that body, the bankers of the country will concern themselves with the amendment or modification of the currency bill in practical form," said President F. A. Chamberlain of the Security National, Minneapolis, on his return from the Chicago currency conference. "The senate, we believe, will modify the bill as the bankers suggested. Possibly action on it may go over the session," he said. Mr. Chamberlain attended the conference as chairman of the Minneapolis Clearing House Association. Others from Minneapolis who attended were Edgar L. Mattson, Joseph Chapman, C. T. Jaffray, Geo. H. Richards and Geo. F. Orde. Mr. Orde stopped in Chicago on his way home from a meeting in Buffalo of the National Rotary Club. He said that business in the East was good.

Would Bring Cattle from Southwest

Minneapolis banks have been asked for $200,000 by farmers and rural bankers of Minnesota to buy cattle from Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri and put them in Minnesota grass fields. The loans will be made as conditions warrant. When the agricultural committee of the Minnesota Bankers Association meets on September 2d, Joseph Chapman of the Northwestern National will propose that the association establish in many parts of the state a scheme for development of high grade dairy farms. This scheme involves freedom in making loans for the purchase of blooded cattle and, more important still in the eyes of Mr. Chapman, purchases in carload lots, the selection to be made by experts. Some counties in northern Wisconsin have the plan in active operation and its success is said to be such that that country is dotted with the highest class of stock, which is developing it into one of the greatest dairy countries in the world. Minnesota, Mr. Chapman says, presents even greater natural advantages to the dairy interests and he proposes that the bankers lend their aid, not only financial but mental, to the development of the best kind of dairy farms.

Attend Chicago Conference

Judge James W. Lusk, former president of the National German-American, St. Paul, and George H. Prince, chairman of the board, Merchants National, attended the currency conference at Chicago last week. Mr. Prince went as the representative of the St. Paul Clearing House Association.

St. Paul Bank Moves

The Merchants National, St. Paul, on Saturday of last week moved into temporary quarters in the New York Life building. It will occupy these quarters till about January, 1915, when it is expected that its new building will be completed.

Praise Montana

Donald S. Culver, president of the Merchants National, and Edward O. Rice, head of the credit department of the First National, both of St. Paul, returned last week from the Montana Bankers Association convention. They declared they never had seen so prosperous a country as Montana—the crops are amazing and the people of the state the most optimistic they ever had seen. "Montana is to my mind the coming state of the Union," said Mr. Culver, "and its growth is remarkable. I attended the meeting for the formation of the Montana State Bankers Association ten years ago and every year since. The people of St. Paul cannot realize what these people are doing and how vitally St. Paul is connected with Montana. The crops in Montana simply are wonderful and the climate is superb." W. B. Geery, vice-president of the Capital National, and R. C. Lilly, vice-president of the Merchants National, also attended the convention.

Likes Southern Minnesota

James A. Larson, assistant secretary of state, returned recently from a vacation on his farm near Walnut Grove, Redwood county. Mr. Larson says that the southern Minnesota corn crop will be larger than for many years and that, because of the dry weather in the corn belt states, the farmers are sure to get a big price.

"Buyers from the large centers are very active in southern Minnesota," said Mr. Larson, "and already much of the crop has been sold at good prices. That section is certainly blessed this year as never before. The fruit crop is also good and the trees are heavy with apples and plums. Many farmers from Illinois and Iowa, where land is worth from $200 an acre up, are selling their farms there and are coming into southern Minnesota where good land can be bought for $90. They say that they can raise just as much, if not more, and with more certainty of success than they can further south."

Minnesota Big Lender

According to a table prepared by State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson, Minnesota now has outstanding loans amounting to $13,438,201.03 to counties, school districts and municipalities within its borders. This money is derived from the permanent school fund and its disposition is determined by the state board of investment. Among all the states Minnesota's financial system is unique. Until fifteen years ago the constitution required the permanent school fund to be permanently invested in the bonds and securities of other states, national government bonds and certificates and securities issued by any of the various agencies of state governments, such as prison and capitol certificates. At that time the constitution was amended and it was provided that this fund could be loaned to counties, municipalities and school districts on bonds bearing 4 per cent interest, but provided that the total in any county should not exceed 15 per cent of the assessed valuation. This has been of great benefit to the various communities of the state as it has allowed them to obtain money at the lowest rates for the carrying on of public improvements and has made them independent of the condition of the eastern money market.

Minnesota Notes

Duluth bank clearings for the week ending August 21st showed an increase of $1,049,852.47 over the corresponding period last year.

The First National and the American Exchange National of Duluth have adopted the Flack finger-print system. At first it will be used in the savings department for illiterate depositors, poor writers and minors.

E. T. Olsson, Roseau, assistant deputy bank examiner, has resigned to accept a position as cashier in the First National of New York Mills.

The Merchants National, the Golden Rule and Wm. Hamm, St. Paul, have formed a syndicate for the purchase of the $523,000 bonds for the widening of Robert Street.

Simon P. Snider, one of the oldest residents of Minneapolis and a pioneer land owner, bank president and real estate dealer, died last week after a long illness. He opened the first banking house in Minneapolis. Levic L. Cook joined the firm in 1855, which was then known as Snyder, MacFarlane & Cook.

Albert L. Ethier, assistant cashier of the First National of Hubbell, severed his connection with that institution to locate in Duluth. Mr. Ethier will be succeeded by Theodore Schnotalia of Hubbell.

A. T. Westrom has been elected cashier of the First State of Grasston to succeed Fred C. Falk who resigned. Mr. Westrom was assistant cashier of the First State in 1910, leaving to open the First State at McIntosh, S. D. When the McIntosh State consolidated with the First State he again was elected cashier. Upon the resignation of Mr. Falk he was chosen for the position.

The Fergus Falls National has moved back into its new and remodeled quarters. The interior is finished in mahogany and marble while the floor is of mosaic tile.

The Braham State opened for business on Monday of last week. Fred C. Falk is cashier.

C. O. Kalman & Company and the Northwestern Trust, St. Paul, have bought $200,000 worth of road and bridge bonds of Ada county, Idaho. The bonds run from ten to twelve years.

Banks Able to Handle Crops

No outside aid will be required by the banks of Grand Forks, N. D., in the financing of the moving of the crops of this district during the coming season, according to A. I. Hunter, of the First National, president of the clearing house.

"The Grand Forks banks are in unusually good condition for this time of the year," says Mr. Hunter. "The reports that have been made lately indicate that we have plenty of money right here in town to do our share of the crop moving. If outside assistance should be required, however, it can be easily obtained from the reserve banks in Minneapolis. The government is to distribute $50,000,000 among the reserve banks of the country, and a large part of that sum will go to the banks of the Northwest. If we need more money than we can supply locally we can borrow a portion of this fund, but personally I do not believe that it will be necessary."

It is expected that the crop will begin to move by September 1st. The local railroad officials report that they have plenty of cars and that there is no probability of a shortage while the crop is in motion. It is believed that, if the present conditions continue, it will be possible to move the grain as fast as it is brought in by the farmers.

New Montana Banks

State Examiner H. S. Magraw of Montana has licensed the following banks: Dayton State of Dayton, Flathead county, capital $20,000, C. B. Harris, president, George Brawith, treasurer; Roberts State of Roberts, Carbon county, capital $20,000, D. G. O'Shea, president, C. E. Hudson, cashier; State Bank of Redstone, Sheridan county, capital $25,000, Andrew Fadness, president, L. C. Lindermann, cashier; First State of Denton, Fergus county, capital $20,000, W. J. Johnson, president, S. Brown, cashier.

Bank Swindle Alleged

The First National of Three Forks, Mont., was swindled out of $1,000 and a big mercantile house out of $500 by a well dressed stranger who, under the name of W. A. Cunningham, played the part of a wealthy Kansas farmer. He claimed that he had been burned out and was looking for a home in a "good country." He made oral agreements to real estate men to buy many sections of land as soon as a draft for $65,000 reached him from his old home. When the draft came, he started a checking account with it at the First National. A few hours later he drew out $1,000 as pocket money and handed the mercantile firm a $500 check for a large order. When a telegram came from Kansas marked "no funds" and the alleged Mr. Cunningham was sought for, it was found that he had been hastily called out of the city. He was of medium weight and build, rather inclined to blondness and scarred by a powder burn under the right eye.

Northwest Notes

The new Argusville (N. D.) State opened on Monday of last week, with the first day's deposits amounting to $9,272.45. A. F. Erickson is president; H. W. Geary, vice-president, and George H. Johnston, cashier.

The Milnor (N. D.) National has moved into its new quarters. The building was destroyed by fire several months ago and the work of repairing has just been completed.

The three banks of Lisbon, N. D., in their recent statements of condition, report a total of $917,363 in deposits.

The Nortonville (N. D.) State is being organized with a capital of $10,000. George Steele of La Moure will be cashier. The new bank will open about September 1st.

The five banks of Grand Forks, N. D., showed deposits on August 9th of $3,380,570.79, an increase of $580,928.49 over those of September 9th last year.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the State Bank of Crystal, Crystal, N. D., the following officers and directors were elected: President, John J. O'Sullivan; vice-president, Thomas Ryan; second vice-president, Fred Hoesley; cashier, Guy M. Jamieson; directors, J. J. O'Sullivan, Thomas Ryan, Fred Hoesley, Guy Jamieson, W. J. Greenwood, John B. Corbit, W. O. Givens.

The First State, McVile, N. D., has been purchased by the Security Bank of the same city. The Security Bank will continue under the present management with C. H. Simpson as vice-president and A. O. Moen as cashier.

The new home of the First National, Lidgerwood, N. D., has been completed and is considered one of the finest in the state. It is of Bedford stone on a solid granite base, with four large columns in front. The interior is finished in harmony, having a full marble wainscoting throughout, floors of reinforced concrete, with terazzo top.

It has been reported that the Dakota State of Eagle Butte, S. D., has been suspended with about $22,000 deposits and $28,000 loans. It is believed that depositors will be paid in full.

David Hilger, president First National, Lewistown, Mont., estimates the grain crop of the Judith basin for this year at ten million bushels.

On the last day of July, Montana had in her treasury vaults a balance of $773,008.82, according to the monthly report of State Treasurer Wm. Rae, which has been issued. The receipts during the month amounted to $171,824.70. Exactly $150,144.47 was paid out. On July 1st there was a balance from June amounting to $751,328.59.

COLONIAL TRUST INCREASES CAPITAL

The stockholders of the Colonial Trust and Savings at a special meeting, held August 26th, voted an increase in the capital stock from $600,000 to $1,000,000.

Des Moines August 28.—Percy W Hall secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, is back from an automobile trip to Huron, S. D., convinced that crop prospects in northwestern Iowa and southeastern South Dakota are splendid. Mr. Hall states that corn could hardly be better than along the line traversed by him from Des Moines to Huron via Sheldon. Grain also turned out well and threshing was quite the order of the day. North and west of Huron, it has been dry and the crops are not quite so good. Mr. Hall says that bankers are very well pleased for the most part with conditions. While money has been somewhat tight, the prospects are such as to indicate a general loosening up within the near future.

Upon his return from his vacation Mr. Hall became actively interested in getting as many Iowa bankers as possible to the sessions of the A. B. A. in Boston this fall. General notices have been sent out giving the bankers the information as to the train from Chicago and likewise the sight-seeing features which will be engineered by the Wisconsin bankers. Mr. Hall has ordered 500 Iowa buttons. He states that he expects to give them all out to Iowa bankers en route to Boston, which indicates that he is optimistic as to the attendance from the Hawkeye state.

Hawkeye Bankers Attend Kansas City Conference

Iowa was well represented at the agricultural conference held at Kansas City this week. Seven of the members of the executive council of the I. B. A. were present and in addition many other Iowa bankers who are intensely interested in the boosting of the farm resources of the Middle West. Iowa also was represented at the conference in Chicago August 22d relative to the currency bill. The Des Moines Clearing House Association sent the presidents of the four national banks, Arthur Reynolds, Homer Miller, R. A. Crawford and J. G. Rounds.

Cavanagh Back from Tour

John A. Cavanagh, the hustling president of the German Savings, Des Moines, recently made a tour touching sixteen counties in the state. Upon his return he declared that Iowa is going to have an average corn crop this year and that the drought of the closing days of July and opening days of August did not materially injure the crops of the state except in the southern portion. Mr. Cavanagh discovered that many farmers did not sell all of their last year's corn and are still holding onto good sized quantities of it. Iowa produced so much corn that the prices were not good and the farmers did not sell. This year, he says, the corn will be a 75 per cent crop but the prices will be such as to make up the deficiency so far as valuations go. Mr. Cavanagh quotes some interesting figures to show that Iowa is not making her soil produce as much as she should. Corn, oats and wheat have increased in output in Iowa but the reason is because of the augmented acreage and not because of the yield per acre. Mr. Cavanagh favors more intensive farming on the part of the farmers of the state.

Des Moines Banker Sees Satisfactory Conditions

Charles H. Martin, president of the Peoples Savings, Des Moines, is also optimistic over the crop outlook. He talked to many farmers who attended the state fair and also to many bankers from out of Iowa who visited Iowa's annual exposition. Mr. Martin says that Iowa will do better than 300,000 bushels of corn this year, 156,000,000 bushels of oats and 18,000,000 bushels of wheat. Prices of corn, he says, will be 60 per cent higher this year than last while the total yield will be perhaps 25 per cent less. Iowans are buying more automobiles than ever, but at the same time they have more money in the banks than ever before. Mr. Martin gives it as his opinion that Iowa cannot have a total crop failure. The soil this year was given a thorough test and came out satisfactorily, he says.

Attack Iowa "Blue Sky" Law

The famous "Blue Sky" law, enacted by the Iowa legislature in the closing hour of its session, is bound for a stormy career. Two suits to knock it out have been started in the courts at Des Moines and there are rumors of others. One suit was started by Ernest R. Abrams & Company, stock brokers, to recover a fee of $50 paid into the secretary of state under the new law. The company claims the law is invalid and that it is entitled to a refund of the money. Another suit was started by L. S. Harper of Des Moines, who avers that Secretary of State Allen should be enjoined from enforcing the law. In both cases, it is alleged that the legislature ordered a clause stricken from the bill but that the clerks in enrolling it, left in the clause and that it now appears in the books, thus invalidating the entire statute. It is furthermore claimed that the law clothes the secretary of state in a judicial capacity to which, under the constitution, he is not entitled.

Christopher H. Bucknell of Davenport has been anticipating a trip to England for a good many years. He has had a draft for 101 pounds sterling on the National Provincial Bank of England, dated eighteen years ago. He anticipated cashing this draft in England. However, he has abandoned the idea and has begun proceedings in the courts to secure the money without crossing the Atlantic. The draft was originally purchased in 1895 by Arabella Bucknell, who died at Exeter, England. The draft went to the son, who has since had it in his possession.

Charges that counterfeit money has been "shoved" in Des Moines recently have caused an investigation by federal officials but no arrests have resulted at the time of writing. A spurious $10 gold certificate was passed upon a furniture store in Des Moines and afterwards discovered at the Citizens National. Since then other bogus bills have been found, it is said.

The Century Savings, Des Moines, has concluded a ten-year lease on its present quarters in the Clapp block. While this bank expected to build a new structure, it is stated that the plan has been abandoned for the time being. The location at present is ideal and the bank officials believe that should they desire to build before the ten years has expired, they will have little difficulty in subleasing the rooms now occupied.

Some of the out-of-town bankers observed in Des Moines recently were President John P. O'Malley, Peoples National, Perry; Vice-President W. A. Eikenberry and Cashier L. N. Busselle, Lucas County National, Chariton; Assistant Cashier J. P. McManus, First National, Adair; Cashier T. W. Rawson, Farmers Savings, Slater; Cashier R. A. For genuine nerve a forger who has been working eastern Iowa has all others "skinned." This chap, who has been going by the name of A. P. Kisser, A. P. Kissington, A. P. Kissingen, etc., was captured at Burlington after the First National at Davenport had sent out warnings against him. His scheme, it is said, was to invite young ladies out to dine with him. When the bill was presented, he would discover that he had not enough funds to pay it. So he would draw a check and have the girls endorse it. The checks were worthless and he victimized girls at both Washington and Burlington. The First National at Davenport received one check for $45, paid to himself and endorsed by himself under the name of W. D. Brooks.

The Massena Savings is now at home in its new quarters, one of the finest buildings in the town.

R. R. Bradbury has been elected assistant cashier of the Marshalltown State at Marshalltown. It was found necessary to add a second assistant cashier to handle the business. C. C. Trine is the other assistant cashier.

The Farmers at Scranton is now under way. C. W. Cressler is president; S. H. Arthur, vice-president; J. W. Hennig, John Page and Newman Shaw, directors.

The Crawford County State at Denison has purchased a two-story brick building and will make it into a suitable home for the institution.

Frank Howdle has resigned his position with the First National at Spencer and is cashier of the Farmers State at Parker, S. D.

The First National at Sioux City has been approved as reserve agent for the First National, Melvin; the Hanover National, New York for the Ames National, Ames; the Drovers National Chicago, for the First National, Milford.

THE IMPORTANCE OF KANSAS CITY

Greater Kansas City, is the logical market, financial, manufacturing and distributing center of the greatest agricultural territory in America. Her population is of the highest type, 78 per cent American born. She gained in number of factories during 10 years, 54.1 per cent, wage earners 50.9 per cent, capital invested 85.8 per cent and in value of products 131 per cent. She ranks first in proximity to the nation's meat supply in number of miles of parked boulevards, in sale of agricultural implements, in sale of yellow pine lumber, in tributary trade territory, in agricultural territory, in Pullman business, as a hay market; ranks second in grain receipts (primary), as a mule market, in meat packing, in live stock, in railroads, in health; ranks third in poultry and egg business, in telegraphic business, in lumber business, in flour output; sixth in bank clearings; seventh in postal receipts, and tenth in factory output.

Kansas City is now completing the largest and most modern railway station and terminals west of New York.

FEATHER FOR H. B. RILEY'S CAP

Denver, August 27.—After three years of hard work the great Denver Reservoir Company is being reorganized. This company went into the hands of a receiver when Trowbridge and Niver of Chicago failed. Harrison B. Riley, president of the Chicago Title and Trust Company, has been chairman of the bond holders' committee and the results are a new feather in his cap.

Final steps in the legal proceedings leading to the reorganization of the Denver Reservoir Irrigation Co. were taken when Judge Allen entered an order discharging Arthur Day, receiver for the company, and appointing the Chicago Title and Trust Co. as trustee for the property. These orders included the Farmers Reservoir and Irrigation Co. and other subsidiary corporations. The Denver National is now paying out the sum of $1,250,000, which has been provided in cash under the terms of the reorganization. These actions mean the rehabilitation and active development of the two big irrigation projects and also pave the way for the advancement of other irrigation projects which have been awaiting an adjustment of the difficulties of the Denver Reservoir Irrigation and the Farmers' Reservoir & Irrigation.

Denver Reservoir Irrigation has been in the hands of a receiver since 1910. The company was organized to irrigate 125,000 acres of land, almost at the corporate limits of Denver and has rights to ten reservoir sites. It has a capitalization of $2,000,000 preferred, $4,000,000 "A" common, $4,000,000 "B" common and $2,000,000 "C" common, with $1,303,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds outstanding. Negotiations looking to a reorganization of the company have been under way for some months.

NORTHWEST CROP CONDITIONS

The Northwestern National of Minneapolis in its monthly review says: "Crop conditions in the Northwest and especially in the immediate territory of the Twin Cities, are on the whole very good. Our section of the country may be congratulated on escaping most of the vicissitudes which have visited some other sections of the agricultural United States in the shape of extremely hot weather and prolonged periods of dryness.

The Northwestern farmers have profited by the experience of last season and are preparing to take better care of their crop this year by stacking grain preparatory to threshing, so that any delays incident thereto will not expose the yield of their fields to damage from rain. Although this year's production will not be so great as the large yields of 1912, the prices will probably rule higher on account of the impairment of crops in some other portions of the country. At the same time our harvest bill will of course be less than that of last year and it will be easier to find labor for the fields.

Interest rates in the Twin Cities remain strong at 6 per cent, with no prospect of any material change in the near future. There is every reason to believe that all legitimate demands for money will be taken care of at prevailing rates and that those who are entitled to credit will be able to satisfy their needs.

CONNECTICUT OFFICERS

Connecticut bankers elected the following officers for the ensuing year at their recent convention:

President, O. H. Brothwell, cashier First Bridgeport National, Bridgeport; vice-president, N. D. Prince, cashier Windham County National, Danielson; secretary, Charles E. Hoyt, cashier South Norwalk Trust Company, South Norwalk (re-elected); treasurer, H. H. Larkum, cashier First National, Rockville.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Experts who constantly keep a finger on the city's pulse have felt the throb of a new era for Spokane and its tributary territory despite conditions elsewhere. First all of comes the great cereal crop, which will be of bumper proportions. Spokane is the clearing house for the rich agricultural regions known as the Inland Empire, and this city inevitably will reap large returns from the results of this crop. Mines of the surrounding districts, which pour their golden flood into Spokane, already this year have paid dividends totaling $300,000, and before the year is over will have broken all records for profits. This is due not only to greater tonnage but also to improved machinery and the introduction of new treatment and value-saving methods. The new distributive freight rates, giving Spokane jobbers and manufacturers control of western Montana trade, open up large possibilities and still further brighten the business situation.

Spokane banks will receive $1,000,000 of the $50,000,000 fund to be placed by the government to assist in moving the crops. The Pacific Northwest gets a total of $3,000,000, Seattle and Portland receiving sums equal to Spokane.

"If the crop movement in the Spokane country requires still more money, we shall be able to get it from the federal government," states R. Lewis Rutter, president of the Clearing House Association.

"These deposits, with the large reserves of the Spokane banks, will enable us to handle the crop movement this year comfortably. There is at least $5,000,000 of out-of-town bank deposits in Spokane. They are entitled to borrow at any one time in the year at least twice their average balance, so that their average deposits in the year entitled them to loans of $10,000,000 during the unusual demands of crop-moving time."

An industrial survey of Spokane soon will be completed by the chamber of commerce under direction of President Charles Hebbard, and in the near future complete data relative to present manufactures and openings for more factories will be placed in the hands of eastern capitalists. This survey will show the various lines of manufacturing now located in Spokane, the output of each, wages paid and the territory served by each. That many eastern persons are interested in this city as a promising manufacturing city, due to the abundance of cheap power, variety of resources and large territory served, is shown by the inquiries received daily by the chamber of commerce. Chief among the inquiries are those concerning woolen mills and shoe factories, which scientific investigation shows can be operated profitably in Spokane. This city's shipping facilities, due to seven transcontinental railroads and twelve branch lines, make distribution easy.

"There is more railroad work going on in Washington and this Pacific northwest territory than in any other section of the United States, stated E. T. Howson, a civil engineer of Chicago, while in Spokane during a general railroad inspection tour through the West and Canada. He recently completed a trip over the central and southwestern territory, including the D. & R. G., and also made a trip through the South. "When Spokane's union station is completed," continued Mr. Howson, "this city will be in better shape for terminals than any other city of its size in the Union. The Great Northern is making a record for construction on its snowsheds in the Cascades, between Tye and Scenic, where it is building 15,000 feet of new sheds. About 4,500 feet of this work is concrete and timber combined, while the remainder is of timber. The work will be completed about October 1st, and will cost about $1,500,000. The Milwaukee and Northern Pacific, as well as the O. W. R. & N., are doing some heavy work in the state and the Great Northern is building the first concrete dock on the Pacific coast at Vancouver, B. C."

EDMONTON NEWS

"There is no condition in this territory which would justify any such suggestion having been made," is the reply of the Edmonton Board of Trade to a letter from the Calgary Board of Trade as to the proposal by a newspaper of the last-named city that the dominion government should be petitioned for a loan of $10,000,000 to the farmers of Alberta. It was added in the communication forwarded to Calgary by F. T. Fisher, secretary of the Edmonton Board of Trade, under instructions from the members of the organization at a meeting on August 19th, that, in the opinion of the council, the loan project is not one that should have received serious consideration or encouragement from any quarter.

"Our farmers are looking forward to harvesting the largest crop in the history of this country," Mr. Fisher said. "Cutting has been started in various parts of central Alberta and there is ample capital to finance the crop. There is a market for everything our farmers can produce; in fact, the supply, especially dairy, beef, pork and poultry products, is not equal to the demand. This is evidenced by the fact that millions of dollars' worth of farm produce are shipped into this province. We want more men to engage in mixed farming in the country and men with capital to take up commercial and industrial enterprises. There is in the city to-day a sufficient supply of labor of nearly all classes, particularly those seeking clerical positions. We need more farmers, who will develop some of the vacant land in the district tributary to Edmonton, thus increasing the city's volume of business."

The city council at its regular meeting on August 19th voted to abolish the civic parks and architect's departments and notice was given that a motion will be made at the next meeting to abolish the gas department. City Architect Jeffers showed in a statement to the council that since the inception of the department, in February, 1912, to date, the total cost of the work done amounted to $864,804, for which $18,145, or equal to a commission of 2.1 per cent, has been charged against the various departments. He said also that the architectural commissions paid in other cities ranges from 4.8 to 5 per cent. Mr. Jeffers reported that he has plans under way for four buildings, which, if erected, will cost the city $590,000, for which the architectural charges, if done by the department, will not exceed $14,250, or 2½ per cent. The council voted that the architect's department be given until August 30th to complete and turn in all files, plans, specifications and data and that then the department be abolished. The commissioners were also instructed to abolish the parks department.

Charles S. Hotchkiss, chief of the publicity department of the province of Alberta, reported on returning home on August 19th, from a trip through the eastern provinces and the southern and central states, that a large number of settlers will come to Alberta next year.

F. W. Morton of Valparaiso, Ind., who has been engaged in the engineering department of the Panama canal, said in Edmonton on August 20th that hundreds of skilled workmen and laborers will come to western Canada within the next twelve months. Most of them, he added, have saved money and they are looking forward to the coast and prairie provinces to engage in construction and agricultural work.

Application is to be made immediately to the Dominion Railway Commission by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company for permission to carry freight from Mile 52, Tete Jaune Cache, west of Edmonton, to Mile 142, B. C. The track is now practically completed to the latter point and settlers and various interests along the railway have petitioned the company to handle their freight. Should the commission agree it will mean the saving of thousands of dollars in freight, as the charges for transporting goods the additional ninety miles is high at present.

All the streets and avenues in Edmonton will be renamed this fall in accordance with a plan adopted by the city council at its last meeting. This means also that all the houses will be renumbered. The numerical system will be carried out. Jasper Avenue, the main east and west business thoroughfare, will be known as 101st Avenue, and First Street, the principal northern street, will become 101st Street. The blocks also will be numbered. Thus if a person lives in house 6 in block 50, which would be between 50th and 51st streets, the number would be 506. The plan met with the approval of the Edmonton Board of Trade and the Edmonton Wholesale Merchants' Association.

Heads of harvesting machinery firms report that there will be a shortage of 250,000 pounds of binder twine in the Edmonton district this year and that the price will be from 2½ to 3 cents higher than in 1912. This is due, they say, to a world-wide shortage in raw material. The grain crop, which is now being harvested, gives every promise of being the largest in the history of the country, due to increased acreage and larger acre yields. Dealers here are arranging to bring the surplus of twine from Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas, where the crops were injured by drought.

Some Methods of Financing the Farmer

Gordon Jones of Denver, after trip abroad, tells Colorado bankers of European methods, comparing them with those in vogue here. Sees some objection to adopting them in this country and also points out defects of U. S. system. His address in part.

European rural credit systems follow the natural division into short time personal credit societies and long term land mortgage associations. The organization of co-operative societies for short time credit was forced upon the farmers because of the lack of other banking facilities. Capital had not sought investment in country bank stock. In fact there was no provision of law, so far as learned, for the organization of the country banks. Therefore the farmers had no place for deposit or of obtaining credit for their temporary needs, and the organization of the co-operative society was the result. In lieu of capital stock, credit is pledged—sometimes with a limited liability of its members, but more often unlimited. That is, when a farmer becomes a member of a co-operative credit society (or bank, as it is called in some countries, though in others the use of the word "bank" by them is prohibited) he pledges his entire worth for the debts of the society.

In Germany these societies have reached their highest state of development. Throughout that entire empire the number of regular banks, including these co-operative short time credit societies, equals one for each four thousand population, or one for about each eight hundred families. This is practically the same ratio of banking institutions to the population that exists in the United States. It is therefore conclusive that this form of rural co-operative banking occupies the same field in that country that is occupied by the country banks in this. It is not a difficult task to determine the holdings and the financial standing of a member of a co-operative society, because of the simple methods of property assessment and title registration. Property is assessed at full value, which valuation is generally used as an appraisement or for a basis of credit.

These short term credit societies throughout continental Europe are generally federated and own and operate a central society in some large commercial center. There are hundreds, and sometimes several thousand, thus federated. There are no established rules governing these individual societies, each being left free to make its own by-laws, by them termed "constitution," for the conduct and regulation of its own business. The central does reserve the right of supervision and examination as a creditor, for these local societies obtain needed financial assistance through the central; that is, the central extends loans to or rediscounts for the local societies. When its own resources are exhausted it in turn obtains help either from the banks of issue or some large commercial bank. The local societies deposit their unemployed funds with the central. When demand is light in one section and strong in another the central serves as an intermediary between the locals in equalizing the condition.

The central society has a capital furnished by the local federated societies in proportion to their own membership, and is thus owned by them though they exercise little or no supervision or control over the central. In this manner the central is the servant, and not the master, of the small societies and is, therefore, opposed to the system of branch banking where the parent or central bank owns and controls the branches. These local societies assume no liability for the debts of the central or of one another, though the individual members may have unlimited liability for the debts of their own local society.

European co-operative credit societies operate without direct profit to their members, their object being to render financial assistance and advice so that the members may make their profits upon their individual efforts. In some cases the government has made liberal advances to such societies upon a nominal or no-interest charge. When they are thus fostered, the government exercises certain control and supervision over them. This is objected to by others, who operate without government assistance of any kind. Such aid as involves governmental control over their activities is deprecated by some as tending to stifle the initiative of the people. In all cases, however, we found these credit societies have access to the government bank of issue, either directly or indirectly, for temporary financial assistance. Their notes consisting of farmers' unsecured paper is accepted as collateral or rediscounted with the indorsement of the society, there being no distinction made in accommodations granted the societies of limited and those of unlimited liabilities, or of those under governmental supervision of operating independently.

It should be borne in mind that losses are sometimes sustained by these rural societies, just as losses are sustained by our country banks. When losses occur they are met out of the small profits, if sufficient; if not sufficient, by an assessment. In Austria one of these large central societies is now in the hands of the government and in process of liquidation. Its own management had loaded it down with timber land and the inevitable crash was pending. Realizing this meant financial ruin to the farmers throughout that province, as the central held deposits from some eight hundred federated societies, the government advanced about a million dollars to pay the liabilities and took over the assets itself.

There are no legal requirements for cash reserve throughout Europe so far as ascertained, excepting the gold reserve required of the government bank of issue. Therefore all European banks, the large commercial institutions as well as the small credit societies, can be of the greatest possible benefit to the people, for they are not required to lock up a large part of the country's circulating medium in a useless so-called reserve, which is not allowed to be used to even meet the contingency for which a reserve is supposed to be held. While seeking for methods of improving our financial system and for lowering interest rates, it would be well for our law-makers to give serious consideration to the abolition of useless reserve requirements, provided a sufficiently strong credit expansion and note issuing power is created. So long as our banks are required to keep a considerable portion of their deposits in idle and useless reserves, interest rates will remain proportionately higher than necessary.
